

Company Programme 1 yr

TRANSFERRED

to

HARVARD COLLEGE

LIBRARY

¥. , · • • •

B.

.

•

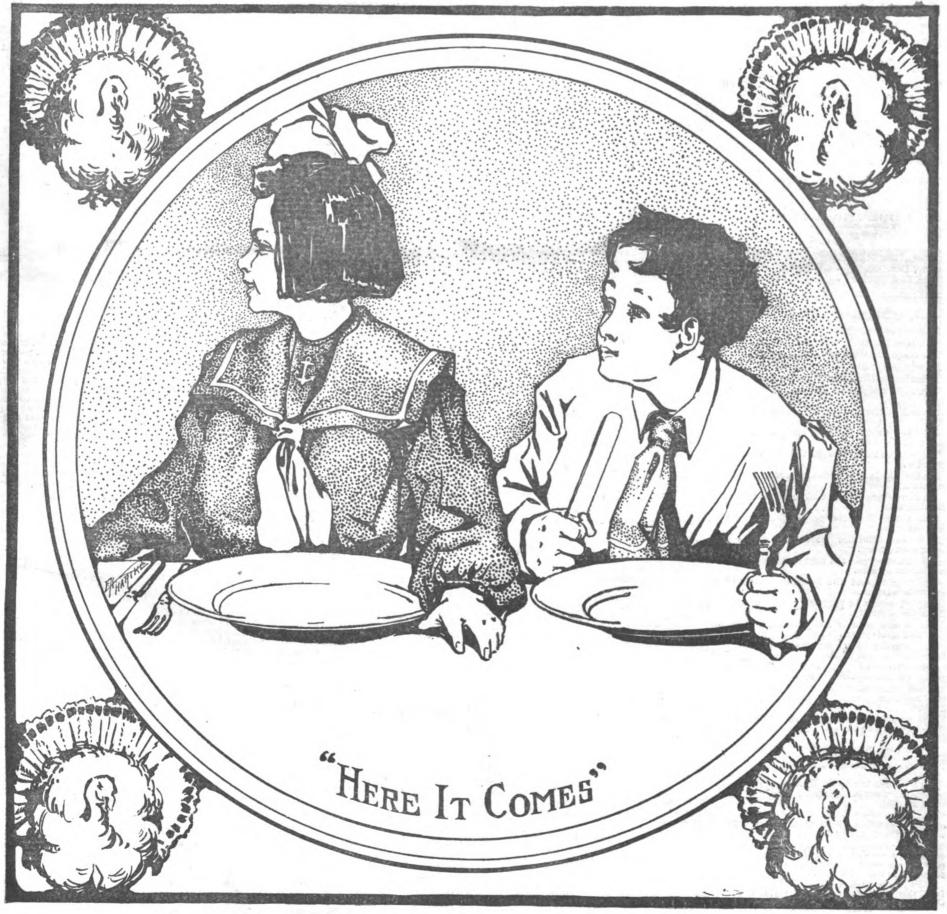

Two New Serials Begin This Month

Be sure to renew and extend your subscription now, while you can get this great 32-page paper for only 15c. Per Year Price Soon To Advance. Read Notice Inside

DEVOTED TO ART, LITERATURE, SCIENCE, AND THE HOME CIRCLE

Vol. XIX November 1906 No 1

Published at Augusta, Maine

Devoted to Art, Literature, Science, and the Home Circle

A Million and a Quarter Homes.

Its Motto Is "Onward and Upward." SUBSCRIPTION.

United States and Guba, England, Canada and foreign countries, 15c. per year. 32c.

England, Canada and foreign countries,

St. INCREPTIONS are entered on our books as soon as received, and for always dated from the current issue, unless otherwise ordered.
POSTAGE to all parts of the United states and Canada is prepaid by us.
CHANDY OF ADDINES. When ordering change in address, be sure 6 give former as well as new address. We cannot find your asine on int books unless you do. Due notice given upon expiration of subcriptions.
To CONDERFYORS. All literary contributions should be accommined by stumped and addressed envelopes for their return in case they are not available. Manuscripts should not be roifed.
Special Notice. We do not supply back numbers.

Entered at the Post Office at Augusta, Maine, as second-class mail matter.

Published Monthly by
W. H. GANNETT, Incorporated,
Augusta, Maine.

New York Office, Temple Court. Chicago Office, Harquette Building

November, 1906

CONTENTS

	I of
CRUMBS OF COMFORT
A FEW WORDS BY THE EDITOR
CURRENT TOPICS
TOLD AROUND THE STOVE
JERRY, THE BACKWOODS BOY (continued) Horatio Alger, Jr	3 & 2
IN & AROUND THE HOME, Fancy Work,
Comfort Sisters' Corner, etc 4, 5, 10, 11, 1	2, 15 & 2
THE HIDDEN WEDDING TREASURE: or.
The Musters of the San Francisco Earthquake
(continued) William T. Valentine -	6 & 20
COMFORT'S LEAGUE OF COUS.NS Con-	7041
ducted by Uncle Charlie	7,9 & 1
A STOLEN PROPOSAL (continued) Mrs.	8 & 1
Mary J. Holmes	6 CC 1.
COMFORT RECITATION CLUB Conducted by Harold C. Hazleton	1
	•
THE MYSTERY OF THE COILED ASP: or, Princess of His Heart (concluded) Davoust
Stanislas Roumantsof	1.
POULTRY FARMING FOR WOMEN Mrs.
Kate V. St. Maur	13
AN OKLAHOMA GIRL: or, Phil Sterling's
AN OKLAHOMA GIRL: or. Phil Sterling's Charge (concluded) William Perry Brown	1-
A CORNER FOR BOYS Conducted by
Uncle John	1:
ST. ELMO (continued) Mrs. Augusta J.
Evans Wilson 16, 17, 1	8, 19 & 2
CORDALIA MALONE Song- William
Jerome	1
HATS, AND HOW TO MAKE THEM Comfort's Home Milliner
	. 1
TALKS WITH GIRLS	2
HOME LAWYER	2.
INFORMATION BUREAU	2-
FAMILY DOCTOR	2
MANNERS & LOOKS	20

Crumbs of Comfort

Progress is the result of discontent.

Wine has drowned more than the sea. The curse of nature rests upon inaction.

Be wisely worldly, but not worldly wise.

What makes life dreary is the want of motive. The wind, a sightless laborer, whistles at his Necessity reforms the poor, and satiety the rich.

Most people do not lack strength, but they lack will. There is too little time in this world to lose any of it. Beauty within is the beauty to strive for and be vain of. Like our shadows, our wishes lengthen as our sun declines.

God hangs the greatest weights upon the smallest wires.

A woman who has never been pretty has never been young. We do not correct the man we hang; we correct others by him.

The bearing and the training of a child is woman's wisdom.

He that swells in prosperity will be sure to shrink in adversity.

The person who is not punctual wastes his time and steals yours.

To live easily pitch your scales of living one degree below your means.

Performance without promise is better than promise without performance.

What you leave at your death, let it be without controversy, else the lawyers will be your

The errors of woman spring almost always from her faith in the good or her confidence in Man wants but little nor that little long; How soon must he resign his very dust, Which frugal nature lent him for an hour.

All a woman has to do in this world is contained within the duties of daughter, sister, wife, mother. The great error is placing such an estimate on this life as if our being depended upon it and we were nothing after death.

It very seldom happens that a man is slow enough in assuming the character of a hus-band, or a woman quick enough in conde-scending to that of a wife.

Bann, or scending to that of a wrie.

There is none,
In all this cold and hollow world, no fount
Of deep, strong, deathless love, save that within A mother's heart.

—Mrs. Hemans.

Tombs are the clothes of the dead--a grave is but a plain suit, and a rich monument is one embroidered.

The true grandeur of humanity is in moral elevation, sustained, enlightened and decorated by the intellect of man.

A Few Words by the Editor

be reunited and gathered once more around the hearth, and loved ones will meet again under the family roof tree, of the old homestead, as of yore. How good it feels to be home again, and see the old familiar scenes and the old familiar faces. The love of home and kin is an inhorative trees. of yore. How good it feels to be home again, and suffering over the hill. It will cost you and see the old familiar scenes and the old familiar faces. The love of home and kin is an inherent part of our natures, and glows in every breast. It is beautiful, it is divine, for God's handiwork is about it all. The home is the family altar, and the sons and daughters come back to that altar once a year, when possible, and thank the Creator for all His blessings to them in the year that is past, and most of all, they are thankful for the fact that they have been spared, and permitted once again to meet, in the old home, the dear ones they love. It is easy to be thankful, when the table is laden them in the year that is past, and most of all, they are thankful for the fact that they bave been spared, and permitted once again to meet, in the old home, the dear ones they love. It is easy to be thankful, when the table is laden with plenty, and the barns are bursting with fatness, and the fields filled with sleek and fine conditioned stock, and the glow of health is tinting one's cheeks with rosy hues. But what about the empty larder and the barren fields, the empty barns, the vacant chair, the checks blanched and drawn with pain, the empty pocketbook, and the little mound out in the graveyard, that marks the resting-place of the loved one, that is no longer here. Of such pictures there are many. Can the heart bowed down with grief and misfortune be thankful? Yes it can. It is easy to thank God when everything comes our way, but the real thankful heart is that one which has suffered and lost, and yet can truly and with gratitude offer praise to the Creator for all His blessings. We refer to that one who can, and will, like Job say: "Though He slay me, yet will I trust in Him." It is the praise of the earnest soul, who has suffered and been chastened with affliction, that will ring out in the courts of Heaven with Yes it can. It is easy to thank God when everything comes our way, but the real thankful heart is that one which has suffered and lost, and yet can truly and with gratitude offer praise to the Creator for all His blessings. We refer to that one who can, and will, like Jobsay: "Though He slay me, yet will I trust in Him." It is the praise of the earnest soul, who has suffered and been chastened with affliction, that will ring out in the courts of Heaven with a note of even greater thankfulness, than will a note of even greater thankfulness, than will the prayer of that one, who is merely grateful for health and prosperity. The thankful prayer of the afflicted will fall upon the Creator's ears, with a fragrant sweetness, that will in due time bring a reward, and a joy which the prospering soul will never know.

Let us all then be thankful, rich and poor, sick and well upon this blessed day of Thanksgiving. The harvests have been indeed abungiving. The harvests have been indeed abundant, and God intended us all to share in them alike. If we have not done so it is our faults, and not the Creator's. Do not let us for one moment blame the All Wise for any short comings of our own. God can only provide, it is we who must garner and reap and divide. It is enough for Providence to set the table, and if only a few get into the feast, and many are left outside, it is God who grieves more than any of outside, it is God who grieves more than any of His creatures. Then remember that Thanks-giving day above all else should begin with devotions. An hour spent in the village meetinghouse will only serve to heighten the enjoyment of the remainder of the day.

We thank Thee, O Father, for all that is bright—
The gleam of the day, and the stars of the night.
The flowers of our youth, and the fruits of our prime,
And the blessings that march down the pathway of time.
We thank Thee, O Father for all that is drear—
The sob of the tempest, the flow of the tear;
For never in blindness, and never in vain
Thy mercy permitted a sorrow or pain.

We thank Thee, O Father of all, for the power Of aiding each other in life's darkest hour; The generous heart, and the bountiful hand And all the soul help that sad souls understand. We thank Thee, O Father, for days yet to be; For hopes that our future will call us to Thee Let all our Eternity form through thy love, One Thanksgiving day, in the Mansions above.

—Will Carleton.

We beg to remind our readers that this is the best possible month for them to renew their subscriptions. Not only by subscribing now do you get more for your money, as we give you thirteen numbers for the price of twelve, but if you get your "subs" in before the Christmas rush, you have a better chance to secure immediate attention, and less chance for delays and errors which are always liable to happen, in the great pressure at the beginning of the year. All those who ordinarily renew their subscriptions in January, should renew them now, both for their own sakes and for ours. Through the long hours of the January nights, as well as the days, hundreds of our staff have to toil indefatigably to handle the enormous number of subscriptions that the enormous number of subscriptions that the enormous number of subscriptions that come to us at that time. We are confident if you knew of the tremendous pressure put upon us at that period, with its attendant nervous and physical strain, that you would merely from a humanitarian point of view, send in your subscriptions now, and so help to lessen the great strain of the rush period. If you will try and remember that COMFORT'S family is indeed a family, and all that we are endeavoring to do is to serve your interests, we are con-is indeed a family, and all that we are endeavoring to do is to serve your interests, we are confident that in the goodness of your hearts, you would accommodate us in this matter. It will cost you no more, and the help it will afford to us at this end of the line will be immense.

There is no need to tell you what a good paper Comfort will be in 1907. You know Comfort, and you know us. There is a mutual confidence existing between us, that makes constant horntooting unnecessary. Other concerns may deluge you with sample copies of their publications and may hysterically inform you that theirs is to be the best magazine in all America (they all say that), but it is not necesyou that theirs is to be the best magazine in all America (they all say that), but it is not necessary for us to indulge in literary hysteria. Composer can afford to contemplate the efforts of its competitors with complacent self-satisfaction. We are not afraid of competition, in fact, we encourage it, for we believe the more the public reads, the better it is for the public, and we always know, that no matter how great the competition is, there is not one of Composer's readers, that would willingly give up this magazine, and take another one in its place. Every letter that comes into this office tells us Every letter that comes into this office tells us moderate means.

Ah! on Thanksgiving day, when from East to West From North and from South, come the Pilgrim and guest.

When the gray-haired New Englander sees round his board
The old broken links of affection restored:
When the care-wearied man seeks his mother once more,
And the worn matron smiles, where the girl smiled before.
What moistens the lips and brightens the eye?
What calls back the past like the rich pumpkin pie—Whittier.

HANKSGIVING day is once again with us. Another year has rolled around, the harvests have been gathered in, and old Winter's chilly breath has once more covered the earth with a mantle of white. Soon scattered families will be reunited and gathered once more around the hearth, and loved ones will meet again under the family roof tree, of the old homested, as it is always "Dear Old Comfort," "Can't keep house without Comfort," "Can't keep house words come from every corner of the land. It is an universal pean of praise that makes us very happy. The majority of the land. It is an universal pean of praise that makes us very happy. The majority of the land. It is an universal pean of praise that makes us very happy. The majority of the land. It is an un relative that has gone into another section of the country to live, or the shut-in that lies sick and suffering over the hill. It will cost you of what's coming. In conclusion, let us thank you heartily for past favors, and remind you that the best possible time to renew subscriptions is now. Send them in now, today, and avoid the rush and delay; and once more, a happy Thanksgiving to all. Your friend, Comfort's Editor.

Current Topics

The Singer Sewing Machine Company is to rect a forty-story office building in New York City.

A single mahogany tree in Honduras was recently cut into boards, which when sold in the European market, realized over $10,000, it is

It is officially reported that all the emigrants sent to Western Canada by the English Salva-tion Army are doing well. During the coming year the army expects to send out 30,000 emi-

For compelling ten soldiers to scrub a barrack room with their tooth-brushes, a subaltern in the German army has been sentenced by court martial to one year's imprisonment and degradation.

In laying the corner stone of the new office building for the House of Representatives, President Roosevelt said: "The foundation stone of national life is, and ever must be, the high individual character of the average citizen."

Franlein Bertha Krupp, the richest young woman in the world, and Lieutenant Gustav von Bahlen-Halbach were married October 15th, in Berlin. In the great gun works of which she is the head 63,000 people are employed, and her fortune is estimated at $225,000,000.

A remunerative industry has been developed in Sweden on the basis of an invention of an Austrian, whereby coloring matter is forced into fresh cut wood. It takes the place of the sap, and gives to the wood a brilliant color, which does not fade after the wood has become

The list of casualties by the recent tidal wave and hurricane shows that more than 300 are dead, and more than 100 are missing. Sea birds soaring in from Mobile Bay sounded the first note of alarm, and warned the people of the approach of the storm, that later wrought such dire havor to life and property all along the extreme southern coast and Cuba.

Mrs. Jefferson Davis, widow of the president of the Confederacy, died October 16. Her life was crowded with events which have gone into history. She was born May 7, 1826, and in 1845 married Jefferson Davis who was then at the beginning of his political career. Mrs. Davis accompanied her husband to Washington when he was U.S. senator, 1847-1852, and she was in Richmond during the terrific struggle in which he played the chiefest part as president of the he played the chiefest part as president of the confederate states. Her last years were saddened by the death of her daughter Miss Winnie Davis, who was fondly called, "the Daughter of the Confederacy."

A year or two ago, twenty-three women, who lost some member of their family in the burn-ing of the steamer, General Slocum, organized themselves into the German Women's Sympathy Society, to comfort one another in their sorrow. They have had erected and lately un-veiled a fountain in Tompkins Square, New York City, to the memory of those lost at the time. The monument itself is a beautiful fountain of pink marble, adorned with a basrelief of two children looking out to sea at a steamer passing in the distance. The inscription reads, "They were earth's fairest children, young and fair." The cost of the memorial was eighteen hundred dollars, and was contributed by these women, none of whom has more than

End of a Great Horse

"Sysonby, a four-year-old race horse, owned by J. R. Keene, a New York millionaire, which died not long ago from blood poisoning," remarked the man who looked as if he knew marked the man who looked as if he knew something about horses, "was said to be the best horse in the world. Whether he was or not and I suppose, there are some who don't think he was, his owner was able to refuse last year the vast sum of $200.000 offered by Reed Walker, the English turfman. Anyway Sysonby was a favorite and he was a good thing. His owner bought the colt's mother, Optime, before the colt was foaled, paying only $4,200 for her. As soon as the colt was old enough to go into training he got the best there was, and up to the time of his illness, which began in April, he had won in purses for his owner about $180,to the time of his illness, which began in April, he had won in purses for his owner about $180,-000, and was defeated in one race only, the winner being Artful, at the Sheepshead Bay Futurity of 1904. In his two years running, Sysonby won fourteen races. As a two year old his winnings amounted to $39,058,34, besides a $2,500 piece of gold plate, at Saratoga. As a three year old he won $139,615. This was all in purses, and nobody knows how much was won on him in bets. What he would have done as a four year old can only be guessed at, but not much money would have been won on him in bets, as he was such a favorite the odds in his favor would almost have cut out betting. In his last race he was quoted at 1 to 30.

"Sysonby's sire was the English horse Melton, and his dam was owned by the late Mar-

"Sysonby's sire was the English horse Melton, and his dam was owned by the late Marcus Daly, whose stable was sold after his death. The coit was foaled at Mr. Keene's Blue Grass Farm, Castleton, near Lexington, Ky. He was a bay with dark points, and was a picture of the fast horse. His life was insured for $100,000, so that his owner does not lose any money on him, but Mr. Keene would much rather have given up $100,000 than to have lost his pet horse. Mr. Keene will probably take the body to Kentucky for burial and will erect a handsome marble monument over his grave. The blood poisoning which killed him was due to a bruised frog, which came from the horse pounding on his stall when suffering with an itching skin trouble."

The Growth of the Country

The Growth of the Country

"The way this great and glorious country of ours simply keeps on growing," said the politician man, "is a wonder to all the world. It would seem that there ought to be a limit to it somewhere, but if there is, it is nowhere in sight yet. Statistics, showing what it has done in the past five years, are lately published and figures don't lie, so this isn't just stump-speech talk of the spell-binder. Not counting anything else but manufactures here are a few figures to talk about. In 1905 the number of manufacturing establishments was 133,137, an increase of 5.4 per cent. over 1900; capital invested increased to $7.375,939,540, from $5,166,172,164; number of salaried employees, 301,212, an increase of 41.3; amount of, salaries, $330,-991,359, an increase of 51.2 per cent.; wages of wage-earners 3.331,733, an increase of 16.3 per cent.; wages, $1.558,191,229 an increase of 32.3 per cent. The value of the products was $8,-980,454,376, an increase of 31.9; cost of materials used, $5,254,286,858, an increase of 31 per cent.; miscellaneous expenses, $833,318,616, an increase of 63 per cent. Every state in the Union shows an increase, but the greatest is in the newest regions of the West where manufacturing is miscellaneous expenses, $833,348,646, an increase of 63 per cent. Every state in the Union shows an increase, but the greatest is in the newest regions of the West, where manufacturing is practically beginning. The South also makes a good showing, the increase there averaging about 50 per cent, while the East goes only to about 25 per cent. In the West it runs to big figures, Idaho, for example, showing an increase in capital of 313 per cent.; of salaries, 454 per cent.; of wages 147 per cent.; expenses, 688 per cent.; product turned out, 182 per cent. Delaware makes the lowest showing, the increase of establishments being only three tenths of one per cent., and of products, four tenths of one per cent. And, friends and fellow citizens, this is only one line. When we take into the count what the farmers will be doing, and what all the other industries, stores and banks and railroads and rivers and canals and the rest of them, by gravy, the finite mind can scarcely comprehend the kind of a country we have got. There is nothing like it in the world, and there never was before we set the pegs."

Children's Toys

"You chaps and paps," said the drummer from Brooklyn, "who think you are treating the kids at home pretty well when you spend a dollar on half a dozen toys for them, ought to get into one of the big New York toy stores the kids at home pretty well when you spend a dollar on half a dozen toys for them, ought to get into one of the big New York toy stores and take a look at prices. Of course, there are toys from five cents up, and more are sold at a dime or a quarter than all the others, but thousands are sold at what seem like fancy prices. There is an electric railroad, for instance, for the little boys of the rich, complete in all details, with an electric locomotive and eighty feet of double track, the whole costing $250. Looks like a good deal of money to put into the hands of a youngster, doesn't it? Still, when he is a man, perhaps he will be handling railroads worth as many millions. For the girl is a dollhouse, complete from garret to cellar, about four feet high, costing $150. One dealer in New York sold over two dozen of these last Christmas. A full-dressed doll from Paris, accompanied by a trunkful of gowns, can be bought for $60. Grocery stores for the boys, and little kitchens for the girls cost as high as $35 each. A folding enamel dressingstable for a doll sells for $18, and a doll's crib of white enamel can be bought for $16. Doll clothes are expensive, some suits selling at $75, and automobile fur costs at $35 each. Toy canary birds in gilt cages sell at $50 each, and there are numerous mechanical toys ranging in price from a dollar to a hundred times as much. there are numerous mechanical trys ranging in price from a dollar to a hundred times as much. Think of a man with ten children trying to keep up with the procession of toys on prices like these. It would be hard sledding, I guess, and yet somebody buys all these toys and they are not used by grown-ups. One New York dealer, alone, sells a million dollars' worth of toys every year, but the heaviest buying is about Christmas-time."

JERRY, THE BACKWOODS BOY.

Copyright, 1904, by The Mershon Company. All rights reserved.

CHAPTER L

A TRAVELER IN TROUBLE.

WISH I knew where that old red cow had gone to.

The speaker was a tall, bright-looking youth of fourteen, dressed in a plain suit of homespun, a battered coonskin cap, and shoes that told of hard wear.

He stood on a rocky cliff that overlooked

a tangle of grass and brushwood, skirted by a tall forest.

"I told Hitty that cow would get away

"I told Hitty that cow would get away if she gave her half a chance," went on the boy to himself, as his eyes searched the brushwood and the row of trees that was nearest to him. "And she wouldn't even tie the bell on her. It's a pity she didn't have to go after the cow herself."

Not a trace of the missing cow was to be seen anywhere, and with something of a sigh Jerry Blue leaped down from the rocky cliff and started for the patch of timber just mentioned.

The time was many years ago, when the

The time was many years ago, when the western portion of New York State was little better than a wilderness, and when even the city of Buffalo, now a place of three hundred and fifty thousand inhabitance. tants, boasted of only a few hundred souls. The spot was in the heart of this wilderness, several miles from where a few settlers had made their homes, and where a tavern erected at a crossroad gave these people a place where they might meet occa-sionally and gossip.

The boy after the red cow had left his

The boy after the red cow had left his home two hours before to look for the missing beast. The cow, though old, was the best milker on Squire Parkhurst's place, and Jerry knew that it would never do to lose the animal altogether.

"If I can't find her, I know the squire will blame me sure," he told himself dismally. "Hitty won't take any of the blame, that's sure. An old maid like her never thinks she's in the wrong. And what will Miss sure. An old maid like her never thinks she's in the wrong. And what will Miss Mabel say, after my promising to keep everything in apple-pie order only yesterday?"

As Jerry drew closer to the trees, a squir rel sitting on a bush attracted his attention. He picked up a sharp stone, took careful aim, and let fly. But the squirrel was too quick for the boy and dodged out of sight

Another miss," grumbled Jerry. "No two ways about it, everything is going wrong today. First, I broke the water pitcher, and then I fell on the woodhouse step and and then I fell on the woodhouse step and barked my shin, and now it seems as if I'd never find that cow. Wish I was rich and didn't have to work for a living."

Having reached the timber, Jerry looked around in the fallen leaves and on the damp ground for some trace of the missing animal. He knew that the cows sometimes wandered off in that direction. Presently be say hoof prints that appeared familiar saw hoof prints that appeared familiar he saw noor prints that to him.

"That's what I'm after!" he cried, his face brightening a little. "Now, Suky, I'll have you pretty quick, and I'll give you are for running away from me, mind good one for running away from me, mind that!"

He set off at a faster pace than before and in less than ten minutes reached a well-defined path running through the woods. Here the marks left by the cow showed that she had crossed the path and gone into the timber beyond.

Jerry was about to follow still further when an odd sound from up the trail caused him to halt. Some animal was running toward him, and now he made out a human toward him, and now he made out a human voice:

"Stop, Nero! stop, I tell you! Whoa, or you'll kill me! Whoa!"

"Something is wrong," murmured Jerry and gazed anxiously along the trail.

Suddenly a horse, saddled and bridled, burst into view, galloping along at a high rate of speed. From one stirrup dragged the form of a horseman, who was trying in vain to halt the runaway animal and pull himself up to the saddle seat.

Jerry was astonished and for the instant it must be confessed that he was likewise frightened. But he did not lose his wits, and as the horse came closer he made a frightened. But he did not lose his wits, and as the horse came closer he made a leap to stop the steed.

His grasp for the bridle was successful, and once having got hold he clung fast like

That's right, stop him!" gasped the unfortunate man who was caught in the stir-rup. "Don't let him get away from you!" Jerry did not answer, for he did not want way and that and took several more steps But then the steed gradually quieted down and finally came to a stand-With the animal standing at rest. it was an easy matter for the horseman to extri-cate himself from his difficulty, and this he did as speedily as possible. He was a kind-ly-looking gentleman of forty-five or fifty, with iron-gray hair and beard.

with iron-gray hair and beard.

"Young man, I owe you one for your bravery," said he, as he took the horse from Jerry's care and tied him to a tree.

"Oh, that's all right, sir; you are welcome," said the boy, and touched his coonsider the said that the said the s

"I believe you saved me from death," went on the gentleman, as he started to brush himself off and rearrange his disordered garments.

"Maybe not that, sir; but I guess I saved you from a jolly good thumping on the rocks," answered Jerry.

"It was a gallant thing to do, and I am wery grateful to you for it. May I ask your

"My name is Jerry Blue, sir."

"Do you live near here?"
"I live with Squire Parkhurst. I am his bound boy."

"Oh, I see. I have never met the squire, but I have heard of him as being a very good man."

good man."
"He is a first-class gentleman, sir."

By Horatio Alger, Jr.

"So you are his bound boy. Are your arents living?"
At this query Jerry's eyes dropped.
"I can't answer that question, sir."

'I can't answer that question, sir."
'Can't answer it?"

No. sir.'

"No, sir."
"Why not?"
"Because I don't know."
"Oh! Well—ahem—I didn't mean to hurt your feelings, my boy."
"Oh, it's all right. 'Most everybody that knows me knows about that."
"Your words make me a bit curious to know something of your history."
"There isn't a great deal about the story, sir. Squire Parkhurst took me out of a poorhouse in New York City. He has only himself and his daughter Mabel, and he wanted a boy around, to do chores and like that." that.'

"Is Blue your true name? It is certainly "Is Blue your true name? It is certainly very uncommon."

"No, Blue isn't my right name. You see I was left at the poorhouse one dark night. Somebody left me on the porch, wrapped up in a blue overcoat. Pinned to the overcoat was a slip of paper which read: 'Please be good to Jeremiah, and some day I may be able to reward you.' So because of that note and the blue overcoat they called me Jerry Blue." Jerry Blue.'

"I see. And they never found out anything concerning your parentage?"
"No, sir. You see they took it that my folks must be too poor to support me, so I guess they didn't try very hard."
"And how long did you remain at the poorhouse?"

"I don't know exactly. Once a man named Cass took me away for a couple of years, but he was hurt in an explosion and I had to go back. Then Squire Parkhurst visited the place with his daughter Mabel, and Mabel picked me out right away, and so I came away out here with them."

"Certainly an odd story, Jerry. I pre-sume you do not know me."
"No, sir—never saw you before."

"My name is Henry Maxwell, and I am

"I don't want to rob you."
"Let me be the judge as to whether you are robbing me or not."
"If some folks saw me with a gold piece, they'd say I had been robbing somebody."
"Would Squire Parkhurst say so? Or his daughter?" daughter?

"Oh, no, sir, I think not. No matter what I do, Miss Mabel knows that I always tell her the truth."

"I will make the matter plain," said Mr. Maxwell and drew out a blank book from his people.

his pocket. On a page he wrote the follow-

"This is to certify that Jerry Blue saved me from a great peril, and for his bravery I have given him the piece of gold he now carries.

Henry Maxwell."

"There, how will that do, Jerry?" and the gentleman handed over the paper.

"That's very nice," said the boy, after spelling out the words. "But are you sure you can spare the money?"
"Yes."

"I--I CAN'T TAKE IT, SIR."

in the wholesale provision business in New | long as I can find them. I have a pretty to the trees, and a low branch swept he to the ground and my boot became entangled in the stirrup, as you saw. I had been dragged only a short distance when you came to my aid. I feel I ought to reward you Jerry" you, Jerry So speaking, the gentleman brought forth a gold piece from his purse and handed it out toward the boy.

CHAPTER II.

JERRY MAKES A FRIEND.

In those days gold was as much in evidence as banknotes, but both were strangers to Jerry's eyes and he stared in astonish-ment at the shining piece in the open palm.

"Why, it's—it's gold!" he gasped.
"To be sure," laughed Mr. Maxwell. "Did you expect that I would offer you lead?"

"I—I can't take it, sir.'
"Why not?" "It's too much. Why, I never had a gold plece in my life," declared Jerry, and with perfect truth.

'All the more reason, my lad, that you ould have one now. You have done me should have one now. You have done me a great service. What I am giving you in return is small in comparison. But I am nearly out of ready funds and what I have left must be used on my journey back to New York."

In the wholesale provision business in New York, with a branch house in Boston. I have been journeying out here on some business connection with my wife's father's estate. My business was finished up yesterday, and I am getting back to New York as fast as I can make the trip."

"I hope you are not afraid of your horse, Mr. Maxwell. He seems gentle enough."

"I am not in the least afraid. It was my own fault that I fell. I rode him too close to the trees, and a low branch swept me to the ground and my boot became entan-"

"I wish I was certain that my father and an end I was more than glad to see my father and mother and my sisters again."

"I wish I was certain that my father and mother were alive." said Jerry. "And I'd flike to know if I have any brothers or sisters."

"There's something more to be thankful for," muttered the traveler with increased peevishness. "It seems as if all the powers of nature were conspiring against me. But "When I get back to New York I will look into the matter for you," returned Mr. Maxwell. "I have some friends who are interested in public affairs, and they may be able to stir up some old records to your advantage, or get hold of some sort of clew recording your parentage."

regarding your parentage."
"If you'll do that, I'll be ever so thankful!" cried the boy quickly. He held out the gold piece. "You can have that back,

"No, my lad, keep the money. I shall certainly do all I can for you. And now I must go."

Mr. Maxwell shook hands and leaped

Mr. Maxwell shook hands and leaped lightly in the saddle.
"Good by, Jerry, and let me thank you again for your service to me."
"Good by, Mr. Maxwell. You are welcome, sir. Please don't forget about me when you get to New York."
"Hell not forget never feer. Good by"

"I shall not forget, never fear. Good by," and in a moment more horse and rider had passed out of sight around a bend in the forest road.

For fully a minute Jerry stood in the open, gazing at the spot where the gentleman had vanished. Then he drew a long to have singular taste in selection time and such a place for repose. "All places alike to Indian John the moody reply.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 25.)

"Wonder if I'll ever see him again, or hear from him?" he mused. "He appeared to be such a nice man. And by the way he was dressed he must be rich. I wish he would find out something about me and send me word." He felt the gold piece and looked at it closely. "A real gold piece and no mistake! Wonder what Hitty will say to that? Guess I had better not tell her about it, or she'll want me to give it to her, or Miss Mabel, or the squire, for safe keepling." ing.

ing."
Speaking of the past had put Jerry in a thoughtful mood, and it was with a slow step that he took up the search for the missing red cow once again. He put the gold piece in his pocket and touched it every minute or so to make sure that it was safe. He felt rich, for never in his life had he possessed so much money as was his own now.

life had he possessed so much money as was his own now.
"Perhaps I can get a gun with that money some day," he thought. "And if I have a gun of my own, and powder and shot, I can go hunting when I please."

The trail of the missing cow was now a plain one and a little later Jerry discovered the animal, grazing contentedly in an opening to his right.

great world.
"I'll find out some day!" he cried, clenching his fists. But he did not know when that day was to be, nor did he dream of the odd things that were to happen to him before the secret of his identity was revealed.

CHAPTER III.

NIGHT IN THE WOODS.

Night was rapidly settling down upon the Night was rapidly settling down upon the landscape, and Jerry had long since gotten home with the red cow, when a horseman might have been seen leading his horse with an air of anxiety along the bridle path several miles to the southward of where the boy had met Henry Maxwell.

The traveler was a man not over thirty-three or thirty-four years of age, stout, and with square-shaped shoulders. He had a round, bullet-shaped head and ferret-like eyes, which, taken in connection with a spreading pug nose and a mottled com-spreading pug nose and a mottled com-plexion, could scarcely be said to make an attractive countenance, even under the most favorable circumstances.

"A pretty prospect," grumbled the traver.
"Here am I with nothing to eat since eler. "Here am I with nothing to eat since early this morning, wandering at random in this accursed wilderness with no chance that I can see of a resting-place. Serves me right for coming out here on what may, after all, prove a wild-goose chase. And yet."—he added more thoughtfully—"if I sell-guided in my plant I will not grade. only succeed in my plans, I will not grudge the trouble I have taken. And I shall suc-ceed, I feel sure. There's nothing that Dick Clarke has set himself to accomplish yet that he has failed in. Hark! what is that?"

As he spoke the dull rumbling of distant thunder came to his ears, and instantly the rain in thick drops began to patter down of nature were conspiring against me. But if I were only sure of a shelter and a little to stay my stomach, I wouldn't mind. A warm heart and a good conscience I've heard spoken of as good companions, but for my part give me a warm fire and good stomachful, and I'll be content."

Meanwhile the darkness had rapidly increased, making the task of guiding the horse more difficult than before. Add to this that the beast was terrified by the storm and lightning, and half disposed to break away from his guide, and we have a complication of troubles which Dick endure without grumbling.

endure without grumbling.

As he strode on with hesitating steps a foot or two in advance of the horse, which he led by the bridle, he suddenly felt that he had stepped upon a soft substance, the nature of which very speedily made itself manifest by the springing up of a tall to manifest by the springing up of a tall Indian in his path.

"Ha! what have we here?" exclaimed Dick, startled. "My good friend, you appear to have singular taste in selecting such a time and such a place for repose."

"All places alike to Indian John," was

IN @ AROUND The HOME

CONDUCTED BY MRS. WHEELER WILKINSON

Terms Used in Crochet

Ch. chain; ch. st. chain stitch; s. c. single crochet; d. c. double crochet (thread over once); tr. c. treble crochet (thread over twice); dtr. double treble crochet (thread over three times); l. c. long crochet; r. st; roll stitch | l. loop; p. picot; r. p. roll picot; sl. st. slip stitch; k. st. knot stitch; sts. stitches; stars mean that the directions given between them should be repeated as indicated before proceeding.

Terms Used in Knitting

k. knit plain; o. over; o. 2, over twice; n. narrow 2 stitches together; p. purl; sl. slip a stitch; tog. together; b. bind; stars and parenthesis indicate

Terms Used in Tatting
d.s. double stitch; p. picot; l. p. long picot; ch.
chain; d. k. double knot; pkt. picot and knot together. *indicates a repetition.

Attractive Christmas Gifts

T no season of the year are women in a greater state of perplexity, than just before Christmas, if they postpone the selection of gifts until the holidays have arrived.

All this needless worry can be avoided, even by the woman of limited means, if one begins to plan and work for this happy occasion a few weeks beforehand, for an almost endless variety of decorative and useful articles can be manufactured at home at a trivat ial cost.

WORKBASKET COMPLETED. FIG. 1.

Contrivances of all sorts, made of cardboard, neatly covered with pretty materials, are durable and many useful devices can be made in this way.

Workbaskets

Fig. 1 illustrates a useful little workbasket which will be not only a "thing of beauty," but, when its convenience has been tested, "a joy forever."

A light cardboard should be used and for covering either silk, linen, cretonne or any pretty cotton goods can be selected.

As the beauty of the finished basket will depend largely on its regularity, it is best to be careful about the measurements and have an accurate pattern, before starting to cut the cardboard.

Take a heavy piece of paper and draw a circle.

Take a heavy piece of paper and draw a circle twenty inches in diameter, to insure its being perfect, place a tack to which tie a string in the center of your paper, now measure ten inches and make a loop in the string into which a lead pencil may be slipped, draw the string taut and mark your circle.

WORKBASKET OPEN. FIG. 2.

Mark an inner one in the same way, having your string four inches in length. This will make your proportions good and give a basket with an eight-inch bottom, and sides six inches high.

Now measure one; half the diameter, or the distance from distance from the center to the the center to the edge, if, for example this is five inches, starting at the center line, at the edge of the circle, measure off this distance three times and you will have arrived at the opposite side of the circle, continue around to the starting point. Now connect these points of division with straight lines, and also draw straight lines across the circles from one side to the other, connecting opposite points, then connect the points where these lines cut the inner circle, with straight lines, and you have the six-sided bottom of your basket, see illustration, Fig. 2. To form the sides, measure off equal lengths on each side of the six points of division in the ner circle; cut out the triangular sections be-tween the pieces which are to form the sides. The slope given the sides of the basket will

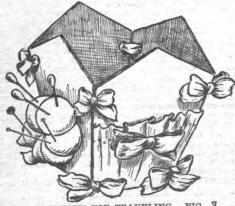

FIG. 3. CONVENIENT FOR TRAVELING.

APRON BAG OPENED.

Dished this, cut your cardboard carefully, and you are ready for the covering.

The basket, as shown, has a plain material inside and a figured one outside, is bound with ribbon and finished with small brass rings through which is run a cord, for tying and keeping the basket in shape.

On the inside of three sides are pockets for different articles such as thread, thimble, buttons, etc., on the fourth is a pincushion of the same material as the lining of the basket, on another section, elastic bands, under which scissors may be slipped and on the other side a a little needlebook.

To cover the basket take your six-sided card-board foundation and the side and the side a little needlebook.

To cover the basket take your six-sided cardboard foundation and lay between two circles of material large enough to well cover it.

Then with a coarse machine needle, one can book and band for scissors. The bows at the corners serve to decorate and also hold the sides together. Fig. 4 shows the basket folded.

Wall Pocket for Papers

This useful article is developed of scrim decorated with cross-stitching, and can be made with very little expense.

One quarter yard of scrim, the same amount of cotton material for lining, two yards of ribbon, and one spool of mercerized cotton or silk will be needed.

will be needed.

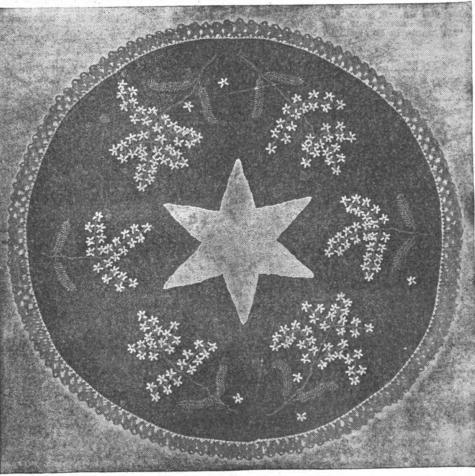

Cut the scrim into two straps, two and one-half inches wide and eighteen inches long, and work in any attractive cross-stitch pattern; in the illustration interlacing circles were used, worked alternately in green and pink, then line these straps with the lining. For the cross ate and sewed together after cover-ing, just as one prefers.

WALL POCKET FOR PAPERS.

BEADWORK CENTERPIECE. By Miss Lizzie Moulton, New Lisbon, Wis.

The particular advantage and unusual feature of this workbasket is that when necessary, it can be made perfectly flat without disturbing much of its contents. This makes it specially desirable when traveling, for most women know the trial it is to carry the articles usually found in a workbasket when one has no conone has no convenience for doing

APRON BAG CLOSED.

A similar basket is illustrated by Fig. 3. This A similar basket is illustrated by Fig. 3. This one is of a little simpler construction, and though hardly as attractive, would prove useful in traveling as it can be folded up. This advantage is gained by attaching the bottom to only one side.

The shape of the basket is illustrated and the size is a matter of individual tasts and need.

with straight lines, and you have the six-sided bottom of your basket, see illustration, Fig. 2.

To form the sides, measure off equal lengths on each side of the six points of division in the outer circle, and draw straight lines to the in-easily stitch around this form on the machine, if it is run slowly and your cardboard is not too heavy. In this way it can be quickly and neatly made when this stage is reached. The needle will break the cardboard enough so the sides will easily bend upwards.

Finish by binding the edge. The basket can be made by hand in this way, or with sides and bottom separate and sewed toto the two lower corners, and connect them by the third worked strap as shown.

Bring the four straps together at the top and fasten with a bow of green and pink ribbon, adding other bows at either side of the third strap. This idea could be carried out in different ways, and is a serviceable little gift which would be almost sure to fill a need.

A Thimble Holder

Another dainty, practical little gift which would be sure to please is a thimble holder. Take three pieces of card-board three and one half inches long and two inches wide in the center; taper from this width to point-ed ends. Cover ed ends. Cover each piece with scented cotton, and then the outside with velvet, silk, or any pretty thing you have; line with a contrasting color, after which overcast together and then cover the seams with braid or any fancy stitch. Leave the top open to receive the thimbles, add ribbon to hang by, with tiny bows at the ends, and this useful little affair is finished.

Apron Bag

One of the newer bags is a combination bag and apron. Nothing would surely be a more delightful gift for a friend who loves to knit or crochet. Washable goods, such as flowered lawn or dimity would probably be the most satisfactory material to use—a yard and one half being needed.

Start by folding over three inches on one end, stitch, leave one inch space and put in another row of stitching; this is for the running ribbon. Now measure thirty-three inches, and fold the wrong sides of the cloth together, stitch in two inches from the fold, leave an inch space and stitch again.

the waist.

the waist.
Run ribbon in just below the other two ruffles and tie at the sides, then take the bottom of each side of the bag on the selvedge and bring it up the running spaces, then overcast together. When not in use drop the apron part into the bag with the work, draw the ribbons closely and all work is free from soil.

A Jewel Box

A pint tin dipper, obtainable almost anywhere, a little silk or wool and ribbon are all that is required to manufacture this pretty jewel box.

Begin the work by winding the silk or wool, whichever is used, closely around the handle.

Then with a darning needle and double strands, weave under and over two threads. Do this closely so the handle will be well covered.

Now crochet a chain which will reach around the will reach around the dipper.

Ist row.—3tr. in 4 JEWEL BOX.
in 4th st. of ch.,
*sl. 1 ch., 3 tr. in next ch. *, repeat from *to to the end of the chain.
2nd row.—Same as 1st, only catch under ch. between groups of 3 tr.
3rd, 4th and 5th rows.—The same.
6th row.—1 s. c. in every stitch. Sew together under the handle. Run ribbon in the 3rd row and finish with a bow on one side.
For a cover cut a circle of cardboard the right size and crochet a covering for it, ch. 6, join.
1st row.—24 d. c. under ch. 6, join with sl. st. 2nd row.—3 tr. in every d. c., increasing 1 st. every 6th st. to keep the work flat. Continue in this way until it is large enough to cover the top, then make a scallop all around by putting 7 tr. in 1 st, sl. 2, 1 s. c. in next, 7 tr. in 3rd st., and so on.

Make the inside cover all of double crochet, sew the two together over the cardboard, run in the run, sew the cover on just across the handle, and this little receptacle is complete.

Beadwork Centerpiece

Beadwork Centerpiece

Beadwork Centerpiece

This is one of the older forms of needle craft which has grown in popularity recently, and is now being used in almost every possible way for personal and household adornment.

Unusual patience is required to make a centerpiece like the one here illustrated, but the finished work well repays one for the labor.

Black velvet was used for the foundation and the star in the center worked in solidly with white beads. For the flower sprays, light blue beads were used for the blossoms, the center of each showing a yellow bead, and two shades of green were selected for leaves and stems. For this work use strong thread rather than silk.

Have strands of the different colored beads, each threaded on white cotton, then they can be picked off easily as needed. Use a long thread, knot the end, pull needle through to the right side. Now supposing a leaf is to made, with the needle pick off two or three green beads, then take a stitch close to the center vein of the leaf, now three or four beads and proceed as before. Shading can be done nearly as well as with embroidery silks.

Finish the edge with groups of three white beads—the same as were used for the center and any pretty scallop in black silk.

We are indebted to Mrs. Lizzie Moulton, New Lisbon, Wis., for this work.

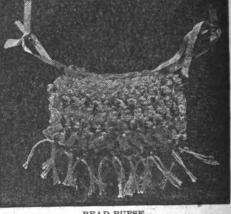

Any number of gifts may be made of beads. Chains, necklaces, belts, watch-fobs are especially popular, and even portieres, pocketbooks, and bags are made wholly or decorated with them.

Bead Purse

them.

Bead Purse

This has a crocheted foundation, which is very easily made as follows:

BEAD PURSE

1st row.—Ch. 6, 1 tr. in 2 st., ch. 6, tr. on tr., repeat 10 times and turn.
2nd row.—Ch. 2, 6 tr., join last with first tr., ch. 2, 6 tr. in the next space, join to first tr.,

ch. 2, 6 tr. in the next space, join to like the turn.

The 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th and 13th rows all same as the 1st.

14th row.—Make 12 spaces.

Now, turn the work on the wrong side, and sew the ends together, this gives an oblong purse. Turn right side out, run ribbon in the spaces at the top, and knot fringe in to finish the bottom. Now, using the same color of silk, sew beads on of different colors, hit or miss, or work out some design. or work out some design.

on one end in another ing ribbon, ad fold the teh in two space and right in. sl. st. g 1 st. ntinus gh to round t, 7 tz.

ochet, d, run ss the lete.

craft ind is way

n and with blue ter of les of For lk. eads, an be read, right with eads, f the ed as all as hite

Points to Remember

Always write on one side of the paper only and leave space between the lines.

Write recipes, hints and requests on separate paper in stead of including them in the letters.

stead of including them in the letters.

Mail all letters at least THREE MONTHS before the issue for which they are intended.

Always give your correct name and address, as no letter will be published excepting over it. This enables the sisters to write directly to each other.

Do not write us for samples or patterns of the fancy work which have appeared. When publishing any particular piece of work—we give the plainest possible directions for making and usually illustrate it—we also give, when possible, the name and address of the party who submitted it, and any further information must be obtained from them. It is absolutely discless for you to write us.

As it has come to our notice that sisters have been ask-further information must be obtained from them. It is absolutely useless for you to write us.

As it has come to our notice that sisters have been asking certain sums for information and patterns that should have been furnished free, we here give notice that no charge should be made or money asked for any offers of assistance or information which have or will appear in any letters here published; should there be, kindly notify us, and the offender will be denied the further use of these columns. As this department is run solely to afford an opportunity for the mutual exchange of ideas, recipes, and helpful information, we do not intend it to be used by anyone for a commercial purpose.

Do not send us exchange notices; we have no exchange column, and cannot publish them.

Do not ask us to publish letters referring to money in any way, such as requesting donations or offering articles for sale. Much as we sympathize with the suffering and unfortunate it is impossible to do this as we would be flooded with similar requests.

quests.

Do not request souvenir postals unless you have complied with the conditions which entitle you to such a notice. See offer.

All subscribers are cordially invited to write to this department and all stand an equal chance of having their letters appear, whether they are old or new members. As our space is limited, naturally the most interesting helpful letters are selected.

Write fully of your views and ideas, yourself and homesurroundings, "give as freely as ye receive," but if your first letter does not appear, do not feel utterly discouraged. Remember the old adage, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again."

With November's bleak and lowering skies come thoughts of all the good things which we enjoy on this great national festival, Thanksgiving.
Would it not be well for us to give a thought to the deep solemnity of the first occasion which caused this day to be set apart and celebrated by the little band of Puritans, while indulging in an unlimited amount of turkey and dulging in an unlimited amount of turkey and plum pudding?

Few of us stop to think of the true meaning of the day, or the many blessings we each have for truly giving thanks.

A word or two and we will turn to the letters. To several who have expressed a desire for shells, I would say these requests were omitted as it is almost impossible to send these by mail, without being broken.

E. L. Allen, Tena Brown, L. M. Robinson. Come again, but please comply with the above rules in regard to writing for this corner.

E. L. Alien, Tena Brown, L. M. Rodinson. Come again, but please comply with the above rules in regard to writing for this corner.

Dear Comfort Sisters:

Will you admit another stranger to your "Cozy Corner?" While I am a stranger to most of you, Comfort is no stranger to me, but is a most welcome visitor, and has been for years, both before and since my marriage.

Would you be surprised if I should tell you that I am an Indian? Well, I am a Cherokee Indian and live in Fort Gibson, Indian Territory; and though I see quite a good many letters from Indian Territory, I really don't think I ever saw one from a Cherokee.

I live almost in town, and still live on a farm. My husband is not exactly a farmer as he rents the land and attends to his brickyard. He has now a large kiln almost ready for burning. Did any of you ever see a kiln afire at night? It is certainly a beautiful sight?

I have some pretty chickens, the Black Langshans, and I like them very much as they are such good layers, although they do not set early in the spring; but I like to raise fall chicks the best, anyway, as I seem to have better luck with them.

I suppose I must think of closing soon as it is considered presumptuous to stay too long, especially when one is a newcomer, isn't it?

But I must tell you of our boy. He was two years old June 2nd, 1906, and we are all so proud and fond of him, especially my husband's mother, as he is her only grandchild. She (mother) lives quite near us and you all must know what a great comfort and help she must be to me in every way.

We all have "allotments," or farms, here. There are five of us, my husband, his brother, myself and son. We intend to go to California as soon as we can get our lands here in a position to leave in other hands.

Now I will close and see how this is received, and when I write again I will try and tell you something of our country and the people. Wishing each and all success in her every effort.

Mrs. Town I will close and see how this is received, and when I write again I will tr

Read the notice in another part of this aper and learn how you can get a fine copy f'St. Elmo' in book form absolutely free

DEAR COMFORT READERS:

A year has rolled by since my last visit to your "Cozy Corner," and I want to chat just a minute, but I will endeavor to be brief. Let me first thank each one who sent me butter-scotch recipes, and they are legion. Had I followed each formula, I fear I would be utterly lost and foundered ere this, in a sea of butter-scotch past comparing. It is said, "Life is sweet." Could death under any circumstances be sweeter?

I surmise J. A. D. is a very busy woman if she lives on a farm and carries so large a list of correspondents.

Mrs. Linden. Lam more than glad to know my and ding recipe found favor in the second.

mrs. Linden. I am more than glad to know my pudding recipe found favor in your eyes. Thank Jou.

I have received so very many letters during the last two years, asking information about my state and its climate. I am going to add a few lines, if I may, relating some of the details which appear to be in brisk demand.

may, relating some of the details which appear to be in brisk demand.

Washington is naturally and climatically divided in two distinct sections by the Cascade Range. Eastern is as different in every respect from Western Washington as two countries with the wide ocean between. On the eastern side raw land is covered with sage brush—here irrigation is king, and under his sovereign touch the desert is made to blossom as the rose. The soil is wonderfully fertile—nearly everything is produced, including peanuts, sweet potatoes and tobacco. Dairying and grain-raising I would judge were the chief pursuits. There is some wind in summer, otherwise the climate is perfect and the winters ideal.

We cross the mighty Cascades and a new picture is spread before us. All is freshness; every shade of green greets the eye; sunny meadow-lands framed in woodlands, wonderful forests of cedar and fir on a hundred hillsides, the delightful odor of salt-water; Washington's inland sea laps idly on its pebbly beaches. We have reached the wonderful Puget Sound country. Here the delightful rain falls nine months of the year. All plant-life patterns after Mr. Finney's turnip, and grows and grows (weeds, too); grass in the meadows, lice on the hops (the hops, too); moss on everything (old settlers not excluded.) Anent climate, the summers are lovely; and if it's gorgeous sunsets you want, we have them after the Queen's taste. I have steamed down the Sound and watched the crimsons and golds fade into every roseate tint of pink, then through the scale to ultra-marines baffling telling, and then, as the lights died out from sea and sky, "Silently, one by one in the intuits weedened."

"Silently, one by one, in the infinite meadows of Heaven, Heaven, Blossomed the lovely stars—the forget-me-nots of the angels."

I wish everyone who reads this could visit this section and view for themselves the wonders of this West Coast Empire. Any further particulars cheerfully furnished on receipt of stamp. "With every turn of Fortune's busy wheels, some good betide thee."

FRED N. SCRIBNER, Sumner, Wash.

DEAR EDITOR AND SISTERS:
First a word for Comfort, our dear little paper.
Who can say too much in praise of it? It's worth more than thrice its price. I have been a subscriber three years, and will never be without it again, and though I take more magazines, Comfort leads.
I appreciate it from cover to cover, especially the sisters' corner which helps many inexperienced housekeepers and mothers. How I sympathize with the poor shut-in friends. Kind sisters, let us do something to cheer their days while here on earth. If there is a will there is always a way. To the sister who wants to know how to clean an old stove of rust, I would advise her to grease well with hot lard and let it stand for a while then wash off with sand soap; when dry polish in the usual way.
Let me tell you how to make a pretty sofa pillow.
Take four pieces of silk different shades, not the same shape, but worked out to make a square pillow; on the first work, Don't worry; the second,
Look pleasant; the third, Be content; the fourth,
Home sweet Home; work with shaded silk.

To make a broom last longer dip in soapsuds for a carpet to be swept with a broom treated in this way. For chapped face and hands use one ounce glycerine, one ounce alcohol, mix with eight ounces rose water.

My current pie recipe you will find in the recipe column, which I wish the sisters would try.

rose water.

My current pie recipe you will find in the recipe column, which I wish the sisters would try.

I live nine miles from Twin Falls City. It is a good country here in the valley. The soil is fine, white and sandy, looks like ashes, and it is volcanic ashes. The climate is considered very healthy, and the scenery is fine. Blue Lakes is a lovely place. They are situated down in the Snake river canyon. The water is the color of rinse water when you first put in the bluing, but when you dip it up, it is as clear as crystal.

We spent the Fourth down at Shoshone Falls. They are a grand sight, you have to go down a dugway, that is a road built alongside of the canyon, It is very narrow in some places, just wide enough for one wagon to pass. Then every little ways turn outs are made so two can pass. The falls are lovely, they claim they are three hundred and eighty feet high. It looks like a large mass of white foam or steam, and the spray forms a most brilliant colored rainbow way down the river. On top of the cliffs is a large hotel, and this spray rising constantly, keeps the grounds and flowers beautifully fresh and green. Large wire cable ropes are fastened on iron rocks, and one has to hold on to these in going down and coming up the cliffs. Then there are rope ladders, so one can go down to the edge of the water.

The Snake river appears to be bright green, and about the first of each month, in certain places, one can walk almost across it on the lava rocks; these are covered with a soft thick moss, so it is like walking on velvet. There are no trees here excepting what are set out, but sage brush abounds and this is used for fuel. It makes a fine bright free.

Some day we expect to visit Twin Falls, then if you would like to hear I will call again and tell you of our trip and about them.

Success to Comfort, and its large band of readers.

MRS. Belle Rush, Hansen, Idaho.

Renew your subscription and get a friend to subscribe also while the price of 15 cents per year is in force. "St. Elmo" will be con-tinued for some months and other good stories will follow on. COMFORT is the best monthly published, so say thousands.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

As someone wanted to know how to make paper flowers I will send directions for making the Trumpet vine blossom, though in appearance suggesting a rather complex formation, in reality they are easily made.

Take a piece of paper nearly three inches long and two inches wide, slip a few pieces of yellow thread in for a center, gum the edge lengthwise of the paper to form a tube. Curve the top into five summer-time," and I am sitting in the shade in my rocking-chair, writing to the sisters' corner.

I will give a few suggestions which I hope will prove helpful to the sisters.

When cooking rice, put a small piece of butter in the stew-pan, and it will not boil over on the stove, and will not stick to the the pan so badly as without the butter.

If you use oatmeal for breakfast, be sure to put it on to cook the first thing. Take two parts water and one part oatmeal. Let the water come to a boil, stir in the meal slowly and cook until the rest of the breakfast is ready. It should cook an hour at least. Set it on the edge of the stove to keep it from burning. Salt the water before putting in the meal, and a piece of butter will keep it from boiling over. Serve with sugar and cream. Try this way, sisters, and I know you will like it much better than if cooked but a few minutes.

This is the way I cook beefsteak: Tender the meat, using a plate or a meat tenderer, if you have one; salt it and cut in the desired, sized pieces. Have ready a frying-pan of hot fat, roll each piece of meat in flour and cook until very brown.

When sweeping a room that is very dusty, try this. Wet the broom in cold water shaking out all that you can, and go over the room with it, wetting it again as often as is necessary. The dust will stick to the damp broom and there will be but very little dust rise in the room.

What a "comfort" Comfort is! I enjoy reading the sisters' letters. How good and kind our editor is to allow us so much space in which to exchange ideas. There is just one thing lacking. Why can't we have the editor's picture at the head of "our corner?"

Then there's the League of Cousins, and Uncle Charlie's funny replies. And the stories aren't they just grand? And all for so little. I am sure Comfort is the best little paper published.

The dear shut-ins have my sincere sympathy. Mrs. Wickliffe R. Smith, Cameron, Nez Perce Co., Idaho.

Co., Idaho.

Dear Sisters:

A New Englander asks for admission. I am another lover of fancy work and this department. Maybe these suggestions from experience will be of interest to some of you. Nearly always there is an unworn square in lace curtains when the remainder is beyond repair. Two pairs of these curtains or four pieces will make a very pretty bed-spread. Put the pieces together with insertion of a similar kind and pattern, running lengthwise and crosswise of the bed.

If more width is required add insertion all around and finish with a ruffle of net. Place over colored cambric or muslin.

Ordinary grape baskets, if in good condition, can be painted or shellaced, decorated with colored flowers cut from catalogues and made to answer many purposes, such as waste or workbaskets or for holding the darning materials or fancy work. By cutting off the handles, they can be utilized to hold two or three pots of growing plans or collections of photographs.

I would like to hear from any of the sisters, especially those from California or Canada. Wishing success to all, Delia Cappalli, Natick, R. I.

summer-time," and I am sitting in the shade in my Take Compost with the rest of the good things hanksgiving day.

C-ranberry jelly,
O-nions stewed in cream,
M-ashed potatoes,
F-ruit salad,
O-ysters,
R-oman punch (frozen),
T-urkey.

M—ashed potatoes,
F—ruit salad,
O—ysters,
R—oman punch (frozen),
T—urkey.

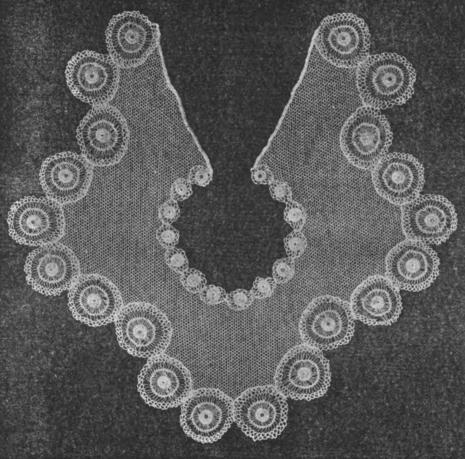

How's that for a "William Fare"? (as Mrs. Griffitts wrote me).

My Dears:

Most of those taking Comyorn, will, I hope, have a good dinner on this time-honored day. Those iliving on farms need not necessarily have turkey; a year-old chicken roasted is good with mashed potatoes, gravy, one vegetable, pickles, and even a plain old-fashioned apple pie, is a dinner not to be sneezed at; let me tell you many will not have as good. Those of us that have this much let us not for the state of the state of the say to Mrs. Beat of the state of the say to Mrs. Beat of the state of the say to Mrs. Beat of the say to the say the say to the say the say the say to the say th

Allow me to state to the ones that are sending (CONTINUED ON PAGE 10.)

Many Exciting Incidents in "St. Elmo" Many Exciting incidents in 'Jt. Elmo' that appear in the first part of the book cannot be thoroughly understood by the readers who now see COMFORT for the first time. All those who desire to get the full and complete book of 'Jt. Elmo' conetaining 37 chapters—565 pages—can now secure a copy absolutely free. Read the offer on another page and act at once as the supply is very limited.

Decide on the shape of your collar, draw your pattern on heavy paper, then baste on the net.

Large Wheels

Use No. 60 thread for centers, and No. 100 for Use No. 60 thread for centers, and No. 100 for rest of the work.

To make the large wheels, wind common twine twice around a common steel crochet hook, fasten with a needle and thread. Cover this circle with s. c. until it is firm.

2nd row.—Hold the loose end of twine between thumb and finger, and crochet over it

I live on a farm in the southwestern part of Minnesota, on a treeless prairie, excepting some planted for groves and here and there a few along the river. Wheat, oats and corn are among the main ed for groves sha and corn are among the main products.

I have been married over a year and have the sweetest baby boy. I am twenty-one years old, five feet five inches in height, weight, one hundred and thirty-five pounds, have light brown hair and fair complexion. I enjoy books and flowers and fancy work. I would like to have a little home library; will the sisters kindly assist me and send me some books they have to spare, also silk pieces? I will return favors any way I can. Sisters, if you cannot help me in any way, please write. I will answer all letters. With best wishes to Comfort and the sisters, Mrs. Wm. Wildung, Bellingham, Minn.

Next row, ch. 6, 1 s. c. under ch. 2, ch. 6, 1 s. c. under ch. 2, repeat.

Last row, ch. 7, 1 s. c. under ch. 6, ch. 7, 1 s. c. under ch. 6, repeat around.

Small Wheels

Make the centers the same as the large wheels, omit the hairpin work, and finish with two rows of chain 6 caught with single crochet, the first row in every other stitch, the last under the chains of 6.

When the required number of wheels are finished arrange them on the restrent and but 2nd row.—Hold the loose end of twine between thumb and finger, and crochet over it with s. c., into the first row, occasionally putting 2 s. c. in one to make it full enough. Cut off twine and sew to wrong side.

Now, make a piece of plain hairpin work of 20 loops, and sew with fine thread to the little wheel, then catch into a loop, and crochet once round, thus: Ch. 2, 1 s. c. in loop, ch. 2, 1 s. c. in loop and repeat.

When the required number of wheels are finished, arrange them on the pattern, and buttonhole to the net on the right side, using fine cotton, then cut away the net on the wrong side.

The collar as illustrated closes in the back; to finish the edges, baste the net over a cord, and then cover with single crochet. This makes a dainty, dressy little collar which is equally pretty over dark or light dresses.

MRS. EMMA GARITALDI, Mendocino, Cal.

lobes or divisions. Twist a fine wire about the bas lobes or divisions. Twist a fine wire about the bas for a stem, bulging out the lower end of the flowe for a stem, bulging out the lower end of the flowe to form a bowl. Twist the part already wound wit wire with a narrow piece of paper to form a ball shaped ovary of the flower, and from the base of this, twist the stem with green. Make two mor little hard knobs or balls about half the size of marble from the paper and twist in with the stem Cut leaves from dark green tissue, making the edges irregular, and place upon the stem in pairs Next time I shall give some other directions, as can make all kinds of flowers.

MRS. LIZZIE SKULTETY, Leavitt, Neb.

A wonderful offer of "St. Elmo" in book form free, appears in another part of this paper. Look it up and then act.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

I will comply with the request for the obesity ointment and will gladly reply to any wishing further information if they will inclose a stamped envelope. Here is the formula: Iodide of potassium, three grains; vaseline, fifty grains; lanolin, fifty grains; tincture of benzoin, two drops. Make into a pomade and rub all over the fat parts twice a day. I should like to hear from any sister living at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

MRS. M. E. WOODWARD, Burlington, Mich.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:
I have just finished reading my Comfort and the many letters from the sisters in which there is much valuable help and information.

I am not a stranger, having written twice before, and I hope the editor will not think that I am trying to take more than my share, if I come again.

Just now it is the middle of July—"The good old"

The Hidden Wedding Treasure or.

The Mystery of the San Francisco Earthquake

Copyright, 1906, by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Inc.

CHAPTER I.

HAPPY AS WEDDING BELLS.

CHAPTER I.

HAPPY AS WEDDING BELLS.

OMORROW evening. darling, you will be my bride," whispered a handsome young man, bending tenderly over one of the most beautiful of girls, who, blushing delightfully and drooping her soft, violet eyes, tried to control the sweet tremor of her rosy lips. "Yes, Rosalle, my own, in twenty-four hours you and I will be walking down the aisle. The min arm, your veil thrown back from your dear face, and all the world will envy me my wife." What pride there was in the young man's tones.

"And me my husband, Ireton," whispered the girl, Rosalle Bronson, one of the belles of San Francisco, who upon the morrow was to be married to Ireton Kensington, the owner of the Ireton addition to San Francisco, and member of the law firm of Kensington the reton addition to San Francisco, and member of the senior member.

The course of true love had been very smooth for these two, who were thoroughly in love with each other, and Ireton Kensington felt himself one of the most-to-be-envied men, although the time was to come when he would confess that upon this beautiful April night, he knew nothing of the true character of his bride-elect.

The dainty girl, reared in wealth, with every fancy indulged, possessed traits of character totally unsuspected even by those nearest and dearest.

As her words fell from her lovely lips, though, her bridegroom was delighted, for she had been proud and shy, and not over demonstrative, and he knew that it had been a struggle with her to say that much.

"Why, you darling," he whispered back, longing to kiss her, but controlling the impulse, for they were sitting in full view of the dozen or more of their friends who had met at the Bronson home upon the last night of the maidenhood of the daughter of the house.

Rosale understood his wish, and blushed again, then rising, she smillingly led the way linto a small room half library, half sittingroom, held sacred to her own dearest friends, and leven friends by Mr. Bronson's voice calling their names, and they emerged, b merseit upon her lather's knee, and threw a white, dimpled arm about his thick, short neck.

"Yes, tell us, dear, what it is to be," she said gayly.

"Just twenty years ago today, two things happened," John Bronson said slowly, "my wife bore me this daughter," and his great hand stroked the golden hair, "and I made my first extra fifty dollars. I made it honestly, through regular business methods. I had made money before, but never that much that was aside from regular expenses, and when I knew that our little girl had come, I resolved to dedicate it and all that might accrue from it, to her, and to turn it over to her on her wedding day. It was to be her own fortune."

"Why, dear, how delightful!" cried the young bride, kissing her father. Those who knew that family best observed that Rosalle tactfully comprised between the "Papa" of her acquaintances, and the "Pappy" of his own calling, but applying the name "dear" to him.

"Yes, the day my girl was born saw the knew that family best observed that Rosalie tactfully comprised between the "Papa" of her acquaintances, and the "Pappy" of his own calling, but applying the name "dear" to him.

"Yes, the day my girl was born saw the beginning of her fortune, and it isn't a small one. A blessing seemed to rest upon that little hoard. There is plenty more for her later on, but tomorrow my wedding present to her is going to be that fifty dollars with all that has come of it all in bright twenty-dollar gold pieces. It is all fixed that way so she can see her fortune in good gold, stamped with the government's approval. Now what do you think of your old pappy's idea?" and he looked at his daughter, a broad smile on his face.

Judge Kensington thought to himself:

"Too bad that Bronson cannot forget pioneer methods, and give his daughter a check. I am glad I selected diamonds," and he thought with satisfaction of the costly necklace in its red velvet box among the other wedding gifts, guarded night and day by squads of detectives, in an upstairs room.

His son, however, understood the sterling character and underlying romantic love John Bronson possessed, and he thought:

"The dear old fellow. Rosalle has a father worthy even of her."

The young girl, with her eyes shining with gomething not diamonds, threw her arms about her father's neck, and said so softly that few heard her:

"What makes you so good to me, dear? It makes it all the harder to leave you," and each heard the heart of the other beat.

"Do you think it wise to put any great amount of money where it could be stolen?" Judge Kensington asked a little ponderously.

"Don't fear, Judge, it's safe enough. Until tomorrow, though, no one shall know where it is, nor shall anyone know the exact amount, although I'm not afraid to say that it will take seven figures to represent it. Whether the first figure will be one or nine, however, I de not intend to tell," and he laughed that great laugh of his.

"Yos sir," Mr. Bronson said sturdily. "Every cent of it was made honestly. We

By William T. Valentine

John Bronson cried, and Rosalie, kissing him on the nearest cheek, slid from his knee, and floated away in Irreton's arms to a dreamy waitz, played by one of their companions. There were evidences of luxury all about. Costly turnishings filled the handsome house ers, and some of the rooms were already decirated for the reception which was to follow the ceremony at the church on the morrow.

The young people who swarmed about the brief and hides come is weeken shed of the reception which was to follow the ceremony at the church on the morrow.

The young people who swarmed about the brief and hides come is weeken shed of the reception which was to follow the ceremony at the church on the morrow.

The young people who swarmed about the brief and hides come is weeken shed of the reception which was to follow the creening at the church of the creening and the control of the creening and the control of the creening and the control of the griss and some of the creening and the control of the griss were jealous of her, for all has been so full were rich; none of the griss were jealous of her, for all has pichty to make them happy, and the young all the control of the griss were jealous of her, for all has pichty to make them happy, and the young all the control of the griss were jealous of her, for all has a joyous crowd, upon a very happy occasion, and when the party finally broke up. Iretol, linking his arm into that of his father, said will will shall recognized Rosalie's good fortune, not one invited the companion of the griss were jealous of her, for all has a joyous crowd, upon a very happy occasion, and when the party finally broke up. Iretol, linking his arm into that of his father, said of her own happiness, he was not forgotten. Willing his arm into that of his father, said of her own happiness, he was not forgotten to the griss was a joyous crowd, upon a very happy occasion, and when the party finally broke up. Iretol will be a griss was a joyous crowd, upon a very happy occasion, and when the party hall be

Anyone looking might have noticed that she also asked something, to which he made a reply, so fraught with deepest feeling, that he seemed far removed from the fun and frivolity, and she nodded and said in a low he seemed far removed from the fun and frivolity, and she nodded and said in a low voice:

"In my morning-room," then swept away, and a moment later he went out of the draw, and a moment later he went out of the draw, ing-room, although dozens of gifts still remained on the tree for him.

This occasioned some good-natured nonsense, but no one went in search of him, or nosaile Bronson, who soon thereafter was also missing, and both might have been found in the morning-room of the hostess.

As Rosalle slipped into the room, she saw the illuminated face of her lover, and with a little cry of joy sprang to meet him, and as their lips met in a rapturous kiss, she realized what true love does mean.

Finally Rosalle cried:
"I want to see that present."
"You must remember, darling, that I was very much restricted, for I dared not say as much in my present as I wanted to, but I hoped you read my heart's secret."

Blushing delightfully, she opened the dainty box of violet velvet, lined with pure yellow satin, in which was a magnificent gold indistand, enamelled with violets, in the heart of each was a pearl.

"Ireton!" she cried in an awed voice. "I never saw anything so lovely. The color of my hair and eyes, combined with my name! How you must love me to think of that!" and she gave him the sweetest kind of a kiss.

"And now mine," he cried, but she held his hand, saying:

"Mine Is nothing, compared to yours," but he cried, but the relation of the color of the color of the cried of the color of the cried of th

How you must love me to think of that!" and she gave him the sweetest kind of a kiss. "And now mine," he cried, but she held his hand. saying:
 "Mine is nothing, compared to yours," but he quietly smiled, and went stolldly ahead, unfastening the yellow ribbons about his red box, the colors he were whenever engaged in any athletic sport, red and yellow, and found within a fine piece of bronze as a paper-weight. For an instant he looked at it, his pleasure breaking out all over his face, and then he caught her in his arms:
 "My blessed girl! Am I a 'Lion-hearted man' to you?"
 Rosalie's face was crimson with blushes, as she said softly:
 "I found it a few days ago. Until then I had been in despair, for nothing seemed to suit you. I had heard you say that you had lost your paper-weight, and then I knew you liked bronzes.
 "Very sweet, dear, but how do you explain the choice, this exquisite 'Richard the Lion-hearted?" and again he kissed her.
 "Because, my dear, nothing so well suited you in my heart, for I knew very well then that I loved you, and hoped with all my heart that you did me," and from that happy beginning, their love affair had progressed to their wedding eve, and they had known no trouble, and Ireton had almost finished their home in the Ireton Addition, on the site of the old family home of the Iretons, a somewhat unsightly pile. For nearly three months, Ireton had lived with his father, at the latter's club, but for the past day or so, both of them had been at the Palace Hotel.

Truly, upon the evening of the seventeenth of April, 1906, reflected nothing but happiness for all parties interested.

CHAPTER III.

THE DREAM OF THE PUTURE.

It was long before Rosalie dropped into slumber that night of the seventeenth of April, when she had been so gloriously happy, and looking forward toward her wedding the next day.

looking forward toward her wedding the next day.

The thought of her father's love in preparing so delightful a surprise for her, also kept her awake, and she could feel her fair face blushing so, the little seel-possession, or it would have been impossible for her to get through the next few hours, for she was forced to sit there, simple and self-possession, or it would have been impossible for her to get through the next few hours, for she was forced to sit there, simple and self-possessed and listen to words like these in her ear, spoken by a young man whose face' was as sober as hers:

"Remember the Christmas your mother had me over, poor little friendless chap I was; I have never forgotten the dear lady, and I am going to try to pay back to her daughter while I we her."

"Little Rosie, remember that day you cried in the result of the resul day.

The thought of her father's love in preparing

CHAPTER IV.

AND THE EARTH QUAKED, THE SKIES FELL AND ALL WAS CHAOS.

After leaving the stately Bronson mansion, Ireton Kensington walked rapidly toward the lower part of the town, for he and his father were living at the Palace Hotel until his marriage, but his thoughts were elsewhere, with his bride of tomorrow, and his heart sung riage, but his thoughts were elsewhere, with his bride of tomorrow, and his heart sung with joy.

"Thank God! there is nothing really wrong in my life. To be sure I've not always done exactly as I ought, but I can look into her dear eyes without shame, and if I die tomorrow, I can go forth with a reasonably clear conscience," and he paused to take a look at the beautiful city lying in the moonlight. Surely if ever a city personified solidity and everlasting strength, it was upon that night between the late hours of the seventeenth and the early hours of the eighteenth.

"The Golden West," he muttered. "John Bronson is right it, and it holds my treasure, the fruit of that wonderful West."

Probably he said the words aloud, at any rate his sentimental attitude betrayed him, for two athletic young men clasped from either side, and mocking volces rang out.

Ireton turned sharply, then laughed too, for he saw first the handsome face of Gerald (CONTINUED ON PAGE 20.)

CHAPTER II.

something of the life He has given me." and her violet eyes were filled with a strange, deep light.

The father, deeply moved, bent his head and kissed her with a new reverence in his heart, whispering:

"Daughter, when the Little Mother heard of my plan she was delighted, but she said a little regretfully:

"The idea is beautiful, but when the time comes for baby to marry, I will have nothing to give her, like you." My child, your mother gave her gift when you were born, and now, though she has been waiting for us in Heaven these many years, it still exists, and is better than mine," and the strong voice trembled.

"What is it?" whispered the daughter, her head on the father's shoulder.

"Her own brave, sweet disposition, daughter. Cherish that with your life. The money is nothing, you have that which is much better, and which no amount of wealth can take away."

"Dear, how happy you make me." she said softly. She had missed the Little Mother very much these past few months, and never more then now.

HOW TRUE LOVE HAD BLOSSOMED.

now let me just give you some figures,"

Now let me just give you some figures, and shows and sho on long skirts? How grown up you were, bless you, and how like a little queen you took the American Beauty roses.

"THIS WAY QUICK!" AND LOOKING UP THEY ALL RECOGNIZED ROSALIE.

"I remember another Christmas, Rosie, darling, stop blushing so, sweetheart, or I'll claim the kisses due me, right here. I wonder if you remember that Christmas? It was towards evening, and you were still a girl, and I old enough to have known better. I had been paying some Christmas calls, and had imbibed too much of rather strong punch. My fresh, pure little darling! Do you remember what you said, precious? I will never forget it, and it has lingered all these years, and kept me from ever trying to make a beast of myself. Such a few words, yet the voice and look: "Why, Ireton, I am so disappointed!" That was all, and yet those words have made metry never to disappoint you again. Do you think I can keep up to your high standard?"

The little hands trembled, the eyes were veiled with unshed tears, and the girl could barely say:

"Ireton, spare me, I cannot stand it. No girl was ever wooed as I," and she flashed him a look, which nearly unsettled his head, but he respected her almost wail, and tried to realize his happiness.

Suddenly he observed that his gift to her was in her hands, and he held his breath. He had wrapped up so much love and hope in it, that he could not endure that the laughing room gaze upon it; however, he need not have worried, for she slipped it aside and deftly unfastened another, one bestowed in a joking manner.

When hers came to him, he rose, and walk-joy un hers came to him, he rose, and walk-joy un hers came to him, he rose, and walk-joy un hers came to him, he rose, and walk-joy un hers came to him, he rose, and walk-joy un hers came to him, he rose, and walk-joy un hers came to him, he rose, and walk-joy un hers came to him, he rose, and walk-joy un hers came to him, he rose, and walk-joy un hers came to him, he rose, and walk-joy un hers came to him, he rose, and walk-joy un hers came to him, he rose, and walk-joy un hers came to him, he rose, and walk-joy un hers ca than now.

"Do not fret, daughter, about your mission in life. With your mother's disposition you will rise to the opportunity, and be equal to it, no matter how severe the strain," and then kissing her once more, he told her to go to bed for he wanted her to show some roses beneath her bridal veil.

All unconscious was he, as he watched the slender figure going up the broad stairs, that he had uttered a prophecy, or that before another day had passed, the fortune bestowed by his wife would prove of many times more value than the one he had so carefully hoarded.

LEAGUE RULES:

To be a comfort to one's parents. To protect the weak and aged.

To be kind to dumb animals.
To love our country and protect its flag. COMFORT for one year and admittance to the League of Cousins for only 20 cents. Join at once. Everybody welcome.

CONDUCTED BY UNCLE CHARLIE

F you will kindly hop up in my lap, Toby will put a few logs and a couple of barrels of kerosene on the fire and we'll sit around the blazing hearth and chin awhile. Maria will hand round the coffee and cake and we'll forget that it's blowing a blizzard outside. The temperature here has been falling and falling until finally it fell in the cellar. Billy is in the cellar sitting on the thermometer in the hopes that it will rise again. I'm afraid he won't have much success, as most things with Billy go down instead of up. I forgot to tell you that Billy is suing the Chicago Meat Trust for a million dollars for poisoning him. It's a million dollar suit, and it's the first suit we've ever had in the family and we're very pound of it. I'm wearing the suit now.

I'm exceedingly grateful to you all for the leader every seed to the first system.

ever had in the family and we're very pound of it. I'm wearing the suit now.

I'm exceedingly grateful to you all for the lovely greetings you sent me on my birthday. I've got almost a mile of postal cards, which I'm arranging in different states—a state of order and a state of disorder. A great many-cousins—hundreds in fact—are sending their addresses on slips of paper, or writing me letters and telling me where they live. Now, dears, that is useless, unless I copy your address onto cards, and that means days of labor, and I just can't do it. I wonder why it is that some people always take a great deal of pains to do a thing the wrong way. If you prefer to put your postals in an envelope, that's all right, but do write your addresses on either a postal or a card the size of a postal, as the League contains over 20,000 members, and I've got to have a card cabinet to keep track of you all, for it takes hours to search through the books for a single name, unless you know the cousin's number, and half of you won't give your numbers. Write your own names and addresses on postal cards, and put a little greeting up in each card corner, and then I'll have a message from each of you, and that will make my League cabinet a thing of joy forever, as well as an invaluable of you, and that will make my League cabinet a thing of joy forever, as well as an invaluable record of a swell bunch of lovely girls, boys, and other wild animals.

A cousin has written to ask how she can protect herself from mice, while sleeping, as she objects to cats and the mice are too foxy to eat

A cousin has written to ask how she can protect herself from mice, while sleeping, as she objects to cats and the mice are too foxy to eat poison or go into traps. In reply I would state that an excellent way would be to lie flat in the bath tub and let the boiling hot water run until it's three feet over your head. No mouse will trouble you, if you do this.

Another cousin wants to know how to secure protection from mosquitoes while camping. There are two methods: Build a large log camp fire and sit in the middle of it, or go to the nearest river, jump in, pull the river in on top of you and sleep on the river bed. This is never known to fail, and those who have tried these remedies assure me they were most efficacious.

I have a good deal of trouble in the summertime with Toby and Billy the Goat. Billy says Toby steals his fleas, while Toby swears Billy swipes his. Probably the fleas change their boarding houses of their own volition, but there is always a wordy wrangle between Billy and Toby in the heated term on this subject. "There's one of my fleas sitting on your nose, Toby!" says Billy. "Yes," replies Toby, "and, there's a bunch of mine holding a prayer meeting on your ear; chase 'em back where they belong, you darned thief!" Then there's a regular oldtime mix up, and I have to order the fleas to go back to their respective owners to keep peace in the family. Each of my pets try to accumulate all the fleas they possibly can. Every flea that sees Toby says, "Get on to the dog!" and they do. Around July, Toby and Billy sit on the porch and beat a regular tatoo on their ribs and then Toby sings "Flea as a bird to yon mountain!" Then Billy butts in with "Fleating moments quickly passing." Well, anyway, if you want to get on in this world you've got to keep scratching. Toby's mother told him he would have to get out and scratch for himself and the Lord knows he's done it.

Now we'll read some of those lovely letters.

Now we'll read some of those lovely letters

A little Southern girl wants to say a few

HOLLYWOOD, MISS., Aug. 13, 1906.

Hollywood, Miss., Aug. 13, 1906.

Dear Uncle Charlie:

I will tell you about our town; it is not a temperance town; it has several blind tigers, but the temperance people are working hard against them to shut them up and wipe them out. There is no enjoyment here for young girls; there is only two girls here, one nineteen years old, and one sixteen years old. They are both pretty girls and they take all my fellows away from me. I wrote to one of the cousins, but didn't get an answer.

I have light hair, blue eyes five feet high, weigh one hundred and eight pounds, and am full of meanness. I go to Memphis every other Sunday and, Uncle Charlie, I wish you were here to go along. We would ride the figure eight if the wind did not blow your wig off.

I go to the ball game some time to Tunica; do you play ball? if so come down and join the crowd. There is lots of cotton here; if you are very hard up come down and we will pay you fifty cents a hundred.

I have two heautiful twin sisters, six years old.

nundred.

I have two beautiful twin sisters, six years old.

Well, Uncle Charlie, I hope I will see my letter in print. I am the dish-washer and will see that your dishes are clean.

I would like the ishes are clean. ald like to hear from some of the cousins. I beg to remain your loving niece, LENA THAYER (No. 15,305).

Lena, I am very much excited over the first part of your letter. Whatever are the temperance people thinking about? Shutting up poor blind tigers. It's a scandalous outrage. Animals should be treated kindly, especially blind animals, poor things. It's strange, but nearly all the tigers in the South are blind. What makes them lose their eyesight poor things?

Maybe if some expert oculist operated on them they? they'd be able to see. Anyway, Lena, I hope you'll see that the temperance folks let the poor tigers loose at once, as they are quite harmless when they're blind.

sprawling on my cocoanut, besides when I tried to put a wig on, my own hair got nearly suf-focated and I had to give it six quarts of hair tonic before it revived. It was a close call for tonic before it revived. It was a close can for that immortal hair.

Lena has blue eyes five feet tall! My, Lena, you ought to be able to see a good deal with a couple of lamps that size. You ought to loan out one of your eyes to the blind tigers, they would surely be able to see quite a lot if you did.

did.

Harking back to the subject of wigs, I'll make a confession. I once, for a short time, some years ago wore what the French call a toupee. It's a sort of false front that fits in and covers the cook where your thatch is worn off—a years ago wore what the French call a toupee. It's a sort of false front that fits in and covers the spot where your thatch is worn off—a sort of baby wig. You have to stick it on with cosmetics. I wore mine to a dinner party, and sat next to a young lady, I was very much enamored of. The soup had just been served, when the heat of the room began to melt the cosmetics and my toupee felt wobbly and my heart was in my mouth. The young lady I admired so, said: "Uncle Charlie, your hyperion locks look particularly beautiful tonight." "I'm glad you admire them, Miss Imogene, I, too, think them beautiful, they were ever my joy and pride!" Then I leaned over to bow graciously to the young lady, and take a mouthful of bouillion at the same time, and oh, Heaven! my toupee slid off my head and went flop into the soup. The guests screamed and I ran. I've never worn a false hair front since. That was hare, I mean hair soup for fair.

I'm not much at playing ball, but when I went to sea once I was in a storm and I was pitching for ten days. A lady-love I threw down once, told me I was the first base man she'd ever met. I took her to a ball and she thought I was caught, but I dropped her in centerfield and she struck out and I made a home run. No, I'm not much of a bavel player, surely (and I think no one will gainsay or dispute this fact), the chief reason for a hop field's existence is that it will raise hops. Now, the farmers spend stacks of masumas cultivating the hops, and when the hops have arrived, you and a lot of other bad boys like you, go to work with long strings, and tie the hops so that they can't hop. Now, what in thunder is the use of a hop if it's tied down, and can't hop. It's preposterous, it's ridiculous, it's an outrage. A poor little hop tied on a wire so it can't hop, oh! that's simply wicked. Ernest, I think you're trying to string us as well as the hops. I heard of a man who made beer out of frogs' hops, but the frogs were allowed to hop, they weren't tied. Ernest, you can hop off before we all get hopping mad. Hops that can't hop, we all get hopping mad. Hops that can't hop, what nonsense.

A remarkably bright letter from a little Texas cowgirl will now entertain us.

A remarkably bright letter from a little Texas cowgirl will now entertain us.

Chappel, Texas, Aug. 30, 1906.

Dear Uncle Charlie:

After an absence of quite a while I am again with the cousins. I know we are not in the habit of writing on subjects. I'm not a gifted writer, but if Uncle Charlie will allow me I will say a few words on "Self-culture."

No one will deny that a large and important part of mental and physical training is furnished by parents and teachers. If the schoolmaster and professor had no hand in forming mind and character, the doors of our schools and academies might as well be shut and nailed up. But what can others do for us compared with what we can do for ourselves? Books are our teachers, and the printer's type rules the world.

It has been said by a recent writer: We all have two educations, one from others, and another which we give ourselves.

It is this last education which determines our standing in society, and our actual condition in life, and our fate hereafter. All the professors and teachers in the world would not make you a wise or good man without your own co-operation, and if such you are determined to be the want of them will not cause you to fail. We are to make the most of ourselves.

It should be the duty of education to make men first, and noble deeds will follow. The educated man is the one who wears the crown.

Every manufacturer, and every other employer knows the vast difference between an educated and uneducated workman.

Let two men come soliciting work. One is boorish in appearance, ungrammatical in speech, dull in comprehension because his faculties have never been sharpened, he seems to be little less than a machine, and with scarcely more comprehension. The other is bright, quick, speaks correctly, gives evidence of self-training and capacity. By his side the other presents a pitiable spectable. This is something occurring around us every day, and within the commonest observation.

In all education a knowled; of men and things is indispensable. For this reaso original and aggressive views of self-culture. I'm full of culture; agriculture, horticulture, dollarculture and jackass culture. My father told me I was a born ass, so I didn't need much told me I was a born ass, so I didn't need much culture before I had a pair of ears that looked like bedslats on moving day. I began self-culture early. I tried to raise whiskers when I was nine days old, and I kepit trying, and in twenty-four years I had the dandiest crop you ever saw. That's what I call self-culture. I raised eain directly I was born, that's more self-ture early. I tried to raise whiskers when I was nine days old, and I kept trying, and in twenty-four years I had the dandlest crop you ever saw. That's what I call self-culture. I raised cain directly I was born, that's more self-culture. In fact I was usually so all-fired dirty I could have raised enough corn on my own individual carease to have fed every hog in the United States for several hundred years. There was a big lake back of our town, seventeen miles long. That lake bred skeeters and malaria, and the town wanted to fill it up, so they threw me in the lake, and I shed enough real estate to fill that lake solid, and left enough over weight to start a range of mountains that made Pikes Peak look like an ant hill. That's what I call culture. I raised a crop of bunions on my teeth that have taken a prize in every dental show in the land. I've cultivated the acquaintance of six millions of America's best people, more self-culture, for I've got the image of each one growing in my heart. When Chesterfield said that a man could make himself anything and everything but a great poet. 'Chess' was right, for there never were but two great poets, Bill Shakespeare and myself. We are the only two great Pots the world has or ever will know. Bill died early, as he was afraid if he lived I should insist on reading one of my poems to him. Bill died—Bill was wise. Self-culture is fine. I've cultivated a wart on my nose, a mole on my cheek, freckles on my teeth, and other characteristics of greatness.

Ethel says we are to make the most of ourselves and that's no merry jest cither, it's good horse sense. I was out in the Bitter Root Valley some years ago and Chief-Joseph and a band of Nez Perce bucks came over the Lo Lo trail on a raid. I built a sod fort with one hundred and sixty holes in the wall, one bob for each, and the Indians thought there were one hundred and sixty times I shoved my bald spot through those holes in the wall one bob for each, and the Indians thought there were one hundred and sixty men in that ca rich the world, benefit man, and please God.

Connecticut's handsome young vice-president will now wag his chin for our edification.

130 CAROLINE STRERT, BRIDGEPORT, CONN., Aug. '06.
DEAR UNGLE CHARLIE:
I have been a silent reader of Comfort for the past five years, and find a great deal of interest and pleasure in the cousins' letters, also in your witty replies.

past five years, and find a great deal of interest and pleasure in the cousins' letters, also in your witty replies.

I am eighteen years of age, five feet two inchestall, have dark hair and gray eyes. I live in Bridgeport, one of the finest cities in Connecticut. Letters from everywhere have taken up a great deal of my time lately. On my being appointed Vice-president of the Connecticut League, I received over five hundred letters of congratulation, and I sincerely appreciate their unbounded tokens of love, and if I had as much leisure time as a United States Senator, I would employ a type-writer, and for the next four months I would do nothing but dictate letters.

I will now give you a few facts concerning the city of Bridgeport, which I have been requested to do by some of the cousins. Bridgeport has a population of about ninety thousand, and is the most rapidly-growing city in New England. New building construction last year was over one million three hundred thousand dollars. This year will exceed two million dollars, one half of which will be in factory enlargements. Has a grand list of sixty-eight million dollars.

Bridgeport is the largest city in Western Connecticut. Second largest in the state, and has eleven miles of water front dredged, two steamboat lines, fine trolley and train service, a custom house with domestic commerce aggregating one hundred thousand dollars, is the county seat, has over three million dollars in municipal property, splendid school facilities, two hospitals, and a state armory.

Bridgeport has a larger proportion of skilled labor than any other city in the country, and is the bundred thousand dollars, is the county seat, has over three million dollars in municipal property, splendid school facilities, two hospitals, and a state armory.

Bridgeport has a larger proportion of skilled labor than any other city in the country, and is the center of gun and ammunition manufacture, automobiles, graphophones, silverware, cutlery, electrical supplies, corsets, milling machines, heavy casting, forgings, and the home of the Lake Submarine boat.

The annual pay-roll of Bridgeport's industries is between ten and eleven million dollars, according to the U.S. Bureau statistics.

The deposits in the National banks show six million six hundred and fifty miles of streets, savings bank, sixteen million dollars.

Bridgeport has one hundred and fifty miles of streets, seventy-three of which are macadamized and ten permanently paved, five National, five savings banks, one Trust Company, two banks with state charters, waterworks with reservoirs having a storage capacity of three billion two hundred gallons of water, forty-five churches, thirty-three public schools, a High School, a training school, seven private and parochial schools, the greatest circulating library in the state, good hotels, a million-dollar railroad station, splendid stores, a paid fire department, two theaters, elevated railroad tracks, and is but one hour and fitteen minutes from New York, and twenty-five minutes from New Haven.

Bridgeport is often called the Park City on account of its extensive park system. Seaside Park, on Long Island Sound, being one of the finest in the country.

Thanking the cousins again for their kind tokens of love I remain, Your loving nephew, George, you have a very high opinion of Bridgeport, and so have I. It was on the stage.

George, you have a very high opinion of Bridgeport, and so have I. It was on the stage of your opera house that I first faced an audiof your opera house that I first faced an audience in a professional capacity, and as a memento of that occasion I have a half of a decayed egg embedded in my left eye, and an ossified cabbage and half a brick in my phonograph tube. Every time I cough the brick pokes half way out between my teeth and says "Cuckoo;" but before the doctors can grab it, it bobs back under the tonsorial region of the appendicitis. I was appearing in Romeo and Giblets, I was playing the latter part, the Giblets, with great fervor and intense dramatic power, when the Bridgeport audience said "Skiddoo, 23 for yours!" and then I got mine, and I'm still holding the souvenirs of Bridgeport's appreciation in my left optic. You say (CONTINUED ON PAGE 9.) (CONTINUED ON PAGE 9.)

WILLIAM T. HARRIS AND FAMILY, BACKUS, W. VA.

though my mother told me I could howl better than any kid she ever struck and she struck often. I was engaged to a Miss Ball once, and I went to her father and tried to play Ball, but he wouldn't stand for my game. I'll stop or I'll get all balled up.

I should like to see your twin sisters. I have a twin brother but he's three years older than me. Well, ta, ta, Lena, and mind you're kind to the blind tigers.

A little boy from far Oregon will hop into our middle regions, and tell us all about hop culture.

PARKERS, OREGON, Sept. 22, 1906.

Parkers, Oregon, Sept. 22, 1906.

Dear Uncle Charlie:

I live in the Northwestern part of Oregon, in the Willamette valley. There are a great many hop fields in this part of the country. I am just fourteen, but I make quite a lot of money during the hop season. This Spring, I made about fifty-five dollars, by tying strings, training, and cutting suckers, and I expect to make about thirty-five dollars in hop picking.

In tying strings, a person has a large bunch of strings about nine feet long wound around them. They tie a string on a trellis wire, then they walk to the next hill of hops and tie another string, and so on until the field is tied. Where I worked there were two wires to every row of hops. Each person ties strings on two wires, then they take off what is left of the bunch of strings, and tie down the strings that they tied to the wires, two strings go to each hill of hops. Then the trainers come along after the strings are all tied, and train up the four best young hop vines at each hill, up the two strings which are at every hill. Then the sucker cutters come along and cut off the remaining vines. The hopmen are going to pay fifty cents for picking nine bushels of hops this year.

Please tell the cousins to write to me as I will answer every letter. Comfort is the best paper going, and the best part of it is the Cousins' League.

Ernest, your disquisition on hop culture is Ernest, your disquisition on hop culture is lucid and exquisite, and you certainly have caught us all on the hop this time. But, my dear boy, with my usual lack of perspicacity I've when they're blind.

I don't wear a wig, Lena—I let Rockefeller do those foolish things, but not for this chicken.

I don't want a lot of dead men's feathers of dollars to raise and cultivate hops. Now, can be obtained only by observing the daily doings of ordinary life, and the people who are the actors in events of constant occurrence. The eye is the prime teacher. Open it and keep it open. Look, examine, ask questions, and do not be ashamed to examine, ask questions, and do not be ashamed to ask.

There is sure to come a time when those who have neglected self-culture in early life, will see the great mistake they have made, and regret it when perhaps it is too late. Although they are conscious of their own defects, their ignorance and sad lack of education, they have not time and opportunity to apply the remedy. You should therefore make the most of your advantages while you have them. Very bright minds may remain in eclipse for want of cultivation. The diamond is not allowed to continue in its rough state, it must be cut and polished. Gold must be separated from rude ore, it is of small account until this is done.

Cicero says: "Cultivation to the mind is as Gold must be separated from rude ore, it is of small account until this is done.

Cicero says: "Cultivation to the mind is as necessary as food to the body. Soil uncultivated may produce the most luxuriant weeds, yet only weeds, it must be plowed, hoed, harrowed before it will produce good fruit."

Chesterfield said: "I am very sure that any man of common understanding may by culture, care, attention and labor, make himself whatever he pleases except a great poet."

This is only a part of the testimony that is given by the minds of all ages, affirming that close application and rigorous discipline are essential to the highest attainment, and the most brilliant success. I will now close with the best wishes to Uncle Charlie and the cousins. Lovingly yours,

ETHEL E. LONG (No. 1,294).

Bravo, Ethel, you're a real smart girl, and I wish more of you girls would write as you have done, but the trouble is when you tackle a subdone, but the trouble is when you tackle a subject like self-culture, you give us extracts from books and printed essays, and that isn't what we want. George Kam's impressions of Bridgeport would be worth having, but copying pages of statistics from guidebooks makes one yawn. Cultivate self-culture and give us your own ideas about it, and let Cicero and Lord Chesterfield skiddoo. I never thought much of Cicero anyway. He ran a chink laundry in our burg, and spoiled the only collar I ever had. Lord Chesterfield was an aunt of mine, and as for self-culture, I don't think he could have cultivated a three-inch squash in a ten-acre field. I'm the only man that ever had any distinctly

A STOLEN PROPOSAL

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Arthur Leighton, rector of St Marks, is in love with Anna Ruthven. He re-reads a letter, received the day before from I hornton Hastings, his college classmate, and opens to the second page. He will spend the summer at Saratoga, where Mrs Julia Moredith takes her nice, Miss Anna Ruthven. He's expected to fail in love and marry her, but he has presentiments that Arthur is interested in Anna Ruthven and he promises Arthur Leighton determines the matter-shall beromises that Arthur is interested in Anna Ruthven and he promises Arthur Leighton determines the matter-shall be removed the fore Anna leaves Hanover with Mrs. Meredith He writes a letter, asking her to be his wife. Mrs. Julia Meredith arrives at the farmhouse. She and Anna go down, to the Glen. Cunningly the aunt talks; she hopes to see her well settled in life. Whatever she leaves at her death goes to Anna and she expects her to make a brilliant match. There is no one in Hanover whom she, as a Ruthven, would care to marry, and as she asks the question, the rector comes around a rock where they are sitting. Previous to this he calls at the farmhouse to leave a book for Anna, and slips the letter into it, and trusts to faithful Esther, who takes it to Anna's room. Mrs. Meredith assisted sheaf father, not to let her throw herseif away, and Anna little suspects how near she has been to the great happiness she hopes for, or dreams how fervently Arthur Leighton prays that night that God will grant him the priceless gift of Anna Ruthven's love. The following Sunday the rector listens to Anna Ruthven, as she sings, "Oh, come let us sing unto the Lord," and he cannot think she means to darken his life. The Hethertons, with Dr. Bellamy, arrive late at church Anna Ruthven is Introduced to Fanny Hetherton and Lucy Harcourt, the latter telling Colonel Hetherton how she had net Mr. Leighton among the Alps, and afterward had traveled with him until the party returned to be there. If his answer to her letter does not come how the she had

CHAPTER VII. (CONTINUED.)

UT why did she refuse him?" he wished to know and are wished to know, and ere he slept he had resolved to study Anna Ruthven closely and ascertain, if possible, the motive which prompted her to discard a man like Arthur Leignton.

The next day brought the Hetherton party, all but Lucy Harcourt, who, Fanny laughingly said, was just now suffering from clergyman on the brain, and, as a certain cure for the disease, had turned my Lady Bountiful and was playing the pretty patroness to all Mr. Leighton's parishioners, especially a Widow Hobbs, whom she had actually taken to ride in the carriage, and to whose ragged children such had sent a bundle of cast-off party dresses; and the tears ran down Fanny's cheeks as she described the appearance of the elder Hobbs, who came to church with a soiled pink skirt, her black, tattered petticoat hanging down below, and one of Lucy's opera hoods upon her head.

"And the clergyman on the brain? Does he appreciate the situation? I have an interest there. He is an old friend of mine," Thornton Hastings asked.

He had been an amused listener to Fanny's The next day brought the Hetherton

Thornton Hastings asked.

He had been an amused listener to Fanny's gay badinage, laughing merrily at the idea of Lucy's taking old women out to dir and clothing her children in party dresses. His opinion of Lucy, as she said, was that she was a pretty, but frivolous plaything, and it showed upon his face as he asked the question that he did, watching Anna furtively as Fanny replied:

"Oh, yes, he is certainly smitten, and I must say that I never saw Lucy so thoroughly in earnest. Why, she really seems to enjoy traveling all over Christendom to find the hovels and huts, though she is mortally afraid of the smallpox, and always carries with her a bit of chloride of lime as a disinfecting agent. I am sure lime as a disinfecting agent. I am sure she ought to win the parson. And so you know him, do you?"

Yes, we were in college together, and I esteem him so highly that, had I a sister, there is no man living to whom I would so readily give her as to him."

readily give her as to him."

He was looking now at Anna, whose face was very pale, and who pressed a rose she held so tightly that the sharp thorns pierced her flesh, and a drop of blood stained the whiteness of her hand.
"See, you have hurt yourself," Mr. Hastings said. "Come to the water pitcher and wash the stain away."

She went with him mechanically, and let him hold her hand in his while he wiped off the blood with his own handkerchief, treating her with a tenderness for which off the blood with his own handkerchief, treating her with a tenderness for which he could hardly account himself. He pitied her, he said, suspecting that she had repented of her rashness, and because he pitied her he asked her to ride with him that day after the fast bays, of which he had written to Arthur. Many admiring eyes were cast after them as they drove away, and Mrs. Hetherton whispered softly to Mrs. Meredith:

By Mrs. Mary J. Holmes

said in his praise might influence her to reconsider her decision and give him a different answer. The was the second day aftern answer the profession who bidding him good night, went on bringing the usual routine of life at Newport, the drives, the rides, the pleasant plazza talks, and the quiet moon-light rambles, when Anna was always his companion. Thornton Hastings came to feerthur Leighthon, the beautiful girl who pleased him better than anyone he had known.

Mrs. Meredith's plans were working well, and so, though the autumn days had come, and one after another the devotees of fashion were dropping off, she lingered on the second with Anna Ruthven, until there came a night when they wandered farther than usual from the hotel, and sat down together on a height of land which overlooked the plated waters, where the monoilight lay softly sleeping. It was a mood in sline to the music of the sea, and then talked of the breaking up which came in a few days when the hotel was to be closed, and wondered if next year they would come again to the old haunts and find them unchangedry in the hour, and Thornton felt the spell, speaking out at last, and asking Anna if she would be his wife. He would shield her so tonderly, he said, protecting her from every care, and making her as happy as love and more word to the presence to make it a paradise, and then he waited for her answer, watching anxiously the limp, white hand, which, when he first began to talk had fallen so helplessly on her lan, and then had creptly on her lan, and then had c rest of her life, she said, assuming such a sober, nun-like air, that no one that saw her could fail to laugh, it was so at variance with her entire nature.

But Lucy was in earnest; Hanover had a greater attraction for her than all the watering places in the world, and she meant to stay there facility very greateful when greater attraction for her than all the watering places in the world, and she meant to stay there, feeling very grateful when Fanny threw her influence on her side, and so turned the scale in her favor. Fanny was glad to leave her dangerous cousin at home, especially after Dr. Bellamy decided to join her party at Saratoga, and, as she carried great weight with both her parents, it was finally decided to let Lucy remain at Prospect Hill in peace, and so one morning in July she saw the family depart to their summer gayety without a single feeling of regret that she was not one of their number. She had too much on her hands to spend her time in regretting anything. There was the parish school to visit, and a class of children to hear—children who were no longer ragged, for Lucy's money had been poured out like water, till even Arthur had remonstrated with her and read her a long lecture on misplaced charity. Then, there was Widow Hobbs, waiting for the jelly that Lucy had promised, and for the chapter that Lucy read to her, sitting where she could watch the road, and see just who turned the corner, her voice always sounding a little more serious and good when the footsteps belonged to Arthur Leighton, and her eyes, always glancing at the bit of cracked mirror on the wall, to see

Just who turned the corner, her voice always sounding a little more serious and good when the footsteps belonged to Arthur Leighton, and her eyes, always glancing at the bit of cracked mirror on the wall, to see that her dress and hair and ribbons were right before Arthur came in.

It was a very pretty sight to see her there and hear her as she read to the poor woman, whose surroundings she had so greatly improved, and Arthur always smiled gratefully on her, and then walked back with her to Prospect Hill, where he sometimes lingered while she played or talked to him, or brought the luscious fruits with which the garden abounded.

This was Lucy's life, the one that she preferred to Saratoga, and they left her to enjoy it, somewhat to Arthur's discomfiture, for, much as he valued her society, he would a little rather she had gone when the Hethertons had gone, for he could not be insensible to the remarks which were being made by the curious villagers, who watched this new firtation, as they called it, and wondered if their minister had forgotten Anna, and many a time was her beloved name on his lips, and a thought of her in his heart, while he never returned from an interview with Lucy that he did not contrast the two and sigh for the olden time, when Anna was his co-worker instead of pretty Lucy Harcourt. And yet there was about the latter a powerful fascination, which he found it hard to resist. It rested him just to look at her, she was so fresh, so bright, so beautiful, and then she flattered his self-love by the unbounded deference she paid to his opinions, studying all his tastes and bringing her own will into perfect subjection to his until she could secrectly be said so beautiful, and then she flattered his self-love by the unbounded deference she paid to his opinions, studying all his tastes and bringing her own will into perfect subjection to his, until she could scarcely be said to have a thought or feeling which was not a reflection of his own. And so the flirtation, which at first had been a one-sided affair, began to assume a more serious form; the rector went oftener to Prospect Hill, while the carriage from Prospect Hill stood daily at the gate of the rectory, and people said that it was a settled thing, or ought to be, gossiping about it until old Captain Humphreys, Anna's grandfather, conceived it his duty as senior warden of St. Mark's, to talk with the young rector and know "what his intentions were."

"You have none?" he said, fixing his mild eyes reproachfully upon his clergyman, who winced a little beneath the gaze. "Then if you have no intentions, my advice to you is, that you quit it and let the gal alone, or you will ruin her, if she ain't sp'ilt already, as some of the women folks say that she is. It don't do any gal any good to have a chap, and 'specially a minister, gallyvanting after her, as I must say you've been after this one for the last few weeks. She's a pretty little creature, and I don't blame you for liking her. It makes my old blood stir faster when she comes purring around me pretty little creature, and I don't blame you for liking her. It makes my old blood stir faster when she comes purring around me with her soft ways and winsome face, and so I don't wonder at you; but when you say that you have no intentions, I blame you greatly. You orter have—excuse my plainness. I'm an old man who likes my minister and don't want him to go wrong, and then I feel for her, left alone by all her folks—more's the shame to them, and more's the harm for you to tangle up her affections, as you are doing, if you are not in earnest; and I speak for her just as I should want some one to speak for Anna."

The old man's voice trembled a little here,

The old man's voice trembled a little here, for it had been a wish of his that Anna should occupy the rectory, and he had at first felt a little resentful against the gay young creature who seemed to have supplanted her, but he was over that now, and in all honesty of heart he spoke both for Lucy's interest and that of the clergyman. And Arthur listened to him respectfully, feeling when he was gone that he meritad The old man's voice trembled a little here And Arthur listened to him respectfully, feeling, when he was gone, that he merited the rebuke, that he had not been guiltless in the matter, that if he did not intend to marry Lucy Harcourt he must let her alone.

And he would, he said; he would not go

And he would, he said; he would not go to Prospect Hill again for two whole weeks, nor visit at the cottages where he was sure to find her. He would keep himself at home; and he did, shutting himself up amid his books, and not even making a pastoral call on Lucy when he heard that she was sick. And so Lucy came to him, looking dangerously charming in her green riding-habit with the scarlet feather sweeping habit, with the scarlet feather sweeping from her hat. Very prettily she pouted, too, chiding him for his neglect, and asking why he had not been to see her, nor anybody. There was the Widow Hobbs, and Mrs. Briggs, and those miserable Donelsons—he had not been near them for a fortnight. What was the reason, she asked, beating her foot upon the carpet, and tapping the end of her riding-whip upon the sermon he was writing.

"Are you displeased with me, Arthur?"

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 15.)

If You Receive this Number of COMFORT As a SAMPLE COPY

It is sent with the compliments of the Editor, for this month only, hoping you will read it and like it so well that you will send in your 15c. subscription and thus be able to continue reading the many interesting stories and departments for 12 months. There is no paper published anywhere that contains so many good things for such a small amount of money as COMFORT and you cannot afford to be without it. Subscribe today while it is only 15c. per year. If you are already a subscriber, be sure and renew for another year now, and get a new subscriber, as the price will advance to 25 cents per year very soon.

forehead, when she started away from him, exclaiming:

"No, Mr. Hastings, you must not do that! I can not be your wife. It hurts me to tell you so, for I believe you are sincere in your proposal; but it can never be. Forgive me, and let us both forget this wretched summer."

"It has not been wretched to me. It has been a very happy summer, since I knew you at least," Mr. Hastings said, and then he asked again that she should reconsider her decision. He could not take it as a final one. He had loved her too much, had thought too much of making her his own to give her up so easily, he said, urging so many reasons why she should think again, that Anna said to him at last:

"The deuce he is," was Thornton's ejaculation, and then he read on.

"The deuce he is," was Thornton's ejaculation, and then he read on.

"She is an acquaintance of yours, I believe, so I need not describe her, except to say that she is somewhat changed from the gay butterfly of fashion that she used to be, and in time will make as demure a little Quakeress as one could wish to see. She visits constantly among my poor, who love her nearly as well as they once loved Anna Ruthven.

"Don't ask me Thorne, in your blunt, straightforward manner if I have so soon forgotten Anna. That is a matter with which you have nothing to do. Let it suffice that I am engaged to another, and mean to make a kind and faithful husband that Anna said to him at last:

"If you would rather have it so, I will wait a month, but you must not hope that my answer will be different from what it is tonight. I want your friendship, though, the same as if this had never happened. I like you, Mr. Hastings, because you have been kind to me, and made my stay in Newport so much pleasanter than I thought it could be. You have not talked to me like other men. You have treated is tonight. to me like other men. You have treated me as if I, at least, had common sense. I thank you for that; and I like you be-

She did not finish the sentence, for she sne did not mish the sentence, for sne could not say "because you are Arthur's friend." That would have betrayed the miserable secret tugging at her heart and prompting her to refuse Thornton Hastings, who had also thought of Arthur Leighton, wondering if it were thus that led her, he said, suspecting that she had repented of her rashness, and because he pitled her he asked her to ride with him that day after the fast bays, of which he had written to Arthur. Many admiring eyes were cast after them as they drove away, and Mrs. Hetherton whispered softly to Mrs. Meredith:

"A match in progress, I see. You have done well for your charming niece."

And yet matrimony as concerned himelf, was very far from Thornton Hastinself, was very far from Thornton Hastinself, was very far from Thornton Hastinself, was weak that it pleased Anna to have him do so, he talked to her of Arthur, hoping in his unselfish heart that what he der, as he bent over her and her hand.

"Yes, very much," she replied, and, emboldened by her reply, Thornton lifted up her head, and was about to kiss her forehead, when she started away from him, exclaiming:

"No, Mr. Hastings, you must not do that! I can not be your wife. It hurts me to tell you so, for I believe you are sincere to tell you so, for I believe you are sincere be. I need not describe her, except to say that she is somewhat changed from the gay butterfly of fashion that she used to be, and in time will make as demure a consecutive among my poor, who suffice that I am engaged to another, and mean to make a kind and faithful husband to her. Lucy would have suited you better perhaps than she does me; that is, the world would think so, but the world does not always know, and if I am satisfied, surely it ought to be. Yours truly,

"A. Leighton."

"Engaged to Lucy Harcourt; I never could have believed it. He's right in saying that she is far more suitable for me than for him!" Thornton exclaimed, dashing aside the letter and feeling conscious of a pang as he remembered the bright, airy little beauty in whom he had once been strongly interested, even if he did call her frivolous and ridicule her childish ways.

She was frivolous, too much so by far to be a clergyman's wife, and for a full half hour Thornton paced up and down the room, meditating on Arthur's choice and

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 7.)

Bridgeport has a grand list of sixty-eight million dollars. It seems to me that's a lot of money to pay for a list of anything. What kind of a list is it that costs all that money? I had a seventeen-cent laundry list once, and I've still got it framed, for it was the only one I ever had. A wealthy uncle died and left me a full dress evening shirt, and I had it ostracized at the laundry, and they rendered me a weekly bill for seven years, but I never had the price to get the shirt, until one day I found a quarter, I mean twenty-five cents, and I rushed to the laundry with throbbing heart to get my shirt, for which I'd waited seven years, and when I got there I'll dad binged if the darned place hadn't burned down. George, you must explain the mystery of that list. Also tell us about your circulating library. Who pushes it round? What's the good of having a circulating library? When you go down town to get a book you find the darned library has circulated itself the other side of the state, and you have to chase all over creation in the middle of a story, to get the second volume, to find out whether Imogene married the rich man with the glass eye, or gave him the mitt and froze to Archibald Montague, the poor young man with the Greek God face and rubber conscience. No siree, I want a library that stands still, none of your circulating libraries for me. Bridgeport has eleven miles of water front. That seems to be a pretty good front for any city to put up. Bridgeport has two steamboat lines. George fishes with one line, and hangs his clothes on the other. Bridgeport has one hundred and fifty miles of streets, seventy-three of which are macadamized, we'd like to know what's doing on these other streets, Toby says they are probably paved with corsets and graphaphones, and most likely they're paved with big holes and plain ditt. Never mind, George, Bridgeport is all right and so are you. right and so are you.

Here is a lovely letter from an Iowa lassie.

GERMANIA, IA., July 29, 1906.

DEAR UNCLE CHARLIE:

I received my membership card and button all O. K., and will now thank you for them. They are just fine, and I think if those simple little rules were only compiled with this whole world would be better off; for, my dear Uncle, I do believe our happy family covers a great share of this large globe.

happy family covers a great share of this large globe.

I suppose you have forgotten all about little me, as you have such a grand, large family. I am a little girl from Northern Iowa. I have brown hair and eyes, light complexion, five feet six inches tall, weigh one hundred and thirty-seven pounds, and am sweet sixteen.

I put in three months last spring at Tilford's Academy, at Vinton, Ia., about 180 miles southeast of here. It is a lovely country and a good school. I live in a beautiful part of lowa, with my father and sister, as my mother died almost five years ago. We live on a large farm about half way between the prosperous little towns of Germania and Buffalo Center, or Bison Middle, as it is sometimes called, which are about ten miles apart. They are both thriving little towns.

Buffalo Center has a brick and tile factory, a cigar factory, four large elevators, one flour mill, two lumber-yards, one electric plant, a park and several stores, etc.

Our farm is just nicely rolling. We have all kinds lumber-yards, one electric plant, a park and several stores, etc.

Our farm is just nicely rolling. We have all kinds of fruit and more than we can use. We have a very large plum crop this season, but apples are not as plentiful as other years.

The crops are fine and prosperous-looking here and will yield well if nothing destroys them. You can raise almost anything here you can think of except flies, and you don't have to stop to raise them, they just grow. If you have none in Maine, I will send you some.

The weather is lovely, the winters are mild, while the summers are very seldom sultry.

We have lots of stock to take care of, and my sister and I have about four hundred little chicks, which keep us busy.

Haying is over here and harvesting is the rule nowadays.

nowadays.

As I was never gifted with a brother, I am compelled to help in the field a great deal. But, Uncle, don't be discouraged by that, for I can also keep house. Hoping to hear from all the cousins, I am your affectionate niece, house. Hoping to hear from all the cousins, I am your affectionate niece,

LOLA SMITH.

Yes, Lola, if our rules were complied with this world would be a better world, but few of the cousins keep the rules. We have quite a family, Lola, and it keeps me hustling to look after it, and my large family doesn't help me much. When I ask my boys and girls to do some simple little thing they all try and do it just the opposite way to what I want it done. Lola, if you will sit in my lap awhile I'd like to ask you about that farm of yours. You say your farm is rolling. How in thunder can you work a farm if it's rolling? Do you sleep on that rolling farm and if so, how ever do you manage to keep in bed with the farm constantly revolving? What with circulating libraries and rolling farms I should think the whole country was going crazy. Lola says shown keep house, but I doubt it. Who could keep house on a farm that was nicely rolling? Lola says that they can raise anything in her section and I don't wonder at it, for a country that couldn't raise things with four elevators in the middle of it, must be on the bumsky. I'm sorry you have to work in the fields, Lola, unless it is for exercise and amusement. Field labor for women is un-American, it's a man's work.

Buzz-z-z-z! Hello, Uncle Charlie, can I butter.

Buzz-z-z! Hello, Uncle Charlie, can I butt

Why, cert, little girl, always glad to hear from the Hellos!

IPAVA, ILL., August 3, 1906.

DEAR UNCLE CHARLIE: Will you admit a cousin from Illinois into your happy circle? I received my League button and membership card some time ago, and thank you very much for them.

I am inst eight account.

membership card some time ago, and thank you very much for them.

I am just eighteen years old, am five feet and three inches tall, weigh about one hundred and eighteen pounds, have black hair and black eyes.

I love books, flowers and music, but as I am a telephone operator, I don't get much time to enjoy such pleasures. I have one sister and five brothers, but there are only myself and two younger brothers living at home just at present.

We live out in the country. My father is a blacksmith, two of my brothers are farmers; my oldest brother is working in Kansas at the present. My home is near the western part of Illinois in ten miles of the Illinois river.

Agriculture and stock-raising are the chief occupation of the people. Wheat, oats, corn and rye are the principal grains, and fruits of nearly all kinds are raised in abundance in this part of the country. There is a good deal of coal mined in this section also. We have hot summers and cold winters, but this summer was unusually cool, until in the last three or four weeks. Everything is suffering for the need of rain just now because it is so dry and hot.

Uncle Charlie, I wish you would send some of the boat show on the river tomorrow night. The name of it is "The Sunny South." Uncle, bring all the cousins and go. We'd sure have a fine time if we didn't sink the boat. All the cousins please write to me. I will answer all I possibly can.

Lovingly your niece, FANNY BLAIR.

of it is "The Sanny South." Uncle, bring all the cousins and go. We'd sure have a fine time if we didn't sink the boat. All the cousins please write to me. I will answer all I possibly can.

Fanny, I've been just dying for months to tell you that I had a phone installed in my hencoop last week, and oh, what a time I had with that old phone. But alas, I have the phone no longer. It lasted just one day, and then the phone folks decided a phone wasn't a good thing for me to have around, and so they cut it out; but gee! while it lasted things were doing. The phone man, after he'd put the business in in good shape, said, "Now, Uncle Charlie, you can call up the fire department, the hospital ambulances, the police and central as often as you like and it won't cost anything." I waited until evening came and then I called up the fire department and said, "Say, Chief, we've got a fire up here." "All right, we'll be up in three seconds." Then every old fire bell from Maine to New Orleans began to bang, and soon there were three thousand wild-eyed people, seventeen fire engines, twenty-four hose carts, three chemical engines, four hook and ladder crews palpitating out-side our massion. It was magnificent. I popped my bald head out of the window and said, "Thank you, gentlement, thank you; your promptness is remarkable, your efficiency marvelous. I'm delighted at the entertainment you've given me, good night." There was a yell from the assembled multitude. "Where's the fire?" "Fire, why, in the stove of course, where the blazes do you think it would be?" Then a yell of anger went up from the multitude. "Uncle Charlie." said the fire chief, "this will cost you dear!" "It won't cost me a red cent, Mr. Chief," said I. "The phone man said I could call you up whenever I wanted to, and it wouldn't cost a cent. If you want to collect anything go to the telephone company." With a shriek of execration the multitude moved away.

In ten minutes more I rang up every ambulance in the city and had 'em all ranged under my window. "Uncle

Here's a letter from a brave cheery shut-in, who laughs and works, though his back is winters, but this summer was unusually cool, until in the last three or four weeks. Everything is suffering for the need of rain just now because it is so dry and hot.

Uncle Charlie, I wish you would send some of the lousins over to help me as I am kept busy at the witch most of the time. I enjoy being a "Hello tirl," but it is tiresome sometimes during this warm weather.

How are Toby and Maria? There is going to be a Household in the lous of the time. I enjoy being a "Hello tirl," but it is tiresome sometimes during this warm weather.

How are Toby and Maria? There is going to be a Household in the lous of the time. I enjoy being a "Hello tirl," but it is tiresome sometimes during this warm weather.

How are Toby and Maria? There is going to be a Household in the last three or four weeks. Even Billy won't eat a magazine or newspaper more than two years old.

No More Cold Rooms

If you only knew how much comfort can be derived from a PERFECTION Oil Heater—how simple and economical its operation, you would not be without it another day

You can quickly make warm and cozy any cold room or hallway—no matter in what part of the house. You can heat water, and do many other things with the

PERFECTION Oil Heater

(Equipped with Smokeless Device)

Turn the wick as high or low as you can—there's no danger. Carry heater from room to room. All parts easily cleaned. Gives intense heat without smoke or smell because equipped with smoke-

Made in two finishes—nickel and japan. Brass oil fount beautifully embossed. Holds 4 quarts of oil and burns 9 hours. Every heater warranted. If you cannot get heater or information from your dealer, write to nearest agency for descriptive circular.

Rayo Lamp cannot be equalled for its bright and steady light, simple construction and absolute safety.

Equipped with latest improved burner. Made of brass throughout and nickel plated. An ornament to any room whether library, dining-room, parlor or bed-room. Every lamp warranted. Write to nearest agency if not at your dealer's.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY

Here's a letter from a brave cheery shut-in, on the ossified papers. Freed them were a letter from a brave broken makes and works, though his back is broken and the stress of the stres ginia Lovett, R. F. D., 2, Bells, Tenn. Charming girl, lovely writer, shut-in. Write her, please. Wants letters, postals and cheer. William J. Sleighter, Alcove, Albany Co., N. Y. William is a terrible sufferer, hasn't been able to lie down for two years. Has two children (boys, 9 and 5,) is helpless and destitute. All need clothing and assistance. William Wiley, Jap., West Va. Head nearly drawn into lap from rheumatism, wants to undergo an operation, has no means. Writes fine letter. Here's a case that needs your love and cheer. John Gordon, Home of Industry, Perth, Ont., Can.

Mrs. Harris. I want to thank you, in behalf of the Compour League of Cousins and its six million readers, for your magnificent and samily. You are a heroine, and easily You are a heroine, and can be seen in history with Joan of Arc, Grace of the Seen place of the country of t

How to become a Member
In order to become a full-fledged League member and procure a card and button, you must become a paid-in-advance Comfort subscriber by sending fifteen cents to the subscription department, for yourself, or renew your own subscriptions now. When you do this, send five cents extra, or twenty cents in all, and say that you wish to join Comfort's League of Cousins.

The five cents additional pays your membership card engrossed with your own name and membership card engrossed with your own name and membership offers are hereby withdrawn and only those who strictly comply with our above offer will be admitted to membership. It costs but twenty cents to join the League, a League which promises to be (CONTINUED ON PAGE 13.)

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 5.)

the chain prayer on: to quote from a recent paper, "Bishop Lawrence of Boston never wrote it and knows nothing about; it is the work of some demented or mischievous person. Inquiries concerning the chain prayer, and comments on it, which have been received by Bishop Lawrence, and by church and secular papers indicate that the fears of many ignorant and superstitious persons have been so worried up by the mention of "dreadful accident" as the penalty for failing to comply with the conditions of the scheme. that they have not only aided in the spread of the prayer, but have felt great terror lest they might meet with misfortune. The affair has become such a nuisance that the Bishop concluded that it could be only stopped by giving the widest publicity to his official denial." I, like many others no doubt, have received several of these letters, and when I saw the above article I thought I would let you all read it. In my last mail I received two, and they have been coming for some weeks past.

Mrs. Hall. I trust you heard from Mrs. Griffits regarding her rupture cure. Mrs. Hall gives metwo very valuable helps which I wish you all to benefit by. When bitten by a poisonous animal or insect apply a cloth that has been dipped in turpentine and sprinkled over with sugar; it removes the danger of blood poison. When burned severely, whip the white of an egg and apply. Thank you, Mrs. Hall, come again.

Mrs. Linden. Find recipes requested in another column. I am giving mock cherry pie, which I am sure has been in twice this past year. Why do you not cut out these true and tried recipes?

Mrs. Linden has sent me her catsup recipe, also a tried way to put up blackberries, which I am going to keep if she will allow me, and give them to you next summer in time for the canning season. I am afraid if I send them in now, you would all lose them before you needed them, so I am saving them for you.

lose them before you needed them for you.

Our dear little Cincinnati friend has sent me a a beautiful gift, a linen handkerchief. I wish you could see it, such lovely drawnwork, and handsome lace edge, all her own work, too. Thank you very, very much, Mrs. L. I am sending the only some lace edge, all her own work, too. Thank you very, very much, Mrs. L. I am sending the only Goulash recipe I have.

Mrs. Hattie Cowen. I thank you very much for the beautiful postal, but I cannot exchange. I should be obliged to have the pocket of a Vanderbilt, as I receive so many. The name of your town brings back recollections of Burlington, Iowa (which is not far from you.) way back in the days when Burlington had no bridge across the "Father of Waters."

Mrs. Turner. I have not the runture cure: write

f Waters."
Mrs. Turner. I have not the rupture cure; write Mrs. B. F. Griffitts, Beaverton, Oregon, inclosto Mrs. B. F. Griffitts, Beaverton, Oregon, inclosing stamped directed envelope.

Miss Gilpin. Card received, thanks, but I cannot reciprocate. I will send in recipes for "Fricandelles" and "left overs" next month. I am afraid the publisher will say "ring off, J. A. D." I have so many this month. "American Goulash" has been sent in by Mrs. Linden since beginning this letter, that also will appear next month, watch out for it, it is fine, like all Mrs. Linden's recipes.

H. O. Stiles. Have you tried washing the overalls in wood alcohol, or gasoline?

Mrs. J. L. Robbins. Write to Keuffel and Esser, New York City, for information regarding making alls in wood alconor, or knowledge.

Mrs. J. L. Robbins. Write to Keuffel and Esser,
New York City, for information regarding making tracing paper.

Mrs. Mary Larkins. Find requested recipes in another column. Why can sweet potatoes? Did you ever see any? They are so delicious in their natural state. There may be some way of doing them up, but I never heard of it. Please let us know.

Miss Van Welden. Find pickled red cabbage recipe in another column. When yours is ready please let me know, as I have a weakness for it. It is fine, freshened and cooked like fresh cabbage; make a sauce of drawn butter, and pour over it after cooking.

Sister Nellie Rogers. Shake. I certainly hope our Eastern Start neonle will respond to your and Sister Nelle Rogers. Shake. I certainly nope our Eastern Star people will respond to your appeal. I will endeavor to in the near future.

Mandy Smith. God bless you; pity there were not more like you in this world, how much better it would be, "seventeen children and all living," who can beat that in our corner? I, too, lived in who can be that in our corner: I, too, fived in St. Louis once upon a time. Are you a member of the Eastern Star?

Mrs. Amanda Whitney. Your letter was certainly amusing, poor little Mary. I have seen and met that fragrant little animal. I think I shall have to come down and spend the winter with you, aall I? Mrs. Koons. Bless the children. I see you are Mrs. Koons. Bless the Children. I see you are teaching them to work and help "Mamma."

Mrs. Remington, Mrs. Kellogg. Do come again both of you, your ideas are fine regarding children, such mothers will rear grand men and women.

Miss Handy. We are neighbors, did you know it? Those handkerchief cases must be dainty and such mothers will rear grand men and women.

Miss Handy. We are neighbors, did you know it? Those handkerchief cases must be dainty and neat, and not costly.

Mrs. Smith, Tyler Co., Va. Write us through the corner any time; such letters as yours do us all good. Mrs. Belle Tracy is just the very dearest and best woman. Yes, I can rhubarb in cold water always. So brother Henry calls out "Enough".
You see, brother, we are a numerous family, and when a request is sent in, it is answered with a vim. We are good, kind people, and mean well, but did not intend to smother you with letters;
have you struggled out from under them yet?
Mrs. Trevillion. How handy that footstool would be to keep one's slippers in. Sit down, pull up the stool, remove shoes, and there are your slippers. Thanks, for the suggestion.
So we have a bride among us, hats off, congratulations if it is not too late Mrs. Wahl.
My Dear Christoro. Glad to see you in our corner with so many useful suggestions. Girls and friends, this little girl would be glad to hear from some of our band, write her, Miss Christoro Brice, Brutus, Michigan. Please do not forget the stamp, and a half dozen if you can afford it. They are needed. I have not forgotten you.
Mrs. Eva Collier. How are you?
Mrs. Carrie Phelps, Rock Creek, Ohio., would be glad to hear from some of our readers wishing fancy cards, etc. Please do not forget stamps, as Mrs Phelps is an invalid, and a widow with one dear little baby.
W. G. Marshall, Mrs. Payson, Mrs. Lydia Boosch,
Mrs. Telleson. I have forwarded letters to Mrs.
Griffitts. All of these ladies inclosed ample stamps etc., for replies, from Mrs. Griffitts and myself, I trust Mrs. Griffitts will her rupture cure, we should certainly be very grateful to this little Oregon trust Mrs. Griffitts will hear from all those sne has and will benefit with her rupture cure, we should certainly be very grateful to this little Oregon woman for what she has done for us and our dear ones, and a stamp is a small thing to let her know we have at least received the remedy. There are so many dear little children suffering with this dread isease. Mrs. M. Gilpin. Card received, thanks, but I can-ot possibly comply. I have given your address to Mrs. M. Gilpin. Card received, thanks, but I cannot possibly comply. I have given your address to others who will exchange.

Let me say to J. A. B. and others. Why not make the dear old people blanket wrappers? Buy two pair of woolen blankets, and a kimona pattern, follow directions that come with the pattern, and you will have a warm, soft, comfortable garment for each; then, make, knit, or crochet each a pair of slippers with soft, thick lamb's wool soles. Oh! how warm and cozy they will be, these cold nights and mornings, if they wish to get up in the night, are restless and nervous, cannot sleep, they can slip these on, and let the dear old souls sleep in them if they wish to. These dear ones will soon be laid to rest, let us make them comfortable and happy while we may. I heard a lady say once: "Poor mother always wanted a blanket wrapper, but never felt as though she could afford it;" the mother had gone where she did not need one; that same lady used to make the most beautiful fancy work, and give the poor old mother at Christmastime, wouldn't the wrapper have been more acceptable?

A pair of thick Turkish towels, with wash cloth to match is a nice useful gift to one of our own able?

A pair of thick Turkish towels, with wash cloth to match is a nice useful gift to one of our own family. Towels can be crocheted, and wash cloths too, for that matter, if one wishes, tie fringe in the ends of the towels, but not in the wash cloth. Let and making of our gifts; as for me, I am sending Comfort to many, thus giving pleasure all the year through.

Cleopatra. Yours just received, and glad to hear Cheopatra. Yours just received, and gisted to hear from you again.

Wishing you all a pleasant and joyous Thanksgiving, and that we will meet another year, I am yours lovingly,

J. A. D. (Mrs. Van Dyke,) Orange, Mass.

Don't fall to promptly renew your sub-scription to COMFORT while the present low 13-cent yearly rate is in force. We may be obliged to advance at any time, but if you send 25 cents now, it will pay for and ex-tend your subscription for two years from the time of its expiration.

DEAR SISTERS:

If you have never tried the rhubarb pie plant, you don't know what you have missed as it comes on at a time when everything is scarce, with which to furnish one's table. A few of these plants sown on a rich spot in the garden will afford an abundance of material for all the pies an ordinary-sized family will need, as it will be large enough to use in February and will continue until May. I have a nice lot of the rhubarb seed that I will cheeffully send to any housekeeper free, provided a self-addressed, stamped envelope is sent. Plant the seed at any time in July or August. Send for the seed and have it ready to plant. Mas. Hunt, Palm, Ala. DEAR SISTERS:

Medicinal Wine of Dandelion Flowers

Take three quarts of dandelion flowers, four marts of boiling water and pour over them. Let tand twenty-four hours, then drain off, strain brough cheesecloth and add three lemons sliced, through cheesecioth and add three lemons sliced, three and one half pounds of sugar. Set on the back of the stove until the sugar is melted, then put in a stone jar, cover over and put in a warm place for fourteen days; then strain and put in bottles, but do not cork until fermentation is done, then cork tightly and keep in a dark place.

MES. E. KATZ, 3019 Fulton St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:
I have read the paper ever since I can remember, and I am now twenty years old. I am five feet five inches tall, weigh about one hundred and eighteen pounds, have brown eyes and hair, and have been married two years the twentieth day of last March. Mrs. K. S. Heath of Goodwin, Okla. I know you, do I not? Wasn't your name Ida Taylor before you married? If so, please write me, for I would be glad to hear from you, and also others.
I wish some of the sisters would send me samples of drawnwork and also samples of cross-stitch suitable for working dresses or aprons; just a very small piece, just so I can see how it is done is all I care for and I will return the favors in any way possible. I hope I shall get some samples soon for I am very anxious to do some drawnwork at once.

once.

How many of you sisters know that to put camphor gum in a cupboard that it will keep red ants out? Those who are bothered with seed warts try rubbing them three or four times a day with sweet oil until they turn dark and then they will soon discusper.

disappear. Sisters, try this for mending glassware: Take white of an egg and beat lime in it until it is a thick paste. Put it on edges of the dish, tie with string to keep together and set in a shady place for a few days before using or until dry. With best wishes to COMFORT and all the sisters, especially the shut-ins.

the shut-ins.

MRS. GERTIE HAMILTON, Box 54, Willow, R. F. D. 2, Okla.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS: I live in sunny Kansas. Of late we have had some bad storms which destroyed many crops. Kansas is considered a great wheat, corn and fruit country.

Do the sisters know that if sweet milk is used instead of water for paste, the paper on white-washed walls will stick better? I will close by sending a recipe:

The Secret of Frying Potatoes

The fat must be very hot, if not actually boiling before potatoes are put in; must be dry, for if still damp, will not be crisp. When browned must be taken out and placed on paper before fire to dry; scatter some salt on and serve. Cold potatoes may be sliced and floured thickly before frying in deep fat.

Mrs. Maggie W'nson, Mola, Stafford Co., Kans.

DEAR EDITOR AND SISTERS: Dear Editor and Sistems:
Here comes another sister from the land of sunshine and flowers, and if I am permitted I will join this happy band. What a grand paper Compost is and how I do enjoy reading the sisters' letters!
Many a responsive chord has been touched in my own heart, and my sympathy has gone out to those dear shut-ins.

Dear Sisters, how happy our homes would be if we could only avoid the hasty words; words spoken in anger that can never be recalled; words that sink deep into the heart, and though the wound heals the scar will remain.

deep into the heart, and though the wound heals the scar will remain.

When my cake burns I always use the potato grater to trim the burned off. I find that better than using a knile. Ink stains on white goods can be removed by soaking in water, and then covering the spots with pounded salts of lemon, bleach in sun for half an hour, wash in suds, rinse and dry. I will be pleased to receive letters from any of the sisters.

MRS. O. A. INGRAHAM, El Dorado, Cal.

Letters of Thanks

Letters of Thanks

Dear Comport Readers:
I want to thank you each and all for so kindly responding to the request for cards; they came from most of the states, and one from far-away Vancouver, B. C. Besides these I received many letters, loving sympathetic messages which cheered and helped me much. Even the gift of flowers was not lacking as the lovely violets from Connecticut testify. The editor is to be congratulated on publishing a magazine which brings all its readers into such a close bond of sympathy. How gladly would I write to each one of you, my dear sisters and brothers, too, but as that is impossible, I ask that you each one will consider this a personal letter of thanks for all your kind thought of me. To those who have spoken of their own peculiar sorrow or trouble. I extend my deepest sympathy. How often do I wish I could help all shut-ins, or those in trouble, but what a comfort to know that in Heaven where we will all meet some day the will is recorded as the deed. Let us strive to be patient in all our afflictions, trusting that God knows best and his purpose is in all that comes into our lives.

"He chose this path for thee."

He chose this path for thee. No feeble chance or hard relentless fate, But love, His love hath placed thy footsteps here He knew the way was rough and desolate, Knew how thy heart would often sink with fear Yet how tenderly He whispered, 'Child, I see This path is best for thee.'

"He chose this path for thee.
What needst thou more this sweeter truth to know
That along these strange bewildering ways,
O'er rocky steeps and where dark rivers flow,
His loving arms will bear thee 'all the days';
A few more steps and thou thyself shall see
This path is best for thee."

May Heaven bless you all is the fervent wish o your shut-in sister, Tinnib Wheeler, Box 557. Berlin, N. H.

be these on, and let the dear old souls sleep in them if they wish to. These dear ones will soon appy while we may. I heard a lady say once: Poor mother always wanted a blanket wrapper, ut never felt as though she could afford it; the other had gone where she did not need one; that matter had gone where she did not need one; that made lady used to make the most beautiful fancy ork, and give the poor old mother at Christmasme, wouldn't the wrapper have been more acceptible?

A pair of thick Turkish towels, with wash cloth of match is a nice useful gift to one of our own milly. Towels can be crocheted, and wash cloths of, for that matter, if one wishes, tie fringe in the nds of the towels, but not in the wash cloth. Let it is used discretion and judgment in the selection. DEAR SISTERS:

Sister Anderson (Texas). Thanks for the pretty, fragrant flowers you sent me. I will keep them as a souvenir of a "lone star" sister. Sister Jane Sonogles of Wisconsin. Accept my Sister Jane Sonogles of Wisconsin. Accept my thanks and best wishes.

Sister Hattie White. Your letter was a cheery bit of yourself, and I am sure I feel grateful for your brightly expressed good wishes, and recipes. Ada Meeks. Your letter was interesting. I will try to write you a personal letter by and by. I hope you will recover your hearing. But you have much to be thankful for. Many others who possess the five senses would gladly exchange places with you.

Ada Cove. You made me laugh. You must be a Ada Cove. You made me langh. You must be a happy girl.

I would name you all, but I can't, for it would take lots of space in the sisters' corner.
Wishing you all every blessing, and hoping our "Comfort Sisters" may really be "comforters" to all the sorrowing, I am your friend,
ADA HUDGENS, BOX 80, Ashland City, R. F. D., 1, Tenn.

My Unknown Friends:

My heartiest thanks to you all. Not the strength nor the time do I possess to write to you all. My stampbox is too empty also, in comparison to the letters. Many thanks also for the canceled stamps, and the other tokens of goodwill. And—last but not least—I thank the editor for so kindly giving my unworthy letters space. Thankfully yours,

EFFIR J. ZWIER, MAXWELL City, N. Mex.

DEAR EDITOR:

I want to return thanks to you and the dear sisters for all your kindness to me. I have tried to answer all; if any have been overlooked please pardon me. I hope I will be answered from time to time with letters and pieces for patchwork.

Now, dear, sisters, one and all, accept my sincere thanks. Wishing you each long life, success and happiness,

MRS. NELLIE NYSSEN, Coldwater, R. F. D., 9, Mich.

DEAR COMFORT READERS:

DEAR COMPORT READERS.

I am very grateful to you for your letters and souvenirs, and have tried to return favors, but some of you have neglected to give name and address. I would like to know who sent the petrified wood and where it came from.

The East responded most generously. I would also like mementos of the West, especially Indian also like mementos of the West, especially Indian relics.

Here in De Kalb, Uncle Sam has just built us one of the finest postoffices this side of Chicago. It's a beautiful building. This is a nice city, and a great manufacturing place for its size. We have a number of different manufacturies here, a shoe factory, a piano factory, and factories for making nails, barbed wire, and woven wire, and other large factories making all kinds of farm implements; and we also have good schools. We have the Northern Illinois State Normal, and it is a fine building, it is built outside of the city, one mile from all saloons, as it is the state law to build state schools that distance. We also have a new Township High School, and four other large school buildings.

schools that distance. We also have a new Township High School, and four other large school buildings.

This part of Illinois is fine farming land. Illinois is my birth state so I think it is a nice place in which to live. MRS. EMMA ROBERTS, 607 Haish Ave, DeKalb, Ill.

MRS. EMMA ROBERTS, 607 Haish Ave, DeKalb, III.

DEAR SISTERS:

As the Christmas season draws nearer each day, we will have to bestir ourselves and begin to plan for the usual interchange of gifts.

I suppose there are many people who, like myself, have only limited means, but enjoy giving and wish to remember quite a number. This is possible if one begins early to make some of the many dainty little things which are sure to be appreciated and still are not expensive.

A pen wiper made of several thicknesses of felt or flannel cut the shape of a leaf and tied with a ribbon; or shaving balls made of many circles of tissue paper caught together in the center to form balls and strung on ribbon make appropriate gifts for gentlemen.

for gentlemen.

Dolls made from figures cut from colored fashion plates; pasted on cardboard and dressed in pretty bright colors, tied to the Christmas tree with a bow of baby ribbon will delight the little folks.

Watch the number on your wrapper. If it is 218 or less, it means that your subscription has or is about expired and you should renew at once so as to not miss any papers containing the great story, "St. Elmo," which will be continued for some months into 1907; it only costs 15 cents to do it now.

which will be continued for some montas into 1907; it only costs 15 cents to do it now.

A handkerchief made of a scrap of lawn finished with hemstitching and a frill of lace; also a bag for pieces made of patchwork; several pockets on the inside for holding them; a draw-string in the top; a square on the center of front with inscription worked "All the year round, a comfort I'm found," will make useful presents.

Just for a family Christmas tree, a good substitute may be made of an old umbrella frame. Wind the ribs with red cheesecloth. Suspend or wind ropes of evergreen from the top center to end of each rib; fastening with a red or silver star, which are easily made. When properly lighted it is very pretty. The light-weight presents may be hung upon the umbrella and the heavier ones placed on a table beneath.

I trust some sister may get good suggestions from the above. Several years ago I made a New Year's resolution to scatter sunshine into lives as I passed along life's highway, and more than once have I felt rewarded by being called "Hilda Sunshine."

Sisters, come ulong with your ideas and experiences, we appreciate them.

Hilda Frantz, Box 58, Henderson, Tex.

HILDA FRANTZ, BOX 58, Henderson, Tex.

Deae Comfort Sisters:

I am eighteen years of age and have been married one year and three months, and, like many other young housekeepers, find that Comfort is indeed a great help to me. I dearly love fancy work of all kinds, but don't know very much about it, but expect to learn.

Will some one please send in the songs, "Always in the Way," and "My Mother Was a Lady," for publication in our Song Column.

Will some of the sisters send directions for making picture frames of thread? I have seen them, but do not know how they are made. I wish someone who understands crochet would explain what kind of stitches are the roll stitch and block stitch.

I am going to give the sisters a true and tried recipe to contract and stitches.

I am going to give the sisters a true and tried recipe for curing cancer; dissolve copperas in a little water and apply often. I have seen this tried and know it is a sure cure.

Here is a recipe for a bair tonic which is cor-little water and apply often. I have seen this tried and know it is a sure cure.

Here is a recipe for a hair tonic which is certainly fine: Ten cents' worth of red Peruvian bark boiled in one quart of rain-water, let settle and drain off, then bottle and add one tablespoonful of powdered borax and five drops of oil of Eucalyptus, shake well, it is then ready for use. Apply to the scalp once a week, rubbing it in with the finger tips.

Will someone tell me a remedy for chickens that are dying with a sore throat?

I live in the grand old state of Arkansas, where the big red apple grows. Cotton and corn are its chief productions. Here we have the pine trees. I guess there are lots of sisters who never saw a pine; they are large trees which are as green in winter as in summer. If any of the sisters would like to have a small pine, write me.

I wish more of the sisters in Arkansas would write.

I wish more of the service.

Was. E. A. Burris, Moreland, R. F. D., 1, Ark.

DEAR SISTERS:

I saw the queries about vine peaches. I have raised them for five years, preserved and canned them. They grow on vines like muskme'ons and are about the size of and look like an orange, but when peeled and cut in half they look a great deal like a peach.

I have some seed which I can spare, and will send if those wanting them will write and pay postage.

MRS. L. M. MCGEE, Gage, R. F. D., 4, Okla.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS: Have you room for a bride of one year who writes to all of you from her home in the "dreary South?" I say bride because the honeymoon has not yet waned, neither does it seem likely to and I hope that all the sisters can say the same. I was married in Kansas and came away with my husband to his own home, a suburb of the city of Columbus, Georgia; it is a really beautiful city; whose chief industry is its numerous cotton mills.

Ada Hudgens. I liked your letter. I am very fond of poetry and am making a scrapbook. I hope you will soon be well.

I wonder if all the sisters know that bolling water may be poured in a glass without danger of breaking it if they will put a spoon in it, and that camphor and whiskey well shaken and applied to blackheads once or twice a week will remove them?

Mrs. Alice Day. I want to procure a vine that will be green all winter. Will you please tell me if the Mexican vine grows all the year round?

Mrs. K. S. Heath. I was twenty-one in September and I weigh about one hundred and twenty-nine pounds, and am five feet six inches in height. I would like to correspond with you if you will write to me; my husband is twenty-six.

Sisters, is not this quotation splendid? "If the road be the right road that we travel, what matter that the city we seek is far off?"

Now I wonder how many have found the "Way."

With best wishes to all,

Mrs. W. C. Eason, Phœnix City, Ala.

Dear Mrs. Wilkinson and Sisters:

DEAR MES. WILKINSON AND SISTERS: DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:
Would you like to bear from sunny Southern California and especially Orange Co., one of the most productive counties in the world for its size?
We are situated near the famous "celery lands" of this county, of which we are very proud. Also the Los Alamitos sugar factory fifteen miles from wonderful Long Beach and thirty-two miles from Los Angeles, now connected by electric car line to that city.

that city.

I should be pleased to hear from any of the sisters. and especially those interested in flowers.
Mrs. J. G. Dunn, Santa Ana, R. F. D., 2, Cal.

MRS. J. G. DUNN, Santa Ana, R. F. D., 2, Cal.

DEAR COMPORT SISTERS:

I have taken Comport since January, but that is time enough to fall in love with it and the sisters' corner, too. I read that first; the fancy work is my favorite department.

There are a great many Comport readers here, but I haven't seen a letter from this town. I agree with the sisters and I think we ought to send a pen picture of ourselves.

I am short, five feet four inches high, and weigh one hundred and fifty pounds. I have a dark complexion, big gray eyes, brown wavy hair and a round face. I am twenty-four years old, and have been married two years. I have a fine baby boy nearly one year old, and, like most of the sisters, I have the best husband on earth. Baby's name is Doyle; he can walk and run everywhere, speaks a few, words, and's has six teeth, big blue-gray eyes, brown curly hair, he was born tongue tied and the doctor came last month and cut it loose. My husband and I were both tongue tied. I will give an idea or two.

Now we all know a baby always wants new play-brown curly halr, he was born tongue tied and the doctor came last month and cut it loose. My husband and I were both tongue tied. I will give an idea or two.

Now we all know a baby always wants new playthings. This is my way of doing: I save all the pretty little boxes and books or anything that is bright and he will not hurt himself with, and put them in a box and set it handy for me, but not for him. When I put him down to play I lay out two or three things where he can get them. When he is tired of them I put them back and lay out something else he hasn't had for a day or two. I don't give them to him if he is ill-natured, for ten times out of a dozen he'll throw them down and cry, so I lay them where he can see them and he will be sure to want them and be good-natured. When a baby cries there is usually something wrong somewhere, maybe a pin unfastened, or the dress rubbing under the arms or chin, or maybe he is thirsty or hungry. So don't get provoked, or scold, but try to find the trouble and mend matters with gentleness and kindness, it is hard sometimes, but keep trying and do your best. If baby is fretful get the looking-glass and put it in a place where he can see himself, but can't get it nor hit it with anything, and see how he enjoys laughing and making faces at the baby. They will jabber at the little fellow in the glass for a long time.

When my baby, or any of the family has a cold on their lungs. I make a mixture of two teaspoonfuls of goose or chicken oil, one teaspoonful of camphor, coal oil, and turpentine. Mix well, and rub on the forehead and nose, then behind the ears and throat, and down over the body to the hips, rub freely over the back and sides. I warm a soft woolen cloth and pin around him, cut out arm holes and pin on the shoulders, and put a small piece around the neck. This is done every night woolen cloth and pin around him, cut out arm holes and pin on the shoulders, and put a small piece around the neck. This is done every night woolen cloth and pin around him, cut out arm h chair and some other things. I will close with a request:

My mother is a shut-in; she lives in the country and hasn't much company. She passes most of her time piecing quilts, and caring for house plants. Will a few of Comport sisters please send her pieces of any kind? Her address is Mass. Ina Fogus, Springdale, R. F. D., 2, Ark.

I don't think she takes Comport now, she did before I married. She doesn't know I am asking this of the sisters, but she will be greatly pleased and will send thanks to all who will send her a stamped envelope with full address.

I sent Effic Zwier a lot of canceled stamps in remembrance of her birthday, April 23.

I want to know if any of the sisters can crochet the Oak Leaf and Acorn lace? I havefull directions. Write me if you want to try it.

the Oak Leaf and Acorn lace? I nave full directions. Write me if you want to try it.

If any of the sisters live in Simpson, Kans., I would like to hear from them; that is one of my old homes. I would like to get letters from people by the name of Rickard and Fogle. Also sik, satin, or velvet pieces.

Mrs. Myrtle Rickard, Huntsville, Ark.

Requests from Shut-ins DEAR SISTERS:

I am another shut-in who enjoys Comport, I read over and over again the letter of the in Cody, Va.—Thomas Lockhart. I also know him, he lives about twenty miles from here and we exchange letters.

I have been in bed nineteen long years, and I often think when I read of some costly monument being erected to the memory of some dead one, how much the same amount could do for the living sufferers.

sufferers.

If our government could pension needy incurables, what a boom it would be to many who are in a helpless condition.

I am fifty-nine years old and as my husband is away, I am alone all the long weary days; only those who have suffered somewhat, can appreciate what this means. I hope to be remembered once in awhile by a letter, or pieces of any sort for patchwork.

Mas. Lizzie Phillips, Oakgrove, Mo.

Lottie May, Griffithsville, W. Va., requests a letter party, Oct. 29, 1906. Lucie McKanna, Arvin, Lunenburg Co., Va., asks to be remembered Oct. 29, 1906, with letters and woolen and silk pieces.

Bennie Walz, 719 Williams St., Chillicothe, Mo., a twenty-year-old invalid boy, asks for letters, pieces, cards, etc.

Edith Fishleigh, 159 4th St., Wyandotte, Mich., a helpless invalid from spinal trouble, asks for letters from young and old; inclose stamp for re-

Mrs. Hattie Barker, Ranger, Texas, writes: I have been a great sufferer for thirteen years, so I can sympathize with all who are afflicted. Let us put our trust in Our Saviour and remember that there is a home prepared for us where there is no sin, sorrow or deaths. I enjoy the cheery letters, and wish the sisters would give me a letter party, Nov. 10, 1906, and though I can't promise to answer all, each will be appreciated.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 11.)

Comfort Recitation Club

Conducted by Harold C. Hazleton

EDITOR'S NOTE.—This is the sixth article in this department and we invite you all to read the introduction appearing in January issue where first article appeared.

HE selections which I send you this month may be rendered by either sex, from nine years old to ninety, so I feel sure they will be welcomed by a great number. Of course, you all understand that the ability to express thought and feeling with the voice must be developed and cultivated. That is why you practice your pieces aloud, that you may try the different tone effects. You also realize by this time that it requires a great deal of careful study to give the right facial expressions, and so you practice your pieces aloud. On the properties of the properties. You also realize by this time that it requires a great deal of careful study to give the right facial expressions, and so you practice your pieces aloud, that you only properties of the properties of t

Popping Corn

And there they sat, a popping corn, John Styles and Susan Cutter— John Styles as fat as any ox, And Susan fat as butter.

And there they sat and shelled the corn, And raked and stirred the fire, And talked of different kinds of care, And hitched their chairs up nigher.

Then Susan she the popper shook, Then John he shook the popper Till both their faces grew as red As sauce-pans made of copper.

And then they shelled, and popped, and ate, All kinds of fun a-poking, While he haw-hawed at her remarks, And she laughed at his joking.

And still they popped, and still they ate— John's mouth was like a hopper— And stirred the fire, and sprinkled salt, And shook and shook the popper.

The clock struck nine—the clock struck ten, And still the corn kept popping; It struck eleven and then struck twelve, And still no signs of stopping.

And John he ate, and Sue she thought
The corn did pop and patter—
Till John cried out, "The corn's afire!
Why, Susan, what's the matter?"

Said she, "John Styles, it's one o'clock; You'll die of indigestion; I'm sick of all this popping corn— Why don't you pop the question?"

This is of all this popping corn—
Why don't you pop the question?"

Come before your audience with a pleasant expression on your face. You are not about to recite a dirge, but a selection brimful of droll humor. Your manner should be lively and animated. Do not attempt this recitation until you yourself feel amused. Like all humorous pieces, its success depends upon the amount of individuality the reader throws into it. A glance, a shrug, the mere raising of the eyebrows, with a little knowing nod and droll expression will frequently "bring down the house," as the saying is. Commence in a bright conversational tone. Indicate the position of John and Susan. If you wish, you can indicate John's size by placing the hands a little to each side near the waist line. The hands would be slightly in front of the body, palms in. Make a slight pause after the third line. The second verse must not be hurried. Indicate how they shelled the corn, raked the fire, etc., and lay special stress on the last line, hitching once or twice to the right. In the fourth verse the gesture is given in Fig. 26 for John's loud laugh. You could put your fingers in your mouth and glance down for Susan's "tee-hee". Glance toward the clock as it strikes nine. Show a little more concern when it strikes ten. Emphasize the word "still" in the next line. Look and point toward the clock as it strikes eleven. Make a slight emphatic pause, then, with the words "and then struck twelve," turn toward the au-

FIG. 26. "WHILE HE HAW- FIG. 27. "AND THEN HAWED." STRUCK TWELVE."

lience with concern written on your face, and the right hand also partly raised, as in Fig. 27. You are taking the audience into your confidence, and lean slightly toward them. Emphasize the words "ate" and "thought." Susan's patience is being tried to the utmost limit and, in the last verse, you must bring out her thorough exasperation at John's "bashful backwardness."

The Heights of Lintagath

With muffled hoofs the horses bore their riders into sight.

Oh! rugged, rugged was the path, and stormy was the night! And ragged, ragged in the sky the lightnings fierce and

Lit up the woman's features, and the men she rode between;

And it lighted up the path
Leading down to Lintagath.

Fair Lintagath, in silence slept profoundly on the hill,
With naught but that slight woman 'twixt her and Britain's will.
Her tired people slumbered without a dream of fear.
They could not see the riders; their steps they could not hear

Stealing down the mountain path, Stealing down to Lintagath.

Lesson Talk

The effect produced by this selection will depend upon the reader's power to vividly imagine the scene and then present the word picture to the audience in a clear and sympathetic manner. The selection is dramatic, and both mind and body must be thoroughly awake. In the first verse we have a very good opportunity for vocal description. Let the voice show the qualities indicated by the descriptive adjectives. Indicate the direction from which the riders come toward the left, the storm to the right, as it gives a more dramatic effect to have them ride toward the storm rather than away from it. The next verse is given in a quiet, descriptive tone. Lintagath will lay opposite the path by which the riders are coming. The storm, in itself symbolic of hidden danger, hangs over the town. I would suggest emphasizing the words "dream" in the third line, and "they" in the fourth. Prolong the word "stealing" to show how they crept down the mountain path. In the third verse you describe the girl's mental suffering. Imagine yourself in her place. Fig. 29 shows the gesture for the third line. Still imagining yourself in this girl's position, give the fourth verse with deep feeling, as she would have done. Put strong emphasis on "yet," in the next to the last line. Plan your gestures in the fifth verse so that, when she "turned them toward the right" it will turn toward the audience, and "Devil's Leap" will be almost in front of you, but a little to the right. There is a good chance for dramatic effect here. Emphasize the word "thought." Give the next two verses with much sympathetic feeling. Show how anxiously the little brother and sister watch for her, gazing, of course, toward the left. The last verse is given rather slowly in a strong descriptive style. Do not turn squarely either to left or right, but rather to the left or right-front.

"AND JAGGED, FIG. 29. "AND PEERED IN THE SKY." INTO THE NIGHT."

Address all letters for this department to Cousin Hal, care of Comfort, Augusta, Maine.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

Requests from Shut-ins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 10.)

DEAR SISTERS:

I am writing in behalf of a poor little cripple girl, who cannot hold her head up. Kindly remember her with letters, scraps of any kind will be appreciated; her address is

MISS KATE GARRETT, Benhur, Va.

Miscellaneous Requests

I would like seashells, minerals, fossils, Indian relics or curios, suitable for a cabinet; will return MRS. LEVI W. HAM, East Mercer, Maine.

Will some of the sisters send me ripe cotton and rice on stem, and also inform me how to extract oil from peppermint.

Mrs. J. Krook, Hilliards, Mich.

Mrs. Adam Mackenzie, Strathcarrol Assa., East, Canada, would like to hear from sisters interested in or having crazy quilts.

Will some kind contributor send me directions with illustrations, if possible, for crocheting a baby's little hood in roll stitch.

MISS ANNA REHOR, Wilber, Neb.

Will some of the sisters kindly send me Comfort for 1905, beginning with May number; will return kindness in any way that I can. Eura M. Piper, 511 Chicago Ave., Galena, Kans. Will some sister send me a few Job's tears. I will refund postage.

MRS. BOND WALLACE, Quincy, R. F. D., 54, W. Va.

Will some sister send me directions for making apple jam and apple butter.

MRS. MATTIE RAY, Prattsville, Ark.

Have any of the sisters ever colored velvets. If so will you kindly send directions to this corner.

MRS. J. A. LASH, Auburn, R. F. D., 3, Ind.

Will some kind friend please send me either (CONTINUED ON PAGE 12.)

Montgomery Ward & Co.'s No. 75 Catalogue FREE

Nearly 1300 large pages, thousands of pictures, 127,000 articles. The biggest bargain book ever printed. Beats all Catalogue records for quantity, quality and low prices. Full of many things you want that you cannot buy near home and multitudes of things of better quality and at lower prices than any other catalogue or store offers you.

Send for Your FREE Copy Today.

$50.00 a year, at least, is easily saved by every one using this No. 75 Montgomery Ward & Co. Catalogue to order goods from. Many write us of saving hundreds by being our regular customers. It pays others, it will pay you. We are the originators of the Catalogue business. We have been square with our millions of customers for 35 years—we will be square with you.

Valuable Premiums Free

And Lintagath, O Lintagath! and father, mother dear, Long shall ye vainly, vainly yearn a gentle voice to hear; And all the day, till weary night, beside the cottage door, Brother and sister watch and wait for one who nevermore Comes lightly down the path, Cometh down to Lintagath.

rears for the Maid of Lintagath shall dim remember-ing eyes; And aged grandsires tell the tale, where Kenern's waters of one who died to save her home, two hundred years ago.

Still, still she treads the path—
Evermore—to Lintagath.

In this new No. 75 Montgomery Ward & Co. Catalogue is an entire section devoted to our new Free Premium Plan, which il-lustrates and describes all the many valuable articles we give free to our customers, including Pianos, Buggies, Sewing Machines, Watches, Jewelry, Diamonds, Morris Chair, Couches, Chairs, Saddles, Books, Shoes, Carpets, Curtains, Tools, Scales, Harness, Stoves, Lamps, Violins, Guitar, Music Boxes, Sporting Goods, Clothing, Furniture, Dinner Sets, and very many other choice articles, all given to our patrons. It is worth your while to get this big No. 75 Montgomery Ward & Co. Catalogue for 1906-7 just to see this wonderful Premium List of things that await your selection if ou become our customers.

Send your name and address carefully written on a postal card or in a letter, or attached to your next order, or fill out coupon in the picture; either way that is easiest. Just say 'Send me free and prepaid one copy of your new No. 75 Catalogue." Do this before you forget it, right now. We will then send it at

This Big Book Just off the Press CATALOGUE COUPON Cut here, fill in carefully, and send to Montgomery Ward (This catalogue is reserved for all, except children and residents of Cook County, Illinois, who need not apply.) Send me FREE and Prepaid one copy of your new No. 75 Catalogue for 1906-7. R. F. D. No.____ I saw your ad. in Comfort. Post Office

We Make No Charge For This Great Catalogue

We even prepay the postage. Ordering a copy of this large Free Book puts you under no obligations to buy anything of us. We ask you to send for it, read it, look at the pictures and prices, and then when you find out how much money it saves you you will be glad to order from it, for it means a saving of 20 per cent to 50 per cent on everything you wear, eat or use in any way. Remember this is no partial list or imitation of the Montgomery Ward & Co. Catalogue, but is the genuine, the latest, the complete, new large Montgomery Ward & Co. Catalogue, Number 75, for fall of 1906 and all of 1907, full of the very latest styles and newest city goods of every kind that you can possibly want or use. DON'T DE-LAY—send for your copy today. It will go to you at once, by return mail if possible, all prepaid and absolutely free

Montgomery Ward & Co., Michigan Avenue, Madison Chicago

The Mystery of the Coiled Asp Or, Princess of His Heart

By Davoust Stanislas Romantsof

Copyright, 1906, by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Inc.

CHAPTER XIV.

"REFUSAL IS DEATH."

BEAUTIFUL girl, sunny haired, blueeyed, charming, but madly angry, sat upon the side of a common white-iron cot, and beat with her little fists, as she cried again and again:
"Let me out, I say, let me out. How out," and yet she had been a prisoner for over a fortnight.

ont, and yet she had been a prior fortnight.

"I haven't seen one, except him," she thought, "and so I cannot tell who is detaining me. Oh, if I were only free. My poor darling, how I want to relieve your mind!" a burst of tears followed this, then the young lady once more began her plea for help.

Suddenly the door opened, and a be-whiskered face peeped in.
At the sight of it, the girl gave a long, lingering cry, and drew back, showing fear in every move-

You are making a noise, yes," he remarked

"You are making a noise, yes, "he remarked quite simply.
"Of course I am," sobbed the girl. "Let me out and send me home. Those who love me must be perishing for news of me."
"You no longer belong to them, no," asserted the man, looking down upon her.
"Why not?"
"You must take the oath you promised," he said

"You must take the oath you promised," he said sternly.

"What oath?" she sobbed, although she knew only too well, and wanted to die because of that nowledge.

"THE OATH OF THE COILED ASP."
"I will not take it," she sobbed wrathfully.
"I have you taught as to the alternative," muttered the man.

"Yes," the lips of the girl trembled, but her an-

"Yes," the lips of the girl trembled, but her answer was firm.
"Well?" he asked.
"I prefer the alternative. You have poisoned my mind with your wonderful stories of freeing Russia. What can such a band as you do? Men who prey upon defenceless women until you get them bound by false oaths? I loathe you, and I hope that you may be punished sometime for your wickedness."

hope that you may be punished sometime for your wickedness."
A smile rested upon the dark face of the Russian, but he said nothing, and the girl continued:
"I have left a happy home and loving man for you and your false oaths. My reputation is ruined, and if I do not take that fearful oath, you will make me die a horrible death. Then, I'll die the death, but I will not take the oath," and she glared at him wrathfully; then as his face was withdrawn, she began to sob and wring her hands.

With him gone, everything seemed so silent, that she was frightened.
"Even he would be better than this suspense," she cried, going about the room uneasily.
"I wonder how it comes. It is easy enough to defy the world, but it is terrible to be thus, not knowing from what the terrible thing may come," and she shuddered.

Above her bed was a rude effigy in plaster of a COILED ASP, its scales clearly shown: upon the wall upon the opposite side was a splendid portrait of the same. Shut in this small room alone with these two representatives to gaze upon it is a wonder that the poor girl had not lost her reason.

Slowly her eyes seemed drawn toward the plaster is a wonder that the poor girl had not lost her reason.

Slowly her eyes seemed drawn toward the plaster cast. She was trembling horribly, yet she knew that from it would come her death. With her heart in her mouth, she drew nearer and nearer, every sense absorbed in the terrible fascination which held her.

She did not hear the door open, or see a stalwart young man, and another, whose face she knew well, following. She did not hear the faint whisper of the first man in the ear of the other:

"Is this the one?" nor the reply of the second man:

man:
"Indeed it is."
She was deaf to the further admonition of the first man:

"Keep perfectly quiet, for we must have plenty of evidence of this foul thing," was his companion's evidence of this foul thing," was his companion's reply.

"Must we wait long?"

The first man shook his head and advanced step by step until he stood almost beside the girl, who with strained eyes, was watching the horrible image. She was as dead to his presence as though he were a hundred miles away.

Suddenly a hollow voice sounded in the room:
"One more chance is given you. Will you swear the OATH OF THE COILED ASP?"

"No," she returned, in stirring tones.
"Then the death of the COILED ASP will come upon you within the moment."

"Let it come. I am a free American, and I refuse to bind myself to free any country, even Russia." Then he reyes fixed like one in a trance. The two men could see that she was praying.

There was a sharp sound, like the opening of a trap: the girl's face did not change, but the first man to enter the room moved a little closer, and bending forward took up a pillow, all unobserved by her.

bending forward took up a pinow, an above by her.

Her eyes were raised towards heaven, to which she was evidently commending her soul, when a long, wriggling something darted from the open mouth of the hideous plaster cast against the wall. It came with eyes like rubies, and a forked tongue, but it fell harmless against the upraised pillow, and Tom Billings said cheerfully:

"I've got it, don't fear." evidently to the man with him, then he shouted through the opening:

"Caught that dog?" and to his question came the reply of a man with a gruff voice, in reality a policeman:

"Caught that dog?" and to his question came the reply of a man with a gruff voice, in reality a policeman:

"You bet we have, and he's tried to scratch us with a poisoned pin, but we were wise, and he's now handcuffed."

The girl slowly turned, her blue eyes wide open, her face working. For a moment Tom Billings wished he had brought Wanda with him, but he saw that his companion was really the one the poor tortured spirit wanted, for with a slow cry, she arose to her feet:

"John, Jack," she cried.

"Oh, my darling, where have you been? Come to me, my precious little one, come, and you'll never be hurt again," and poor John Buyers, never again to be quite as lifeless as he had been, because animated and encouraged by the love of the girl he so deeply loved, caught the almost fainting girl and carried her from the room, and with Tom's help out into a carriage, where the detective left them.

"Oh, dear Jack," she whispered, clinging to him. "My little girl," was his reply.

"They lured me away making me believe that I would be doing something great and grand for the salvation of the world and humanity," she whispered.

"Who?"

"The worshipers of the coiled asp," was her rather startling reply, but she and John Buyers, leaving the past, devoted themselves to the future, and a week later were married, and made each other happy, and are now doing so.

iron bed on which lay the remains of a once hand-some and gallant man. "My wife," the man said in a voice that sounded far off. "Dear Michael," she returned gently. "And you do not regret?" he asked in an agonized tone.

The beautiful woman paused a moment. She remembered many things and it was difficult to remembered many things and it was difficult to reply.

"I know I have wronged you from the moment I first met you," he said, with a sob in his throat.

"No, no," she cried quickly, remembering his reverent courtship.

"Ah, but yea. I knew that as a member of the order of the COILED ASP I had no right to think of you, or a wife of any kind."

"Tell me what was your pledge?"

"Never mind what it was. I have paid with my life for my rebellion."

"Then you were injured by some of your order?" she cried, a furious light coming into her eyes.

"Yes. I was obedient, and remained away from you for a year, but I could not stand it any more. So I sent for you, thinking I could serve two, my order and you."

Gently the young wife poured a cordial down his throat.

throat.
"They discovered me, and sent someone out to find you and murder you."

The man's voice was very weak, but his clutch on his wife's hand, where now gleamed the wedding ring of her proper rank, and not the flat-faced monogram ring she had worn so long, was steadfast. "Listen! They tracked another woman, one of our own, who had foolishly taken the oath. She was chased into a gloomy old house. Knowing that the mother of male children is exempt, provided they are born to women married at the time of taking the oath, she stole the child of a neighbor, a tiny little chap, and fled with him, the avengers on her path."

her path."

The weak voice grew low.
"She and the child were murdered horribly,"
the man said slowly.
"How?" asked the wife gently.
"An asp was let loose, and allowed to feast upon their poor bodies. A poor creature kept at starving point."

point."

Little wonder the wife sobbed bitterly, as she sat, her hand in that of her husband, although sorrowful as it may seem, her heart was with another.

"And you joined such an order?" she asked slowly.

"When I was nothing more than a boy. I did not understand, but on account of my rank, I was placed high in the order. They felt they dared not allow me to marry, and when they found I had without exacting the oath, they were wild with without exacting the oath, they were wild with fury."

"Why?"

"It was a rule of the order, since its inception over a hundred years ago, that all women, married at the time of taking the oath, who bore women children were exempt for a year; those who bore men children, under the same conditions, were exempt forever. They did not dare change this provision, inserted no one knew why, except that the founder and his wife were married, and so they tried to induce young girls to take the oath, and then when they had them sufficiently frightened, to marry them to Russians, filled with what we all believed was patriotic enthusiasm.

"What do you know it is now, Michael?" the wife asked gently.

"Murder," was the quiet answer. "My love for you taught me that. Still, let us leave all this alone, my Princess. I will be dead soon. No, I am certain. A slow poison, of which we of the order alone know, was injected. That is why the physicians have been able to do nothing with me."

The sweet, grave face sank lower, the beautiful eyes brimmed with tears.

"I did not care so very much, loved one, why should? You have never loved me, dear, and I hope you love someone else?"

"Michael!"

"Dearest wife, tell me, is it not so? Remember you are not speaking to a live man, but one who is already just vanishing. I do not deserve any of your tenderness and sweetness which I have always had, for I took advantage, shameful advantage, of your youth and inexperience. Forgive me by telling me." fury."
"Why?"

your youth and inexperience. Forgive me by telling me."

"My husband, my dear, I never want to hear of other love, I just must live to remember you, who die in your youth and helpfulness, just when our life stretches out before us. If you are taken, I will only live for you."

A rarely sweet expression came over the dying man's face, as he whispered:

"Tell me, darling."

The lovely face flushed terribly, the dear eyes drooped, then the wife whispered:

"Michael, I am still so young. I scarcely knew what I was doing, but there will never be anything again with which to reproach ourselves. You shall live."

live."
"I wanted you to tell me, for I feared something of this kind. I have done you so much harm already, that I want to be your good angel hereafter. I want you to promise me that you will only think of me as one who had much more than he ever deserved in that he was able to call you wife for a time. Remember to you I have been but the man you loved, but these hands, stretching out the long, slender, tapering fingers which could evoke such delightful harmony, are stained with human blood."

The wife shuddered, but conquering herself, caught them in her own warm ones, and covered them with kisses:

"My love and devotion will take all that away. You have been an ideal husband, and I WILL LOVE YOU."

How pathetic the dying face looked, as the man

You have been an ideal husband, and I WILL LOVE YOU."
How pathetic the dying face looked, as the man hungrily drank in each feature, then he once more shook his head:
"A man who induces a fifteen-year-old girl to consent to a secret marriage, makes her his wife when she knows nothing of the sacrifice she is making; leaves her alone for a year, and then returns only to die in her arms, is scarcely an ideal husband for anyone, and least of all for you, my Princess."
"I do not care for that, I just want to be your wife," she sobbed.
"Bear the title until you exchange it for another's name, darling just to show that the man you chose in your girlish ignorance was not a beggar picked from the streets, promise."
"I promise."

"I promise."
"Then promise that you will marry the man you

"I cannot, I cannot do it!"

"Darling," the man's voice was so faint that its tones barely came to her, "I'm dying, promise," and as she bent over him, she whispered:

"I promise," and as Michael Aronskoff's eyes closed in death, his wife, Sweetheart, looked up to find her father and Orfield Jamison bending over her.

CHAPTER XVI.

AS THE NEWSPAPERS SAW IT.

The current newspapers had several items which nterested various characters who have appeared

The current newspapers had several items which interested various characters who have appeared in these pages.

CHAPTER XV.

A HUSBAND'S GENEROSITY.

"Is there no hope?"
"No, your highness."
"Please remember I am an American and that I do not care for my title. Is there none at all?"
"The best physicians in the city have given their opinion," returned the surgeon.
"Poor man," she sighed, turning to the narrow

The current newspapers had several items which interested various characters who have appeared in these pages.

The day following the death of Michael Aronskoff, this bit of news was given, after the dead man was given his full rank and titles:
"Prince Michael gave up his life in an attempt to disrupt one of the most dangerous of the many Russian societies undermining the public welfare.
While a member himself, he did not approve of certain practices, and refusing to live up to what in the arms of his wife, the Princess Sweetheart, formerly Miss Sweetheart Kingston of this city."

Another paper gave a bit of news, only interesting to the intimate friends of the young couple:

"Harry Wilson and wife are going to Alabama, where Harry has accepted a new job. Mrs. Wilson has been rather under the weather for some time, the result of a fright she must have had a short time ago. Of course the baby goes with them."

Brave young wife, she had never told her husband, but she was not happy until a new home had sheltered her, and old fears melted away in the smiles of her loved ones.

Those who had known Eugenia Layton, the news of her marriage to one of her associates took a heavy burden from poor Sweetheart's heart, but perhaps after all the item which occasioned the most stir was this:

"Married, Thomas Billings and Wanda Howard," and directly following it the notice of the formation of the new partnership of "T. & W. Billings, detectives."

"Id on't deserve what you've given me, Mr. Jamison, indeed I don't, and I won't take more than I said, which is princely pay."

Orfield, his heart light, the mystery solved, only laughed, and deposited to the credit of the junior member of the new firm, the sum of ten thousand dollars. He did not dare give more for fear he hurt these staunch friends of his.

Under the same tree which shelters the tiny babe whom she had tried to shield, even after she had taken it to save her life, lies the body of the woman once thought to be that of Sweetheart Kingston. A simple stone marks her grave on which is carved: "IN THE HEREAFTER ALL WILL BE KNOWN."

PROLOGUE.

Two years later, a lady and gentleman stood to-gether beside a rippling brook on the country es-tate of Mr. Kingston, and the latter's face showed traces of tears. The man was worried, but finally tate of Mr. Knigston, and the inter's face should traces of tears. The man was worried, but finally he said gently:

"My dearest, I will not bother. If his terrible death has killed your love, I dare not complain, although it breaks me all up."

The lady turned, her lovely eyes shining through her tears, the sun catching the gold of her hair:

"I have loved you so long that I could not stop," she said quite simply, holding out her hands, "I just had to remember, you know,"

Yes the noble soul did know, and loved her all the better for her tenderness for the memory, who according to our American standards had treated her so dastardly, and yet who was so fascinating and pure-minded a man according to his lights.

Suddenly the man asked:

"Have you realized that when you marry me, you cease to be a Princess?" but she crept into his arms, did he know by her whisper how much she did love him?

"I would rather be princess of your heart than to love him?

"I would rather be princess of your heart than to wear all the titles the world can bestow." THE END.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

Miscellaneous Requests

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 11.)

some seed or some berries called poke berries. I will return the favor if possible.
MISS CARRIE K. NIELSON. Box 43, Minden, R. F. D., 1, Neb.

D., 1, Neb.

Mrs. D. W. Kirby, Whelen Springs, R. F. D., 1, Ark., requests directions for making apple marmalade.

Will some one please send me cotton on the stem, rice on the stem, China berries, coffee beans and a large weed bulb or weed with two horns and I will return all favors in the way you like if possible. I will also send reading matter to anyone sending postage.

Mrs. F. G. Pease, Dolores, Colorado.

Mrs. John A. Perry, Box 129, Williamstown, Vt. Pieces of silk, satin or velvet. Mrs. Eva Grove, Delina, Okla. Pieces of any kind for patchwork.

Miss Tina Ellison, Lincoln, Ark. Pieces of any kind for patchwork, also directions and patterns for painting pillow shams.

Sarah L. Ellison, Lincoln, Ark. Calico pieces, books and papers.

Mrs. Henry Scheel, Stuttgart, Ark. Pieces of silk, satin, velvet, or worsted goods. Mrs. John DeGraff, 112 14th Ave., Newark, N. J. Pieces of silk, or satin three by four inches, with name and address of sender worked in silk.

miss Leona V. Callen, Beckwith, Cal. Pieces of silk, satin, or velvet.

Mrs. S. L. Bond, Bremen, R. F. D., 1, Ga. Quilt blocks, eight inches square, worked with name and address of sender in red cotton.

Mrs. Leslie H. Combs, Houlton, Oregon. Patterns for cross-stitching. Miss Ruth Ritter, Box 62, Cameron, R. F. D., 5, Mo. Blocks of calico, eight inches square.

Mrs. Nancy M. Souther, Box 109, Columbus, Ward Co., N. D. Pieces of calico.

Co., N. D. Pieces of cairco.

Mrs M. H. Guntle, Colfax, Ind. Pieces of silk, velvet and calico.

Mrs. Geo. W. Wilson, Rockford, Iowa. Different patterns for quilt and cross-stitch designs.

Miss Myrtle Tanner, Box 25, R. F. D., 3, Gladys, Va. Blocks, twelve by twelve inches like the Wilimana Star which appeared in June, '06, of blue and white cotton goods. Mrs. Lizzie Rippetal, Hollis, Okla. Calico pieces six by eight inches. Letters also appreciated.

Comforting Hints from the Sisters

To REMOVE INK STAINS. On paper or cloth, apply with a small camel's-hair brush, a solution of oxalic acid, in the proportion of one ounce to one half pint of water; the ink stains will immediately disappear. This will also remove iron rust spots on clothing.

on clothing.

To MEND CHINA. Takea very thick solution of gum arabic and stir into it plaster of Paris until the mixture is of the proper consistency; apply it with a brush to the fractured edges of the china ware, and stick them together, and if possible wrap a string tightly around the article, thus binding the parts firmly together, and do not disturb until thoroughly united, which will require several days

To remove finger-marks. On a highly polished piano, wipe with a cloth wet in pure cold water. It does not injure in the slightest if wiped dry, and restores the new look at once.

To revive withered flowers. Plunge the stems in boiling water, and by the time the water is cold, the flowers will revive; the ends of the stems should then be cut off, and the flowers should be put to stand in cold water, and they will keep fresh for several days.

To restore a cane chair bottom. Turn the chair, bottom upward, and with hot water and a sponge wash the cane work well, so that it is well soaked; should it be dirty use soap; let it dry in the open air, and it will be as tight and firm as new, provided none of the canes are broken.

To REMOVE BRUISES FROM FURNITURE. Wet the bruised spots with warm water, soak a piece of brown paper of several thicknesses in warm water, and lay over the place, then apply a warm flatiron until the moisture is gone. Repeat if necessary, and the bruises will disappear.

To CLEAN OSTRICH FEATHERS. White or light-tinted ones can be laid on a plate and scrubbed gently with a tooth-brush, in warm soapsuds, then well shaken out and well dried either by the sun or a hot stove. At first the feather will have a most discouraging appearance, and one is apt to think it nearly spoiled. But after it is perfectly dry it should be carefully curled with a penknife or scissors' blade, and it will recover all its former plumy softness.

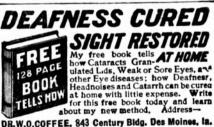

TO MAKE SHOE POLISH. Mix the white of an egg with soot, and then polish with a brush; this is a good polish and will not rub off.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 15.)

Darken Your Gray Hair

busy's OZARK HERBS restore gray, streaked or faded hair to its natural color, beauty and softness. Prevents the hair from falling out, promotes its growth, cures and prevents dandruff, and gives the hair a soft, glossy and healthy appearance. IT WILL NOT STAIN THE SCALP, is not sticky or dirty, contains no sugarof lead, nitrate silver, copperas, or poisons of any kind, but is composed of roots, herbs, barks and flowers. PACKAGE MAKES ONE PINT. It will produce the most low urant tresses from dry, coarse and wirp produce the most luxurian, treases from dry, co OZARK HERB CO., Block 3, St. Louis, Mo.

des chain Ledles or dents style. ALTON WATCH CO. Dept. 90 Chic

BY KATE V. SAINT MAUR.

Copyright, 1906 by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Inc.

Winter Feeding

IGHT empty barrels from your grocery man cost ten cents each. Square lids, to cover the tops, are easily made. A coat of tar on the outside makes them so slippery that rats and mice can't run up them. Anyway, rodents dislike tar so much they won't eat through it; therefore the tarred barrels make safe, inexpensive bins to store the different grains in. With a white distinguishing number, they look quite tidy and business-like, even if they have to be kept in the summer kitchen. Wherever they stand, put bricks, or blocks of wood under them, so that the air can circulate between the bottom of the tarred barrel and the floor; that prevents that the air can circulate between the bottom of the tarred barrel and the floor; that prevents damp causing the contents to mildew.

All being ready, buy bags of ground feed (oats and corn,) white middlings, bran, linseed meal, animal meal, whole corn, wheat, oats, millet seed, and a bale of clover hay.

Start operations by putting, in a dry dishpan, two quarts each of ground feed and bran, and a quart of animal meal. Mix thoroughly with your hands, and empty into barrel No. I. Repeat that till the materials are all used up. This is to form the foundation of mash No. 1. Start the next by placing two quarts of mid-

This is to form the foundation of mash No. 1. Start the next by placing two quarts of middlings and a quart of linseed meal in your dishpan. Mix thoroughly, and put it in barrel No. 2, and go on till full. This is mash No. 2. Now you need a saucepan with a close-fitting lid, that will hold from five to ten quarts, according to the number of hens you have.

To prepare mash No. 1: Take from barrel No. 1, one quart of the mixture for every ten birds. Put it in a saucepan, and just moisten with boiling water, really boiling. Cover, and stand behind the stove until the morning.

For mash No. 2: One quart of clover hay, cut into half-inch lengths. Place in the saucepan, and pour over a quart of boiling water. Cover, and stand to steam for two hours. Mix a pint of barrel No. 2, and again let it stand in a pint of barrel No. 2, and again let it stand in a warm place till morning. All mashes must be moist, never wet; fed just marm, never hot.

warm, never hot.

Long, V-shaped troughs, are best to feed mashes in. They are easily made by taking two pieces of planed pine, three feet long, and one four inches wide, the other three and a half. Nail them together lengthwise. Next take two pieces, a foot long and five inches wide, and nail on to each end to close up the trough, and make it stand firm. This plan enables each hen to get her share of feed, and prevents the birds from trampling dirt into the mash, as they will if flat dishes are used.

Bill of Fare

Monday, Wednesday, and Friday.—Morning, mash No. 1, and half a pint of millet seeds scattered in the leaves, straw, or whatever is on the floor as scratching materials. Night, one pint of whole corn, one pint of oats.

Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.—Mornings, mash No. 2. Noon, cut green food, and half a pint of kaffir corn to scratch for. Night, one pint of wheat, one pint of corn.

Sunday.—Morning, mash No. 1, and half a pint of barley. Noon, cabbage cut in half, or turnip. Night, corn and oats.

The noon meal may be omitted sometimes on Sunday. On Monday morning, wheat, and cracked corn or barley, may be used instead of mash, so as to save mixing on Sunday night. Plenty of sharp grit must invariably be accessible to the birds, and fresh water night and morning.

Hens. like all other stock, demand, regular morning.

Hens, like all other stock, demand regular hours. In fact, punctuality in all matters concerning birds or animals saves time, for they are always ready and waiting once they get used to the hours.

In feeding hens, cultivate the habit of noticing them. See that all have a fair share. As

In feeding hens, cultivate the habit of noticing them. See that all have a fair share. As with human beings, there are in every flock two or three greedy, selfish creatures, who will push timid ones to the wall unless watched.

The question is often asked, How much food per hen? This can only be answered approximately, for about every breed differs, and almost every hen has individuality. The best thing a beginner can do is to put the mash into the trough, see how much they will eat in ten or fifteen minutes, and thereafter give about half that quantity; for their crops should not be filled in the morning, so that they will be busy all day scratching and hunting food. At night a good feed is all right; it has to last until breakfast, and keep them warm and comfortable. All potatoes and apple peelings can be boiled up and mixed with bran for a change. It saves feed, as will any other garden produce, and if only a few fowls are kept, table scraps are excellent.

Roup is an infectious disease, and can be brought into your yard by some strange bird. Therefore, whenever you make a fresh purchase, keep the newcomer, or newcomers, in separate places, as far removed from your regular runs as possible, until you are sure. Adopt a chicken quarantine in fact.

Usually, however, you can find the cause of a roup outbreak right on your own farm. A

Usually, however, you can find the cause of a roup outbreak right on your own farm. A neglected cold is nearly always the start. The simple cold develops into the deadly roup, in no time at all. It at once becomes contagious if passed along, spreading like scandal, right through the flock. You can't watch your birds too closely, especially at morning feed. Eager eating indicates sound health. If at night a bird looks dumpy and sneezes, take it out of the run and place in a dry coop, where it will the run and place in a dry coop, where it will get plenty of sun.

What is very puzzling is that the symptoms of common cold and roup are at first identical—watery eyes, sloughing at the nostrils, sometimes diarrhœa. At first a thin, slight discharge, then abundant, finally thick, drying on the surface. If it is roup, the odor is dreadful. The victim's strength rapidly fades. If the head swells, the attack is at its worst, perhaps; probably incurable. Examine the throat. You will find small, irregular patches of gray or yellow at the back. These patches increase rapidly, finally running together, thus forming a tough membrane, almost closing the throat. If you try to remove it, blood oozes. If there are no spots, no bad odor, and the membrane comes away easily, the trouble is only catarrh, but happily not contagious.

Bronchitis, canker, pneumonia and influenza comes away easily, the trouble is only catarrh, but happily not contagious.

Bronchitis, canker, pneumonia and influenza are all more or less alike in symptoms, and are constantly mistaken for roup. They are kindred diseases anyway; all spring from cold. My advice is, don't wait to diagnose the case. At once start to destroy the embryo germs, without waiting to determine the particular family they belong too.

Having quarantined the suspected bird, start treatment. If there is any discharge anywhere, thoroughly scrub with some antiseptic solution night and morning. Dr. Woods recommends hydrogen dioxide with fifteen drops of tincture of phytolacca root in each pint of drinking water. Food to be light and nourishing. For all forms of colds he gives: Tincture of aconite, ten drops; byronia, ten drops; tincture of spongia, ten drops; alcohol enough to make one fluid ounce. One spoonful of this to be added to every quart of drinking water.

My own personal supply of drugs for self, family, poultry, pets and livestock consists of permanganate of potassium. It comes in little flaky, deep-lake colored crystals, and cost next to nothing. Dissolve a thimbleful of these in a quart' of water, and you have an A I disenfectant. A dessert-spoonful of that mixture, diluted with half a pint of water, becomes an antiseptic solution that meets every requirement for internal or external use. Fifty cents' worth will last a year, even if generously used, as a purifier in and out of the house. It has also the added advantage of being easily sent through the mail without fear of breakage. If kept in a tin with a close-fitting lid, or a wide mouthed bottle severely corked, it will last inkept in a tin with a close-fitting lid, or a wide mouthed bottle severely corked, it will last indefinitely.

When we have a bird with a cold, it goes into when we have a bird with a cold, it goes into a coop with plenty of straw on the bottom, and it is kept all the time in the sun. At night a curtain of bags insures warmth. Mouth, eyes and nostrils are swabbed with water, to which the permanganate mixture has been added; half a teaspoonful goes down the sick bird's half a teaspoonful goes down the sick Diru's throat.

Food consists of stale bread moistened with milk, in which onions have been boiled. If the diarrhœa is bad, a thimbleful of poppyseed is added, or water in which mullein has been boiled is given as a drink. A change of food is arrived at by boiling rice, mixing it with chopped parsley and green sprouts of onions, chopped fine, and charcoal mixed in, once a day. If we have milky puddings for dinner, some of it goes to the patient—in short, any of the nourishing food you would give a child, will serve.

This "homey" doctoring has always answered with my poultry; it's much easier than doctor-ing with medicine, often not on hand and, on a farm, not easy to get.

Correspondence

E. B.—Why must I have two brooders? Why do you advise outdoor ones?

A.—If you have an incubator hatching eggs, the second lot would be twenty-three or four days after the first. Unless you had two brooders, there would be no mother for the second lot. Outdoor brooders were advised, because they can be set outside in the coldest weather. Indoor ones, as the name implies, must be kept in the house.

C. F.—What will prevent chickens from pulling

C. F.-What will prevent chickens from pulling must be kept in the house.

C. F.—What will prevent chickens from pulling out the feathers?

A.—It is a bad habit to break them of when once acquired. If you can locate the hens who do it, remove them from the flock before the habit becomes general. Feed more animal meal. Hang up a piece of salt pork where they can get it.

A. H.—First I will describe my chickens, then ask a few questions about them. Their combs are pale, and they do not seem to digest their food. Their crops seem to stay full for twenty-four hours, and their droppings are of a greenish-yellow color. I don't get any eggs. I feed corn, oats, and ground oats, making a porridge of the latter, and put in red pepper. They also have about four quarts of warm, skim milk. House is warm. They are on a free range. I warm the feed. The last four nights I lost fourteen fowls. They eat all right at night, and are dead in the morning.

A.—Your birds are in a very bad condition. Indigestion, caused in all probability by the red pepper, and too many oats with the hulls on. Warm food and warm milk are both dangerous commodities. For every ten hens, steam one pint of chopped clover hay over night, then mix through it half a pint of ground feed (oats and corn mixed). At noon feed some meat scraps or green bone; at night, as long as the weather is cold, whole corn. Before commencing this change of diet, starve for twenty-four hours. See that the birds have a good supply of sharp grit. In their water there must be a table-spoonful of rice boiled for every quart.

M. V. H.—What ails my poultry? Have lost several young chickens and turkeys from a disease be filled in the morning, so that they will be busy all day scratching and hunting food. At night a good feed is all right; it has to last until breakfast, and keep them warm and comfortable. All potatoes and apple peelings can be boiled up and mixed with bran for a change. It saves feed, as will any other garden produce, and if only a few fowls are kept, table scraps are excellent.

This month and next is the time to gather up all the leaves you can find, from the woods; also the nuts, for smashed up, they make a good noon feed now and then, besides amusing the birds for hours.

Skim milk is good, either to scald and mix mash with, or given as drink.

If you are where it is impossible to get meat scraps or green bone, buy beef scraps by the bag, and add to No. 1 mixture—one quart to each four quarts of grain.

Winter Troubles

Roup is an infectious disease, and can be brought into your yard by some strange bird.

Winter Troubles

Roup is an infectious disease, and can be brought into your yard by some strange bird.

At the morning, so that they will be stoned and this to last until the at late and they say they will be a table-spoonful of rice boiled for every quart.

M. V. H.—What alls my poultry? Have lost several young chickens and turkeys from a disease that affects the eyes. The eye gets pink, swells, and they good proop around for a few days, then disease that affects the eyes. The eye gets pink, swells, and they good paround for a few days, then disease that affects the eyes. The eye gets pink, swells, and they good paround for a few days, then disease that the eye three or tages covering the eye. This usually arises from cold, or rather, draught. It can be cured by removing the bird to a small coup, well sheltered, and bathing the eye three or four times a day in a wash made by dissolving sufficient permanganate of potassium in water to turn it a rose-pink, or, say the fourth at a five the product of a thimbleful in half a pint of water. Unfortunately, the fact that you row stokes me the him the approa

V.C.D.—Which do you think best for market eggs. Leghorns or Brahmas? Or can you tell me any better than these?

A.—Leghorns need very good housing to get winter eggs. Brahmas fatten almost too easily. White Wyandottes come between the two and are, I think, better than either. The Rhode Island Reds are also good.

YOUR CREDIT IS GOOD No Matter Where

Carpets, Rugs, Stoves, Furniture, Sewing Machines, Etc. ON EASY TERMS OF CREDIT

FREE Sets—everything in the way of home furnishings—will be sold to anybody anywhere on our liberal open charge account. We will credit you no matter where you live, permitting you to furnish your home on easy monthly payments for less than if you had to pay all cash elsewhere, and allowing you the

A $2,000,000 HOUSE FURNISHING ORGANIZATION A $2,000,000 HOUSE FURNISHING ORGANIZATION

The People's Outfitting Co., of Detroit, is at the head of a chain of ten great house furnishing stores, situated in the most thickly populated parts of the country, and by reason of the great outlet they create, are able to demand and obtain concessions and advantages, in the way of low cost prices, from the manufacturers, that no other concern is able to obtain, which enables them to absolutely undersell all competitors, and at the same time give you from 12 to 15 months in which to pay for your goods.

OUR DOUBLE BINDING GUARANTEE OF SATISFACTION goes with every purchase made from us. We ship every article ordered from us with the distinct agreement that if it does not prove entirely satisfactory, or if it is not the greatest value to be had for the price, your money will be refunded, including freight charges both ways.

money will be refunded, including freight charges both ways.

TOW House Furnishing Cetalogues FREE

Send us your name and address on a postal card and we will mail you absolutely free of charge: (1) Catalogue A, a beautifully illustrated book of Furniture, Carpets, Rugs, etc., and (2) Catalogue B, including the best in our line of Steel Ranges, Base Burners and Heasters. 75c. with Order, 50c. per Month

To give you an idea of the great bargains to be found in the pages of our catalogues, as well as to demonstrate the great conveniences of our Easy Equitable.

PEOPLE'S OUTFITTING CO. Credit System, we offer this $10 solid oak Morris chair for $5.35, on terms of 23-29 Michigan Ave., Detroit. 75c. cash with order, and 50c. per month. Your money back if not satisfied.

and one cup of corn meal, one tablespoonful of bone meal, and meat meal, and a pinch of salt. If yarded, add vegetables. Three times a week use ground oats instead of corn.

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 9.)

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 9.)

the greatest society of young people on earth.

Never in the world's history was so much given for so little. Never could twenty cents be invested to such advantage, and bring such splendid returns. Don't hesitate, join us at once and induce your friends to do likewise.

All those League members, who desire a list of the cousins residing in their several states, can secure the same by sending a stamped addressed envelope and five cents in stamps to Nellie Rutherford, 1442 Pacific St., Brooklyn, N. Y., our grand secretary. Some of the lists contain hundreds of names, so our secretary must have some trifling remuneration as she is devoting the whole of her time to this work.

A cousin writes to ask why it was the July calendar, on the front page of Comfort for that month, had but 30 days. That's easy. The thirty-first of July asked us for a vacation, so we gave it a day off to go to Coney Island, New York. This is the first time in thousands of years July 31st has laid off, so I trust you will not object to us giving it a day off. It isn't right to work the calendar so hard; give it a rest up once in a while. Give a day a day off once in a while. Now hustle round and bring me in some new League members. I want 20-, 000 new cousins by April first next. The one who brings in the most new members will receive an autographed copy of Uncle Charlie's Poems as a token of appreciation. Now remember the shut-ins, and be good girls, and other things, until we meet to eat the Christmas turkey next month.

Uncle Charlie's Poems-Cloth bound 50c. Address Uncle Charlie, care COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

BIG MONEY FOR AGENTS
Only machine made with RIBBIC ATTACHMENT.
Write us at once for our catalogue and samples of work which explains everything.
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.
Address. GEARMART K. M. CO.. Sox 130, Clearfield, Pa.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES STEREOPTICONS You can make BIG MONEY Entertaining the Public. Nothing affords better opportunithe Public. Nothing affection

ONEY Entertaining ords better opportunities for men with small capital. We start you, furnishing complete outfits and explicit instructions at a surprisingly low cost. The Field te Large comprising the regular theater and lecture circuit, also local fields in Churchublic Gatherings. Our cial offer fully explains

OHICAGO PROJECTING CO., Dept. 166. Chicago, Illa.

Pay 825 for the rare half dollars of 1858 340 for the Stellas of 1879, $200 for 1880, $30 for the gold dollars of 1875 and $50 for the three dollars 1875. $25 cach for dimes 1894 m.m. S. $1 to $250 each for the Territorial coins 1849 to 1861, and from $1 to $300 for thou-sands of other rare coins, stamps and paper money. Send a stamp for an illustrated circular it may lead to wealth and independence. Address the most reliable coin dealer. 18 years at the present location. W. VON BERGEN, Scollay Sq., C, Boston, Mass.

BRASS
TRIMMED Iron Bed, Mattress and Spring, $4.95

The Champion Bargain of Them All. A handsome brass trimmed, enameled iron bed, fine cotton top mattress, and a pair of splendid woven steel wire springs for 1907, built strong and durable, with ornamental posts, shapely connecting rods of special cast malleable iron, elegantly trimmed with large brass caps and vases, ornamented with daintily designed solid cast iron chills, finely enameled in white, black, blue or green colors. Headplece is 54 in, high; footpiece, 41 in. Ohoice of four widths—64 in, 48 in, 42 in, or 36 in, Oonplete with side rails and castors. The mattress is our famous No. 1 rest-easy cotton top mattress, delightfully resilient, perfectly bound. Oomplete with side rails and castors. The mattress is our famous No. 1 rest-easy cotton top mattress, delightfully resilient, perfectly bound. Oomplete with side rails and castors, the mattress is our famous No. 1 rest-easy cotton top mattress, delightfully resilient, perfectly bound. Oomplete with side rails and castors, the mattress is our famous splendid ty tuffed, leather tufting buttons, perfectly bound. Oomplete with side rails and castors, the mattress and splendid spring. O. D. by freight charges, to be paid the agent after you find the outfit side later to the summary of all klads for the home, office or store at oorre. John M. Smyth Co. Madisen Street Chicago

the original French Pattern Hat WRITE FOR OUR BIG FREE CATALOG

d with closely shirred and daintily stitched rich velvet; crown is covered with fine Jap slik, beau-adorned in front with a lovely fancy ornament; vely applied and lending charming effect is the black slik entwining the crown, which extends if brim to back, terminating in an abundance of puffs. Completing this rich artistic French on are the 4 genuine black estrich tips, gracefully artistic and the control of the control o mash of black silk entwining the crown, which extends over left brim to back, terminating in an abundance of lovely puffs. Completing this rich artistic French creation are the 4 genuine black estrick tips, gracefully arranged at back. It's a stunning shape, is richly to made and is guaranteed to beat any milliner's $5.00 had no sale. The hat as described is very handsome appopular, but may be ordered in brown, navy, mean grey or red with trimmings and ostrick the match the hat. Send 25 Gents seemed to be presented in the same that the hat as described in service the proton No. X.102, service and the same service of th

John M. Smyth Go. 150. 151 West Chicago

This Elegant Long Loose $5.50 Back Black Cheviot Coat

give size wanted and we will send you this elegant extra quality black cheviot loose back coat C. O. D. by express subject to examination, the balance, $4.50 and express charges, to be paid the agent after you find the coat perfectly satisfactory, as swell and handsome a coat as you ever saw, and the equal of any coat sold in your home stores at from $10 to $12; otherwise it will be returned at our expense and we will promptly refund your $1.00. Order the coat or write Free Special Fashion to-day for our big Free Special Fashion to-day for made suits, jackets, capes and skirts, and immense assortments of dainty muslin underwent and children's and infants' garments. millinery, shoes, and youthe' and boys' clothing at startlingly low prices.

John M. Smyth Co. Madison Street Chicago

It Is Easy To EARN

NO MONEY REQUIRED IN ADVANCE. Just send name and address and we will mail six jars with large premium list and full instructions. Satisfaction guaranteed, If you cannot sell them you may return—no harm don. If you cannot sell them you may return—no harm don. If you cannot sell them you may return—no harm don. If you cannot sell them you may return—no harm don. If you cannot sell the young the sell that you will be sell to the young the sell that you will be sell to the young the sell that you will be sell to the young the young that you will be sell th

ACCORDION
A sweet-toned and deep-voiced which you can play beautiful music for home amusements, concerts and dances. Frame very large, ends 4½ by 9½ inches; lo keys, the content of the c

BEAUTIFUL FRUIT PICTURE

WOMAN'S WORLD, Picture Dept. 15, Chicago TWO GOLD RINGS FREE Seil 10 packs of Smith's Hair Grower and Dandruff Cure at 10c. each. The great Hair Rémedy. We trust, you; when sold send money and we'll send 2 rings or choice from our premium list. Agents wanted.

AN OKLAHOMA GIRL

Phil Sterling's Charge

By William Perry Brown

Copyright, 1906, by William Perry Brown.

CHAPTER XI.

THE RESCUE.

IEUTENANT STERLING made his final round about midnight to see that all was well. The fact that several thousand dollars were in the office safe, with the commandant and most of the troops absent, had not disturbed him much. He exercised great care in his duties, yet more through stress of habit than from a sense of insecurity. So quiet had affairs been of late that from midnight until sunrise no guard was usually set. Sterlling, however, had placed a cot in the office, and now that the commandant was away slept there himself with a revolver under his pillow, while without several watchful dogs were expected to announce any unusual arrival.

After finishing his round he sat by the fire for an hour and then lay down. For some reason he could not sleep. His mind was restless, perhaps because Miss Oberly, some three hours before, had at last consented to fix the day that should make him happy, always providing that the mighty man of war, the admiral, did not object. This, of course, was a pleasing probability, but as a contrast his mind reverted to Arizony. The interest she had from the first inspired now rendered him pityingly solicitous in view of her changed and troubled manner of late. So wakeful did he continue to be that he finally rose, dressed, lighted a lamp and sat down again by the fire.

Presently, to his surprise, there was a knock upon the office door. He opened it and admitted the commandant's wife and Miss Oberly.

"We really could not sleep," said the former lady, Mrs. Tolliver. "Hearing you up, we concluded to come down. I cannot imagine what ails us all. It must be something in the air."

"Do you think, Philip," said Stella, "that there is any danger attached to our present situation? Of course I don't know much about these things, but I should say we were rather unprotected just now." Sterling thought of the money in the safe at the head of his cot and was glad that the ladies did not yet know of its arrival. Of course there was no real danger, yet such knowledge might conjure up unreal perils i jocular, wholly reassuring way, and for some time they chatted together upon irrelevant matters as they sat about the fire until Mrs. Tolliver declared that it was high time for her to woo the drowsy god once more.

When the ladies got up, Miss Oberly moved to the window, whither Philip followed her at once. A gibbous moon had just risen, and over the plain without a thin haze seemed to be brooding. Under the scintillating heavens the gloomy, undulations of the prairie looked unutterably lonely and desolate. As they stood gazing out in silence the sharp bark of a coyote broke dissonantly upon their ears, followed by the depressing and prolonged wail peculiar to the species. Miss Oberly shivered, and Philip's arm stole protectingly about her waist.

"What a dreadfully dreary sound!" she said.
"At this hour it seems not unlike the moan of a distressed spirit lost upon these desolate wastes." Philip's reply was a reassuring pressure of his arms. Mrs. Tolliver was waiting patiently, with her hand upon the doorknob. She had not forgotten her own costed before the window so swiftly that Stella's unearthly simile appeared to have suddenly materialized. She turned and looked at Sterling. He, too, seemed puzzled. Then a clamor of the dogs arose without and other forms farther out upon the prairie appeared as if from nothing and seemed to scatter rapidly.

While Sterling stil hesitated, hardly knowing what to make of it all, an outer door was heard to open and close softly. Then the bolts were violently shot. Philip started toward the office door, when it was suddenly opened, and Arizony, pale, disheveied, staggered into the room, her dark hair glistening with dew and in her eyes a wild, unnatural light. She came at once to Sterling, not noticing the other two, and seized his hand.

"Thank God—I'm here!" she exclaimed in a suppressed, quivering tone. "But they're a comin, they're a-comin! You saved my mother once, leftenant, and I haven't forgot. Call your men pressed, quivering tone. "But they're acomin they're a-comin, meanwhile the disguised boomers consulted to the total to the third the telephone the title research the telephone the telephone

He pointed to the girl, who shrank back under his fierce gaze.

"I thought you was in bed at home, Arizony," said Chicksaw John reproachfully.
"How could I lay there," she whimpered, "and let you all perhaps do murder?"
"This is a little rough, men," said Burl mildly, yet with a lurking devil in his eye, "for a man's own sweetheart to go back on him and his friends in any such way. It's a little rough and"—his tone suddenly hardened—"there ain't but one way to get even."

with is is little rough, men," said Burl mildly, yet with a lurking devil in his eye, "for a man's own sweetheart to go back on him and his friends in any such way. It's a little rough and"—his tone suddenly hardened—"there ain't but one way to get even."

He suddenly leveled his pistol, but Chickasaw John struck up the weapon."

He suddenly leveled his pistol, but Chickasaw John struck up the weapon."

The suddenly leveled his pistol, but Chickasaw John struck up the weapon."

The suddenly leveled his pistol, but Chickasaw John struck up the combination, leftenant, or we'll blow the dependent of the safe. "Give up the combination, leftenant, or we'll blow the d—d thing to pieces afore your eyes, and that," with a wave of the hand and a sarcastic smile, "that might scare the ladden."

The boomers gather we hence the ladden. The boomers gather menacingly around the knot of half armed soldiers. In one corner crouched the two laddes of the garrison. Arizony, with her eyes fixed piteously upon her old lover, stood at Sterling's elbow. The latter, at this crisis, was surprised to see Miss Oberly suddenly rise, trembling in every limb and point to Burl Xu."

The name who led the gang that robbed the stage. I cannot be mistaken, though at first I was puzzled."

An oath from Yates and an agonizing cry from Arizony were heard. The last straw had been added to the poor girl's burden of despair.

Then came another uproar of of sepair.

Then came another uproar of of sepair.

Then came another uproar of of sepair.

Then came another uproar of of sepair and in the combine of the series of the series of horse more men in citizens' clothing ran into the office with pistols drawn. At their head was Parson Tiney, his gray hairs flying, his lean face sternly set and in his eyes an unusual fire. He alone was unarmed save for a thick walking stick, but he laid his hand boldly upon the naked shoulder of bearing fur her series of the content of the series of the content of the series of the content of the series of the content of th of the room.

"I'm tired—tired," she whispered. "Seems like l

of the room.

"I'm tired—tired," she whispered. "Seems nke i want to—rest."

Stella, both shocked and pitying, bent over the girl. Mrs. Tolliver began to hunt for restoratives.

"Arizony," said Miss Oberly, "I wish I could say something that would make you feel better."

"Burl was good to me," sobbed the girl. "Maybe he did do wrong things, but—but he loved me. Oh, miss! oh, miss! I'm so miserable."

The old minister laid his hand upon Arizony's head and looked into her eyes as if what he saw there was bringing to memory the features of his own dead wife.

"We'll go back," said he soothingly; "we'll go back to old Virginny. She was always a-wishing for you to come back."

A silence ensued that was broken only by fitful sobbings as the girl gradually grew calm. Philip,

A silence ensued that was broken only by fiful sobbings as the girl gradually grew calm. Philip, moving to Stella's side, furtively clasped her hand. Outside the prisoners were sullenly marching away to the distant guardhouse. In the east, over the melancholy prairie, hovered the promise of another day, for the dawn was breaking.

At last, Parson Tilney, as if repeating the echo of his own thought, bent his head again.

"We'll go back to Virginny," he said. "It was your mother's wish, Arizony."

The girl looked up.

"Whenever you wish, father," she murmured.
"I've got no call to stay on here now."

.

One day several months later, Parson Tilney r turned from the little country postoffice near! Virginia mountain home with a letter in his hand. Arizony was seated in the doorway. A fresh color was in her cheeks, and she seemed to be once more the saucy, jovial Arizony of old as she sprang up and flew down the path to meet the old man. The reception of a letter was an unusual event in their now quiet lives. "It's postmarked at Washington," said he, holding out the missive. "I hain't much of a hand at readin writin, but they 'lowed it was to you, Arizony."

readin writin, but they 'lowed it was to you, Arizony."
She felt of the envelope, then scanned it critically. "There's something hard and stiff inside," she remarked in a reflective way. "I wonder what it can be."
"I know, father!" she cried. "Can't you remember who lives at Washington?"
The parson sagely remarked that he had no doubt there "was a many a one" lived there if all he had heard was true.
"For instance, there's the president—howee! Ain't they beauties, child?"
This sudden change in the drift of Mr. Tilney's remark was brought about by the sight of two elaborately engraved cards and a photograph. Upon one was stated that Lieutenant and Mrs.

Sterling would be "at home" to their friends on Sterling would be "at home" to their friends on Tuesday afternoons.

"Well." said the parson, "I'd stay to home more'n one day in the week, even if I did live in Washington."

The other card bore the announcement of Miss Oberly's marriage. The picture was one of her and her husband. An accompanying note informed Arizony that the contents were sent with much love and also contained a kindly invitation to visit them as soon as possible.

Over this last request the parson grew reflective.

"It would be a grand thing for you, Arizony," said he. "But I'm afeared you might not want to come back."

"Bless your dear heart! I don't intend to go. Of course it's mighty kind for them grand folks to make out like they want to see me once more, but I know mother would rather I staid with you."

So she remained, and Mr. Tilney was happy. As a kind of atonement she hung the photograph over the fireplace and spent a laborious hour or two in inditing an ill-spelled yet appropriate reply, which the parson with considerable formality mailed the very next day.

THE END.

The financial independence in old age of the man who works for a salary depends on his savings and his investments of small sums; and the man who has self-control enough rigidly to put aside a part of his salary till its accumulation in a savings bank is large enough to warrant investment—such a man is likely to find safe investments; for his self-denial has taught him care. The man who cannot save is not so likely to be careful in his investments—if by chance he should have anything to invest. The first step, then, not only in getting money to invest but in getting the training that is necessary to invest wisely is to save something. It is not, as a rule, the depositors in savings banks that become the victimp of wild-cat schemes.

Open a Savings Account by Mail and Watch Your Savings Grow.

Our system appeals particularly to people who being employed during regular business hours find it inconvenient to visit a bank in person.

Savings deposited with this institution are as safe as government bonds and yield a larger income—a per cent. interest compounded twice a year.

Please send for Booklet "A"—free on request.

THE CITIZENS SAVINGS & TRUST COMPANY, Cleveland, State
Retablished 1868. Assets over Forty-Two Million Dollars.

ASTHMA CURED TO STAY CURED No return of choking spells or other

FREE TEST TREATMENT

our name address, and we will send you by express rour name annuals on a handsome WATCH AND CHAIN C. O. D. $3.75. Double hunting ones, heauffully sugressed stem wind and rouranted a correct timekeeper, with long Gold puted chair for Ladies or vest chair for Gents. If you consider it equal to any 325. GOLD part the express spend $2.75 and it is your. Our 20 year guarantee sent with each watch. Mention if you want Gents for Ladies is as Address in PARRER & CO., ASS, 23 Quincy St., CHICAGO.

PARKER'S
HAIR BALSAM
Cleanes and beautifies the h
Promotes a luxuriant growth.
Never Fails to Rither or the lart of the lart o

40 Complete Novels,

AQ Complete Novels,
Novelettes and Control
Stories for Only Control
Stories or popular publications and securing new customers for them, we will send by mail post-paid to any address, upon receipt of only six Cents in postage stamps, Forty Complete Novels, Novelettes and Stories by Popular Authors, as follows: A Terrible Repentance, by Charlotte M. Braeme; Woven on Fale's Loom, by Charles Garvice; In Daffodil Time, by Emergency of the Control of the Control of the Novel of the Mountage of the Mouse in the Wood, by Frances Hodgson Burnett; The House in the Wood, by Hrs. Jane G. Austin; Mappie Lee, by Anna Katharing Green; A True-Story, by Mark Twain; The Parson at Jackman's Gulch, by A. Conan Doyle; Headleigh Hall, by Mars, Emma D. E. N. Southworth; Huidah, by Marion Harland; The Last of the Mountjoys, by Mirs, May Agnes Fleening; Samantha in Washington, by Josiah Allen's Wife; Elsie Lattine, Washington, by Josiah Allen's Wife; Elsie Lattine, Diamonds, by Emma Garrison Jones Res Sold for Naught, by Mrs. Amenda M. Douglans, My Host at C., by Anna Katharine, Green; A Literary Nightmare, by Mark Marine, Green; A Literary Nightmare, by Mark Allen, Sold, Indiana Joe, by A. Conan Doyle; Under the Laureis, by Mirs Alex, McVeith Miller; Monica, by "The Duchess"; The Mummi's Curse, by Louisa M. Alcott; The Bar Lighthouse, by Mary E. Wilkins; Throgmorton Huggett's Discovery, by Julian Hawthorne; Codago, by John Habberton; Plotting for a Husband, by Helen Corwin Pierce; The Turning of the Worm, by Ella Higginson; The Criminal Witness, by Sylvanus Cobb, Jr.; A Terrible Retribution, by Emerson Bennett; The Drunkard's Wife, by Mary Kiele Ballas; The Heart of a Maid, by Etla W. Pierce; The Detective's Ghost, by Horatio Alger, Jr.; Lost in the Woods, by Edward S. Ellis; Across the Plains, by Virginia F. Townsend; Dorolhy's Dilemma, by Hayden Carruth; The Lottery Novelettes and Stories by mail post-paid upon receipt of Six Cents.

A Corner for Boys

By Uncle John

A Card Trick

Can you throw a card up and make it adhere to the ceiling? Wet the top of a common playing card with your tongue, or place a little water or mucilage on it. Have a coin on the top of your forefinger, and put the prepared card upon it, wet side up. Now toss it up, and your foreinger, and you toss it up, and you may be surprised to see that the card will stick. You can catch the coin as it returns, and if the room is a little bit dark your trick will be something of a mystery.

A Little Surgery

Sometimes one gets a sliver that goes straight into the flesh, and it is a hard and painful operation to take it out. Even one skilled in that kind of work cannot extract without making an ugly hole. Here is a simple method which I have tried successfully. Take the rubber off the pencil, and press the metal part against the flesh, encircling the sliver. The latter will protrude, and may be picked off with the fingers. Still another way is to press the hand down over a glass half full of warm water.

Stand Egg on End

You all remember the story of how Columbus stood an egg on end by striking it down hard on the table. Modern tricksters have a better way than that of doing it. Providing you have a fresh egg, and a level surface it is simply a question of balancing. There is absolutely no trick or deception about it. Any egg can be balanced on either end. After having practiced a little while I am now able to stand a dozen eggs in a row in a few minutes without marring them in the least. Don't fail to try it.

Stammering

Stammering is a very unfortunate and humiliating malady. If the organs of speech, such as the lips, throat, and tongue are all right it may be remedied by reading aloud with the teeth tightly closed. Practice this every chance you get, while walking, riding, working, and every possible spare moment. The exercise followed a few hours a day for several months will surely effect a cure. Another exercise followed a few nours a day for several months will surely effect a cure. Another effectual way to stop it is to tap with the finger at every syllable. Both those hints are reliable for they came to me from an eminent surgeon who has gued hundreds. who has cured hundreds

Using Wire

The uses to which scrap wire may be put are indeed manifold. In this department, nearly every month hereafter, we will give one or more examples. One general point applies to all cases, that is, before attempting to bend heavy wire it should be heated red, and allowed to cool slowly. Herewith is shown the method of putting a hoop on a tub. Fig. 1. shows the parts being heated, Fig. 2. shows the twist after it is made. Hold the wire in place with small staples.

Waterproofing

One of the best and cheapest preparations for waterproofing leather goods such as harness, skate straps and shoes is paraffine. Melt it over a slow fire, and when reduced to a liquid add a little rosin, and apply the mixture with a soft rag or sponge. It turns rather white when cool, and may not take a brilliant polish, but that fault is amply overbalanced by the good it does. A pound of it may be obtained anywhere for a few cents, and unlike other waterproof dressings it keeps the leather soft and pliable.

The Foolish Boy

One day two boys from Cambridge school
Were playing near a frozen pool.
The ice had but one night to freeze,
But Felix Fogg and Tommy Tease
Cared not a rap, both ventured out,
Though one was thin, the other stout.
At length Fat Felix stopped and said,
"I weigh too much to go ahead."
"Come on you coward." Tom Tease did cry,
"You're every bit as light as I."
Soon both the lads broke through the ice,
But Felix jumped out in a trice.
"Oh, save me," bellowed Tommy Tease,
"Quick, you can lift me out with ease."
"I can't," said Felix with a sigh,
"You said you weighed as much as I."

A Nail Box

Next to a tool chest the most important article in a boy's working kit is a box for different sizes of nails and screws. A packing case from the storekeeper will supply the material. First cut out the bot-

cut out the pottom piece eight by eighteen inches. Then the middle partition which also serves for a handle (extreme height sixteen inches). The crosspieces are three inches wide and two inches high. Tack them firmly to the center piece and bottom and then put on the sides. Study the drawings.

A New Solitaire

Spread the cards out face down, in four straight rows, thirteen in each. Call the rows, respectively, hearts, diamonds, clubs and spades, Begin by turning up one card (it makes no difference which). If it is the ace of hearts you place it first in the top row, removing the card which was in that position. Place the card you now have wherever it should be, removing the one whose place you fill. Keep on until the card you turn up has a vacant place to fill. When this happens you must shuffle and spread out again. It is a fascinating game and the oneokers enjoy it quite as much as the one player.

Peanut

Did you ever play peanut? It is the simplest and funniest game out. Two or more can play either as partners or individuals. Generally as in cards four sit at a table.

in cards four sit at a table. In the center is a bowl even full of peanuts. The first player is given a hat pin and jabs once with one hand only. If he fails to spear a nut the pin goes to the next player. If he does spear one or more he gets and so on until he misses.

another chance, and so on until he misses. There is no penalty for knocking one or more out of the bowl. Ten or fifteen is a game and the winners go to the next table as in progressive neglectors. sive pedro or euchre.

Making Ink

If you have a number of small indelible pencils do not throw them away. Take the lead out, soak it in tepid water till it dissolves and you will have very good ink. A better way is to dissolve the ground lead in a small quantity of alcohol and then add sufficient water. of alcohol and then add sufficient water.

A STOLEN PROPOSAL

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 8.)

she continued, her eyes filling with tears as she saw the grave expression on his face. "Have I done anything wrong? I am so sorry if I have."

as she saw the grave expression on his face. "Have I done anything wrong? I am so sorry if I have."

Her voice had in it the grieved tones of a little child, and her eyes were very bright, with the tears quivering on her long, silken lashes. Leaning back in his chair, with his hands clasped behind his head, a position he always assumed when puzzled and perplexed, the rector looked at her for a moment before he spoke. He could not define to himself the nature of the interest he took in Lucy Harcourt. He admired her greatly, and the self-denials and generous exertions she had made to be of use since Anna went away had touched a tender chord and made her seem ver! near to him. Habit with him was everything, and the past two weeks' isolation had shown him how necessary she had become to him. She did not satisfy his higher wants as Anna Ruthven had done. No one could ever do that, but she amused, and soothed, and rested him, and made his duties lighter by taking half of them upon herself. That she was more attached to him than he could wish, he greatly feared, for, since Captain Humphreys' visit, he had seen things differently from what he saw them before, and had unsparingly questioned himself as to how far he would be answerable for her future weal or woe.

"Guilty, verily, I am guilty, in leading her on, if I meant nothing by it," he had written against himself, pausing in his sermon to write it. Just then Lucy came in, appealing so prettily to him to know why he had neglected her so long. She was very beautiful this morning, and Arthur felt his heart beat more rapidly as he looked at her, and thought most any man who had never known Anna Ruthven would be glad to gather that bright creature in his own arms heart beat more rapidly as he looked at her, and thought most any man who had never known Anna Ruthven would be glad to gather that bright creature in his own arms and know that she was his own. One long, long sigh to the memory of all that he hoped for once—one bitter pang as he remembered Anna and that twilight hour in the church, and then he made a mad plunge. membered Anna and that twilight hour in the church, and then he made a mad plunge in the dark and said: "Lucy, do you know that people are be-ginning to talk about my seeing you so much?"

ginning to talk about my seeing you so much?"

"Well, let them talk. Who cares?" Lucy replied, with a good deal of asperity of manner for her, for that very morning the old housekeeper at Prospect Hill had ventured to remonstrate with her for "running after the parson." "Pray, where is the wrong? What harm can come of it?" and she tossed her head pettishly.

"None, perhaps," Arthur replied, "if one could keep his affections under control. But if either of us should learn to love the other very much, and the love was not reciprocated, harm would surely come of that. At least, that was the view that Captain Humphreys took of the matter when he was speaking to me about it."

There were red spots on Lucy's face, but her lips were very pale, and the buttons on her riding-dress rose and fell rapidly with the beating of her heart as she looked steadily at Arthur. Was he going to send her from him, send her back to the insipid life she had lived before she knew him? It was too terrible to believe, and the great tears rolled slowly down her cheeks. Then, as a flash of pride came to her aid, she dashed them away, and said thaughtily:

"And so, for fear that I shall fall in love

'And so, for fear that I shall fall in love "And so, for fear that I shall fall in love with you, and be ruined, perhaps, you are sacrificing both comfort and freedom, shutting yourself up here among your books and studies to the neglect of other duties? But it need be no longer. The necessity for it, if it existed once, certainly does not now. I will not be in your way. Forgive me that I have ever been."

Lucy's voice hearn to tromble as she Lucy's voice began to tremble as she athered up her riding-habit and turned to find her gauntlets. One of them had dropped upon the floor, between the table and the upon the noor, between the table and the rector, and as she stooped to reach it her curls almost swept the young man's lap. "Let me get it for you," he said, hastily pushing back his chair, and awkwardly entangling his foot in her dress, so that when she rose she stumbled backward, and would have fallen but for the arm that he are thether. have fallen but for the arm that he quickly passed around her.

Something in the touch of that quivering form completed the work of temptation, and he held it for an instant while she said to "Please let me go, sir!"

"No, Lucy, I can't let you go; I want you to stay with me."

Instantly the drooping head was uplifted, and Lucy's eyes looked into his with such a wistful, pleading, wondering look, that Arthur saw, or thought he saw, his duty plain, and gently touching his lips to the brow glistening so white within their reach. he continued:

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The continuation of this fascinating story will be told in the December number. If you are not a subscriber send 15 cents for thirteen months, and read this story to the end.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12.)

Tested Recipes from Comfort Sisters The writer's name or initials will appear at the end of one or more of the recipes.—Editor,

Delicious Carrot Pudding

One cup of grated carrots, one cup of grated potatoes, one cup of sugar, one cup of flour, one half cup of raisins and currants mixed, two teaspoonfuls of all kines of spices mixed, one teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of sait. Mix all together and steam for three hours. I grease a small pail and put the dough in it, set the pail in a kettle of boiling water, keep the water well up near the top of pail, perforate the lid of pail, so the steam may escape, cover kettle over, too, so all of the steam may be kept in as much as possible.

Mrs. B. L. Grifferts, Beaverton, Or.

Corn Rusks

Two cups corn meal, three cups boiling milk, two cups sugar, one cup of lard, one cup yeast. Pour the milk over the corn meal, then add the lard and sugar; when lukewarm add the yeast. In the morning add a teaspoonful of salt and soda size of a bean dissolved in a little water, and flour to knead; make out into little rolls and raise very light. Bake in a moderate oven; these are very nice.

Mrs. J. H. Stanert, Pingree, N. D.

Baked Hominy

Take a dish of cold hominy or grits and soften by pouring hot water over it. Then add one half cup of milk, one egg, black pepper, a pinch of salt, and just a little flour if the mixture is too thin. Pour in a greased pan or bowl and bake. This is a fine way to use hominy that is left over and is real good eaten with vegetables, meats or butter.

MRS. W. N. HERBING, Hobgood, N. C.

Good Molasses Cookies

One cupful of sugar, one cup lard, one egg, one cup New Orleans molasses, one half cup sour milk, one half cup sour cream, one tablespoonful of soda dissolved in the sour milk, one tablespoonful ground ginger, one teaspoonful ground cinnamon. Enough flour to roll. Be sure and have the dough soft. Have the cookies about one half inch thick when baked.

One cup sweet cream, enough pulverized sugar to make stiff enough to spread nicely, one teaspoonful of vanilla extract. Beat until smooth, then spread

Excellent Yeast

One quart mashed potatoes, one quart hot potato water; make a paste of three tablespoonfuls of flour with a little water, and stir this into boiling mixture. Now add three tablespoonfuls of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of salt and one pint of cold water. When sufficiently cooled add one previously dissolved yeast cake. Let rise and when light use as much of this yeast as you have water; one quart yeast and one quart water makes six small loaves of bread. I would like correspondents, and if these recipes are available will send others.

MRS. SYLVESTER L. TUPPER, BOX 36, Plymouth, R. F. D., 24, Wis.

Creamed Parsnips

Boil four good-sized parsnips until tender, remove the skins, when cool cut in slices lengthwise in eighths. Heat one and one half cups of milk to boiling point, mix two tablespoonfuls of flour to a smooth paste with one half cup of cold milk, add to the scalding milk and cook until it thickens, season with pepper and salt, add a tablespoonful of butter or more, pour over the parsnips and serve hot. These are excellent.

Cook celery in the same way excepting wash, scrape the celery and cut into half-inch pieces, boil in salted water until tender and serve with white sauce as above.

MRS. BERTHA EDWARDS, Englewood, Kans.

Marshmallow Cake

One cup of sugar, creamed with one half cup of butter, add one half cup of sweet milk, sift two and one half cups of flour six times with two teaspoonfuls of cream of tarter in it, two eggs, whites and yolks beaten separately, one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in the milk, half a teaspoonful of vanilla, a little salt. Bake in three jelly cake tins, when cold spread with the paste.

Marshmallow Paste

Put three quarters of a cup of sugar, and one quarter of a cup of sweet milk into a double boiler, heat slowly to boiling point without stirring, boil six minutes. Break a quarter of a pound of marshmallows in pieces and melt in another pan, add two tablespoonfuls of hot water, and cook until mixture is smooth; then add hot syrup gradually, stirring constantly, beat after removing from fire until cool enough to spread, then add vanilla. It can be used both as filling and frosting. It is fine on a chocolate pie. Marshmallows can be bought at most any confectioners.

Sauce for Onione

Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add one table-spoonful of flour; when smooth add boiling milk or cream until thick and creamy; remove from fire, add one teaspoonful of salt, a little pepper, and pour over the onions that have been boiled in salted water.

Cranberry Jelly

Boil and mash the berries, strain, boil the juice down one half, then measure, and for each cup of the juice add one cup of sugar; boil twenty minutes and pour into small glasses, or any pretty moulds. The oysters can be served raw, for the first course, with oyster crackers; stewed or made into soup, the first is better, for a hearty dinner to follow.

Mock Cherry Pie

Correspondents Wanted

Correspondents Wanted

William Anderson, 198 8th St., Detroit, Mich. Thos. H. Galivau, Buckingham, Wash. Mrs. Lena Jacobs, Box 132, Olive Hill, Carter Co., Ky. Miss C. H. Hickman, Allegany Springs, Va. Samuel J. Eigsti, Panola, Ill., young people. Lily Koone, Cleveland, R. P. D., 1, Ark. M. T. Hollowell, Edge, Ark. Herbert Fussell, Ticknor, Ga., young people. Benjamin H. Rogers, Legal, Ky., young people. Benjamin H. Rogers, Legal, Ky., young people. Miss Orna Wardage, Crom City, R. F. D., 2, Ohio. Mrs. A. O. Rush, Box 94, Grantsburg, R. F. D., 3, Wis. Miss Frances Miller, Verdon, R. F. D., 1, Neb., young people. Robert P. Laudevgue, 1627, Bailey St., Phila, Pa. Miss S. V. Johnson, Box 99, Tyler, R. F. D., 1, Texas. Ben and Paul Perego, Newton, Texas. I. M. Koone, Cleveland, R. F. D., 1, Ark. Clarence Whidden, Sykes Hotel, Room 32, Ticknor, Ga. Miss Minnie Harfsh, McClure, Ohio. Robert Wilson, Newton, Texas. Harry Shronce, Box 70, Oakton, Ky. Miss Margaret Parrent, Fairfield, R. F. D., 2, Tex. Mrs. R. J. Boisacg, 708 Bosworth Ave., Chicago, Ill. Edna M. Ward, Millican, Texas, young people.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 23.)

Cure for Liquor and Tobacco. The Kansas Anti-Liquor and 100acco.

The Kansas Anti-Liquor Society is mailing free a recipe for the cure of the liquor habit. It can be given secretly in food. Also one for the tobacco habit that can be given secretly. The only request they make is that you do not sell recipes, but give copies to friends. Add. with stamp, Kansas Anti-Liquor Soc'y, 78 Gray Bldg, Kansas City, Mo.

Music Books FREE

50_c Book Each contains ten complete purces, full sheet music size, 0 by 12 inches, with cover as shown here; 38 pages; printed from brand new plates on best heavy paper.

When you receive your book if you are not satisfied that it is worth fully 50 cents, return it to us and we will send you all the postage it has cost you both ways.

ECTION—Ten new and come.

IDEAL PIANO COLLECTION—Ten new and popular pieces, as follows: Dance of the Wild Flowers; Old Folks at Home rag times; The Smart Set Three Stept Treasure Waltzes; Waltz of the Fairies; Fratering Grand March; Happy Com From Dixie; Under the Double Eagle March; Cotton Field Dance; Admiration March.

Double Fasile March; Cotton Field Dance; Admiration March

1DEAL 80NG COLLECTION—Ten songs with music complete. The Secret of the Violet; Old Black Too; I wonder If You Kniw My Heart is Breaking; Downley If You Kniw My Heart is Breaking; Downley If You Should Wander From My Ride; Saig the Song; If You Should Wander From My Ride; Saig the Song You Sing in the Days of Old Down By the Old Garden Gate; On the Old Virginia Shore.

Bear in mind that what we want is names of musical people who play or sing. We want to send them our dependence of the latest as well as the standard, popular and classic instrumental and vocal music. We sell full size, best paper, somplete sheet music, with three color ritle pages for Bocents a copy. This year we want to send our catalog sto every musical person in this country; that's why we will send you this 50 cent book for only the cost of postessed and malling, if you will send us the names and addresses of ten musical people.

Write names plainly and be sure to state whether you want the vocal or instrumental book. Enclose the ten musical people.

MC KINLEY MUSIC CO...

Wanted the our Forred Steel Come.

Wanted for our Porged Steel ComManadom Hatchet, Wire 'testion, Manadom Hatchet,
Manadom Hatche

Our "Course by Mail" will fit you in a short to reither Railway Fireman or Brakeman so can earn $55 to $125 a month. Hundreds of altions now open. Original and only school takind officered by railway officials. W ts kind officered by railway officials or catalog today and begin study at The Wenthe Ry. Corr. School, Box 617, Fre

WANTED Reliable Men in every locality throughout United States and Canada to advertice our genoes, bridges, and all conspicuous places; distributing small advertising matter. Commission or salary sea a month and expenses $3.50 a day. Steady employment to good reliable men. We lay out your work for you. No experience needed, Write for full particulars. SALUS MEDICINAL CO., London, Ontario, Canada.

VETERINARY COURSE AT HOME.

$1200 year and upwards can be made taking our Veterinary English; Diploma granted, positions obtained for successful students; cost within reach of all; satisfaction guaranteed; particulars free. ONIABIO VETERINABY CORRESPOND DENCE SCHOOL, Dopt. 10, London, Canada.

$65 PER MONTH Straight Salary and expenses, to mea with rig, to introduce our Poultry Remedies. Bank ref's given. Don't ans'r unless you mean business. Euroka Poultry Food Mig. Co., Dopt. 40, East St. Louis, IR. Washer Free.

Best ever made. Makee washday a delight. We want agents. Send want agents. New York.

minic goods of all kinds, and minic goods of all kinds, and give free yet weekly much of the first of the fir

ST. ELMO

By Mrs. Augusta J. Evans Wilson

Copyright, 1866, by G. W. Carlton.

Copyright, 1894, by Mrs. Augustus J. Evans Wilson.
Copyright, 1896, by G. W. Dillingham Co.
[All Rights Reserved.]

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Edna Earl sings "He stood and measured the carth and the overlasting mountains were scatered, the perspention of the property of the property and a strange, strange invincible love for you sprang from the bitter ashes of a dead selection seemed at my idiocy; I cursed my mad folly, and tried to believe you as unprincipled as I had found others; but the singular fascination strengthened day by day. Finally I determined to tempt you, hoping that your duplicity and deceit would wake men from the second dream into which was not the second dream into which the second dream into which was not seen in the second dream into which the second dream into which the second dream into which is second dream into which was not seen in the second dream into which is se

THE PARTING WAS PAINFUL. MRS. MURRAY FOLLOWED THE ORPHAN TO THE FRONT DOOR.

the belier. She deaded shears when a secientally she believes are each stere than Govelously as the clear of the power of the stays of Harry part and he was seen at particular to the stays of Harry part and he was seen at the particular to the stays of Harry part and he was seen at the particular to the stays of Harry part and he was seen at the particular to the stays of Harry particular to the stays of the stays of Harry particular to the stays of Harry particular to the stays of the stays in the stay of the stays of th tions? Oh, my darling—"

He paused, and leaned over her, putting his hand on her head, but she shook off his touch and exclaimed:
"But Gertrude! Gertrude!"

"Be patient, and you shall know all; for as God reigns above us, there is no recess of my heart into which you shall not look. It is, perhaps, needless to tell you that Estelle came here to marry me for my fortune. It is not agreeable to say such things of one's own cousin, but to-day I deal only in truths and facts sustain me. She professes to love me! has absolutely avowed it more than one in days gone by. Whether she really loves anything but wealth and luxury. I have never troubled myself to find out; but my mother fancies that if Estelle were my wife, I might be less cynical. Once or twice I tried to be affectionate toward her, solely to see what effect it would have upon you; but I discovered that you could not easily be deceived in that direction—the mask was too transparent, and beside, the game disgusted me. I have no respect for Estelle, but I have a shadowy traditional reverence for the blood in her veins which forbids my fifrting with her as she deserves. The very devil himself brought. Agnes here. She had married a rich old banker only a few months after Murray's death, and lived in ease and splendor until a short time since, when her husband failed and died, leaving her Without a cent. She knew how utterly she had blasted my life, and imagined that I had never married because I still loved her! With unparalleled effrontery she came here, and trusting to her wonderfully preserved beauty, threw herself and her daughter in my way. When I heard she was at the parsonage, all the old burning hate leaped up strong as ever. I fancied that she was the real cause of your dislike to me, and that night, when the game of billiards ended, I went to the parsonage for the first time since Murray's under the apple-tree on the night that branded me and drove me forth to wander like valutures as I stood in the shadow of the trees, where my jod) and I had chatted trude is ner aim.

ter!"

"Oh! no, no! visit not her mother's sins on her innocent head! Gertrude is true and affectionate, and she loves you dearly."

Edna spoke with a great effort, and the strange tones of her own voice frightened her.

"On! no, no! visk not her mother's sins on her innocent head! Gertrude is true and affectionate, and she loves you dearly." Edna spoke with a great effort, and the strange tones of her own voice frightened her.

"Loves me? Ha, ha! just about as tenderly as her mother did before her! That they do both 'dearly love'—my purse, I grant you. Hear me out. Agnes threw the girl constantly and adroitly in my way; the demon here in my heart prompted revenge, and, above all. I resolved to find out whether you were indeed as utterly indifferent to me as you seemed. I know that jealousy will make a woman betray her affection sooner than any other cause, and I deliberately set myself to work to make you believe that I loved that pretty cheat over yonder at the parsonage—that frolicsome wax-doll, who would rather play with a kitten than talk to Cicero; who intercepts me almost daily, to favor me with manifestations of devotion, and shows me continually that I have only to put out my hand and take her to rule over my house, and trample my heart under her pretty feet! When you gave me that note of hers a week ago, and looked so calmly, so coolly in my face, I felt as if all hope were dying in my heart; for I could not believe that, if you had one atom of affection for me, you could be so generous, so unselfish toward one whom you considered your rival. That night I did not close my eyes, and had almost decided to revisit South America; but next morning my mother told me you were going to New York—that all entreaties had falleu to shake your resolution. Then once more a hope cheered me, and I believed that I understood why you love tenderly—to quit the home my mother offered you and struggle among strangers. Yesterday they told me you would leave on Monday, and I went out to seek you; but you were with Mr. Hammond, as usual, and instead of you I met—that curse of my life—Agnes! Face to face, at last, with my red-lipped Lamia! Oh! it was a scene that made jubilee down in Pandemonium! She plead for her child's happiness—ha, ha, ha

Copyright, 1904, by Shapiro, Remick & Co., 45 West 28th St., New York. Branches Detroit, Chicago, London.

International Convright Secured. All Rights Reserved.

Complete copy of this song may be obtained for 25c. or forty-eight page estalogue, extract of popular music, FREE of the WHITNEY WARNER PUB. Co., Botrott, Mich.

"Take care, do not rouse me. Be reasonable, little darling. You goubt my love? Well. I love you. You are so far above all ought not to wonder at your scepticism after all you have heard. But you can feel how my heart throbs against your cheek, and if you will look into my eyes, you will be convinced that I am fearfully in earnest, when I bey you to be my wife to-morrow—to-day—now if you will only let me send for a minable of the son of my best friend?"

"You asked Annie to be your wife, and—"
"Housh! hush! Look at me."
"Housh shands over her face head look at me."
"Housh hand look at me."
She tried to break away, and finding it impossible, pressed both hands over her face and look at me."
She tried to break away, and finding it impossible, pressed both hands over her face and look at me."

"Mou against his shoulder.

"He laughed, and whispered:
"My darling. I know what that means. You while and whispered:
"My darling. I know what that means. You while look the son of my best fiend?"

"All you dare not look up because you cannot trust in the eye and say. St. Elmo, I noble—so holy—to my eyes, that I reverence on the ever have loved—do not—and never can love will I love you. You are so far above all over me. You are to cruthful; your lips can obtain to your your conscience forbid on the worth which you will not conscient forbid in your pure. considers which you will not do they more of the which you will not conscient forbid in your pure. Consider your forbide, which you do not—and never can love will I love you. You are to cruthful; your is cen of the love you. You are to cruthful; your is cen of the plane of the plan

Abeve Shows the Cover Design of "St. Elmo."

The above illustration gives but a faint idea of the cover to the wonderful book, "St. Elmo." This book has heretofore sold for not less than $1.50 to $2.00 per volume, but to make it possible for any of COMFORT's subscribers to own this complete story without the outlay of even a penny, and by only doing a very slight service, we secured a trial thousand books, bound up in an artistic and serviceable manner that we decided to offer as Premiums free to club raisers who would secure only seven yearly subscribers to COMFORT at 15 cents each. Only from the fact that we paid so large a price for the rights to publish this great story exclusively in COMFORT could we now be able to offer it free in book form to the comparatively limited number of subscribers who care to now send in these small club list to secure the book without cost. We would like to have it go into every COMFORT subscriber's home, it is such a high moral tale, but only those among you who feel to take advantage of this extremely favorable opportunity now—at once—just as soon as you can get out and secure your club, can expect to get this 565-page great prize book, for they certainly cannot last long. Why, do you know what a simple little thing it means to secure only seven subscribers to a great big 32-page Monthly like COMFORT, at only 15 cents per year? Why, COMFORT is filled clean full of choice articles and stories, any one of which is worth more than the yearly price of the paper to you or any other subscriber; If you cannot get all new subscribers, get part renewals. All those now interested in reading "St. Elmo," and the other new and old continued stories and departments, will certainly desire to renew. If their subscription is not quite .un out, why, it will expire in a very few months, and we extend it for a full year from the time of its present run. To those who are not regular subscribers, you can easily set forth the good points in COMFORT, and make them see that it is greatly to their benefit to subscribe now while the low rate of 1

"ST. ELMO" IN BOOK FORM

So many have expressed a wish to pessess a copy of the famous story "ST. ELMO." in book form to preserve, or for the library, that we secured a trial thousand copies to give away as premiums, of an excellent 565-page, 37-chapter edition, printed on extra quality book paper from new, clear type, bound in cloth, with a very attractive halftone cover portrait of both St. Elmo and Edna, with embossed title. This is a suitable presentation or library edition worthy of any home. For a club of only 7 yearly subscribers to COMFORT at 15 cents each, we will send you a copy of this beautiful book at our expense. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

ST. ELMO

and during the hour spent here my unholy nature was touched and softened as no sermon ever touched it. Oh! you wield a power over me—over all my future, which ought to make you tremble! The first generous impulse that has stirred my callous, bitter soul since I was a boy. I owe to you. I went first to see poor Reed, in order to discover what took you so often to that cheerless place; and my interest in little Huldah arose from the fact that you loved the child. Oh, my darling! I know I have been sinful and cruel and blasphemous; but it is not too late for me to atone! It is not too late for me to osome good in the world; and if you will only love me, and trust me, and help me—"

His voice faltered, his tears fell upon her forehead, and stooping he kissed her lips softly, reverently, as if he realized the presence of something sacred.

"My precious Edna, no oath shall ever soil my lips again; the touch of yours has purified them. I have been mad—I think, for many, many years, and I loathe my past life; but remember how sorely I was tried, and be merciful when you judge me. With your dear little hand in mine to lead me, I will make amends for the ruin and suffering I have wrought, and my Edna—my own wife, shall save me!"

Before the orphan's mental vision rose the picture of Gertrude, the trembling coral mouth, the childish wistful eyes, the lovely head nestled down so often and so lovingly on her shoulder; and she saw, too, the bent figure and white locks of her beloved pastor, as he sat in his old age, in his childless, desolate home, facing the graves of his murdered children.

"Oh, Mr. Murray! You can not atone! You can not call your victims from their tombs." and during the hour spent here my unholy nature was touched and softened as no sermon the skull and cross bones!

Thousands of people, who have no idea that they are playing with the home, facing the graves of his murdered children.

"Oh. Mr. Murray! You can not atone! You can not call your victims from their tombs. You can not call your victims from their tombs. You can not sake to Mr. Hammond, and to my poor little confading Gertrude? I can my poor little confading Gertrude? I can not save to the property of the property of ishes, grieves me. I can neither respect nor trust you. Mr. Murray, have mercy upon yourself! Go yonder to Jesus. He only can save and purify you."

"Edna, you do not, you can not intend to leave me. Darling—"

He held out his arms and moved toward her, but she sprang past him, down the steps of the gallery, out of the church, and paused only at sight of the dark, dull spot on the white steps, where Annie Hammond had lain insensible.

An hour later, St. Elmo Murray raised his face from the mahogany railing where it had rested since Edna left him, and looked around the noble pile which his munificence had erected. A full moon eyed him pityingly through the stained glass, and the gleam of the marble pulpit was chill and ghostly; and in that weird light the Christ was threatening, wrathful, appalling.

As St. Elmo stood there alone, confronting the picture—confronting the past—memory, like the Witch of Endor, called up visions of the departed that were more terrible than the mantled form of Israel's prophet; and the proud, hopeless man bowed his haughty head, with a cry of angulsh that rose mournfully to the vaulted ceiling of the sanctuary: "It went up single, echoless, 'My God! I am forsaken!"

CHAPTER XXIII.

MR. HAMMOND PLEADS FOR ST. ELMO.

MR. HAMMOND PLEADS FOR ST. ELMO.

The weather was so inclement on the following day that no service was held in the church; but, notwithstanding the heavy rain, Edna went to the parsonage to bid adieu to her pastor and teacher. When she ascended the steps Mr. Hammond greeted his pupil with a degree of mournful tenderness very soothing to her sad heart.

Leading the way to his study, where Mrs. Powell sat with an open book on her lap, he said gently:

"Agnes, will you be so kind as to leave us for a while? This is the last interview I shall have with Edna for a long time, perhaps forever, and there are some things I wish to say to her alone. You will find a better light in the dining-room, where all is quiet."

As Mrs. Powell withdrew he locked the door, and for some seconds paced the floor; then, taking a seat beside his pupil, he said, eagerly:

"St. Elmo was at the church yesterday afternoon. Are you willing to tell me what passed between you?"

"Mr. Hammond, he told me his melancholy history. I know all now—know why he shrinks from meeting you, whom he has injured so cruelly; know all his guilt and your desolation."

The old man bowed his white head on his bosom, and there was a painful silence. When he spoke, his voice was scarcely audible.

"The punishment of Ell has fallen heavily upon me, and there have been hours when I thought that it was greater than I could bear—that it would utterly crush me; but the bitterness of the curse has passed away, and I can say truly of that 'meekest angel of God,' the Angel of Patience:

"He walks with thee, that angel kind, And gently whispers, Be resigned;"

'He walks with thee, that angel kind, And gently whispers, Be resigned; Bear up, bear on; the end shall tell, The dear Lord ordereth all things well!'

Bear up, bear on; the end shall tell,
The dear Lord ordereth all things well?
"It ried to train up my children in the fear and admonition of the Lord; but I must have failed signally in my duty, though I have never been able to discover in what respect
I was negligent. One of the sins of my life was my inordinate pride in my only boy—my gifted, gifted, handsome son. My love for Murray was almost idolatrous; and when my heart throbbed with proudest hopes and aspirations, my idol was broken and laid low in the dust; and, like David mourning for his rebellious child Absalom, I cried out in my affliction, 'My son! my son! would God I had died for thee!' Murray Hammond was my precious diadem of earthly glory; and suddenly I found myself uncrowned, and sackcloth and ashes were my portion."
"Why did you never confide these sorrows to me? Did you doubt my earnest sympathy?"
"No, my child; but I thought it best that St. Elmo should lift the veil and show you all that he wished you to know. I felt assured that the time would come when he considered it due to himself to acquaint you with his sad history; and when I saw him go into the church yesterday I knew that the hour had arrived. I did not wish to prejudice you against him; for I believed that through your agancy the prayers of twenty years would be answered, and that his wandering, embittered
(CONTINUED ON PAGE 19.)

THIS is not a toy violin, but a LARGE and BEAUTIFUL TONED instrument. It is made of highly polished perfectly seasoned wood, beautifully varnished. The pegs, finger-board and tail-piece are ebony-finished. The violin is complete, with one silver and three gut strings, long sadjustable bow of white horsehair and box of resin. We also give you a VERY VALUABLE Self-Instruction Book Free. Write today for only two dozen pieces of our new Swell Art Jewelry Novelties to sell atten to buy from you, as our goods are worn by the very best people. Return our $2.40 and we will immediately send you the violin and complete outfit just as described. Write today, Address FRIEND SUPPLY COMPANY, Dept. H 673, No. 1 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

The stand of these beautiful stands of the s

FREE DINNER SET PIECES
Queen Baking Powder, giving a Glass Water Set free to each purchaser of a can. Also many other premiums WE PAY FREEGHT. Write for our plans. American Supply Co., Dept. 57, 900-906 N. 2nd St., St. Louis, Mo.

BOTTLE OF A FREE HEART REMEDY FREE
If you have Heart Disease in any form we will send you by mail prepaid a one dollar bottle of Cardiani absolutely free. Just to prove its superiority over anything you have ever used. Thousands testify that it is the only actual cure; perfectly harmless. Address Dept. 43.
CARDIANI CHEMICAL CO., East Hampton, Conn.

We helped 10,000 Agents last year. Goodsship't on 30 days' credit; deliver and collect before paying. Portraits 35c; frames 15c; sheet pictures 3c; stereoscopes Secviews 1c; all art goods at lowest wholesale prices. Big catalog & sample outfit FREE CONSOLIDATED PORTRAIT & FRAME CO. 290-7 WEST ADAMS STREET, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

CHANCE TO GET A BIG MAGAZINE FREE

Farmers' Sons Wanted with knowledge of farm stock and fair education to work in an office, $600 a month with advancement, steady employment, must be honest and reliable. Branch offices of the association are being established in each state. Apply at once, giving full particulars. The Veterinary Science Association, Doph. 128, London, Canada.

closing stamp. Aurum Co. Dept. B3
79 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. YOUR FORTUNE TOLD FREE Send two cent stamp with birth date and I will send you a pen picture of your life from the cradle to the grave. All matters of business, love, marriage and health, plainly told by the greatest Astrologer living. Patrons astonished and satisfied. PROF. LEO AMZI, Dept. 31, BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

Dangerous Hair Dyes!

How to Test "Hair Dyes" Containing Sugar of Lead (Poison) and Sulphur.

FEEL it is my solemn duty, as an analytical chemist, to sound a note of warning to users of hair dyes. The market is flooded with dyes that are not only injurious to the hair, but endanger the health of every person who uses them.

These preparations are in the majority of cases solutions containing nothing more nor less than Sugar of Lead and Sulphur. And Reader, Sugar of Lead is-Poison!

In justice to the public, every bottle of hair dye containing these substances should bear the poison label and the poison emblement the skull and cross bones!

Thousands of people, who have no idea that they are playing with fire, are using these preparations, and not knowing of anything

Now I am going to tell you how you can detect the presence of Lead and Sulphur without going to the expense of a chemical analysis. The manufacturer of every Sulphur and Lead preparation gives emphasis to the directions—"SHAKE BOTTLE BEFORE USING!" Why? Simply because the Sulphur and Lead settle to the bottom of the bottle, forming a thick sediment, and you must shake the bottle and stir up this sediment, for it's the sediment that does the work! Here is the test: Don't shake the bottle!

Just try to dye the hair with the clear liquid at the top and the stuff will fail absolutely to color the hair. Lead and Sulphur make the hair sticky and greasy, and the stuff rubs off on everything.

There's another "old-timer"—the "two-bottle" dye. No one but an expert can use this properly. Then, in a very short time, the gray hairs at the roots must be retouched (by the expert) and another fee paid.

The hair then takes on two and sometimes more colors, and the effect is startling. Then the victim awakens to the shame of the situation.

Don't Dye Your Hair—Restore Its Color Naturally

Now, listen! Allow me to send you free a full size $1.00 bottle of my Restorer to prove every claim I make.

Now, listen! Allow me to send you free a full size $1.00 bottle of my The original color of my The original colo

It is absolutely harmless.

My Gray Hair Restorer is sold by druggists everywhere.

There are many thousands of men and women using my preparation. This offer is only for those who have not used Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Restorer. Every bottle is sent by express, prepaid, as the bottle is too large to mail. The following must be filled out in full or no attention can be paid to letter.

Mary T. Goldman, 140 Goldman Building, St. Paul, Minn. Send me full-sized $1.00 bottle of Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Restorer. I inclose 25c in stamps or coin to cover express charges. I solemnly swear that I desire the Restorer for my own use that I will not sell or give it away, and that I have never used or purchased Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Restorer.

Sign Full Name.

The original color of my hair before it started to fade or turn gray was (Inclose sample if convenient.)

By Comfort's Home Milliner

cept the hemming and catch-stitching of bands and folds.

Milliners' thread, which is a soft strong thread that does not cut the material—No. 50 in black and white. If this cannot be obtained use ordinary thread No. 30 or 40. Stiff buckram in black and white; thin covering muslin in black and white; milliners' wire in black and white, which comes by the roll, and "tie" wire which comes by the spool. This wire is fine, like thread, and is used for fastening the heavy wires where they cross. A pair of wire cutters are a great convenience, but not an actual necessity, as an old pair of shears can be used for cutting wire, which is being used all the time. A tape measure is also a necessity.

In general, the first thing to be considered is frames and coverings. Until quite recently, everything has been what is known as "made" hats, every hat starts with a frame, which is then covered with straw, velvet, cloth, lace, chiffon or flowers, according to the style of hat being made. Within a year, however, we have been able to buy hats of straw and felt, all ready to trim—which of course, simplifies the work of the milliner somewhat. But there is still a large demand for "made" hats, and at any time the fashion may change back to where it was previous to a year ago, and only "made" hats will be considered in the best taste. Frames can be bought in almost every possible variety of shape and style, but ever so it often what. Bustnere is still a large demand for "made" hats, and at any time the fashion may change back to where it was previous to a year ago, and only "made" hats will be considered in the best taste.

Frames can be bought in almost every possible variety of shape and style, but even so it often happens that one wants something a little different than can be bought at the time, and when this is the case, all one has to do is to get a frame the nearest like what one has in mind, and then alter edge of brim, if too wide—by bending the supporting wires of the crown like a Z, if too high, or by adding to the brim with more wire, or with a circular strip of buckram, if it is desired to make the brim wider in any part. In this case always put a heavy wire on outer edge. If possible, use buckram frames when they are to be covered plain, as the wires are apt to show, after some wear, if a wire frame is used; if, however, a wire frame is used; over both sides of brim, top and under, with covering muslin before putting on the outer covering. Wire frames are much lighter than buckram, and should always be used for everything except plain material. The underside of brim must be covered with muslin, to give a foundation upon which to sew folds, straw, flowers, foliage, or whatever is to be used. As will be noticed by offer below, Comfort will furnish material for making a complete hat so that it will not cost one any money at all. Weight should always be borne in mind, when making a hat, as there is nothing so unsatisfactory and uncomfortable as a heavy hat.

To cover a wire frame with muslin, lay it onto the muslim with the front toward a corner; this gives the necessary bias. Hold frame firmly in place, and cut the muslin one half inch larger all around, than the frame. Draw the edge up over outer wire of frame, keeping flat on table all the muslin; pin every inch, and when finally perfectly smooth across the whole of underside of frame, (head hole and brim,) sew it firmly close to outer wire, and remove pins. Turn frame ov ever it is to be covered with.

After the consideration of the preparation of frames, comes the making of the bands and folds constantly used. Of course, everything is cut on the bias, and all selvages cut off. The bands used around the outer edge of brims and crowns are called "snap" bands; they are made by cutting a called "snap" bands; they are made by cutting a bias strip as long as desired (usually two widths of velvet are needed for the outer edge of brim), and three times as wide as the band is to be when finished and on the hat; that is, if it is desired that a band show an inch in width on both upper and under edge of the brim, then the band should be cut three inches wide. After seaming the two widths together, turn in each edge one half inch and catch-stitch with same color of silk. To catch-stitch, begin at what is usually considered the "wrong end," and take a small stitch in the turned over edge, and then one fourth inch from that take a small stitch in the wrong side of the band, and continue to do this, working away from yourself, until the entire edge is eaught down. No yourself, until the entire edge is caught down. No stitches must show on right side. Do the other edge of band in same way, and the band is ready to stretch over the edge of brim, as will be explained edge of band in same way, and the band is lead, sedge of brim, as will be explained in a later article on the covering of frames with stretch over the edge of brim, as will be explained in a later article on the covering of frames with velvet.

A milliners' fold is made by making a band exactly as a snap band is made, but the band is cut only an inch in width, and the edges are turned over only one fourth inch. After both edges are catch-stitched, the lower edge is laid up to within an eight of an inch of the top edge, and blind-stitched to hold it there. Several rows of milliners' folds on the edge of a brim covered plain, makes a very rich finish, and is used a great deal on mourning hats.

Wo Man who cares to do so can easily make her the se of her in other and ittle, by carefully reading the instructions, which of the se of her in the se of her in the se of her in other and little, by carefully reading the instructions, which of the se of her instructions, which of the se of her instructions, which of the second ittle, by carefully reading the instructions, which of the second ittle, by carefully reading the instructions, which of the second ittle, by carefully reading the instructions, which it is a series of a series of the second in the experiment, folm soon do it.

Our initial cut shows a trimmed turban, and we also show a cut of the frame.
To cover and trim a hat of this style, first cover the frame on underside, (which means

on underside, (which means the brim) with

TURBAN FRAME.

TURBAN FRAME. (which me an s the brim) with covering muslin, as described in the early part of this article. Then cut folds of black velvet, as also described, and after seaming the strips together, baste the edges together, and then apply to the brim, commencing at the top of outer brim, at the middle of the back. The folded edge of fold should project one half inch above edge of brim. Sew the folds straight, holding them easily, neither full nor drawn tight, as they should lie flat. Go around the brim as many times as is necessary to entirely cover it, way in to head hole, lapping folds sufficiently to perfectly cover raw edges. The fold is, of course, all in one piece—not cut at back each time, but carried right around until entirely covered. Full a little, as you work in towards head hole, so outer edge of fold will not draw. Cut a piece of velvet three or four inches larger all around than the entire top of frame, and of same shape. This is to go loosely on top, in easy folds. Turn in edge and catch-stitch on wrong side. Lay it on top of frame and blind-stitch the edge to the back side of fold that stands above edge of brim. Start at the left side and work around toward the front, and when you get back to the left side again there will be some extra fullness which should be gathered all in a bunch at the left, and it will then stand up carelessly, as a sort of background for the wings to be used at left side for trimming. Tack the velvet a few times on crown, wherever necessary to hold in place whatever folds there may be. Now the frame is covered, and all the trimming needed is a flat knot of velvet, through which are thrust two wings, one white and one black. To make the knot, cut one strip of velvet is inches wide; catch-stitch each edge; tie loosely into a knot and tuck under ends and tack loosely into a knot and tuck under ends and tack loosely into a knot and tuck under ends and tack loosely into a knot and tuck under ends and tack loosely into a knot and tuck under ends and tack loosely into a knot would be oden soymer inexpensive.

Our next article will describe the covering of frames with plain velvet, which is one of the most difficult things a milliner has to do.

SPEGIAL

HAT OFFER.

In order that Comport subscribers may get the practical value of these lessons, we have arranged with a large Boston millinery establishment to furnish the frames and material to compute an outil for making the turban hat illustrated and described above, so you can by getting a club of only 12 subscribers to Comport at 15 cents each, make one without cost for yourself, or to sell. As a made-up hat of this description sells at from $4.98 to $8.50 at the city milliners, you can at once see what a tavorable offer it is. The outil consists of one turban frame, one half yard covering muslin for same, one and one fourth yards black velveta for trimming and outer covering, two wings, one black, one white, assorted milliners' needles—all of which will be sent free, express or postpaid.

If you have material of your own for trimming, we will

If you have material of your own for trimming, we will send only the hat frame—extra hat wire—enough for making two extra frames—tie wire and assorted needles for a club of 4 subscribers at 15 cents each.

ST. ELMO

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 18.)

heart would follow you to that cross before which he bowed in his boyhood. Edna, it was through my son's sin and duplicity that St. Elmo's noble career was blasted, and his most admirable character perverted; and I have hoped and believed that through your influence, my beloved pupil, he would be redeemed from his reckless course. My dear little Edna, you are very lovely and winning, and I believed he would love you as he never loved anyone else. Oh! I have hoped everything from your influence! Far, far beyond all computation is the good which a plous, consistent, Christian woman can accomplish in the heart of a husband who truly loves her."

"Oh. Mr. Hammond! you pain and astonish me. Surely you would not be willing to see me marry a man who scoffs at the very name of religion; who willfully deceives and trifles with the feelings of all who are sufficiently credulous to trust his hollow professions—whose hands are red with the blood of your children! What hope of happiness or peace could you indulge for me, in view of such a union? I should merit all the wretchedness that would inevitably be my life-long portion if, knowing his crimes, I could consent to link my future with his."

"He would not deceive you, my child! If you knew him as well as I do, if you could realize all that he was before his tender, lov-

EYE AND EAR BOOK FREE YE AND Names of Some Patients Cured Described in This Book
DEAFNESS—Mr. Emil T. Peterson,
Lindsborg, Kas., Sister Mary Clare,
Villa Maria, U es ul 1. Berger,
Eryan Tex., Miss Maria, Maria,
Eryan Tex., Miss Maria,
Bryan Tex., Miss Maria,
Lindsborg, Kas., Miss Maria,
Lindsborg, Maria,
Lindsborg, Miss Maria,
OPTIC NERVE TROUBLE—Mrs. W.
G. Reid (daughter), Amoret, Mo.;
Mrs. N. Johnson, Fineastle, Tex.
CATARACT—Mrs. John L. Harlan,
117 Colborno St., Battle Creek, Mich.
CHRONIC GRANULATED LIDS—Mr.
Joseph Gaudet, Tallien, La.; Lloyd
Stambeck, Cedar Point, Kas.; Mrs.
M. Morton, Long Plain, Mass. relis of a method by which people from every tate in the union as well as Canada were cured februaries. Tells how to quickly relieve and cure Discretified incurable by other doctors, but they roote for this book, followed its advice, and today roe cured. Tells how all diseases and defects of the ye, such as Failing Eyesight, Cataract, Granulaticated by the patients in their own homes. No ecssity of seeing a doctor and no interference ith daily duties. Tells how the patients in their own homes. No the discretified by the patients in their own homes. No the daily duties. Tells how to quickly relieve and cure Discretified in the discretified DR. CURTS' FREE EYE AND EAR BOOK Tells of a method by which people from every state in the union as well as Canada were cured of chron by eard Ear troubles at their own homes to the control of the control the aid of the Mild Medicine Method Dr. Curts is to any afflicted one. No matter how serious your attended to treat his patients in their own home as such diction—no matter what other treatment you have stuly as though they were to come to his office, yearson having any Eye or Ear trouble should their of this book; it will cost you nothing, and will dish book, which Dr. Curts will gladly send free tell you how you can be cured at your home. Address Dr. F. G. CURTS, 209 Gumbel Bldg., KANSAS CITY, MO.

ing heart was stabbed by the two whom he almost adored, you would judge him more leniently. Edna, if I whom he has robbed of all that made life beautiful—if I, standing here in my lonely old age, in sight of the graves of my murdered darlings—if I can forgive him, and pray for him, and, as God is my witness, love him! you have no right to visit my injuries and my sorrows upon him!"

Edna looked in amazement at his troubled, earnest countenance, and exclaimed:

"Oh! if he knew all your noble charity, your unparalleled magnanimity, surely, surely, your influence would be his salvation! His stubborn, bitter heart would be melted. But, sir, I should have a right to expect Annie's sad fate if I could forget her sufferings and her wrongs."

Mr. Hammond rose and walked to the window, and after a time, when he resumed his seat, his eyes were full of tears, and his wrinkled face was strangely pallid.

"My darling Annie, my sweet, fragile flower, my precious little daughter, so like her sainted mother! Ah! it is not surprising that she could not resist his fascinations. But, Edna, he never loved my pet lamb. Do you know that you have become almost as dear to me as my own dead child? She deceived me! she was willing to forsake her father in his old age; but through long years you have never once betrayed my perfect confidence."

The old man put his thin hand on the orphan's head and turned the countenance toward him.

"My dear little girl, you will not think me impertinently curious when I ask you a question, which my sincere affection for and interest in you certainly sanction? Do you love St. Elmo?"

"Mr. Hammond, it is not love; for esteem, respect, confidence belong to love. But I can (continued on page 27.)

Vour Poems May Be Worth
THOUSANDS OF BOLLARS
Send them to us for the music,
WRITERS Accept no offer before reading
Music, Seng and Money. It is free,
HAYES MUSIC CO., 39 Star Bldg., Chicago. PROF. LONG'S MAGNETIC COMB PROF LONG'S MAGNETIC COMB EL

Outfit Free to Agents Best selling Handkerchiefs, Dress Goods and Fancy Goods on the market. Quick sellers, big profits. Deal direct with a arge manufacturer. Send stamp for full particulars. FREEFORT MFG. CO., 351 & 252 Jay St., Brooklyn, N.Y., Dept. 60.

991 Silk Pringe, Envelope, Gold Bevel Edge, CARDS Versen, 125 Rich und Baoy Jokes, 1 Flesh Acquaintance and 1 Local Encord Corts, New Bases Catcher and Jing Sample Book LOCAL Encord Corts, New Bases Catcher and Jing Sample Book LOCAL BOOK CARD CO., 218 F. St., Columbus, Obito.

Agent's Outfit Free.—Delight, Blacutt, Cake and Doughnut Gutter, Apple Gorer, and Strainer. 5 articles in one. Sells on sight. Large Catalog free. RIGHARDSON MFG. CO., Dept. C, BATH, N.Y.

able; low price; everyone buys; AGENTS WANTED.
Opportunity for you. Send 2 cent stamp for sample.
PROF. LONG, 415 Ash Street, PEKIN, ILL.

COLUMBIA Dept. 54,

ST. VITUS' DANCE. Sure Cure. Get Circular. Dr.Fenner, Fredonia, N. Y.

MUSIC LESSONS FREE at your home. For a limited time we will give free, for advertising purposes, 96 music lessons for beginners or davanced pupils on either Piano, Organ, Banjo, Guitar. Cornet, Violin or Mandolin (your expense will be the cost of postage and the music you use, which is small.) We teach by mail only and guarantee success. Established seven years. Hundreds write: "Wish I had heard of your school before." Write today for booklet, only be the cost of postage and the music you use, which is small.) We teach by mail only and guarantee success. Established seven years. Hundreds write: "Wish I had heard of your school before." Write today for booklet, testimonials and free tuition blank. Address: U. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Box 12 I, 19 Union Sq., N. Y.

SEEINGIS BELIEVING. yours. Order to-day as this advertisement will positively not appear B. E. CHALMERS & CO., 856 Bearborn 8t., Chies

A BEAUTIFUL PICTURE FREE

The pictures we offer are printed in fine OIL COLORS and closely resemble-OILPAINTINGS. They are entitled "A Yard of Roses" and "A Yard of Kittens," We want to place one of these works of art in the homes of every reader of Comfort. We propose to do it in this way.

SEND US TEN CENTS SILVER

together with the names and correct addresses of not more than five farmers and we will send you our new Agricultural Monthly, The American Farm World, on trial THREE MONTHS together with one of the beautiful pictures (your choice) named above by mail, postage prepaid. You should take advantage of this offer now as it will not appear again. Address

The American Farm World, Dept. F, Augusta, Maine.

How to make the best chocolate bonbons, 25 cts, silver. L.F. Coulter, 2917 Seneca St., St. Joseph, Mo. COLORED Postals, 20c. Love Scenes, Illuminated, & Frosted GOLD. Souvenir Art Co., West Haven, Conn. AGENTS your credit is good, sell $1 box Native Herbs for 35c. on commission, express paid. P. C. MELROSE, Columbus, O.

AYS Large List. Dialogues. Speakers, Hand Books, Drills. Catalogue free, T. S., DENISON, Pub. Dept. S. Chicago.

$36 A WEEK to men with rigs to introduce poultry compound. Year's contract.

Lafel. Co., DEPT; 58, PARSONS, KANS.

Get out of the rut. Own your business. $3 a day sure. Expensive Samples YMAN, 2151 Franklin Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

AGENTS CREDIT. Perfumes, Flavors, etc. Big Profits. Expr. Pd. Terms free, Herbene Agency Co., Box254, Station L. New York.

Agents Wanted Sell $1 Ore-Ozone for 35 cents. 200 percent profit. New plan, everybody buys, Write for terms and territory. Ore-Ozone Co., 126 State St., Chicago.

HUSTLERS everywhere to tack signs, distribute circulars, samples, etc.; no canvassing; good pay. We give bank references. Sun Advertising Bureau, Inc., 753 Baltimore Bldg., Chicago.

Good Pay WANTED MEN everywhere-to distribute circulars, advertis-ing matter, tack signs, etc. Na-tional Adv. Bureau, 214 Oakland Bank Bldg., Chicago.

SONG-POEMS and musical manuscript arranged. Publication secured. Cash or royalty if available. Wainwright Music Co., 78-149 Evergreen Ave., Chicago

MEHRLE'S WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

Greatast remedy for stomach trouble, all disorders of the kidneys, liver, appetite, etc., also cures sufferers from yellow jaundice, and all diseases of long standing. Will guarantee to cure when all else falls. Don't wait, Write at once, Bottle sent, postpaid, on receipt of $1.00. J. MEHRLE, Sole Manufacturers, 244 West 16th St., New York City, N. Y.

XCLSBYFAR-

A Guaranteed Oil Dressing for doing over Pianos, Furniture, Hardwood Floors and all kinds of Fine Woodwork. Will not stain or gum up. Large can sent prepaid on receipt of price. Agents wanted everywhere. Address The Eastern Ointment Co., Dept. G, Providence, R. I.

BLUINE MFG. CO., 666 Mill St., Concord Junc., Mass

Ladies, this Silver Set is of genuine double-plated, government silver. Warranted not to tarnish. You could not buy an equal set for $5.00 in your local stores. You can get it FREE, Sell 20 of our curio shell hat pins at 10c each; send us the $2.00, and beautiful 14-piece silver set is yours. List of other premiums, and plan to secure 26-piece silver set, or 40-piece dinas contracts. RODGER MORRIS CO. Dept. 327 Chicago

SPECIAL GUT PRICES ON WATCHES, DIAMONDS AND JEWELRY

The Hidden Wedding Treasure The Mystery of the San Francisco

Earthquake

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 6.)

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 6.)

Phayeton, and then Lawrence Felton.

"I'm fairly caught." Ireton said merrily, and the others with as hearty a one, cried:

"Your punishment is to stay with us the rest of the night."

"If you will keep me company, I'll do the same for you under like circumstances, for, laugh as you will boys. I'm nervous, decidedly nervous, and I know I can't sleep."

"It often does that way," Lawrence said in his cool way, and the others did not dispute him, for young as he was, he had been married twice, and divorced his second wife.

"Where will we go, what will we do?" Gerald asked, linking his arm in that of Ireton.

"Give your commands, oh royal bridegroom," Lawrence sneered, and Ireton pausing, said quietly:

"I don't know what is affecting me as it is.

"Give your commands, oh royal bridegroom," Lawrence sneered, and Ireton pausing, said quietly:

"I don't know what is affecting me as it is, but I do feel sentimental," and he laughed again, nervously.

Lawrence Felton whipped out his gold repeater, saying as he did so:

"Just two-thirty. We are your slaves."
Still half laughing, half in earnest, Ireton led the way toward the seashore in the vicinity of the Cliff House, and stood quite still watching the waves break upon the smooth sand. His companions said nothing, for they remembered that the entire crowd had gone there several days before, and laughed heartily at the children playing in the surf.

"I wonder." Ireton said slowly, turning towards the others.

"What?" Gerald asked slowly.

"If really good times ever return. We were so happy and heart-free that afternoon, when we were all here. Will we ever be so again?" and he sighed. He could not explain the terrible weight upon his heart, and yet there it lay, although sky and sea were as peaceable as a summer day.

Felton laid his hand rather heavily upon Ireton's shoulder, saying quietly:

"My boy, don't moon. Tomorrow, or rather today, you are to be made happy. Come back to the hotel, and go to rest. What have you to worry about? Surely you are certain of her faith?"

"As of my own."

"Then why stand here in the eerie morning house looking at these days.

"My boy, don't moon. Tomorrow, or rather today, you are to be made happy. Come back to the hotel, and go to rest. What have you to worry about? Surely you are certain of her faith?"

"As of my own."

"Then why stand here in the eerle morning hours, looking at these dark waters, asking them if times fied will ever return. Of course they will not. What has passed, never returns, but better comes to take its place. Drop your fancles, and come back to the hotel for a drink," and he smilingly sought to draw his companions with him, but boun shook their heads. There was a dashing little brunette among the crowd of girls at the Bronson home, the one who was to be maid of honor, Violet Hilton, and there was a whisper that by the time their set had composed itself over the marriage of Ireton and Rosalie, another would be on tapis between Gerald and Violet. Perhaps Felton was hardhearted. So he was spoken of, though, had the truth been known, he was very seriously attracted toward a beautiful widow, who a year before had come to San Francisco. Mrs. Roton and Mr. Felton had met as strangers, although once they had been much nearer and dearer, yet, even in the moonlight softness of spirit did he confide his secret to his friends, but he did yield to them, and sauntered with them about the great city, happy and careless, drinking in the rare radiance of its confines, and thinking of the ceremony of the day which was dawning.

The three had been strolling about, scarcely giving heed to halting footsteps, when, just at a little past five o'clock, they were thrown on their faces, and Felton cried:

"Some anarchists are blowing up the city!"

"Before they could scramble to their feet, a tall building tottered and fell, burying Gerald beneath its debris, and with him hundreds of screaming humanity.

Ireton and Felton gazed about them, then began to dodge the falling walls, and yet keep in sight the spot where their friend was buried. Suddenly freton cried in a voice which plerced the air:

"My father! He is in the Palace Hotel,"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Read the next chapter, "The Present Day of Judgment," when the sorrows and heartaches of that terrible holocaust will be given. 15 cents sent now, and you will receive COMFORT, the best paper published for the money, until January, 1908.

Blood Disorders.

If your blood is not right, you ought to set it right, and RIGHT NOW. Hundreds of diseases owe their origin to impure blood. Vitae-Ore has been most successful in curing blood disorders. Read the trial offer on last page.

POPULAR SONGS FREE

Just think of it, 160 Popular Favorites, Songs that everybody wants to know and sing. FREE, with the music. Just the music. Just the book you have been looking for. We send with which anyone can play the companiment to any song. All sent free by mail to every person sendingus only 10c. to pay for a full trial museription to our Popular Illustrated Magazine.

Popular Illustrated Magazine, Dept. 20 291 Congress Street, BOSTON, MASS.

CATARRH FREE ADVICE N ITS CURE

If you have Catarrh let me show you what to do for it-how to drive every bit of it out of the system.

Without it costing you a cent, you can have the benefit of my twenty-one years' of successful experience-my wide knowledge of Catarrh, its causes and its cure.

Don't neglect Catarrh! Don't let it make you into a worn-out, run-down Catarrhal wreck.

Remember, Catarrh is more than a trifling ailmentwore than a disgusting trouble. It's a dangerous one. Unchecked Catarrh too frequently destroys smell, taste and hearing, and often opens the way to Consumption. Be warned in time. If you have Catarrh, start to cure it NOW!

Don't think it can't be cured because you've tried to cure it and failed.

Don't waste any more time-energy-money, in trying to conquer it with worthless patent medicines.

Catarrh can be cured, if you take it in hand the right way. Write to me today and I'll give you valuable medical advice free on just what to do for it.

LEARN AT ONCE HOW TO CURE CATARRH

Tell me about your trouble. After careful study I'll send you, without any charge whatever, a complete diagnosis of your case which will explain clearly how to get rid of Catarrh. Simply for the asking you'll receive excellent counsel that will point out how Catarrh can be cured, not just for a week, or a month, or a year—but PERMANENTLY.

Don't let this offer pass—accept my assistance today. This treacherous disease has been my life study—I know it in every form and stage. My advice has already cured thousands who are now free from Catarrh. You can be also if you will.

Read my list of questions carefully, answer them yes ono, write your name and address plainly on the dotted lines and mail the Free Advice Coupon to me as soon as possible. Twill cost you nothing and will obtain for you the very help you need. Address CATARRH SPECIALIST SPROULE, (Graduate in Medicine and Surgery, Dublin Tell me about your trouble.

(Graduate in Medicine and Surgery, Dublin University, Ireland, formerly surgeon British Royal Mail Naval Service) 233 Trade Build-

FREE MEDICAL ADVICE COUPON

FREE MEDICAL ADVICE COUPON
It entitles readers of this paper to free medical advice on curing Catarrh.
Is your throat raw?
Do you sneeze often?
Is your breath foul?
Are your eyes watery?
Do you take cold eastly?
Is your nose stopped up?
Do you have to spit often?
Do crusts form in your nose?
Are you worse in damp weather?
Do you blow your nose a good deal?
Are you losing your sense of smell?
Are you losing your sense of smell?
Does your mouth taste bad mornings?
Do you have a dull feeling in your head?
Do you have to clear your throat on rising?
Is there a tickling sensation in your throat?
Do you have a discharge from the nose?
Does mucus drop in back of throat?

NAME

NAME

ADDRESS

TRUSS FREE U. S. Government granted patent for truss that we want intro-RUPTURE CURED duced everywhere at once. "I's healed hundreds while they RUPTURE CURED worked, No telastic or steed band around body or between legs. Simple, safe, easy, Holds had unputers. No kidney hock or spine pressure. Be an agent. Our offer milaid to all free. Send no money, SUREHOLD Co., Westbrook, Maine, 702 Main St.

Boy's Hunting This is a genuine HAMILTON TAKEDOWN HUNTING RIFLE. Shoots long and short 22-calibre cartridges; will kill at 100 yards.
It has black walnut stock, steel barrel with rifled brass inner tube, steel frame, peep sights, lever action, automatic shell extractor. Very latest model and perfect in every way. We give it free for selling only 30 packages of BLUINE at to cents a package. Send us your name and address. We trust you. Return our $3.00 after the sale of our BLUINE and we will send the rifle at once. Address

THREE HANDKERCHIEFS

We want every reader of Comfort who is not at present a subscriber to our great monthly illustrated Story Paper, GOOD STORIES, to take advantage of the offer herein made. GOOD STORIES is a large monthly publication of from 24 to 32 large four column pages filled with serial and short stories and valuable Departments interesting to every member of the family.

Send Us Ten Cents to pay for a Trial Three Months Subscription to GOOD STORIES, and we will send the first copy of the paper by return mail together with three handkerchiefs. These handkerchiefs are of a beautiful LINEN FINISH, nicely hemstitched, just the kind of handkerchiefs our friends use every day. They are sure to please. Readers of Comfort should take advantage of this offer now, as it will not appear again. Address your letters

GOOD STORIES, Dept. L, Augusta, Maine.

Consumption

This valuable medical book tells in plain, simple language how Consumption can be cured in your own home. If you know of any one sumption, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma or any throat or lung trouble, or are yourself afflicted, this book will help you to a cure. Even if you are in the there is no hope, this book will show you how others have cured themselves after all remedies they had tried falled, and they believed their case hopeless.

Write at once to the Yonkerman Consumption Cure Co., 1235 Water St., Kalamazoo, Mich., and they will gladly send you the book by return mail free and also a generous supply of the New Treatment, absolutely free, for they want every sufferer to have this wonderful cure before it is too late. Don't wate—write today. It may mean the saving of your life.

YARD ENGLISH WOOL $ 1.99 CREPE DRESS PATTERN

Don't miss this, only 5,000 to be sold at $1.99, so be quick and order to-day; the one great chance to buy a $4.00 dress nattern for only $1.99, less than one-half regular price. It's a beautiful rich, irm material, a triumph of the cloth weavers' art, a product of Bradford, England, woven from choice selected double twisted yarns, both warp and filling, in a dainty crepe effect. It's the very latest dress fabric out for fall and winter 1905-07; possesses a rich, lustrous and change. Less finish; strictly fast coronguranted all weaven around winder the strictly fast coronguranted all weaven around of growing the strictly fast coronguranted all works are a strictly fast coronguranted all works and the strictly fast coronguranted all works are the st stock of choicest Dry Goods; fancy silks 25c yd. up, taffeta silks 29c yd. up, velvets 25c yd. up, flannels 5c yd. up, all line table sets 89c up, ard Wide Sheeting 5c Yd. table sets 89c up, wash goods, white goods, domestics, abayls 19c up, wash goods, white goods, domestics, table sets 39c up, wash goods, white goods, domestics hawls 19c up, wash goods, white goods, domestics hosiery, underwear, trunks, and a fine, full and choice of Notions, including latest things out buttons, gloves, handbage, commercially considered the set of the constant of the const buttons, gloves, handkerchiefs, corsets, ribbons, laces, collars, embroideries, knit goods, yarns, etc. Everything at wholesale prices, one-half what you HAIR GOODS, switches 50c up, latest in pompadours, wigs, etc.

John M. Smyth Co. Madison Street Chicago

nond it the greatest bargain ever offered, pay $3,75 and express charge and toey are yours. AMERICAN JEWELRY CO., Dept. 15 CHICAGO.

SEND 10 CENTS for this e'egant Violet centerpiece and we will send FREE one latest style collar and cuff set in eyelet embroidery, one Carnation doily, one Holly doily, one Forget-me-not doily and one Stick Pin case, in all 324 square inches of Art Linen for only 10e, to introduce our new list of fancy work bargains.
Wm. Stelling Supply Co., 6454
Dept. M, Jackson Ave., Chicago, Ill.

FORTUNE TOLD FREE Past, present, future by America's Leading Astrologer. All personal matters of business, health; friends, travel, changes, love affairs, marriage plainly told. Life Reading sent (sealed) for birth-date 2.c. stamp.

ADDRESS LEON A. KYRA CO., BOX 683, SYRACUSE, N. Y.

BE AN ACTOR OR ACTRESS
Lessons Free
Best paying profession in the world.

atic art by correspondence. CHICAGO SCHOOL OF ELO-GUTION, 741 Chicago Opera House Building, CHICAGO

Post Cards Free ! 16 kinds such as Everybody Works but Pather, Papa Keeps a Bulldog Now, I'm Laying for You, I'm Serry we Met, I Got Mine, Why Do the Girls Refuse Me? You MUST mets sat of these IMMENSE HITS to mall

YOUR SONG POEMS TO I will write the music and present to Big N.Y. Publishers. I made a fortune writing songs; my experience will aid you. My songs "Blue Bell" and "Way Down In My Heart" achieved world-wide fame. Write to day for Free Booklet EDWARD MADDEN, 36 Madden Bldg., New York

This Fine Picture Free

This Family Record is a magnificent work of art, 16x20 inches, in ten beautiful colors; background solid gold; spaces for pictures of the family, also beautiful scrolls on which to register marriages, births and deaths. It is a picture of dazzling beauty that you will always be proud of. To introduce our splendid fa mily magazine and story paper, which already has a half million readers, we give it to anyone who sends 10cc (fotence or silver) for The Heusehold; nusual offer to inc. Send at once be-and picture. We make this unu to become a regular subscriber. are gone. Address, fore they are gone. Address, THE HOUSEHOLD, 540 Jackson St., TOPEKA, KAN.

Conducted by Cousin Marion In order that each cousin may be answered a this column, no cousin must ask more than aree questions in one month.

OW comes November, dears, and dreary though it be, it is the month in which we have our general thanksgiving for all the blessings, public and private, which have come to us through the year. Some of you may think that you have precious little to be thankful for, but think again, dears, before you finally refuse to have at least one little thank to offer. I am sure you will find something if you will look for it a minute. And now let us get to our duties. us get to our duties.

The first letter I come upon is from Sweetheart of La Salle, Col., who is somewhat anxious because the young man who told her he loved her didn't follow it up by asking her to be his wife. Some people, men and women, use the word "love" very lightly, and they will even say they "love" good things to eat. In my opinion "love" is a sacred word and a lofty feeling, and if a man tells a woman he loves her, he should ask her to be his wife. If he thinks love is merely flirting, then he should be watched.

Sweet Sixteen. Hampton, Va.—If you can't "for be watched.

Sweet Sixteen, Hampton, Va.—If you can't "for the life" of you tell which of your two beaus you like best, you should wait five years to find out. When in doubt, don't marry. (2) Don't redden your cheeks with rouge. Try simple food, physical culture exercise, and plenty of sunshine. Read a physical culture magazine for information.

Sunshine, Norfolk, Va.—Don't be foolishly indifferent to the young man. If you like him, let him see it, but don't gush over him. Men like to be appreciated, and appreciation doesn't mean falling in love with them.

be appreciated, and appreciation doesn't mean falling in love with them.

Sadness, Stockett, Mont.—I don't think you are very badly hurt over his jilting you. Try, at least, to forget your loss in the love of some nice young man who won't jilt you.

Baby Girl, Etta, Fla.—Keep on refusing to let him hold your hand. Young men most appreciate what they cannot have. (2) Twelve miles is not too long a drive if you get back in good time. (3) Better wait till your parents are willing to buy your wedding outfit. It is very bad form for you to ask the young man to buy it.

Freckle Face, Alma City, Wis.—Wait until you are older and you will find out why your "Dad" won't let you go driving with seventeen-year-old boys. (2) Read and study at home when you are not working. Take the time for that sort of improvement which you would devote to driving with the boys if your father would let you.

Worried, Philadelphia, Pa.—Don't worry about

Worried, Philadelphia, Pa.—Don't worry about your aunt crying because you took the visitors into the kitchen and fed them on her pie. If it was good pie she should feel highly complimented and dry her tears.

gry ner tears.

S. D. P., Perry, Fla.—You should return from church with the same beau who took you there.

(2) Treat your third cousin as if he were no relation at all, when it comes to putting his arm around you and such familiarities. Broken Heart, Sourlake, Texas.-Follow the ad vice of your friends and give up the man you do not love. Ask the advice of the other man without letting him know what you think of him. (2) You might become a good bookkeeper, but I hardly think you would succeed as a stenographer.

Arctic Brunette, Arctic, R. I.—If the man is all right, he will not object to giving you all reference necessary as to who he is. Indeed, he ought to do that without the asking. Don't marry him till you know who he is.

Golden Locks, Mobile, Ala.—Evidently he is quite as much in love with you as you are with him, and he should tell you that he loves you. Maybe he is too bashful, as some men are, and needs to be encouraged just a little bit.

L. M., Middleburgh, N. Y.—Certainly you may have callers though no old people are in the house, because you are the head of your brother's house. (2) If convenient give your escort something to eat, or drink when he comes in with you after church. You may do as you please about it. (3) The young men, who will not go with girls they cannot kiss and be familiar with, are just the kind that girls should not go with. It is a very good way to give a man the mitten by telling him you have gone with him long enough for friendship's sake. Call yourself "Miss" when telling anyone who you are, Little Black Eyes, Lower Grant Isle, Me.—If you want to forget him why send him souvenir postal cards? That isn't the way to forget. (2) When you have once been in "deep love" you won't have to ask which man should you choose.

Sweet Adeline, Denver, Col.—Tell him you will keep his pin in place of yours that he lost. You may still be friends.

may still be friends.

Troubled Blanche, Arcola, Texas.—Don't go to the city for work until you have found something to do there. A girl with nothing to do in the city is apt to be led into doing the worst thing. Read the advertisements in city papers asking for female help, and answer those that promise good results. If you have any friends in the city you might go to them, and look around for work. But don't go among strangers. (2) If you know the young man to be worthy, you may write to him.

Troublesome, Bristol, Tenn.—Write to the Park-

Troublesome, Bristol, Tenn.-Write to the Parkville Training School, Parkville, Mo.

L. I. R., Goldendale, Wash.—Take his advice, and visit your sister. He seems to be worthy of your confidence, and you should be loyal to him in all things. Good friends are scarce.

Wild Rose, Polloksville, N. C.—You are silly about the young man, and maybe if you will wait several years, you will outgrow it. Don't you know what it means to marry a man whodrinks? If he is that way as your sweetheart, he'll be ever so much worse as your husband.

Brown Eyes Dawson N. Dole Weitstabling of the several program of the several that way as your sweetheart, he'll be ever so much worse as your husband.

Brown Eyes, Dawson, N. Dak.—Write to him giving him your address. Didn't you tell him you would? How can you expect people to write to you when you decline to tell where letters would reach you? (2) Friends may exchange photographs.

Hope, Fairview, Va.—He seems to be somewhat wavering, but, as he says, it may be that his honesty is not fully understood. I think if I were you, I would give him another year. Most men in his position would not offer to release you. I doubt a little if he really wants to marry you. He lacks will, and someone should make up his mind for him. (2) Write to Superintendent Maternity Hospital, New York City. It is better, however, to find one whose people you know something about.

L. V. A., Hillsdale, Mich.—Ordinary rules of etiquette do not apply to boys and girls of fifteen and sixteen. Their conduct should be in accord with the wishes and direction of their parents. Tell your mother everything, and keep her as your closest confidante. (2) Dancing is quite proper at parties, while kissing games are obsolete and vulgar. (3) Thank you for the chummy feeling.

Apple Blossom, Sepington, Or.—Choose the one who neglects you, of course. Don't you want to Apple Blossom, Sepington, Or.—Choose the one who neglects you, of course. Don't you want to be neglected always and treated as if you were a cipher? My, my, but you are a silly girl!

GET TWO PREMIUMS INSTEAD OF ()

You can be it! You can earn two premiums by our plan just as easily—actually with less effort—than you can one from other companies, and we can prove it. You will be delighted to find how easily and quickly you can earn a beautiful, useful and valuable premium by selling Red Cross Flavoring Extracts. They sell fast, as we ask only 20c for them. Quality is guaranteed, money back if not pleased. For selling only 3 dozen we give FREE this extra large genuine Montrose Adjustable Reclining Morris Chair, just as shown in illustration—a chair that will grace the living room, library or parior of the most refined—frame of selected seasoned oak, nicely carved, with a rich dark finish; contains full sets of comfortable and indestructible all steel springs in seat and back; seat 22 inches wide; finely upholstered in lovely figured velour or a good grade of imitation leather, whichever you choose.

Or for selling 3 dozen, you can get this magnificent 100-piece Oxford Dinner Set; full sized, large dishes of artistic proportions, beautifully embossed; decorated with graceful and elegant floral designs, put on under the glazing and warranted never to wear off—a dinner set that will make either of these grand premiums for selling only 3 dozen. Compare our offer with others. Some of our agents have earned these premiums in less than one day. These are but two examples of our extraordinary liberal premium giving; we have 1000 other offers equally as good.

NO MONEY REQUIRED IN ADVANCE

Your credit is good with us; Your credit is good with us; we ask no references or guarantee. Simply send us your name and address, we will send to you by return mail, postpaid, I dozen assorted Red Cross Flavoring Extracts to commence with; also our big premium catalogue. If you don't have good luck, we will take them back; but you will; just try. Start now—today; get the things you want FREE.

PETERSON & CO.

Department 108, 95 Kinzle Street, Chicago, III.

GO RIGHT THROUGH YOUR HOME NOW See what you need. Our premium book tells how you can get FREE any article desired. Our plan gives you everything—Ladies Suits, Skirts and Walsts, all kinds of Furniture, Musical Instruments Silverware, Chinaware, Stoves, Sewing Machines, Washing Machines Cutlery, Jewelry, Carpets, Stoves, Lampe, Clocks, Shoes, etc.

Many Splendid Premiums Given for Selling Only One Dozen

Loving Girl, Bueyeros, N. M.—He can come to see you seven nights in the week if he is engaged to you. You are rather too young to marry, but possibly it is just as well for you not to wait until you are older. (3) Don't be too loving or too indifferent. Balance them.

Mary Dear, Alexander City, Ala.—It is very nice for you to send flowers to the sick young man, and to call to see how he is getting along, but do not over-do your kindness.

Little Girl, Morgantown, W. Va.—You may give

Little Girl, Morgantown, W. Va.—You may give your picture to a friend as you have his. (2) It is not politic for the man to smoke while walking with a lady, even though she does not object. (3) Nine o'clock is not too late for him to call when his work keeps him away.

Impatient Girl, Clinton, N.Y.—Treat him as a friend until he tells you he wants you to be more than a friend.

than a friend.

Blue Eyes, Kennett, Va.—Better die an old maid than marry a man twenty-three years older than you are with five children. Didn't you know that?

There, dears, all your questions are answered, except a few that I could not have possibly answered without scolding more than I like to do. But the cousins who deserve the scoldings won't be harmed by my not answering, because the questions they ask will answer themselves in a little time. Let us all be thankful that there's so much good in the world, and let us be happy anyway. There are more sunshiny days than cloudy ones. By, by, until we meet again.

COUSIN MARION.

Cancerol, a Home Treatment for Cancer.

An unparalleled record of successful cures proves the superiority of Cancerol. Not an experi-ment, but the result of experience. Investigate for yourself—costs but a trifle. Write today for free book. Address Dr. L. T. Leach, Drawer 88 S, Urdisanguis Ind Indianapolis, Ind.

WAN OR wanted to travel, distribute samples and employ agents. $18 woman a week, expenses advanced. Local manager & canvassers also ziegler co., 214 Locust St., Philadelphia.

HAIR- COMB German patent; produces any shade by simply the scale; harmless, durable, combing without staining the scalp; harmless, durable, indetectable. Saves time and money. Write for particulars. H. BIENECK, Dept. 10, 318 Mott Ave., New York.

You Can Get More

and better premiums FREE for selling our goods that you can any others. Ladies and girls every day written tell us that they are surprised and delighted to fin how easy it is to sell Red Croes Flavoring Extracts. The sell for only 20c and the quality is guaranteed; mone back if unsatisfactory. Everybody uses extracts; ever one of your friends will buy from you.

You can get FREE anything you want.

Ladies' Wearing Apparel, Household Furnishings, Jewelry, Cutlery, Clocks, Furniture, Carpets, Silverware, Stoves, Sewing Machines, Lamps, Shoes, etc. Go right through your home now and see what you want, no matter what it is, you will find it in our big premium book, and you can get it FREE.

We give this beautiful Belton 2-piece monogram of her set FREE for selling only 2doz. Red Cross Flavor extracts. Every piece, except cups and sancers, will be Your Initial on it in Gold The edge of each piece is also traced in gold. This is not an ordinary dinner set, but is elegantly decorated with roses in beautiful natural colorings, and the combination with the gold makes it a dinner set that you will treasure with pride and take pleasure in showing to your friends. The set consists of 6 large 9 in. plates, 6 7½ in. dessert plates, 6 cups, 6 saucers, 6 butter plates, 6 fruit or sauce dishes, 2 vegetable dishes, 1 large plater, 1 bread plate, 1 cake, 1 gravy bowl. There is no reason why you should not have this rare initial Belton dinner set to adorn your dining room.

No Money Required in Advance NO IMONOY REQUIRED IN ADVANCE varies Simply send us your name and address, we will send you by return mail, postpaid, I dozen assorted Red Cross Flavoring Extracts to commence with; also our big premium catalogue. If you don't have good luck, we will take them back, but you will; just try. Start now—today; get the things you want. We give many Splendid Premiums for selling only one dozen.

PETERSON & CO., Bept. 109. 95 Kinzie Street, Chicago

CONCERT BANJO

Not a cheap imitation, but a full size solo instrument with calfskin or sheepskin head 3, 10 or 11 inches in diameter, with regular length neck in handsome cherry finish, richly ornamented with fancy position dots. The rim is nickel finished and fitted with a full set of brackets. The finish of the trimmings is ebony. We send a full set of strings and guarantee satisfaction. This banjo is an American Instrument and is good enough for any player. Send us your name and address for only two dozen pieces of our handsome New Art Jewelry Novelties, to sell for us at 10 cents each. These are of wonderfully good value and useful as well as ornamental. Return our $2.40 after the sale and we will send you the banjo complete, without delay. Address FRIEND SUPPLY CO., Dept. H773 Boston, Mass.

Handsome Fur Scarf

Send us your name and address and we will send you free and post-paid 24 pieces of our jewelry novelties to sell at 10 cents each. Everybody you show them to will buy them of you. When sold send us the $2.40 and we will at

Handsome Fur Scart

It is nearly 48 inches long, made from black Lynx fur, has six full, bushy tabs, very latest style, and we know you will be more than pleased with it. When you receive it we know you will say it is the most elegant and thoroughly good fur you have ever seen. Nothing similar to this scarf has ever before been offered as a premium; it will give years of satisfactory wear. It gives a stylish, dressy effect to the wearer's appearance. The only reason we can offer them is we had a large number of them made up for us by one of the large furriers during the summer when trade was quiet; this is the only reason we are able to offer such an expensive premium. We hope you will take advantage of our offer without delay. This is an extraordinary offer and cannot be duplicated by any other reliable concern. We trust you with our jewelry until sold. It costs you nothing to get this fur. Address,

COLUMBIA NOVELTY CO., Dept.440, East Boston, Mass.

The Handy Doctor in Your Vest Pocket

T'S a thin, round-cornered little Enamel Box-

When carried in your vest pocket it means Health-Insurance.

It contains Six Candy Tablets of pleasant taste, almost as pleasant as Chocolate.

Each tablet is a working dose of Cascarets, which acts like Exercise on the Bowels and Liver.

It will not purge, sicken, nor upset the stomach.

Because it is not a "Bile-driver," like Salts, Sodium, Calomel, Jalap, Senna, nor Aperient Waters.

Neither is it like Castor Oil, Glycerine, or other Oily Laxatives that simply lubricate the Intestines for transit of the food stopped up in them at that particular time.

The chief cause of Constipation and Indigestion is a weakness of the Muscles that contract the Intestines and Bowels.

* *

_Cascarets are practically to the Bowel Muscles what a Massage and Cold Bath are to the Athletic Muscles.

They stimulate the Bowel Muscles to contract, expand, and squeeze the Digestive Juices out of food eaten.

They don't help the Bowels and Liver in such a way as to make them lean upon similar assistance for the future.

This is why, with Cascarets, the dose may be lessened each succeeding time instead of increased, as it must be with all other Cathartics and Laxatives.

* Cascarets act like exercise.

If carried in your vest pocket, (or carried in My Lady's Purse,) and eaten just when you suspect you need one, you will never know a sick day from the ordinary Ills of life.

Because these Ills begin in the Bowels, and pave the way for all other diseases.

"Vest Pocket" box 10 cents. Be sure you get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Company, and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC."

MR. M. YANT, CRETE, NEB., Says of Our Mild Method of Ouring Cance. You have performed one of the most mirac ous cures in my case ever heard of."

Ous cures in my case ever heard of."

No need of cutting off a woman's breast or a man's check or nose in a vain attempt to cure cancer. No use of applying burning those already weak from the first of the flesh and torturing those already weak from the first of the flesh of persons successfully treated. The flesh of DR. BYE, 701 Bye Bidg., Kansas City, Mo-

GOLD WATCH FREE An American Movement War with Solid Gold Plated case, st wind and set, warranted to ke correct time, similar in appearar to a Solid Gold Watch warranted to a Solid Gold Water also a Gold-Filled Ring, set with a Sparkling Gem, are given free to anyone for selling many 24 Jewelry Novelties, at 10c. pach, Send your name and address for Jewelry. When sold send us the $2.40, and we send the Watch and Ring. FRIEND SUPPLY CO., Dept. 73, Boston, Mass.

Brooks' Sure Cure

Brooks' Appliance. New discovery. Wonderful. No obnoxious springs or pads. Automatic Air Cushions. Binds and draws the broken parts together as you would a broken limb. No salves. No lymphol. No lies. Durable, cheap. Pat. Sept. 10, '01. SENT ON TRIAL. CATALOGUE FREE. BROOKS APPLIANCE CO., Box 1001 MARSHAIL MICE. BROOKS APPLIANCE CO., Box 1991 MARSHALL, MICH.

YOUR FORTUNE

by Graphology. Your past, present and future read from your hand writing. All matters of Business, Love, marriage, and health told by the greatest living graphologist. Free reading sent on receipt of name and advanced the one-cent stems. gist. Free reading sent on receipt of name and address and two one-cent stamps.

Prof. Hugo Lanza, Dept. C, Southport, Conn.

Send us your address and we will show you furnish the work and teach you tree, you work in the locality where you live. Send us your address and we will supplied the business fully, remember we guarantee a clear profit of 18 for every day's work, absolutely sure. Write at once, BOTAL MANUFACTURING CO., Box 17000 Detroits, Mich.

AGENTS, YOUR CREDIT IS GOOD.
We want reliable Agents and ship your first order of Spool Bluing to be paid for when sold. It sells on sight, Agents make $25 to $35 per week. Get started at make $25 to $50 per make $

In this department will be carefully considered any legal problem which may be submitted. All opinions given herein will be prepared at our expense by eminent counsel.

Inasmuch as it is one of the principal missions of COM-FORT to aid in upbuilding and upholding the sanctity of the home, no advice will be given on matters pertaining to divorce. Any paid-up subscriber to COMFORT is welcome to submit inquiries, which, so far as possible, will be answered in this department. If any reader, other than a subscriber, wishes to take advantage of this privilege, it may be done by sending fifteen (15) cents, in silver or stamps, for an annual subscription to COMFORT thus obtaining all the benefits which our subscribers enjoy including a copy of the magazine for one year.

benefits which our subscribers enjoy including a copy of the magazine for one year. Should any subscriber desire an immediate, special opinion on any legal question, privately mailed, it may be had by sending one dollar with a letter asking such advice, addressing the same to "THE EDITOR, COMFORTS HOME LAWYER," Augusta, Maine, and in reply a carefully prepared opinion will be sent in an early mail. Full names and addresses must be signed by all persons seeking advice in this column but not necessarily for publication. Unless otherwise requested, initials only will be published.

Miss K. A. F.—Upon your statements to us we are of the opinion, that you have very little chance of recovering any part of the land you mention, owing to the probabilities that the present occupants have long since established a title either by the undisputed possession for the period of twenty years (which in your State gives title by possession), or by tax sales. (2) We think you could find out whether the document, you mention, is in the possession of this church by corresponding with the trustees of the church. (3) While you would probably find it very difficult to get a good lawyer to take up such a case on a contingent fee, it might be possible for you to do so, as in some few rare instances such suits have either been successful or settlements made, but, as we say, such cases have been very rare. (4) We would not advise you to commence such a suit unless you can get some lawyer to take it upon a contingent basis, as your chances for recovery are too remote; you would probably have to pay the disbursements of the suit.

F. C. A.—We are of the opinion, that such a contract as

F. C. A.—We are of the opinion, that such a contract as you describe could be legally made, but that before trying to enforce it, you should first make sure that you can substantiate the proof.

"A Subscriber."—We are of the opinion, that you cannot legally compel the doctor you mention to treat a patient upon his refusal to do so. You should apply to the Overseer of the Poor, and he will supply the medical attendance you require.

Mrs. M. J. P.—Upon your statements to us, we are of the opinion, that your remedy would be by an action for money procured by fraud from you against the persons who made the misrepresentations to you, and that, in the State from which you write, the statute of limitation runs in four years from the time you first discover that a fraud was perpetrated.

fraud was perpetrated.

A. McD.—We are of the opinion, that you should have had the deed recorded at the time you took the same from your wife, but, that the validity of the deed is not necessarily vitiated by the fact that you did not do so, if the deed is properly drawn and executed and your wife's title to the land was a good one. We think you could have your deed recorded now and that your title to the portion of the land conveyed to you would be a good one, unless some question as to the way you procured the deed should arise. In that event the fact that you held the deed off record would operate against you.

L. C. R.—Upon your statements to use we think that

L. C. R.—Upon your statements to us, we think that you should bring an action against the newspaper you mention for the money they owe and neglect to pay you. It is possible that they are taking advantage of your being so far away to keep your money from you, and it will probably be more expense to you, than the recovery might amount to, to bring such an action. We think, however, that such an action is the only relief the law provides for you.

G. E. S.—We are of the opinion, that you can bring an action for whatever damages you can prove against your neighbor, for the trespass of his pigs and chickens upon your land.

G. E. S.—We are of the opinion, that you can bring an action for whatever damages you can prove against your neighbor, for the trespass of his pigs and chickens upon your land.

Mrs. F. A.—We are of the opinion, that the laws of the State you mention do not require witnesses to a deed, but that they do require that it be drawn in conformity to law and properly executed before a notary public or other proper officer, who usually also witnesses it, in addition to signing the necessary acknowledgment.

A. M. W.—Under the laws of the State from which you write and upon the statement made by you to us, we are of the following opinion: (1) That the widow upon the death of her husband would be entitled to dower of one third of the income of his real estate for her life, and the whole of the personal property absolutely, if it does not exceed $4,000; if it exceeds that amount, one half and $2,000 in addition, and that the balance is divided between the brothers and sisters and their representatives; but that, if there be no father, mother, children, brothers, sisters, nephews or nieces, she would then take the whole estate in any event. (2) A deed or will made by a man of unsound mind is of no validity, provided, of course, this fact is brought before the court by a contest of the will or an action to set the deed aside. (3) Your remedy should be by an action to replevin your property. (4) Your only way, we think, would be for you to file a petition in bankruptcy and to push the proceeding until you obtain a discharge in bankruptcy; and one year after you obtain your discharge you can bring a proceeding in the court in which the judgment was docketed against you and have it cancelled of record.

M. S.—Under the laws of the State, you mention, we are of the opinion, that the heirs of the deceased should all unite and nominate one or more from their number to administer the estate; if they cannot agree upon an administrator, the Judge of Probate will appoint the one he thinks best fitted, or, if none are satisfactory, so chance to establish such a title.

T. H. W.—We are of the opinion, that, if your father survived your grandfather, and if your grandfather left no will, and if his estate exceeded his debts, your father was entitled to his share; and that, if your father has since died, leaving no will, you are entitled to your share of your father's estate. In case this happened a long time ago, either you or your father have probably allowed the statute of limitations to bar you from bringing any proceeding to recover your property, and in that event you would be cut out.

J. J. L.—We do not think that the fact the fact of the status of th event you would be cut out.

J. J. L.—We do not think that the fact, that the man you mention asked you if you would board his workmen, would constitute a contract on his part for the payment of their board, unless you can show that he agreed to either pay for the board, or guarantee the payment.

W. J. W.—We think you have an action for damages for personal injuries against the company, unless they can prove that you in some way was negligent and contributed by some action of your own to your mishap.

S. C. H.—We think upon your statements to us that can prove that you in some way was negligent and contributed by some action of your own to your mishap.

S. C. H.—We think, upon your statements to us, that you could enforce the payment to you, from your mother's property, of the money you have advanced for her and a reasonable amount for your services in taking care of her. We think it would be better for you to adjust this matter now, than to wait until after her death.

Mrs. M. M.—Upon your statements to us, we are of the opinion, that your only recourse against the company you mention would be by an action against them for damages for breach of contract; or, if they are wrongfully withholding your property from you, by an action for the replevin of your property. But, owing to the great distance that you would have to go to bring such an action and the expense it would necessitate, we think a suit would be unpracticable unless there is a large amount at stake. If, as you say, you own the copyright of this song we think you might have it published through another publisher, and in that way throw the burden of bringing the suit upon the firm with which you are at variance.

M. T.—Under the laws of the State, you mention, we are of the opinion, that upon the death of the husband or wife leaving no will, the community property (that is such as is purchased or acquired by onerous title during marriage) all goes to the surviving husband or wife, if the deceased have no children. All real or personal could not afford to say these things unless each statement had been carefully verified by facts. You can buy this land so cheap now, because it has just been opened up to agriculture by the discovery of artesian water and the building of a railroad which is today carrying hundreds of carloads of produce out of this section straight to the country's best markets. Send me the country's best way nath do it made you an and do it now before you forget it. I will send you an and do it now before you forget it. I will send you can an addresses of men in the Texas Guif Coast Country will represent the market of wonderful crops. I will give you makes and addresses of men in the Texas Guif Coast Country will make you a rate of &c a mile railroad fare to Brownsville, Texas, and return, so that you can take a tripto best way. Then you will know that we have not told half of the advantages you can gain by buying some of this land now. You can buy on easy terms and make profits right from the start—the very first year. I will show you a safe and easy way to gain independence in a few short years. Such land as this must rapidly advance in price. So write now to That may seem too good to be true. But it is true. Because land such as you can buy now at $25 an acre in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas is paying profits of $400 per acre and even better, every year, right now—and I will prove it to you. This land is paying such great profits because it is unrivaled in productiveness by any farm land in the country. The climate is like that of Southern California. even tho' it is within 48 hours of Chicago. No extremes of heat and cold—practically no winter. You can raise crop after crop the year 'round—vegetables in midwinter when the markets are anxious to pay the fanciest prices for them. Crops are always sure because you have plenty of pure artesian water on your own property for the cheapest irrigation. This land is safe because it is from 10 placed to 150 fleet above tidewater. No land will produce a greater variety of fruits, vegetables, staple crops, or produce them more abundantly. And this land will produce crops at seasons when no other land can, in addition to producing them at all seasons in which any other land can, There are no long weary months of winter idleness here. No time when this land stands idle while expenses run on. For you can take profits out of this land every month in the year, and it is all within from 80 rods to 4 miles of a railroad station. Nowhere on this globe can you find a finer place to live and enjoy life, or land that will bring you better, surer profits. Remember, these statements are made by one of the largest railroad systems in the world, and we PLACEDO CORPUS CHRISTI BROWNSVILLE Passenger Traffic Manager Rock Island-Frisco Lines The Rock Island-Frisco Lines have no land to sell. We are interested in building up this country. John Sebastian, P. T. M. Rock Island-Frisco Lines, Chicago or St. Louis:

$50 to $400 an Acre Yearly Net Profit from Land which You $25 an Can Buy NOW for $25 Acre

Please send me Texas Gulf Coast Books and full information about low rates, etc.

Name

property owned by the husband or wife at the time of the marriage, together with all acquired thereafter by gift, devise or descent, and the increase of all such lands, remain separate property. All property acquired by the husband and wife during marriage, except in the manner heretofore enumerated, is considered the common or community property.

Postoffice.

heretofore enumerated, is considered the common or community property.

E. H. S.—We are of the opinion, that, if you can fully substantiate all your statements to us, the agent you mention is liable criminally for obtaining money under false pretension; or civilly, he is entitled to no compensation, he having acted for both sides. We think that you should be very slow to proceed against him criminally as the result might be serious to you, in case you failed on your proof.

Every LadyRead This,

Years ago when I was a sufferer, an old nurse told me of a wonderful cure for Leucor-rhea, Displacements, Painful Periods, Uterine and Ovarian troubles. It cured me in one month. It is a simple harmless lotion that can be prepared by any one having the recipe. I will send it Free to every suffering sister who writes to me. Address Mrs. L. D. Hudnut, South Bend, Ind.

THOUSANDS WANT REAL ESTATE Someone wants your property and I know who it is. I have hundreds of buyers, and keep in touch with them through fifteen hundred agents. Send description and price of your property quick.

A. EDGAR DAVIS, Brace Block, Room 430, Lincoln, Neb

MAN

in the REAL ESTATE BUSINESS. No canvassing or soliciting required. Experience unnecessary if honest, ambitious and willing to learn the business thoroughly by mail and become our local representative. Many make $300 to $500 monthly. Write at once for full particulars.

Address either office.

MATIONAL CO-OPERATIVE REALTY OC.

Suite 235, 52 Dearborn St. or Suite 235, 1410 "H" St. WASHINGTON, D. C.

AGENTS QUICK

One of our sgents says be will make $1500 next year. Heve he can. This is the best seller we ever saw. Wit J. B. Foole (Dept. 501) P. Gry. Go. Frederickton The Great Agents Supply House.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 15.)

Comfort Postal Request

How to Get a Lot of Souvenir Postals Free

This exchanging of Post Cards has become a great fad all over the world and we are now helping our readers get thousands of postals without cost.

Get up a club of subscribers to this paper and have your name put in this list free; you will then receive many exchanges in souvenir postals of all kinds, and will be in a position to return the favor to all who see your name in the list and send you cards. Some parties have received hundreds and hundreds of cards from just having their name inserted here. The Publishers simply ask the slight service from you of getting up these small clubs. We know any on a good big paper for 15 cents a year, and we have a giving up assortment of elegant Souvenir Post Gards, or twelve for a club of five. As we have thousand of cards, we are ready to help you get a large colleging in your club, say whether you want them from any good this way, and then exchange with others as a factor of the control of the co sent with the name. The publisher will then send you an assortment of Postals free, per offer above.

William Ray Jr., 1222 7th Ave., Greeley, Col. Florence E. Kimberlin, Roseland, La. Miss Julia Metzler, San Martin, Santa Clara Co., Cal. Rose E. Turner, 69 Madison Ave., Albany, N. Y. Mrs. C. Hirson, Kent, Wash. Gussie Imbert, Waveland, Miss. Anny Baldwin, Box 80, Mt. Vernon, Ind. Rose McCleaf, Fairfield, Pa. Frank Redman, 518 Tusc. Ave., New Philadelphia, Ohio. Thomas P. Reeves, 349 Daly St., Philadelphia, Pa. Mabel Duley, Elcajon, San Diego Co., Cal. Myrtle King, Metropolis, Ill. Miss Billa Frazer, Earlville, R. F. D., 41, Ill. Miss Birdie A. Snow, Santa Barbara, Cal. Miss Veronica Feistler, East Syracuse, R. F. D., 4, N. Y. Ily Pratt, Ferris, Texas. August Ortman, Otjen, Wis. Chas. Kinnach, Cudahy, Wis.

Good Old Songs We All Love.

By special request from many of our readers we print the words of a few songs, and will continue to do so each month as space allows. We invite our readers to send in the words of popular old songs which they think would please our six millions of readers. In copying, give each line of poetry a line by itself, do not run it in, as though solid. Please write on one side of paper only.

DEAR FRIENDS:

I am pleased to send in the old song entitled "The Old Elm Tree," which several have requested. This song was written by my sister's son, Edward Mayhngh of Monongahela, Pennsylvania.

My father, Uriah Applegate, was a miller and the mill stood opposite the old elm, under whose spreading branches we played as children.

One of the earliest courts held in Pennsylvania assembled under this tree and is in the vicinity of the most important scenes and transactions during the Whiskey Insurrection.

In 1886 it was struck by lightning, breaking off one of its many limbs, and last fall the Bell Telephone Company nearly completed its destruction and soon it will be a thing of the past.

In 1883 the author's mother died and in 1896 the words were set to music by Prof. Simeon Bissell of Curry University, Pittshurgh, Pa.

REBECCA APPLEGATE, Elizabeth, Pa.

The Old Elm Tree

How dear to me is the old elm tree That stands by the roadside lone; With arms outstretched it talks to me Of years of care that are gone.

Long years ago my mother mused there Under the old elm tree, As a May Queen crowned with roses fair With brothers and sisters played she.

The grass is green 'neath the old elm tree Where ivies their tendrils twine; O, mother it beckons in vain to thee The old elm tree thy shrine.

O, sing to me of the stately tree Ye assuasive airs of the morn, While lambkins skip in meadows free And the throstle pipes in the corn.

Wake into music the drooping sprays, Sweep gently the leafy lyre; As the Muse who sang in olden days The souls of kings to inspire.

I love to sing of the old tree now,
For mother has gone away;
Sweet memories haunt the shady bough Sweet memories haunt the shad,
Of the old elm tree today,
—Edward H. Mayhugh.

The Dying Soldier Boy

I want to see my mother,
Oh can't, you call her here;
It would not seem so hard,
To have my mother near.
My home is in the mountains,
Up where, the tall pines wave,
'Tis there, I hear the bugle,
A calling for the brave.

But I want to see my mother, Her tender loving eye,
To hear her blessed, blessed voice,
Once more before I die; I long to hear her footsteps To hear her call my name. To hear her prayer beside me, No other prayer the same.

I want to clasp her dear hands,
And fold them to my heart,
And say, God bless you mother,
Once more before we part.
Mother, mother, come to me,
I cannot die alone,
Come quickly, my angel mother,
Oh, don't you hear me groan.

Oh, no! She does not hear me, She does not know my pain, She'll never, never, see me, In my old seat again. She is tending darling sister, I dreamed of her all day; And I hear the little prattler, Saying brother is far away.

Oh, God of chapel hear me,
Pray heaven will give me rest,
Will calm the dying longing
To see my mother's face.
There is peace, I'll trust in Jesus,
He never did complain, He came to save his country, Yet Jesus, too, was slain.

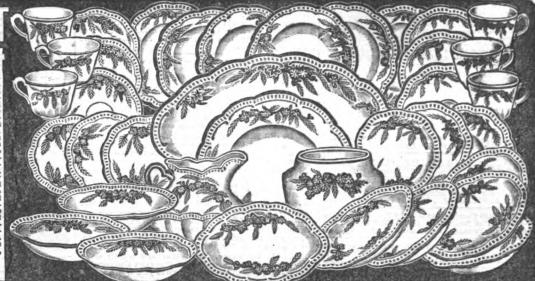

Yes, mother, God has heard me, He has calmed my account He has calmed my agony,
My sins are all forgiven now,
And He is all to me.
Then tell my darling mother,
I am dying peacefully;
Christ Jesus, now is mother,
And Ha takes care of me.

Read This advertisement Carefully. We will give you a Full Size Dinner Set. This is the bygget Walne Ever given away by any firm for so little work-Don't duly.

FOR YOU

It is full size for every-day fumily use, and equal to china used in the best homes. Each piece is full size, decorated with beautiful flowers in all their natural colors, and gold lined. These dishes are made and especially packed for us by the only pottery receiving a gold medal at the St. Louis World's Fair; each piece is sostamped. You will always be proud to ensertain your friends with a set of these dishes. Write today. We will send you 12 beautiful new colored art pictures, all copied from world famous paintings. By our special plan you can easily dispose of them at 250 each. Send the 83.00 you receive to us, and we will send you our beautiful full size decorated and gold lined dinner set without any delay. We are an incorporated company and give bankreferences. An extrahand-painted premium, useful and ornamental, given if you write at once. You can also earn Furniture Shoes and Stockings, Curtains, Out Glass, Watches, etc.

Watches, etc.
M. S. ROBERTS, Dept. 309
52 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

NA. Would you like to know what is going to happen to you in the future?—What your health will be?—Who and when you will marry?—What your health will be?—Who when you will marry?—What your health will be?—Who would it help you to be forwarned in advance of sickness?—Financial loss?—or deception? Would you not thank anyone most heartily for showing you a favorable opportunity that might lead to happiness and riches?—If so, send your name, birth date and 2c stamp, and I will tell you the above things by astrology which makes all this plain, and much more too. I want to send FREE a reading of your life which will show just what fate has in store for you. It will tell you the lucky and unlucky periods of your life. It will explain your character and capabilities, It will guide and assist you in business, love, marriage, society, etc. It will explain the influence of the planets under whose sign you were born. It will help you to secure perfect happiness and real success and avoid the dangers and pitfalls of life. Don't confound this with mere guess work fortune telling. It is as different as day is from night. To me your life is as an open book and I want to read to you from its pages, Simply send your date of birth, and a 2c stamp for this free reading of your life by the world's greatest astrologer. Address Prof, H. A. Astro, Box 3693. Philadelphia, Pa, AS YOUR STAR REVEALS IT!

HARRY RICH Big List of Descriptions and Photos FREE (Scaled), Standard Cor. Club, 108 Avers Ave., Chicago.

FITS EPILEPSY. Its only sure treatment. I insure an entire and rapid cure, to stay cured for life; I ask no fee. Dr. Kruse Co., St. Louis, Mo.

SIX BLADED CHOPPING KNIFE for FREE samples to agents, prepaid. 75 articles, new and useful. STAMPING CO., ANDOVER, N.Y.

A MONTH, and expenses advanced to men or women to travel and distribute samples of our goods. RELIABLE MFG. CO., Dept. D, 340 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

or Morphine Habit Cured. Free trial treatment. We spe-cially desire cases where other remedies failed. Confidential. HARRIS INSTITUTE, Room 558 400 W. 23d St., New York.

$150 PER MONTH AND EXPENSES
Salary or Commission-Introducing our King Separator and Aerator; Produces best creamery butter from cream or milk, sweet or sourin less than 5 minutes. Write for our free sample and salary proposition. Deking AFG CO., Dept. 2, CHICAGO, ILL.

SI.OO EACH FOR NAMES

of people having CANCER. This man got 8 on our plan for 3 names. "Received money for names. Was well pleased. Will send more names." WM. UPHOUSE, Mil-ford Station, Pa. We refer to this paper or any bank. Send names of all people who have CANCER to SEPTICIDE CO., 234 Fourth St., Milwaukee, Wisa

MARRY Photos and addresses of rich and handsome people who want to marry, sent free, sealed. Write to day THE PILOT, Dept. 19 168 N. Hamlin Ave., Chicago, III.

MARRY WEALTH - BEAUTY. Marriage Directory FREE TO ALL. Pay when married. Entirely new plan. Send no money for particulars. Select Glub, Dept. 15, Tekonsha, Mich.

Souvenir Post Cards. Views, Comics, Holiday, Birthday, Leather, Specialties, etc. Post Card Albums. Best cards at the lowest prices to collectors and dealers. Our large catalog (5000 subjects) and full value in handsome samples of different styles 10 cents. National Post Card Co., 726 Logan Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

BIG VALUE FOR 10 CENTS, 20 Popular Songs with words and music, 20 Broties of Adventure, 26 Fisterses of Presty Girls, 20 new Games for young folks: 25 Pictures of the Bresidents, 50 Ways to Make Money, 1 great Jedie Bock, 1 Book on Love and Couriship, 1 Book on Magic, 2 Book on Letter Writing, 1 Dream Book and Fortune Teller, 1 Cook Book, 1 Bose Ball Book gives rules for all popular games, 100 Conundrume, 50 Verses for Autograph, Alburns. Out this out and return to us with ten centra and we will send all the above by mail 4s cones.

J. H. PIKE, Box 53, South Norwark, Conn. A BEAU tiful neck, face and arms. Don't pay 50c. but send 10c. for sealed package to make your skin soft and white and cure pimples, freckles, moth, black head, wrinkles, &c. A perfect skin and food powder combined 'Warranted absolutely pure. TOILET GOMPOUND GO. Box 1927, Boston Mass.

Bound Books of Sheet Music FREE

We have just secured a large lot of Home Songs bound in Music Album form. These songs are printed on the best of heavy paper, regular sheet-music size. This 32-page book has a fine colored picture cover and contains the following ten familiar Home Songs, with words and music: Home. Sweet Home; Way Down upon the Suwanee River; My Old Kentucky Home; The Old Oaken Bucket; Nearer My God to Thee; Afterwards; One Sweetly Solemn Thought; The Last Rose of Summer; Love's Old Sweet Song; Alice, Where Art Thou.

Anyone desiring to have this fine collection of celebrated music can now secure the book free by sending a club of only 215-cent subscribers to this paper. Get them a club of only 215-cent subscribers to this paper. Get the early. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

We will give you FREE Genuine Gold Piated Stem Wind and Stem Set watch, fully guaranteed to keep sood time for one year, and TWO pretty 14 karat Gold plated sold rings. As shown in cut, one ring is set with sparkling simulation Diamond, other is a handsomely chased band ring. We will give these three places, watch and two rings, free by mail to anyone who sells for us 24 places of our beautiful assorted jewelry at 10 cents each. We want you to have this fine watch and the two rings. Just send us your name and we will mail the jewelry at 10 cents each. We want you to have the 24 places send us the $2.0 and the watch and two rings are yours. They don't cost you a cent. We are headquarters in this trust premium business and treat you best. Send us your name. F. R. BIRD CO., Dept. 15, BOSTON, -- MASS.

AMMA capital and are anxious to introduce our house everywhere, and will give these beautiful premiums for a little help in your locality. The doll is 17 inches high, dressed in latest style from hat to shoes, satin finished waist and skirt trimmed with lace, Floradora hat elegantly trimmed, complete underclothing, open-work stockings and neat buckle low shoes. Dolly opens and closes her eyes and also speaks quite plainly, calling "papa" or "mamma" when you ask her to. Dolly is very pretty, with long curly hair and big brown eyes. Dolly's Dinner Set consists of 27 pieces as follows: 6 plates, 6 cups, 6 saucers, 6 teaspoons, tea pot, sugar and creamer. These dishes are handsomely decorated in colors. Sendus your name and we will send you 10 art pictures which sell to your friends at 25 cents each, send us the $2.50 collected and the same day remittance is received we will ship you this beautiful talking and sleeping doll, fully dressed as described, and the set of doll's dishes neatly and securely packed in box. Our pictures are new, large size, in many beautiful colors and finished with magnificent lithographed frames. They sell on sight. We run all the risk and take back pictures if they do not sell easily and quickly. 6006 CANN, President, 65 Washington St., Dept. 712, Chicago.

Pattern SIGNET RING. 12Cs
Warranted three years. Any initial enraved FREE. Sont postpaid with Premium List for 12 cts. Send to-day.
SHELL NOVELITY CO.,
ept. C F, 83 Chambers Street, New York.

A GENUINE 21 JEWELED 3 15 QUARANTEED FOR 25 YEARS and a handsome "Gold" watch chain and c Send us this ad and write if you want Lad Genta Watch & watch chain, & we will send for Fass Exammation & after you cannot Rheumatism Quickly Cured! LatestRemedy! Free Trial! Write Dr. R. L. Hammond, 1., Woodsboro, Md.

$3.75 and express charges and they are yours. @

VISITING CARDS—Name on 25 neat cards 10c. 18 Fun cards 15c. Matteson, 315 46 St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

600 Second-Hand BICYCLES $3 to $8.
Bargain list free. Dept. C3, Mead Cycle Co., Chicago

G. S. A. MONEY Agents wanted. Circulars free, P. E. Cheney, Urbana, Ohio.

$10 Cash Paid Per 1000 FOR CANCELLED Polar Blad to For Price Lin Paid.

$36

A WEEK AND EXPENSES TO MEN with rigs to introduce our Poultry Goods
JAVELLE CO., Dept. 17 Parsons, Kausas.

FREE 1000 Cards from all over U. S. Particulars and 8 Beautiful XMAS POST CARDS, 10c.
BOSTON SOUVENIR POSTAL Co., 150 School St., Boston, Mass.

LADIES to work on piecework $3.00 per doz. All materials furnished. No Canvassing, steady work stamped envelope. Best Mfg Co, Champlain Bldg, Chicago.

PICTURE AGENTS Portraits and Frames—lowes
Ons "SEPIOLE" a great seller. Write for easilog and terme of free samples.
MODEL PORTRAIT CO., 188-2 S. Western Avenue, Chicago. $960 PER YEAR Salary and expenses, to Poultry Remedies. Bank ref's. Don't answer unless in earnest. ACME MFG. CO., A-40, East St. Louis, Ill.

WANTED MEN TO LEARN BARBER TRADE. Scholar-tions. Few weeks completes. Money earned from start. Big wages to graduates. Write nearest branch. Moler System of Colleges, New York City, Chicago, Ills., St. Louis, Mo., Kansas City, Mo., New Orleans, La., Cincinnati, Ohio, Denver, Colo., Omaha, Nebr., Ft. Worth or Dallas, Texas.

We Will Make You a Present of $100.00 give you a splendid suit of clothes every 100.00 ninety days, enlarge your picture free and pay you a salary of $85.00 per month and all traveling expenses to take orders for the greatest and most reliable Portrait House in the World. All this will be guaranteed. Address R. D. MARTEL, Dept. C 81, Chicago, Ill.

The only Pipe made that cannot be told that cannot be told THIS IS A PIPE a large pipe full of tobacco and lasts for years. Agents outfit and a 25-cent sample by mail for 10e., and our Big Bargain Catalog Free. Address, J. H. SAYRE, MFR., Jacksonville, Ohio.

GOLD WATCH FREE
AND RIVE
AND RIVE
AND RIVE
AND RIVE
AND RIVE
An American Movement Watch with Solid Gold-Plated case, warranted to keep correct time; equal in appearance to a Solid Gold Watch warranted for 25 years; also a GoldFilled Ring, set with a Sparking Gem, are given free to any one for selling only 20 Jewelry Novelties at 10 cents cach. Send name and address for Jewelry. When sold, send us the $2 and we send you the Gold Watch and Ring, Write today. Address

EAGLE WATCH COMPANY, Dept. 67, East Boston, Mass.

TO WOMEN WHO DREAD MOTHERHOOD!

Information How They May Give Birth to Happy, Healthy Children Absolutely Without Pain—Sent Free.

No woman need any longer dread the pains of child-birth; or remain childless. Dr. J. H. Dye has devoted his life to relieving the sorrows of women. He has proved that all pain at child-birth may be entirely banished, and he will gladly tell you how it may be done absolutely free of charge. Send your name and address to Dr. J. H. Dye, 107 Lewis Block, Buffalo, N. Y., and he will send you, postpaid, his wonderful book which tells how to give birth to happy, healthy children, absolutely without pain; also how to cure sterility. Do not delay but write today.

SOLO . ACCORDION

MEN'S FURNISHING GOODS AT BELOW WHOLESALE PRICES

Under this heading all questions by COMFORT readers on subjects not related to the special departments elsewhere in the paper will be answered, as far as may be. COMFORT readers are advised to read carefully the advertisement in this paper, as they will often find in them what they seek through their questions in this column. They will thus save time, labor and postage. Letters reaching this office after the 25th of the month cannot be answered in the issue of the following month.

Amalia, St. James, Minn.—You can use the recipes anyway you please, but you will find it expensive to advertise them, and you cannot get applications for them any other way. You would have to charge at least a quarter each, and there are hundreds of cookbooks on the market ranging in price from a nickel to $2. If you can find a publisher you might try them in book form. But you would have many, very many competitors.

H. C. B. Sinking Spring Pa—Here letely the

H. C. B., Sinking Spring, Pa.—Here lately the gentleman has taken to disappearing. He has several homes. We believe he has been cured of his dyspepsia.

M. C., Portland, Me.—They are as reliable as any in this line of business. The cost of publishing is about $25. Your possible profits are not so large on royalty, but we advise that you have it published on royalty. Talk to some of your Portland music dealers. Possibly they might want to publish.

B. H. W., Elmira, N. Y.—We don't know of any magazine devoted to telephony. Suppose you make inquiry of the telephone manager in your town. Elmira has a telephone system, hasn't it?

S. L. G., La Farge, Wis.—Harvard publishes a catalogue. Write to President, Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., asking for what you want.

Subscriber, Petersburg, Va.—It is not necessary to obtain a license as far as we know, though your town may have such a license law. Ask your mayor. Also ask him about the taxing of agents. R. J., Colman, S. D.—We know of no such firm. Chose who have such work have it done in their offices Homeless, Culner, Ind.—There are such schools, but their tuition is usually about $600 a year. We advise you to try something else.

T. D., Cedar Rapids, Ia.—Write to Fulton Stamp
Co., 102 West 42nd Street, New York City.

C. P. G., Eustis, Fla.—We do not know the address. Write to Barnett & Brown, 162 Pearl Street, New York City, where you will probably get the information. Inclose postage.

mation. Inclose postage.

Mrs. H. G., St. Louis, Mo.—We have no information in that direction. Ask the Health Commissioner in your own town. He ought to know.

If H. C. Merrill, asking in this column for a picture of Lafayette, will write to Mrs. J. E. Wood, 178 East Main St., Marlboro, Mass. he may find what he is looking for. Also to S. N. Crafton, Edwards, Ind., and M. B. Shannon, Center Street, Elenville, N. Y.

Mrs. E. E., Republic, Wash.—If you have a real cure for tuberculosis you need not go so far as Paris to find plenty of physicians to exploit it. Submit your formula to any physician in your own town, then through him send it to the hospitals in Seattle, Spokane and Tacoma. The United States wants the glory of such a discovery.

T. E. R., Richmond, Ind.—Swathmore, Delaware Co., Pa.

Co., Pa.

E. P., McCreary, Ala.—You might be able to make some money in a small way knitting for the local trade, though you would have to compete with the large manufacturers, unless your friends, to help you, would buy from you. You could make inquiry and find out what they think about it, One kind of knitting machine is about as good as another. You would have to decide that for yourself, after reading their circulars.

F. D., China, La.—You ought to know your own near-by towns better than we do. See advertisements in New Orleans papers.

E. S. S., Hubbell, Neb.—You will have to be born again to become a novelist like Mary J. Holmes. They are not made, they are born. We advise you to give up literature right now and not try to get a copyright.

G. C. S., Brookfield, Mo.—Write to G. B. Calman.

G. C. S., Brookfield, Mo.—Write to G. B. Calman, 42 East 23rd Street, New York City, for the informa-tion. Expert knowledge is necessary.

The Home Finder

The Publisher is obliged to discontinue this department on account of lack of space and the misuse of this column, by persons actuated by motives of personal gain, and in justice to our patrons and ourselves, we have been forced to abolish this feature. Anyone having property to advertise, or who desire to secure help, can have a notice inserted in COMFORT at the regular advertising rate, which will be furnished by addressing Advertising Department COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

SONGS PUBLISHED ON ROYALTY By New York's Big Musile Firm. No charge for writing music. NORTH AMERICAN MUSIC GO., Dept.L., 59 W. 28th Street, New York.

LOVE Marriage, Lucky Days, FREE
Business. Everything about your FREE oscopes. Send name, sex, birth-date, if married or single and a Prof Edison, No. 1, Y Street, Binghamton N. Y

X-RAY WONDER Everybody wants 10c with 1 you can apparently see the 10c hones through your fisch, the lead in a pench, or transparent; lots of fun. Postpaid 10c, 3 for 20c. FREE with each criter the Fight & Kissing Scene more inplication. CAmeristone, Stac., 66, (Chicago

BLUINE MFG. CO., CONCORD JCT., MASS.

(The Old Reliable Firm.)

COLD FEET

are banished. Warm feet induce sleep. The most comfortable thing that you ever put foot into is the DeFreest-Stover SLUMBER SLIPPER Will keep the ankles warm.
Worn in bed and out. Made of a handsome fleecelined knit fabric:

tops beautifully embroidered with two Pairs for 25c.—Postpaid. silk. Dainty colorings. For men, women and children.

Send Size of Shoe. Different sizes if desired.

The DeFreest-Stover Mfg. Corp., waterford, N.Y.

Make Your Own Rugs

with Brown's Patent Rug Needle.
Beautiful rugs easily and quickly made. No frame required. Price 25 cents by mail, 28 cents with full instructions.
Agents wanted on liberal terms. Sole Importers. BUCKNAM & VANDERPOEL, Dept. C198W.Broadway, New York

Fireman Electric Motorman Locomotive Engineering Prepare yourself at home. Positions open in every state. Name position for sample lesson. INTER RY CORR. INST., DEPT. N, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Own cards for cards, books, newspaper, Card Press $5. Larger $18. Money saver, maker. All asy, printed rules. Write factory for catalog, presses, type, paper, cards.

THE PRESS CO., Meriden, Conn.

HUSTLERS WANTED EVERYWHERE $25 TO $30 Made Weekly Overseeing Out Distributing Circulars, packages, overseeing Door Advertising. Experience not needed. New p No canvassing. Address MERCHANTS OUT DO ADVERTISING CO., 83 Dearborn St., Chica

SONG-POEMS and music published on Royalty. We write music and popularize. Popular Music Publishing Co., 902 Enterprise Bldg., Chicago.

SELL TOBAGGO and Cigars, locally or trav-sion; full time or side line. Good pay and promotion. Address Morotock Tobacco Works, Box J56, Danville, Va.

Wanted-Good man with rig, in each county to sell staple goods to farmers. Good salary and expenses. Curiosity seekers need not answer. Rex Co., Dept.4, East St. Louis, Ill.

per month, expenses advanced. Men to travel advertise, post signs and leave samples. SAUNDERS CO., Dept. C, Jackson Blv'd., Chicago.

WRITE Words A Sorts
THE Water and present to BIG N.Y. Publishers
Control now for Free Booklets And we will write the music and present to BIG N.Y. Publishers A HIT will make you RICH. Send now for Free Booklet Metropolitan Music Co., 730 St. James Bidg., New York Drops Dead While Playing Dirge at Friend's Funeral.

Charles L. Martin, a bandmaster of Louisville, Ky., dropped dead while playing a dirge for his friend, Andrew Johnson, whose sudden death occurred Wednesday while the marriage ceremony of his son was being performed.

Two sudden deaths from heart disease. One from sorrow and one from over-joy. Both could have undoubtedly been prevented had they heeded nature's positive warnings. We speak of heart disease striking people down who are in the best of health and vigor. This is not true. Heart disease is indeed terrible and treacherous, but in every fatal case symptoms had no doubt long existed, but possibly were not recognized. Thousands of deaths occur of those who had wrongfully treated themselves for diseases of the stomach, lungs, kidneys or nerves when the trouble was all with the heart. Drugging the system for these supposed troubles further weakens the already overworked and diseased heart, until from some special excitement or over-exertion comes the terrible shock—sudden death.

Thousands of others know they have heart disease, but have the old-fashioned and wrong idea that their case is incurable. They spend their years in misery and live in expectation of sudden death when a cure is within their reach. Modern medical science has proven that weak hearts are as curable as weak lungs, stomach or eyes.

The symptoms of heart disease are not hard to discover. Pain is not, the only one. If you have any of the following symptoms you may be in serious danger and are as liable to drop down dead as the people you read about in the papers. These are the symptoms: Fluttering, Palpitation, Shortness of Breath, Tenderness, Numbness or Pain in the Left Side, Arm or under the Shoulder Blade, Fainting Spells, Dizziness, Hungry or Weak Spells, Spots before the Eyes, Sudden Starting in Sleep, Difficult or Asthmatic Breathing, Dreaming, Nightmare, Choking Sensation in Throat, Oppressed Feeling in Chest, Cold Hands or Feet, Painful to Lie on Left Side, Dropsy, Swelling of the Feet or Ankles, (one of the surest signs), Neural Ankles, (one of the surest signs), Neuralgia around the Heart.

I want every sufferer to use my Heart Tablets. I believe they will cure you as they have many thousands of others. You need not take my word for it, for I will gladly send you by mail, postpaid, a box for trial absolutely free of charge. There are no conditions to the offer. You will never be asked to pay for the Tablets. The trial treatment is yours for the asking.

They are not a secret or "patent" medicine and a complete list of their ingredients will be sent you with your trial treatment. All reliable and honest physicians will endorse them. There is no part of the country from which I cannot furnish testimonials of remarkable cures; cases pronounced incurable by attending physicians and where all hope had been abandoned. Here is a sample of the thousands of letters from grateful people on file at my office:

my office:

"For 20 years I suffered with heart disease and nervous prostration; my symptoms were pain in left side, arm and shoulder, palpitation, faint spells, cold hands and feet, shortness of breath, pain and gas in the stomach. Your Heart Tablets have entirely cured me."

M. E. Brown, Box 28, Runge, Texas.

Don't risk death by delay, but write today for the free trial treatment which will be sent to you by return mail, postpaid. It will cost you nothing and may save your life. Address
DR. F. G. KINSMAN, I Hunt Block, Augusta, Maine.

MEN'S FINE SUIT $4.95

To widely advertise our great tailoring shops and make our fine clothing and low prices famous, we will sell 10,000 men's suits of NAW SUE WOOL CASSIMERE at $4.95 each and as a special premium and adv. we will give free with each suit at $4.95 a pair of handsome, latest style, fine fancy striped worsted trousers.

The Suit is Graham's finest cassimere, a firm, heavy, fast color fabric of perfect weave and beautiful changeless finish. It is stylishly made up by expert tailors in latest single breasted sack style to fit perfect, is serged lined, elegantly finished and is guaranteed better than exclusive clothiers $8.00 to $10.00 suits or no sale.

The Free Trousers The Free Trousers which we give with the suit at 34.95 are made of beautiful dark fancy striped worsted, are very stylish, finely tailored and perfect fitting. This is the most astonishing and wenderful clothing offer ever made and we openingly challenge any firm to Send $1.00 giv o firm to Send $1.00 deposite equal it. Send $1.00 deposite equal it. Send $1.00 deposite equal it. Send and send

99 NEW SONGS for IOE

BED-WETTING CURED but a disease.
Cure guaranteed. SAMPLE FREE
Dr. F. E. May,
Bloomington, Ill.

YOUR FORTUNE TOLD FREE. Send 2c. stamp and birth date and I will send you a pen picture of your life from birth to death.

MADAM TOGA. Dept. 11, Fairfield, Conn.

MUSIC LESSONS FREE SEND FOR OUR Violin, Guitar, Mandolin, etc. Write American School of Music, 511 Manhattan Bullding, Chicago, Ill.

LADY SEWERS wanted to finish off shields at home; $10 per 100, can make 2 an hour. Work sent prepaid to reliable women. Send reply envelopfore particulars. UNIVERSAL CO., Dept.29, Phila., Pa

WANTED Good Man in each county to represent and advertise Hardware Department, putout samples, etc. Salary $21.00 weekly. Expense money advanced. Dept. N, The Columbia House, Chicago.

BED-WETTING WINEY SAMPLE FREE. Dr. E. W. Tonkin, Box 24 2 Kdwardsburg, Blek.

PILES Absolutely cured. Never to return.
A Boon to Sufferers. Acts like Magic,
Trial box MAILED FREE. Address,
Dr.E.M.Botot, Box 978, Augusta, Me.

GENUINE CAMEL'S HAIR $1.99 WOOL HORSE BLANKET.

The most remarkable horse bian ket offer ever made. A remarkable horse states and the sever made. A remarkable horse some states and the sever made. A remarkable horse some sever day, year, a summer sever made and sargain and a sa mple of our weery day, year, as trength double cable twisted with filling of fine selected hand socured came! shark wool, making the strongest, best waring, warmest and fiseciest 3 pound Horse Blanket in the world, regardless of make, brand or price. Colors are rich and attractive, harmoniously blended into wide stripes of gray and dark brown, alternating with neat, narrow stripes of red, white, dark green and orange; made with neaty stitched edge and genuine russet leather strap and buckle firmly sewed and rivoted to blanket.

Send Us 50c Depos! and we will send this pound genuine came! shair wool horse blanket.

Send Us 50c Depos! and we will send this pound genuine came! shair wool horse blanket.

Send Us 50c Depos! and we will send this pound genuine came! shair wool horse blanket.

Send Us 50c Depos! and we will send this good and the sagent will return to your how horse sees the blanket of the sagent will return it at our expense and we will instantly refund your 50c. Order the blanket today or write for ear big free special harness catalog pricing horse blankets at 89c up, harness at 852 51 up and all kinds of horse goods at correspondingly low prices. Order or write today.

John M. Smyth Go. Madison Street, Chicago

CHICAGO

FREE!

Absolutely Free!

To the Sick, to the Suffering, To Anybody With Any III

THERE IS A CURE—A CURE FOR YOU

Proof of Which is Sent Free Delivered Free-Free to the Sick Free to You

I have a cure for organic disease, for special cases and for general ill health. I believe it will cure you and I offer this to you in the form of free treatment in solemn faith and absolute belief that it will stop disease and make you well.

My treatment I stand here ready to send you without one dollar of expense—without one solitary cent of cost—absolutely without money and without price.

Dr. Kidd's treatment has cured thousands—it has made thousands well again—it has brought the rosy blush and glow of health to sunken cheeks and wasted tissues—it has revived and uplifted, benefited and cured where other medicines were disappointing failures.

We have treated a half million sick people—all diseases—many just like yours. Think of it—a half million sick people. Think of the experience we have had and compare it with other doctors. Then you will understand one of the reasons why I am successful. I have passed the experimental stage—I have learned how to treat disease successfully. You can have the benefit of all this vast experience for the asking.

No matter how many remedies you have tried. No matter how many other doctors have failed. Curing the desperately sick is my specialty. I have cured thousands of so-called "incurables."

You ask me "Why should I believe all this?" I don't ask you to believe me. I have cured patients in almost every town and hamlet in the United States. You must believe them. Then again I am ready and willing to prove it to you at my expense.

Will you let me prove it?

Will you let me send you the proof at my expense?

HEAR ME NOW.

lask you to hear me and to read this announcement, because it is made in this publication not on my say so, but upon the reports of thousands of proven demonstrated cases—people who are now themselves again in complete bodily well-being and health.

Now here is what I want to do:

I want you to try my treatment.
I want you to prove it.
I want you to test it.
I want you to know what it will do.

I have a right to ask you to accept this great free offer. I have put my heart and soul into the perfecting of these remedies and I know what they will do. They work within, and when they reach the center of the cause of disease, strike it down will do. They work within, and when they reach the center of the cause of disease, strike it down and destroy it.

Dr. Kidd's treatment cures not partly, but absolutely, rheumatism, kidney troubles, heart disease, partial paralysis, bladder troubles, stomach and bowel troubles, piles, catarrh, bronchitis, weak lungs, asthma, chronic coughs, nervousness, all female troubles, lumbago, skin disease, scrofula, impure blood, general debility, organic vital ailments, etc., are cured to remain and continue cured. If you are rich—that means nothing to me—if you are poor I do not bar you. My treatment is offered to the public by this public announcement for the reason that it's time in the practice of medicine that the poor and rich should share and share alike in their right to health and happiness. Under this great offer there is no class distinction, no favoritism, no discrimination.

The Proof of My Cure is Free.

When you write to me, tell me just briefly in your own words and in your own way, what your trouble is; let me know how you are and how you feel. Tell me plainly, and I will send you the remedies free, prepaid, and delivered into your hands entirely at my cost without any conditions of any kind to hamper you in getting well. You can be well if you want to be. You must get well—you shall get well—my treatment will make you well, and in this offer now I'm doing all and more than others do to the cause of deserving sick.

I send you the test and proof plainly wrapped, prepaid, delivered free, in good faith and on honor. Send me your name and your address and a brief statement of how you are, and I will do my part and the treatment will do its part if you will give it the fair trial it deserves. It will restore youndly you—make you well. No bills of any kind—no papers to sign; all I ask you to do is to take this proof treatment and prove it at my cost. Write me at once.

Write me at once.

DR. JAMES W. KIDD,

Box 1137, Fort Wayne, Ind.
NOTE.—Dr. Kidd, his methods and his offer are exactly as represented in every respect.

FORTUNE Send a 2 cent stamp, address, and birthdate for fortune worth having, the greatest of all.

TOLD FREE all others and it comes true. Please try me and see. A. B. SALVO, BEPT. 18, STATION A, BOSTON.

So many inquiries are received by COMFORT concerning the health of the family that a column will be devoted to answering them The remedies and advice here given are intende only for simple cases; serious cases should be referred to physicians, not ous. COMFORT readers are advised to read carefully the advertisements in this paper, as they will often find in them what they seek through their questions in this column. They will thus save time, labor and postage. Address The Family Doctor, Comfort, Augusta, Maine.

H. W., Cleveland, O.—We do not keep a record of addresses. If you want to ask that the party write to you we can give your address and possibly you may get a reply.

write to you we can give you may get a reply.

Mrs. C. A., Wapwallopen, Pa.—There is no cure for rheumatism, though there is relief for it in acute stages. It results from so many causes that what answers in one case does not in another, and it is difficult to prescribe. If it is the result of climatic conditions, removal from them will practically cure it. Rheumatism calls for a physician's care who can study his patient.

Anxious, East St. Louis, Mo.—The cold cream preparation is harmless as far as we are able to judge. On some skins, however, it might have a bad effect, but most of them would take it kindly. We think you may risk it.

We think you may risk it.

Brown Eyes, Elm Creek, Neb.—The hairs may be plucked out of the mole with pincers, and if they are numerous and cause the moles to become inflamed, some soothing application should be made, but further treatment in the removal of the moles is dangerous. If you are afraid to pluck the hairs out, you could keep them clipped close with scissors, or a razor.

New Reader, Baton Rouge, La.—You will find several advertised in Comport.

M. S., Cylinder, Iowa.—You are mistaken about what caused your ailments. Indirectly it had something to do with it, but you have got into your present condition by not taking care of yourself as you should. Get your mind off of yourself and eat plenty of nourishing food, take plenty of exercise in the sunshine and in pleasant company, read what the Physical Culture magazines tell your kind to do, and follow their advice. Turn over a new leaf in your whole manner of thinking and living and you will even up to the average health of mankind.

A. J. Cadir. Ill—Lewicz, Mind of the cause when the cause of the cause of mankind.

A. J., Cadiz, Ill.—Lemons, like any other good thing, should be used temperately. Don't get too much of a good thing. One or two a day will not do harm, if you take the juice in plenty of water, but don't become a lemon sucker.

N. V. H., Merritt, Ill.—If you have an infallible cure for consumption, you have something the wisest and most progressive scientists have not yet been able to discover. You can find plenty of sufferers to try it on, and a half dozen cures will put you on the way to fortune. Make the cures under the direction of a physician, and then let the Chicago newspapers know of it and your fame will spread over the world.

Curious Invalid, Red Lion. Pa.—We believe it is

Chicago newspapers know of it and your tame will spread over the world.

Curious Invalid, Red Lion, Pa.—We believe it is a tradition in medicine that it is a safe thing to satisfy the craving of an invalid, because the craving is nature calling for what is needed, and it might be right to follow it in your case. However, you had better talk to your physician about it. At the same time ask him to examine you for something else besides rheumatism. We are rather inclined to think your original complaint has changed to something else. You should be able to walk, and we believe if you made up your mind to do it that you could. Have you ever let an osteopath give you treatment? Your trouble is more in your mind now than anywhere else. Talk to your doctor about it. If your house should catch fire you would probably jump out of your chair and run for safety. Brace up and stand up.

Green-eved Belle, Washington, D. C.—Yours is

Green-eyed Belle, Washington, D. C.—Yours is not a case for newspaper treatment, nor for your own treatment. Your only safe plan is to consult a physician. Your present condition is not at all serious and a physician will have you all right in a very short time.

Will Mrs. Griffitts, mentioned in this column, send her address to Mrs. Elizabeth Lanier, Vicks-burg, Miss.?

H. F. C., Lake Benton, Minn.—Have you ever thought it was indigestion that was causing your heart disease and kidney trouble? We can only guess from the little you tell us, but we think if you will ask your doctor to give you a course of treatment and a proper selection of food to cure indigestion that you will find relief.

J. E. H., Beaver, Okla.—By all means go to the doctor who can give you his personal and direct attention. The others may be all they claim to be, but the doctor who sees his patient constantly is the one to rely on as the best. But he must know his profession, and not be a bungler at it. By following his advice faithfully you should soon be strong and well.

lowing his advice latericity you should soon be strong and well.

C. M. C., Stetson, Va.—There is some indigestion, but probably a weakness from your typhoid attack is causing most of the trouble. If you will have your doctor prescribe a simple diet for you, and will drink very little water, no coffee, tea or intoxicants, and take the kind of exercise described in Physical Culture magazines, you will in the course of a year or so get back your health. Write to Editor Physical Culture Magazine, New York City for copy of health rules. Keep in touch with your physician, and get his advice right along, or you may never get well.

R. M. C., Larkins, Fla.—Horehound is a remedy in throat and lung trouble. The ordinary way of taking it is in simple candy. Horehound tea is also another form in which it may be taken, and the better way.

Subscriber, Kittanning, Pa.—We can't tell what the growth is on your finger, but we think you may be able to remove it by massaging it thoroughly several times a day, and cause its absorption. Simply rub it firmly, using the thumb or finger, and continuing it until the blood can get into circulation through it. tion through it.

Nutmeg, New Haven, Conn.—It is to some extent inherited. You can overcome it in some degree by a strong exercise of your will, but you will always feel it under excitement. (2) Granulation of the eyelids may be removed by the application of dry sulphate of copper, but it must be done by a physician. Consult someone you know. There are plenty of good ones in New Haven. Go to the city hospital doctors, if you want to save expense.

M. S., Cynthiana, Ky.—If you have found no relief for your catarrh in the remedies you have tried, it is no doubt due to climate, and you should get it is no doubt due to climate, and you should get in a dry climate, either hot or cold—Arizona or Colorado.

E. G., Hillsboro, Ind.—You will find cures for this rouble advertised in Comport, and they are as good as we can give you. With any of them, and constant care on your part, the cure will be effected.

R. H. D., Houston, Va.—The pain in the back which you feel at night, and not when you move around during the day, is one form of rheumatism, or neuralgia. It is caused by lying down and impeding the circulation which results in congestion and pressure on the nerves. When you get up in the morning, and before you go to bed at night, if you will take five minutes exercise, which will bring the muscles of your back into action, you will find quick relief. Read up a little on physical culture.

X. Y. Z., Cleveland, Ohio.—Try benzine on the hair to remove the nits. It will not injure the hair if put on at night, and washed off in the morning.

if put on at night, and washed off in the morning.

J. B. H., Athens, La.—You can only cure your sore fingers by removing the cause—that is to say, you will have to stop your ball playing, at least for a time. No medicine on earth can act upon them as long as you keep knocking them. (2) You can remove the bumps on your face by eating plain food, with very little grease, and drink no coffee. Your blood is out of order.

J. B., Greylock, Mass.—Stillingia is not much used by modern physicians for brouchitis. Thirty grains is the average dose. An excellent remedy now in use is to boil a teaspoonful of Friar's balsam in a pint of water, and inhale the fumes through a funnel made of a paper. Place the small end in the vessel, and put the face into the large end, then breathe in deeply.

Jerry, the Backwoods Boy

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3.)

"Well, they are not to me by a great sight. I can think of a good many that I should prefer. Can you direct me to any place where I can obtain shelter for the night and something to eat."
"No—none near," was the reply, and the Indian seemed ready to lie down again, when Dick, feeling that, if this resource failed him, he should be compelled to remain all night exposed to the inclemency of the weather, said more urgently:

of the weather, said more urgently:

"Think a little, my good friend. I know you can call to mind some place, however poor, where I may at least be sheltered from this accursed rain. Perhaps this will from this accursed rain. Perhaps this will help your recollection."

As he said these last words he held up a coin which, in spite of the darkness, the Indian could see.

The bait took, for the red man snatched it from his hand, and before the traveler, startled by the suddenness of the proceeding, had decided whether to construe it into an acceptance of his offer, or as an act of pillage, the Indian decided the matter by taking a step forward, and saying sententiously, "We lead, you follow," and marched steadily onward, showing, by his freedom from uncertainty, not only that he was accustomed to the place, but that his sight was keener than that of his companion. panion.

Those are most likely to indulge in sus-Those are most likely to indulge in suspicions of their fellow-men who are least worthy of trust themselves, and Dick Clarke, many parts of whose life would scarcely have borne a very rigid examination, could not help feeling some doubts as to the good intentions of his savage guide.

"Who knows where the fellow is leading me?" thought he. "I may have got myself into a worse scrape even than staying out into a worse scrape even than staying out all night exposed to this pouring rain. I couldn't see the fellow's face very distinctly, but he looked rather sullen. And then the way he grabbed the money was a little suspicious. He may be luring me to some place where he can murder me for what money I may have about me, though for that matter I must confess he need not choose a darker or more convenient spot choose a darker or more convenient spot than that where we met. However, it may be as well for me to keep a sharp lookout." So saying, or rather thinking, Dick felt carefully to see that his pistols were ready to use at a moment's notice, in case the Into use at a moment's notice, in case the Indian should see fit to act on the offensive.

"I own," soliloquized Dick, as he was much in the habit of doing, "that I should not like to have my scalp dangling from yonder fellow's waist. It's a kind of death that would have more terrors for me than any on the battlefield. However, I see we are getting to where the trees are not quite so thick, and I can see a little better."

In fact the Indian had guided him by a winding path to the skirt of the wood, where, although he was more exposed to the force of the storm, it seemed at all events less dismal than in the forest.

Dick Clarke began to feel greater confi-

Dick Clarke began to feel greater confidence than at first in the fidelity of his guide, and pressed forward to the side of the latter, who was striding before him at a distance of perhaps a rod.

"Where are you going to carry me?" he inquired, looking about him in vain for light of some kind which should indicate a house.

"To tavern," answered the Indian with

"To tavern, answered the industry laconic brevity.

"Tavern? Indeed, I am glad to find that they have any institutions that remind one of civilization. To my mind this is about the wildest country I ever visited. I don't see how anybody can be contented to live becabouts." hereabouts.

The Indian talked English but little, but could understand better than he could make use of it. At all events it was probable he comprehended the not over complimentary remarks upon his neighborhood from the pointed nature of his reply.

"Why come here then?" he asked significantly.

"Oh, as to that," said the other, after a moment's pause, "we sometimes have to go where we would rather not. I shouldn't where we would rather not. I shouldn't have come here if I hadn't had something to bring me here, you may be sure of that. However, be that as it may, I'm here, and I feel a little interest about knowing when I am likely to find shelter. How far off is this tavern that you propose to guide me to?"

'About three mile," said the Indian,

"About three mile," said the Indian, as indifferently as if he had not got the distance to traverse as well as his companion.
"Three miles!" exclaimed Dick in dismay. "Well, that's what I call a very pleasant piece of information under the circumstances. It's only to be hoped that when I get there I shall be repaid for the trouble I have taken in traveling to it. But have they got into a commaratively onen as we have got into a comparatively open path, I might as well mount old Sorrel here, who I am inclined to think will be as glad to find shelter as I am."

The rest of the journey passed in silence.

The Indian was reticent by nature, and Dick Clarke was occupied by thoughts of

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

This story, full of exciting incidents, of a boy, young in years, yet mature in judgment, will hold the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of more mature years. If not a subscriber send 15 cents before the price advances. Read the next chapter, "All Things Are Possible to the Daring," thereby keeping the thread of the story without a break.

GUARAN-TEED DAYS

th removable lid as inging ornament bas inging and draw ce tra grate, operate through drop door a side. Superbly cl three triple silves niekel plated foot rails, nickel steel band around top, nickel drafts and a handsome nickel and bronze and the complex 22x22 in. Store space; takes 7-in. pipe. Important Fastures are cooking lids unter-swinger drafts

FREE STOVE CATALOGUE catalogue and feed doors, and shake and freed fr

WRITE TODAY FOR

Big Hardware Bargains

WEATHER STRIPS.12 FT. LENGTHS 7 2

mail This wonderful catalog represents a gigantic two million dollar stock of hardware, consisting of Carpenters.
Plumbers and Blackmiths Tools and Supplies, Builders' Hardware and Sup-lies.
Tools and Supplies, Builders' Hardware and Sup-lies.
Razors and Barbers
Sup-plies, Safes, Scales,
Wire Netting, Vehicle
Hardware, and everyother article known to the hardware business, our goods are best standard makes, same as all ard makes, same as all are from & to $7$ less than any retail dealer's sell, but our prices are from & to $7$ less than any retail dealer's See sample prices is lifus-

Gream Sep-

rators We are head. arters for Cresm parators, Dairy Sup-ling Incubators and NAMELED BATH TUB John M. Smyth Co. 150-151 West Chicage

Drink Habit Easily Gured

Wives and Mothers If you have a loved one whom you wis to cure of Drinking, I will gladly tell you free of all cost just what I used to cur my husband, who drank for over 2 years. Write me in confidence. Mrs. Margaret Anderson 2114 Maple Ave., Hillburn, N.Y.

$1.CLUSTER RING

THE GORDON CO., Dept 3C Bridgeport, Cons.

OLD SORES CURED eers, Scrotulous Ulcers, Varicese Ulcers, Indolem Ulcers, Mercurial Ulcers, White Swelling, Milk Leg. Fever Sores, all old sores. Positively no failure. By mail 50c. J. P. ALLEN, Dept. 15 St. Paul. Minn.

GALL STONES ARY LIVER DISEASE. Write me all about it. Will tell of a cure FREE. Address. COVEY, 388 E. Chicago Ave., Chicago, III.

PILES Instant relief, final cure in a few days and never returns; no purge, no salve, no suppository. Remedy mailed free. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 606, New York, N.Y.

CANCER Cured at home; No pain, knife, plas-ter or oils. Send for Free Treatisa. Add. A. J. Miller, M. D., St. Louis, Ma. Tell Your Fortune; send you Life Reading, also Phote' your future Husband or Wife, with True Luck Charm and Wedding Ring. All for 10 CTS, and your birth date, LOCK BOX 100, DEP. F PALATINE, ILL.

AGENTS WANTED Sell $1 bottle Sarsaparilla for 35c; best seller; 200 per cent profit. Write today for terms. F. R. GREENE, 25 Lake St., CHICAGO.

OPIUM and Morphine habits cured. TRIAL FREE. Dr. M. D. Waterman, 14 Lexington Av., N.T.

TAPE-WORM EXPELLED ALIVE WITH HEAD STADE OF AN ANTERD, BOOTLEY FREE WITHOUT FREE PROPERTY OF THE STATE ST., GENERAL ST., G

ASTHMA Instant relief & positive cure. Sample maled free to any suffere. "Physician" Box &, Augusta, Maine.

GOLD TEETHFILL THE LATEST FAD that fits any tooth. Rastly adjuncted shell will Looks the regular dentiest work. Foole then B. Over two million soid. Everyhody wants a gold both.

CARDS Send So stamp for New SAMPLE BOOK of all the FIREST Styles in Gold Bereide Calling Cards for 1907. We sell GRYUINE CARDS, 56 Trash. UNION CARD CO., 86. Columbus, Ohio-and Premium Articles. Sample Album of Finest Cards and Biggest Premium List, all for a Scentstamp. OHIO CARD COMPANY, CADIZ, OHIO.

916 CARDS 20 New Songs, 100 Rich and 1 Acquaintance Cards, 81 Ander Fun Cards, 1 and 1 Acquaintance Cards, 81 Ander Fun Cards, 1 ats. CROWN CARD CO., Columbus, Ohio.

AGENTS WANTED in every county to sell the Good commis- Transparent Handle sion paid. Pocket Knifes, 5 From $75 to $300 a menth can be made. Write for terms. Novelty Cutlery Co., No. 76, Bar St., Canton, O.

Will Sell singly or together, for cash, 3 Remingtons, 2 Smith Premiers, 1 Hammond, 1 Underwood, 2 Centurys, 1 Densmore, 10 tables, 1 roll top desk. E. O. Rardin, Receiver, Box 967, Orange, N. J.

POST GARDS NATIONAL CAPITAL. S beautiful souvenir cards our club plan, 10c. You will receive cards from everywhere for exchange. LEF & CO., Washington, D. C.

HOW TO MAKE A TALKING MACHINE clear directions & drawings.

Bubler Pub. Co., Dept. T, LYNN, MASS.

Diseases Cured by My New System. Examination, Opinion and Book Free. DR. J. F. SHAFER, Kidney Specialist, 51 Penn Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

STHMA-I want to tell all who are afflicted with Asthma, what cured me after 46 years of suffering. G. F. ALEXANDER, 45 Exchange St., Portland, Maine.

SONG POEMS WANTED, also Musical Compositions. We pay Royalty, Publish and Popularize. We Compose and Arrange melody FREE of charge. GEO. JABERG MUSIC CO. 124 W. 7th St., Cincinnati, O.

EETo Portrait Agents
New Catalogue of Frames,
16x20 Crayons 60c.; 16x20 Pastels 80c, Address THE THRIFT ART CO., 7 Blue Island Ave., CHICAGO.

$90 A MONTH Paid Weekly is more than you make, write us. Permanent manager wanted in your district. Man or woman. Capital or experience not required. C. W. STANTON CO., 318 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

FREE All matters of business, love, marriage and health plainly and correctly told by America's greatest Star reader. Patrons atomished and satisfied. Send 2c. stamp and birthdate. Prof. I.EE, Dept. 53, Natick, Mass.

STOVE OFFER.

WONDERFUL REDUCTION IN PRICES .-

Stoves reduced to prices heretofore unknown or unthought of.

69 CENTS buys this wonderful value,
Model Airtight Sheet Iron Heating Stove.
Large assortment of other airtight heaters at correspondingly low prices. Wonderful price reductions, astonishing offers, all shown in our new Special Free Stove Catalogue. Write for our Free Stove
Catalogue at once.

Catalogue. Write for our Freezatalogue at once.

$1.89 buys this 1997 Model Recocopater oak Heating Stove for coal or wood: has every upon the free control, one levery handsomest, strongest and oak heaters made. Our new line is heaters of all kinds, the wonder-rice reductions and our great stove big, full size, six-hole steel range, complete as illustrated with big, deep, porcelain lined reserved. Veryell charging closet, you do not need the reservoir, shelf or warning closet. A market of the reservoir warning closet. velous steel range bargain more fully shown in our FREE SPECIAL STOVE CATALOGUE.

$22.58 buys this, our Acme

OUR OWN MAMMOTH FACTORY

at Newark. Ohio, the largest stove foundry in the world, we make every variety of the highest grade stoves made in the world and we sell them direct to the user at about one-half the lowest prices you can buy elsewhere. Every stove is covered by our binding guarantee, is guaranteed to reach you safely, free from break or damage of any kind and we agree to furnish you any repairs in the years to come. Wonderfully low freight charges. We will tell you just how little the freight will be on any stove to your town and the freight charge is so small it will surprise you. We have an immense stock on hand of every kind and size of stove and can ship your stove the day we get your order and it will reach you in just a few days.

OUR GREAT FREE OFFER. Cut this ad out or on great card or, a letter simply say. "Send me you will receive, postpaid, tree," and send to us you will receive, postpaid, tree," and you will receive, postpaid, tree, and you will receive, postpaid, tree, and you will receive, postpaid, tree, and you will receive, so the stove catalogue with all these and many other wonderful offers, all the marvelous price reductions, the most attractive stove proposition ever heard of, the greatest stove offer we or anyone have been able to make. Remember also, if you buy a stove from us you share in the profit, we give away free to our customers hundreds of valuable articles and this great Profit Sharing Plan, the merchandise absolutely free to you, is all explained in the stove book. Don't buy a stove at home or elsewhere until you get this great stove catalogue and all our offers. WRITE US THIS MINUTE. Address,

SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., Chicago, III.

"Virtue itself offends when coupled with for bidding manners."—Bishop Middleton.

In order to meet the demand for information made by COMFORT readers on the kindred subjects of Etiquette and Personal Appearance, this column will be devoted to them, and all questions will be answered, but no inquirer shall ask more than two questions each month. We would suggest to readers to cut this column out and paste it in a scrap book. Address letters to Etiquette Editor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Golden Locks, Scranton, Pa.—You can make your hair curly, or wavy, only by mechanical means—curling irons, or papers. Unless hair is naturally wavy or curly, it cannot be made so by medicaments. (2) The best thing for moles is to let them alone. It is dangerous to tamper with them. You will only make them look worse, and may cause permanent injury.

Edna May, Memphis, Tenn.—He should have given you his right hand. That he did not was probably because he thought the left showed a kind of careless familiarity that could only exist between two people who were on very friendly terms. Next time he does it, give him your left hand as carelessly as he gives you his. That will probably cause him to ask you why and you can tell him. You may send him your photograph if you want to. you want to.

Dick's Sweetheart, Glasgow, Mont.—You did quite right in accepting as escort the man who had been polite to you at the dance. The circumstances were such that you could have hardly done otherwise. There is no reason why an engaged girl shouldn't act sensibly.

Martha, Middleport, O.—Rules of etiquette do not apply to runaway couples. If the parents objected to their son marrying the girl, and she comes back to their town on a visit, there isn't any calling unless the runaways have been forgiven. If they have been forgiven, then the usual rules apply—if people want to be conventional—and the residents call on visitors first, as they would on any other visitor.

any other visitor.

Golden Locks, Edinburg, N. D.—It is more polite for the man to ask the girl to write to him. Indeed, the man who has to be asked to write, makes a very indifferent correspondent. The same applies to asking him for his picture, though, if he shows it to her, and she wants it, she may with propriety ask him for it. Attentions of this sort are usually proposed by the man.

True Blue, Mulhall, Okla.—With three people to one seat in a buggy, two of them being women, the man sits in the middle so he can drive. If one of the others drives, then she should occupy the middle. (2) The hostess may thank the people who tell her they have had a pleasant time, and say she is very glad.

Brown-eyed Bess, Hamburg, Ark.—Ask him why is very glad.

Brown-eyed Bess, Hamburg, Ark.—Ask him why he did not call or write, as he said he would. If he cannot explain, then you may have nothing more to do with him. (2) A semi-brunette may wear any color if she selects what is not too pronounced.

M. A. W., Silver City, Miss.—In giving presents at Christmas or other times always try to give something which will be of use to the recipient. For the old gentleman you might select a handsome cane, or a comforter for his neck in cold weather, or a pair of gloves. For the young man a scarfpin. It is easy to find out what they would like to have. Ask them if you can't find out any other way.

Sunshine, Osakis, Minn.—A girl of fourteen, five feet five inches tall, should wear her dresses just above her shoe-tops.

above her shoe-tops.

Troubled Sue, Waterloo, Iowa.—You may reduce the size by the use of Vaucaire's astringent, prepared as follows: Aristol, two grams; white vaseline, thirty grams; essence peppermint, ten drops. Rub the bust gently each night with this ointment then cover with a compress wet with this lotion: Alum, two grams; acetate of lead, thirty grams; distilled water, one hundred grams. Cover the compresses with oiled silk, or cloth, and leave on for twelve hours, or until morning, if not convenient to keep on longer. Some time will be required, but the remedy is about the most successful in use.

J. T. B., Butte, Mont.—Pimples are usually not but the remedy is about the most successful in use.

J. T. B., Butte, Mont.—Pimples are usually not serious and the use of ordinary lotions will remove them, taken in connection with proper diet. This case seems to be one not to be so simply treated, and we advise you to consult a physician. Unless you are willing to attend to this case carefully it may develop into a disturbance of the entire system which will never be cured.

H. R. S., Winston, Mont.—There are so many causes of red nose that it is difficult to say just how to treat yours, as you give no details. If it is not inherited, if you do not use alcoholic drinks, if your diet is plain and your habits good, here is a lotion which may be of service: Tannic acid, fifteen grams; spirits of camphor, five ounces. Don't use soap and water on your nose, but substitute any good cold cream as a cleanser.

Unhappy Fanny, Danville, Ill.—Here is a lotion

Unhappy Fanny, Danville, Ill.—Here is a lotion which if used each night at retiring may prove to be all you wish for an oily skin: Rose water, six ounces; elder flower water, two ounces; simple tincture of benzoin, half an ounce; tannic acid, ten grams.

T. B., Cedar Rapids, Iowa.—Use as a skin food, not oil, but coccanut butter. Lemon juice is used for whitening the skin. It will be of some benefit if well diluted and not used too often. Borax is also used. Beware of arsenic. It may be effective in one way, but it is dangerous and should not be used except as prescribed by a physician.

Orange Lily cures Leucorrhoea, Ulceration, Displacement, Painful Periods. For a free trial address, Mrs. H. L. Fretter, Detroit, Mich.

Catarrh Advice Free.

Catarrh Advice Free.

The attention of our readers is called to the really generous offer in this issue of our paper on page 20; the offer of helpful and valuable medical advice, absolutely free of charge, on the cure of Catarrh; from one of the great specialists and public benefactors of this country—Catarrh Specialist Sproule. For twenty-one years he has had wonderful success in curing Catarrh, and because he sees how many people stand in need of honest and reliable advice on the cure of this ailment, he will give this advice free of all charge to any who write and ask for it. We advise our readers to turn at once to Catarrh Specialist Sproule's generous offer on page 20 of this paper and we urge them to read every word of it, and send today for whatever medical advice they stand in need of. Catarrh Specialist Sproule's offices are at 233 Trade Building, Boston, and all letters should be addressed to him there.

a full-voiced musical instrument, beautiful in tone and appearance, and suitable for furnishing music for enterinstrument and brings a high price in all the stores. We give it away absolutely free for selling only two dozen pieces of our exclusively designed, swell Jewelry. Nobody will refuse to buy of you, as our Jewelry is genuine gold plate and the best people wear our goods. Sell the Jewelry at 10 cents a piece and return our $2.40, and we will send the Accordion at once and guarantee satisfaction. This is not a cheap toy. It is a perfect instrument with ten keys, two stops, double bellows, chonized case and nickel-plated valves and trimmings. You will be delighted with it and with our goods. Write to-day. Address booklet. Address Fine Art School of Drawing, Studio 716 Omaha Building, Chicago, Ills.

FRIEND SUPPLY CO. DEPZ. H 473, BOSTON, MASS

Our STEM-WIND AMERICAN morement wach has SOLID GOLD LAID

CASE, ENGRAYED ON BOTH SIDES, Fully warranted timekeeper; of proper size, appears equal to SOLID GOLD WATCH GURANTEED 25

YEARS, We give it FREE to Boys or Girls for selling 20 Jewelry articles at 10c, each. Send address and we will send Jewelry protpaid; when sold each $2.00 and we will positively SEMD watch EXACTLY AS DESCRIBED by return mail; also GOLD LAID CHAIN, LAD IESS or GRAYTS STYLE. LIBERTY JEWEL CO. DEPT. 111 CHICAGO

35

Mother's Remedies Co. Dept. A 1000-35th St. Chicago

Has latest design motor, governor, springs and bearings. Wind the motor spring and move the startlever, and the governor regulates the speed. Absolutely the most valuable talking machine ever offered. We give it free for selling only 40 packages of BLUINE at 10 cents a package sellurate at 10 cents a package BLUINE sells very easily. Send us your name and address. We trust you and send your talking machine and Columbia record the same day that you return our $4.00 received from the sale. We guarantee satisfaction. BLUINE MFG. CO.. 664, Mill St., Concord Junction, Mass.

MRS. LUCILE AINSLEE

Send me your name and date of birth with a 2 cent stamp, and I will send you a horoscope of your life from the cradle to the grave, absolutely free of cost, I can tell you just what to do to become happy, and can so lay the future before you, that you will bless the day you first wrote to me.

When you look around among your acquaintances and can see those who are successful both in family matters and in business and money affairs, who you know are no smarter than you are yourself, don't you often think well "That's their luck," but I have had bad luck you say to yourself, now let me tell you something and there is no question about it, they are successful because they have been advised by some competent astrologer. This you can put down as certain. oger. certain.

HIRAM GUNTHER

Read what a few of my Patrons say:

I followed the advice you gave me, and everything has turned out grandly. Charley and I are now married, and in our happiness we pray that you may live long to continue in your grand and noble calling.

NELLIE ARMSTRONG.

Your wonderful power is beyond my understanding. You not only told me about affairs that I thought no one new anything about, but all you predicted has come true. MRS. LUCILE AINSLEE.

I bless the day when I wrote to you—it was the turning point in my life—both in family and money HIRAM GUNTHER.

Following your advice about becoming an actress, I am now on the road to fame and fortune. My last season was a complete success, and I now have many flattering offers from several managers, and just to think when I first wrote to you, I was only a poor country girl with no future. I owe it all to you, dear Professor, how can I ever pay you?

GRACE KARINTH.

STATE OF CONNECTICUT, Ss., COUNTY OF FAIRFIELD,
BRIDGEFORT, July 15, 1005.
I do hereby certify that I have compared the foregoing copies of photographs and testimonials with the original photographs and testimonials and that the same are correct transcripts therefrom.
In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my official seal.
J. D. TOOMEY, JR.,
Notary Public.
Remember I send you this

Notary Public.

Remember I send you this horoscope absolutely FREE. Don't hesitate a moment, but write at once and I will prove to you just what I say. I have made thousands happy and prosperous and can do the same for you.

GRACE KARINTH.

NELLIE ARMSTRONG. Simply send me your name and birth date with a 2-cent postage stamp, and I will do the rest. Shakespeare said: The stars above us govern our conditions. Why should you doubt? Send at once and learn what the stars have to tell you.

Address PROF. LEO AMZI, Dept. A. 6, Bridgeport, Conn.

ASTHMA CURED

SCHIFFMANN'S ASTHMA CURE nstantly relieves the most violent attack and insures com-proble sleep. NO MATTING for RESULTS. Being used by halation, its action is unmediate, direct and Opticaline and the come is the result in all curable cases. A single trial and the come is the result in all curable cases. A single trial and the come is the result in all curable cases. A single trial and the come is the result in all curable cases. A single trial and the come is the result in a single case in a single case. The result is a single case in a single case in a single case. The result is a single case in a single case in a single case.

THIS BEAUTIFUL RING FREE!

YOUR NAME VALUABLE

to us. If you will send us your name we will send you FREE by return mail this very pretty ring and our jewelry catalogue. Cut out and send us this advertisement and ring

Songs & Music Free Yankee Doodle Boy, 46 Minutes from Broadway, So Long Mar Not Because Your Hair is Gurly, Wait Till the Sun Shiness Neill Livery body Works but Father, Cheyenne, Can't You See! The Lond Dreaming Love of You, Mary's a Grand Old Name, Why Don't You Try?, In the Blade of the Old Apple Tree, You're as Welcome as the Flowers in May, Tesain Blue Bell, Hely City, OVER 200 SONGS, with MUSIC for pinno, latest hits, So Buy JOKES, 12 Acquaintance Cards. All sent FREE lifyou send 10 cents for or story paper one year. HOME SWEET HOME, Dept. 39, OHICAGO, ILL.

CEREAL COOKER Allows steam to circulate over and into the kernels making them tender and easily digestible. Outfit of 5 attractive novelties prepaid Free to agts. Dept. X ousehold Novelty Works, 25 Randolph St., Caleago WRITERS, send us your poems. We compose the music. Simple songs often make great hits. Established 35 years. GROOM MUSIC CO., 8 Steinway Hall, Chicago.

FAST-SELLING PICTURE

It is Easy Io

E AR N

beautiful premiums by selling only few jars of "Mother's Saive"
at 35 cents a jar.
The greatest, Croup, and Coids. The world never saw the equal for guaranteed. It doesn't pay to sell trash. Sell Mother's Saive; what the people want and will buy again, and see how quickly you can earn this fine quality Tea Set of 56 full size pieces, beautifully decorated in neat floral design, blue or green. Genuine Arcade ware, in newest shapes, for selling 2 doz. Also Tea Sets, Iron Seds, Silver ware, Rugs, Clocks, Curtains, Kitchen Cabinets, Skirts, Furniture and anything in the line of household goods.
NO MONEY HEQUIRED IN ADVANCE. Send name and address and we will mail sky jars with large premium list and full instructions. Satisfaction guaranteed.
If you cannot sell them you may return—no harm done.
For 13 yrs, our Fremiums always the best. Compare with others.
Mother's Remedies Co. Dept. B1060-35th St. Chicago

ST. ELMO

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 19.)

not deny that he exerts a very singular, a wicked fascination over me. I dread his evil influence, I avoid his presence, and know that he is utterly unworthy of any woman's trust; and yet—and yet—Oh, sir! I feel that I am very weak, and I fear that I am unwomanly; but I cannot despise, I cannot hate him as I ought to do!"

but I cannot despise, I cannot hate him as I ought to do!"
"Is not this feeling, on your part, one of the causes that hurry you away to New York?"
"That is certainly one of the reasons why I am anxious to go as early as possible. Oh, Mr. Hammond! much as I love, much as I owe you and Mrs. Murray, I sometimes wish that I had never come here! Never seen Le Bocage, and the mocking, jeering man who owns it!"
"Try to believe that somehow in the mysterious Divine economy it is all for the best you and Mrs. Murray, I sometimes wish that I had never come here! Never seen Le Bocage, and the mocking, jeering man who owns it!"

"Try to believe that somehow in the mysterious Divine economy it is all for the best. In reviewing the apparently accidental circumstances that placed you among us, I have thought that, because this was your appointed field of labor, God in his wisdom brought you where he designed you to work. Does Mrs. Murray know that her son has offered to make you his wife?"

"No! no! I hope she never will; for it would mortify her exceedingly to know that he could be willing to give his proud name to one of whose lineage she is so ignorant. How did you know it?"

"I knew what his errand must be when he forced himself to visit a spot so fraught with painful memories as my church. Edna, I shall not urge you; but ponder well the step you are taking; for St. Elmo's future will be colored by your decision. I have an abiding and comforting faith that he will yet lift himself out of the abyss of sinful dissipation and scoffing scepticism, and your hand would aid him as none other human can."

"Mr. Hammond, it seems incredible that you can plead for him. Oh! do not tempt me! Do not make me believe that I could restore his purity of faith and life. Do not tell me that it would be right to give my hand to a blasphemous murderer? Oh! my own heart is weak enough already! I know that I am right in my estimate of his unscrupulous character, and I am neither so vain nor so blind as to imagine that my feeble efforts could accomplish for him, what all your noble magnanimity and patient endeavors have entirely failed to effect. If he can obstinately resist the influence of your life, he would laugh mine to scorn. It is hard enough for me to leave him, when I feel that duty demands it. Oh, my dear Mr. Hammond! do not attempt to take from me that only staff which can carry me firmly away—do not make my trial even more severe. I must not see his face; for I will not be his wife. Instead of weakening my resolution spoken to St. Elme, who did not appear at breakfast; but when she passed him in the hall an hour later, he was talking to his mother, and took no notice of her bow.

Now as the carriage approached the house, she glanced in the direction of his apartments, and saw him sitting at the window, with his elbow resting on the sill, and his cheek on his hand.

She went at once to Mrs. Murray, and the interview was long and painful. The latter wept freely, and insisted that if the orphan grew weary of teaching (as she knew would happen), she should come back immediately to Le Bocage; where a home would always be hers, and to which a true friend would welcome her.

At length, when Estelle Harding came in with some letters, which she wished to submit to her aunt's inspection, Edna retreated to her own quiet room. She went to her bureau to complete the packing of her clothes, and found on the marble slab a box and note directed to her.

Mr. Murray's handwriting was remarkably graceful, and Edna broke the seal which bore his motto—No one wounds me with impunity.

"Edna: I send for your examination the contents of the little tomb. which you guarded graceful, and Edna broke the seal which bore his motto—No one wounds me with impunity.

"Edna: I send for your examination the contents of the little tomb, which you guarded so faithfully. Read the letters written before I was betrayed. The locket attached to a ribbon was always worn over my heart, and the miniatures which it contains are those of Agnes Hunt and Murray Hammond. Read all the record, and then judge me, as you hope to be judged. I sit alone, amid the mouldering, blackened ruins of my youth; will you not listen to the prayer of my heart, and the half-smothered pleadings of your own, and come to me in my desolation, and help me to build up a new and noble life? Oh, my darling, you can make, me what you will. While you read and ponder, I am praying. Aye, praying for the first time in twenty years! praying that if God ever hears prayer, He will influence your decision, and bring you to me. Edna, my darling! I wait for you.

"Your own St. Elmo."

Send Nothing But Your Name and Address. We will send you, postpaid, 5 large handsome Stamped Dolles and 5 Pin Cashion Covers, Holly, Violet and Strawberry patterns, ready for embroidering. Sellthem at 10c. each. Send us the $1.00 collected and we will promptly send you the beautiful Roman Gold Finish, Seamless Nethersole Bracelet FREE.

Ah! how her tortured heart writhed and bled; how piteously it pleaded for him, and for itself! (See December number for text for illustration.)

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

This serial, weaving a romance of unusual interest around Edna Earl, a young girl, whose faith in God's eternal goodness remains firm, though her heart bleeds, when she loses all dear to her, her meeting with St. Elmo, his surprise at her expressed disapproval of his bitterness and hate, the trust he imposes, the promise he exacts, all this fascinatingly told, will interest our readers, and be continued with marked strength in the December number of COM-FOET. If you are not a regular subscriber, or your subscription expires soon, do not fail to send in your renewal, and also one or more new subscribers at the present 15c. yearly rate, as all old subscriptions are promptly removed on expiration. Read notice on another page. "13 Month's Subscription 15c."

Back numbers of COMFOET cannot be furnished. Read our offer below.

"ST. ELMO" IN BOOK FORM

So many have expressed a wish to possess a copy of the famous story "ST. ELMO." in book form to preserve, or for the library, that we bought a large quantity to give away as premiums, of an excellent edition, printed on extra quality book paper from new, clear type, bound in cloth, with a very attractive halitone cover portrait of both St. Elmo and Edna, with embossed title. This is a suitable presentation or library edition worthy of any home.

For a club of only 7 yearly subscribers to COMFORT at 15 cents each, we will send you a copy of this beautiful book at our expense.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

VISITING CARDS Good quality, latest styles, with name namily printed with name and type of the Str. Summing free, painted, Strategy, 100 for Str. Summing free, PRINTER, BEEBE PLAIN, VY.

$8 Paid Fer 100 for Distributing Samples of Washing fluid. Send 6c. stamp. A. W. SCOTT, COHOES, N.Y.

LADIES: Make Sanitary Belts $1.20 Dozen. Stamped en-velope particulars. Lenox Co., Dept. G61, Chicago.

Marriage PAPER FREE, many very rich

Distributers wanted for Circulars and Sam-ples. Tack signs. Nothing to sell. Universal Advertising Co., 28B Orexel Bank Bldg., Chicage

WANTED AGENTS in each county to sell "Fam-ily Memorials." Good profits, steady work. Ad. Campbell & Co., 10 "A" St., Elgin III.

FREE! FREE! FREE!

As short segons and go down to my grave, Edna Earli's the control of the segons and go down to my grave, Edna Earli's The minister sighed heavily. The minister sighed heavily. "You cannot understand my interest in St. "You go the will make you may not my interest in St. "You go the will make you may not my interest in St. "You go the will make you my interest in St. "You go the will make you may not my interest in St. "You go the will make you may not make you my interest in St. "You go the will make you my interest in St. "You go the will make you my interest in St. "You go the will make you my interest in St. "You go the will make you my interest in St. "You go my interest in St. "You go the will make you my interest you make in the st. "You go my interest you make in the st. "You go my interest you make in the st. "You go my interest you make in the st. "You go my interest you make in the st. "You go my interest you my interest you my interest you my interest you my interest y

BUYS THE NEW IMPROVED MODEL K ECONOMY HAND CREAM SEPARATOR

400-pound per hour capacity, the best separator made in the world, provided we receive your order within 30 days. SEND NO MONEY. Cut this ad out and we will send this big, 400-pound per hour capacity, New Improved, Model K Economy Hand Cream Separator by freight, C. O. D., subject to examination. Examine it at your nearest railroad station, and if you are convinced it is the equal of any separator you can buy anywhere for $100.00, then pay the railroad agent our special thirty-day offer price $24.95 and freight charges. The separator weighs about 200 pounds and the freight will average about $1.00 for each 500 miles.

TAKE THE SEPARATOR

HOME, give it a thorough trial, commade, and if you do not find this new, big. 400-pound per hour Model K Economy Hand Cream Separator will skim closer, and handle better than any other separator made regardless of name or price, if you are not satisfied it will outwear any other separator made, if you are not convinced it is in every way the highest grade cream separator made in the world, you can, any time after giving it the most thorough trial for any part of 60 days, return it to us at our expense and we will immediately return your 224,95 together with any freight charges paid by year.

this OFFER IS GOOD ONLY FOR 30

THIS OFFER IS GOOD ONLY FOR 30 DAYS. To get this new, big 400-pound per hour capacity Model K New Improved Economy Separator for only $24.95, less than one-half the price for which separators are sold to dealers in carload lots, and one-fourth the price at which inferior separators are sold at retail, to take advantage of this extraordinary $24.95 price WE MUST RECEIVE YOUR ORDER WITHIN 30 DAYS. WE HAVE 3,000 of these new, big 400 pounds per WITHIN 30 DAYS. WE HAVE 3,000 of these new, big 400 pounds per his actions with the separators on hand, and as a most extraordinary offer and inducement to dispose of them all within 30 days, we make this astonishing offer: Send no money. Pay the $24.95 to the railroad agent after the machine has been received, then try it 60 days and if the separator is not entirely satisfactory return it to us and get your money back. THIS SEPARATOR is covered by a written, binding always furnish you repairs in the years to come. We guarantee the machine to do everything that any other separator will do and do it easier and better. Don't wait suffer the machine to do everything that any other separator will do and do it easier and better. Don't wait order must reach us who your order immediately. Your order must reach us who your order immediately. Your order must reach us who your order immediately. Your order must reach us who your order was per hour capacity Model K Economy Separator, the pounds per hour capacity Model K Economy Separator, the pounds per hour capacity all to write for our free Cream Separator Catalogue. Address, SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., Chicago,

You know the value of this beautiful complete full family size decorated 124 piece Breakfast, Dinner and Tea Set and a 26 piece set of Silverware, Knives, Forks, Spoons, Butter Knife and Sugar Shell. It is fit to grace the table of a queen. The dishes are exquisitely decorated with a floral design as delicate in color as a natural flower; each piece outlined in gold and the knives, forks, spoons, etc., are made by the old reliable firm of Wm. Rogers & Son after a rich sterling silver design, guaranteed pure Pomola silver and warranted for a lifetime. Every lady knows what it would cost to buy a table service like this from her dealer, yet every good housewife can become the owner of it by simply using our Teas, Coffees, Soaps (Laundry and Tollet), Starch, Baking Powders, Spices, Corn Starch, Gelatine, Rice and other household necessities in her own home and telling her friends about them. Our prices are the lowest for absolutely pure goods and we guarantee only full and honest weight. These beautiful dishes are made for us by one of the largest potteries in this country and are of superior quality, heavily underglazed, and we pack and ship them free of charge. Write today and we will send you our price list, plaus and catalogue showing any number of other valuable articles which we give with only a $5.00 order. You will be surprised and convinced that we give more valuable premiums than any other house in existence. We don't ask a cent until you are satisfied. We want only an opportunity to prove to you our honest business methods—then we know you will be our lasting friend.

THE CO-OPERATIVE SUPPLY DEPT. 52, 345-347 S. Canal St., CHICAGO, ILL.

IT GIVES NEW LIFE. A Greater Discovery than Electricity.

wonderful results achieved by a Discovery made here some years ago. A prominent M. D., late City Physician, publicly endorsed the same, while the Mayor, President of the Council, Postmaster, City Solicitor and other leading men gave it official endorsement. Since then from all parts of the United States, Canada and Europe reports have come, and are still coming in, proving that what doctors, scientists and the people have for hundreds of years hoped for, has at last been discovered-a real Food for the Nerves. In thousands of cases of nervous prostration, and of men and women so seriously broken down that doctors pronounced them incurable, this new discovery, which is called OXIEN, speedily restored the sufferers to health and vigor. It is pronounced by scientific men the only true nourishment for nerves, brain and blood in existence, and analysis proves it to be as harmless as bread. Extensive tests have been going on here and elsewhere and people who have been bedridden for years and sent to the hospitals to die, have, after taking this wonderful article only a few days, to their utter amazement gone forth strong and happy men and women. One lady, Mrs. H. Vassar-Ambler, felt so gratified and happy at her recovery that she purchased $700.00 worth of it so as to be able to introduce it to all sufferers in her section. It seems to cure diseases as if by magic and has been very justly termed a greater Discovery than Electricity. By an original, patented process it is put in small compressed tablets, which can be readily sent by mail.

A company has been incorporated with a capital of $250,000.00. Legal protection has already been granted by the U.S. Patent Office as well as by the English and German Governments and Oxien is being introduced by agents who earn from $15 to $50 a day.

being introduced by agents who earn from $15 to $50 a day.

Mr. J. N. Williams, for instance, earned a $200 cash prize in a single day, while M. Logsdon also received $150 besides over $2,000.00 in commissions. And many ladies have done even better.

The Postoffice here reports that thousands of testimonials are pouring in daily certifying the value of this great Discovery.

The Rev. W.W. Hughes of Weogufka, Ala., writes: I was taken with the La Grippe and had Rheumatism in the back of my neck and head. I failed to get a doctor and was in a rage of misery; thought I would be dead in a short time. I took @xiem Remedies and in 24 hours I felt better and today am happy to say I am a well man.

• MIEN REMEDIES enable you to practically fortify yourself, free of charge, if you are not already one of the happy thousands who have found that the Wonderful Discovery, • MXIEN, not only uproots disease when it has once gained its mysterious hold, but that it actually renders the system proof against those early germs and spring seeds which, when inhaled by weakened men and women, often produce in a single night, death-dealing weeds of poison.

From New Edinburgh, N. S., Canada, comes this letter from Charles Comeau: My wife suffered with Heart Trouble and Indigeation so badly she could not eat anything and felt that her heart could not stand the strain long. I threw hundreds of dollars away, but Doctors and Preparations failed to do any good. Finally I gave her • Mien. It hit her case exactly right. Her heart grew strong, and with new strength came a desire for work. Her old energy returned; her Stomach Trouble disappeared, and today she is as well as any woman. She joins with me in saying that • Mem is the one cure for people who are in the condition that she was.

To every man and woman, to every family in the land, a box of • WXIEN is a life-protecting and life-

Her old energy returned; her stomach Trouble disappeared, and today she is as well as any woman. She joins with me in saying that Oxiem is the one cure for people who are in the condition that she was every man and woman, to every family in the land, a box of OXIEN is a life-protecting and life-giving friend, as you will see by looking at the picture of the Thomas family of four generations published herewith. It makes strong men, strong women, strong children. A single trial will convince anyone who is weak, weary, worried, from suffering, from overwork, from over-enjoyment or neglect—that it is the Greatest Discovery ever made for banishing disease and supplying full manly and womanly vigor, not for an hour, a day, a week, or a month, but permanently.

Where is the sick man or woman, handicapped with suffering as they are, who have not cried out, "I would give anything to be strong and well!" Among rich and poor alike disease works its havoc. Millionaire Rockefeller exclaimed: "I would give my whole fortune if I were able to eat what my appetite craves." And to what end? Medicines are used, specialists are engaged at enormous prices, operations are performed and still the victim is as bad off as before. Our methods of living demand more of nature year after year, Outside aid must be given to the overworked, run-down system, or as sure as the sun rises and sets, sooner or later YOU must pay the penalty.

But it was never intended that you should go on suffering day after day. Do you think that certain ones are singled out to drag along through life so sick and weak they cannot drink in the enjoyments of this wonderful earth? No! There is hesith and a cure for everyone. The world today is full of sickness. Like the dark, overchanging clouds, it casts a shadow overthousands and thousands or brurse forth—4ME lender of the summan of the provence of the provence of the summan of the provence of the provence of the summan of the provence of the provence

Augusta, Maine.—This city is excited over the permit the printing of but a few and these samples

A HAPPY MOTHER.

Two years ago last winter I was in very bad health and in March was taken down in bed; everyone thought I must die. After two months suffering I gave birth to a child which only lived about two hours. I got a little better and my sister, Mrs. Mary Fielden, persuaded me to try OxiEN, and I did so, and last August my next baby was born, this one at full time, and everyone who sees him wonders at him. He is twice as large as any of my other bables, and where they were all puny he is always well. We call him our OXIEN baby and wish that everyone could know how good OXIEN is.

Jingo, Ky.

HARRIET PEACH.

ALL DOCTORS FAILED.

I can tell you gladly what your Remedies have done for me. I have suffered thirty years with bowel trouble and female weakness, and six boxes of your Oxien Tablets and Plasters cured me, after all doctors had failed and I had given up all hopes. And also, last winter I had Pneumonia, and two boxes of Tablets and one Plaster cured me of that, and I find them so good that I do not want to be without them in my house.

Edenton, N. C. MRS. E. FERRELL.

GAINED TWENTY POUNDS.

I have been using OXIEN TABLETS and have increased n weight from 110 to 148 lbs. and I feel better than I have or 20 years. JONAS W. ROSCOE. for 20 years. Walbridge, Ohio.

A SEVEN YEARS' SUFFERER CURED.

A SEVEN TEARS' SUFFERER CURED.

I suffered from the effects of the Grippe seven years and I had four of our best doctors treating me, but they only gave me temporary relief. I noticed your Oxien Plasters were well spoken of and I sent for a few. The first Plaster I applied to the small of my back and immediately the dreadful pains were gone and never returned since. I can speak well for your Oxien Remedy Treatment in my son's case, who is a mail carrier. Some time ago he was taken with La Grippe and for three days was spitting blood, but thanks to the Oxien Company, their Remedies saved his life.

Ballentine, Miss.

MRS. A. M. SPIKENEX.

OXIEN IS KNOWN THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

KINGSDOWN, COTHAM, NEAR LONDON, ENGLAND. had given up all hopes. And also, last winter I had Pneumonia, and two boxes of Tablets and one Plaster cured me of that, and I find them so good that I do not want to be without them in my house.

Edenton, N. C.

MRS. E. FERRELL.

SAVED HER LIFE AND REASON.

Penn Grove, N. J.

Oxien saved my life. I was so nervous I could not seleep, my back hurt me so badly I could not walk. It saved me from the Insane Asylum and a grave. It gives sweet sleep and rest—peefect rest, and a good appetite; it makes one well and strong, both male and female, young and old; after everything else fails Oxien varies. We could not get along without it. Oxien cures La Grippe, it cured me of it. Take Oxien and you need

KINOSDOWN, COTHAM, NEAR LONDON, ENGLAND.

DEAR SIRS:

I am very thankful to be able to write and tell you that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done me a great that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done free little to the the the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done free lated that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills have done free lated to the that the OXIEN Tablets and Pills h

A Family of Four Generations Using Oxien Remedies.

It is seldom we have the privilege of seeing four generations like this picture. What perfect health brightens each face. How clear the eyes. You can plainly see the vigorous manhood and energetic and vital womanhood in each one. What a happy and prosperous family. Mr. Thomas says they all have used more or less Oxien Medicine and he would not be living today if not for Oxien. Read his letter below.

READ WHAT THIS GREAT-GRANDFATHER SAYS OF OXIEN.

THE GIANT OXIE CO. Gomer, Ohlo, Sept. 4th, 1906. Dear Sirs: I will now tell you about the picture I sent you of the four generations. The two oldest is myself and wife, the next two in age is my daughter and husband. Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Jones, the next two is their daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Slusser and the little girl, their daughter, Grace Louella Slusser, my great grandchild, and they have all used more or less of the OXIEN MEDICINE and I don't believe I would be living today if it were not for the remedie For eleven years ago I had the blood poison in my right arm and was helpless for two years until I commenced never employ a physician. I do not. I am our own doctor, thanks to The Giant Oxle Co.'s Ad. I saw your ad. in 1902 and have used and sold Oxlen ever since.

MRS. AMANDA HEWITT.

NOW WALKS A MILE WITHOUT A CRUTCH.

I have been using Oxien Remedies over a year. When I began I was bad off, had to walk with crutches. I suffered everything and have not used any other Remedies but yours for over a year now and am able to do all my work and can walk half a mile without the use of a crutch.

MRS. M. J. HARMON. crutch. Fredonia, Tex.

OXIEN differs from everything else as day differs from night, and its effects differ from the effects of other so-called foods and medicine as day differs from night. It is not a stimulant. It is not a drug or so-called "tonic," which merely excites the nerves. It nourishes and feeds the nerves, blood, and brain. It infuses new vigor and vitality into the broken-down system, and its effects are as astonishing as they are lasting. It is absolutely pure, free from any harmful ingredients, and is sold under a written guarantee and the official endorsements of medical authority. The testimony of thousands whom it has lifted from a helpless and hopeless condition of suffering, and the praise of the thousands whom it has cured after medicines and doctors had failed, tell the tale of this wonderful discovery more effectively than words. This testimony is open to public inspection.

To those whose systems become debilitated and wrecked by over-work, worv. imprudence, or excesses of any kind OXIEN is a godsend. The weakest stomach will retain it, and readily extract its life-giving, vitalizing, and nerve-feeding properties.

Nothing equals it as a relief and cure for Nervous reties.

Nothing equals it as a relief and cure for Nervous Prostration, Starved Nerves, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Stomach Disorders, Bronchitis, Colds, Coughs, Catarrhal Affections, Palpitation of the Heart, Kidney and Liver Diseases, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Scrofula, Defect in Herring, Smell, or Taste, Sick-headache, General Debility, Chills and Fever, Malarial Troubles, Irregularity, La Grippe, Tobacco Habit, Sunstroke, and Seasickness.

SAVED FROM A EARLY GRAVE.

I truly think your Oxien Medicine has saved me from an early grave. When beginning your treatment I could sit up only one hour a day, and could not bear my weight on my feet without terrible suffering afterward, my spine and nerves were so weak. Two weeks after I could sit up nearly all day and get around to work, and now have been doing my work alone for two weeks.

Oswego, N. Y. MRS. EMMA E. ANDREWS.

OXIEN CONTAINS NO POISON.

OXIEN CONTAINS NO POISON.

OXIEN makes a new stomach of your old one.

OXIEN will cure the most acute cases of indigestion, dyspepsis, nervous dyspepsis, billousness, belching of gases, sour stomach, heavy feeling after eating, bad breath, heartburn, dizziness and all other aliments due to the upset condition of the stomach. For chronic cases we advise the use of OXIEN ELECTRIC PLASTERS, together with the OXIEN HEMEDIFS.

Heed the warning Nature is giving you in come a physical wreck. Write for OXIENwhile there is yet time for you to take advantage of our great free trial offer below, and reap the benefits of this great discovery.

FREE TRIAL OFFER TO YOU.

To those who will agree to test the powers of your Won-derful Discoveries, either per-sonally or in their own aerful Discoveries, etter per-sonally or in their own homes, or in the home of some friend, and who will cut out and mail to us the following coupon, we will send all charges paid, a sample box of Oxien, with a 26-cent Oxien Electric Plas-ter and samples of our Won-

26-cent Oxien Electric Plaster and samples of our Wonderful New Oxien Tablet Pills. As this offer is made exclusively to those who will make a PERSONAL TEST as here stipulated, the party taking advantage hereof must sign his or her name and address (in pencil) on the following coupon and return the same to us as above.

Name	PERSONAL COUPON.
A ddress
All communication	s in reply to this special effer must be addressed. THE GIART OXIE CO., 113 Willow Street, Augusta, Mr.	Mine.

FREE! AS BIG AS BABY, FREE!

Send You 2 Dells New Instead of 1.

Remember s wise and his cents each.

Remember s wise and this magnitude to the aubstribers you secure and send the boils to you as a premium. Will send 2 sets. I boils for securing 4 yearly subscribers at 15 cents each. 4 sets, of boils free for a club of 7 yearly subscribers at 15 cents each. Address COMFORT. Assests. Halan. COMFORT. Augusta, Maine.

Millions of POST CARDS FREE.

To circulate our premium catalogue and millions of Foreign and American Post Cards comprising the finest and most varied assortment of interesting foreign and domestic views ever issued. COMFORT will send you one new foreign Souvenir Card Free if you will send the address of a friend interested in Post Cards. With this card we send our best offers by which you can secure all the cards and other premiums you desire free of expense. Address, COMFORT, Box 713, Augusta, Maine.

A Ten Thousand Dollar Check

signed with this New Idea Pencil will be honored as quickly as though ink were used. This indelible pencil is always ready to use and has a pattented lead protector that prevents the point from ever becoming broken. Answers every purpose of ordinary pencil; but, having indelible lead, is a perfect substitute for pen and ink or fountain pen. Carried in the pocket same as stylograph, and always ready to sign checks, receipts or any papers where you want signathe world for women and school children. An ideal pencii for bus meas men who want a new idea pencii with full nucleid case, it is nest and attractive. As hundreds will be sold after introducing, we send one free if you will send decent for part cost of advertising as mailing, including a copy of our new big premium catalogue. The we will give you wholesale rates if turther interested.

Address SUNSHINE, Augusta, Maine.

20 POST CARD & 6C.

EARTHQUAKE

EARTHQUARE

We have collected a large ansortment of Photo Views of San Francisco and Vicinity, which are published in Post Gard Size.

They unfold in a long paneramic heavy paper sheet idea of the control of the cont

Comfort's Subscription Price BE Advanced

WE GIVE VALUABLE PREMIUMS

To Everybody Who Gets Up Clubs at the Present FIFTEEN-CENTS-A-YEAR RATE

ONTEMPLATED improvement and enlargements will immensely improve the leader of the family monthlies that the present editions are not a fair sample of what we are planning to give you regularly, as quick as we have installed the mammoth new press now nearly ready. Not only will added pages be given, but more illustrations and more features added that will make the whole contents of more interest; besides we want to print COMFORT on better paper with better ink.

All these improvements mean added cost and must be met with added revenues. We must have more subscribers and a higher subscription rate per year in order to have things equalized.

Until the last day of this year we will accept fingly or in clubs; sometime after January 1st, 1907, we shall be obliged to advance the price of COMFORT. There are a few short days left in which you can participate in the bargain offers of premiums for FIFTEEN-CENTS ubscriptions.

COMFORT is the best monthly fifteen-cent per year publication in existence. It now regularly reaches 1,250,000 families. But if we can induce additional families to take it, the magazine will be worth a WHOLE LOT more to us than it now is, while its value to others will also be many fold increased.

There are many things in the way of luxuries for recreased.

while its value to others will also be many fold inCreased.

There are many things in the way of luxuries for personal and home adornment that rich people have, but which poor people and those in moderate circumstances cannot afford to buy. Our wonderfully liberal offers to club-getters present an opportunity whereby people of every condition in life may secure these luxuries without paying idesome the control of the control of them. We offer an extensive variety guaranteed to some online satisfaction, and any premium or preniums in this list may easily be secured by any once, anywhere, free of charge, for clubs of subscribers for Comporar are secured without difficulty.
Reader, make your spare moments profitable in this way by earning for yourself one or more of our splendid premiums.

Not only will ten women have and spend affect cents, where one woman will have and spend one dollar, but it will require less than one tenth of as much time, on the average, to convince a person that she wants a fifteen-cent article, as it will be to convince her that she wants a one-dollar article; and this is not taking into consideration the number of women to whom an agent talks, who never can be convinced that they should spend the one dollar.

Again, as so many women will take the fifteencent article, an agent has the advantage of numtown has abscribed, or by far the larger portion, Mrs. Jones is not going to be the odd one who doesn't take it, neither is she going to be counted among the unpopular minority.

In addition, there is always some one feature of every periodical which alone is worth more than fifteen cents; and it is not a difficult matter for an intelligent canvasser to show this to be the case.
Hence, the money's worth can be found in the very first number. Therefore, the man or woman, boy or girl, who cannot make money by soliciting subscriptions for low-priced periodicals, if she or he takes hold of it aright, does not exist.

We want every present subscriber to or reader of COMPORTS ino

How To Make Money

How To Make Money

Our premium offers this year are far more liberal than ever before. We offer finer premiums for smaller clubs than we have ever previously offered. There is no publication in our particular class that offers such splendid inducements to club-raisers as does COMFORT, and there is no publication for which subscribers may be so easily obtained, for none can compare with it in merit and attractiveness. An attractive publication at the low price of fifteen cents a year makes the work of subscribers easy; fine premiums as a reward for the work make the pay liberal. We can afford to give better and finer premiums than our contemporaries because, with our enormous circulation, buying direct from manufacturers in the vast quantity we do, we secure extraordinary concessions in price, and of this we give our clubraisers the entire benefit. There is not a single article among all the premiums we offer that we will not guarantee to be precisely as represented, and to give absolute satisfaction. We offer nothing that is worthless or trashy. All are standard goods of genuine merit, and every premium in the list is well worth working for.

In canvassing for COMFORT tell people that the v.ry name is a welcome sound, and that no one should object to subscribing to COMFORT at so low a price.

If them that the first page has with every month an illustration appropriate to the season—one that appeals to the artistic sense of each member of the household. Then turn the pages and see what you will find upon them. Poetry for the poet lovers, and is there a woman in the world who does not love the poetry of verse, the poetry of action, the poetry of love and of life? Current Tommer and the mile will when the pood to the poetry of verse, the poetry of action, the poetry of love and of life? Current

We offer premiums in almost endless variety—books, watches, rings and jewelry of all kinds, silver-plated and nickel-plated ware, stamping outfits, fancy work materials, bibles, lace curtains, chinaware, glassware, fancy goods, leather goods, optical goods, fress goods, furs, laces, handkerchiefs, shawls, portieres, household goods, rugs, table linen, cutlery, lamps, pens, pencils, cameras, toys, dolls—almost everything that the heart of man, woman or child could wish for, and any premium that we offer may easily be secured, free of charge, by any reader of COMFORT who will make an effort to obtain it.

Ask them if they have COMFORT within their homes, if they have, get them to renew or continue for two, three or four years, through you, while the price is only fifteen cents a year. Tell them that it is a very low price for these few months only. The kind of COMFORT that comes twelve times a year at an outlay of only fifteen cents is the COMFORT we are talking about. The returns on this investment—only fifteen cents—are larger than they can get in any other way. They may spend a good many times that amount, and it won't pan out the solid COMFORT that will a year's subscription to this periodical. Its pages are just filled with COMFORT for every member of the family. If they will try COMFORT even for one twelfth month, they will always cling to COMFORT one twelfth month, they will always cling to COMFORT when they have to pay more for it.

More About Our Paper and Our Premiums for Clubs

They are of great usefulness and of great value. Before the subscription price is advanced we want to say a word TO OUR FRIENDS.

Try. Ask the first man or woman you meet, it matters not if you have never met before, to give you just fifteen cents for an annual subscription to this great monthly paper, Comfort—a paper in every single issue of which will be found genuine enjoyment from its illustrations, soul-thrilling pleasure from its poetry, recreation from its long and short stories, wisdom from its information departments, harmony from its music; education, faith, hope and love from the Fancy Work and other departments, and that fifteen cents will be freely given. You will also have accomplished some real good. "It is twice blessed—it blesses him that gives, and blesses him that takes," and as the price is to be advanced soon, you are all getting a bargain.

Try Again. This time, however, do not ask chance. Go to the nearest established house, be it a palatial one or only a humble dwelling, show them this paper, and ask for a subscription, regardless of who meets you at the entrance, whether it be the lady of the house or the father of the family, the budding daughter, or the growing son. As soon as you have finished asking for fifteen cents for such a paper you will have secured a subscriber.

Try Still Again. This time go into a bled at some amusement place, for instance, bent on pleasure. State your errand. Only a few will refuse to combine the thing useful with the pleasure at hand. Your subscription list will grow then and there it you explain they are getting a bargain paper at only fifteen cents a year.

Try in the overcrowded city, also in the airy vilages, hamlets and on the farms. There is not a spot in the United States where you cannot find people who will be glad to subscribe for Comfert.

a spot in the United States where you cannot find people who will be glad to subscribe for Comfort.

Try Once More. This time going to the business man at his work, or the laborers at their task, for all will have time to listen and you will considerably augment your list.

COMFORT is an article one needs in winter and summer. Comfort knows no seasons. During the summer months when the thermometer registers 90 in the shade, Comfort is breezy; it's never too hot to take Comfort. In winter, when the days are short, Comfort makes the evenings shorter. It is never so cold as to freeze out Comfort.

COMFORT is needed by young and old, by the Godborn genius of song, and by the horny-handed son of toil, by the upper ten and lower hundred, by men and women. We have sixteen million families in the country. Our subscription list, however, contains but 1,250,000 names. Only one out of every twelve families has as yet subscribed for Comfort.

Of course, there are people who would say "let well enough alone." A subscription list of a million and a quarter is big. No. We have the right to demand our Comfort to bring comfort, ease, pleasure, happiness and contentment to a million more hearths in the United States.

Those who know us already are staunch and faithful, and will gladly renew their subscriptions. To you, who bring such renewals, we will give the same credit as it you had brought us a new subscriber. The French have a proverb: "The friends of our friends are our friends." The readers of Comfort will comfort you by recommending you to their friends, because it comforts them to secure comfort to those whom they know.

You have a mighty interesting work on hand—congenial, profitable, but you must go about it intelligently, systematically. To be able to do so, you must read, mark and learn all we say, This and your experience will quickly bring you on to the high road of success.

"A wise man will hear and will increase learning: the man of understanding will attain unto wise councils" is one of the safest maxims of ol

COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.
Please send me a copy of your 1907 Premium Supplement with Subscription Blanks, Prize Offer, and sample copies of this paper, free of any cost to me. City Street No. or R. F. D ._ State

McGINTY WATCH

UNITED SPECIALTY CO., 94 D

IF YOU WANT TO RECEIVE

A LIVE COAT FREe

COMPLETE HOLY BIBLE.

A PAIR OF

Nottingham Lace Curtains Each Curtain Nine Feet Long.

This Most Beautiful and Elegant Premium Has Just Been Added for Selection to All Who

Club of Only 9 New Names.

The curtains are full width and just what any one needs to adorn the home with. Every one of taste will tell you that there is nothing which "dresses up" a room so much as a pair of lace curtains. The finest effects are obtained by these draperies. They show from the outside as well as from the inside. They are of the real Italian pattern and formerly sold as high as $6.00 or $8.00 a pair. They are delivered free to you, all charges paid.

SPECIAL OFFER. If you will send us a club of only 9 trial yearly subscriptions at 15 cents each to our monthly, we will send our magazine one year to each subscriber and one pair of curtains to you as a free premium. A club of only 16 trial 15-cent yearly subscriptions secures two pairs and we send three pairs for only 24 yearly subscribers at 15c. each. Magazine goes to the subscriber each month for a year and curtains to you.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

OUR BOYS' PRINTING OUTFIT. Make Money Printing Cards.

About all boys have an ambition to learn a trade that will give honest employment and mental improvement. With our handy Printing Outfit a boy or girl can accomplish the art of type setting as well as printing, thus conquering two subjects at one time. These complete outfits consist of a six-font set of rubber type; that is, there are six of each of most all the letters in the alphabet except some important letters have eight, and others only four, such as "Q." A double set of numerals, commas, periods, and four handsome ornaments; also slugs or spaces to separate words—in all about 200 separate pieces of type. A two-line type holder for printing cards, etc. It works like a miniature Franklin printing press, so you can print cards for your friends and thus make money. A pair of nickeled pincers to handle type and a metal case ink pad. This ink pad is everlasting and can be renewed if constant use removes the ink. With each set we send a wooden type case so that type can be arranged and kept in perfect order, also full and complete instructions how to set type, etc. A wonderful outfit for printing cards or small amount of text. Will afford amusement and instruction unbounded. Every child will appreciate one and grown folks can make use of these sets for marking linen by procuring an indelible ink pad. It is probable such an outfit as we offer can not be found everywhere and we expect to give away a great many for the slight work done in getting subscriptions for us. tions for us.
y subscribers at 15 cents each, 45 cents in all, we will

CLUB OFFER. For a club of only 3 yearly subscribers at 15 cents each, 45 cents in all, we we send you postpaid one of these Printing Outfits all complete as described.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

in setting up clubs, only actual subscribers count; those who agree to take the paper and pay you their money for it.

Christmas Bells

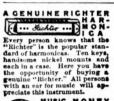

tree I o a d e d with presents takes cheer to the heart of young and old. To assist in trim-ming the tree, the various rooms of the home, for Churches, Halls, and Schools we now furnish the daintiest

Paperet Christmas

Bells
with loop for hanging from the tree, or from the window fastening; hung under a hanging lamp, or in any suitable place where decorations are usually place where decorations are usually place where decorations are usually red paperet ingeniously folded into the pretty bell eighteen inches in circumference and six inches high, shown in our illustration, and being nearly sun proof may be kept hanging for months after the passing of evergreen which dries and falls. We have a special importation of a very large quantity of these Christmas Bells, made to fold compactly for sending away by mail, so that all may have one just as the people do who live in the larger cities where one sees them hanging in nearly every home. Send us only six cents for part cost of packing and COMFORT, Box R, Augusta, Maine.

DOLLS AS BIG AS A BABY.

Please read carefully our descriptive matter above, also note our illustrations. In all cases will our premiums be found as represented; a large assortment, newest goods and liberal offers. Send us only two yearly subscribers to our peerless monthly, COMFORT, at 15c. each for any one of the above articles. State choice clearly and article will go forward same day at our expense. Address

COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

TO BE 25 CENTS A YEAR

You Can Now Get 15c. per year comfort for. 15c. per year

COMFORT next year will in all probability reach the goal to which its publisher has aimed and struggled for nineteen years. It has always been my aim to give the readers of COMFORT, not only the best low-priced family home monthly in the world, and so far as physical energy and genuine enduring effort could be put forth, as the various issues have borne testimony, but to clearly illustrate and distinctly fort could be put forth, as the various issues have borne testimony, but to clearly illustrate and distinctly print a larger number of pages on better paper and more promptly, each month. For nearly twelve months the largest Press builders in the world have been busy on COMFORT'S new press. Expert draftsmen and mechanics have developed this printing press until it is nearly perfect.

The Publisher of COMFORT has watched the progress of development along these lines and hastened every means to bring about changes and make such innovations as would place COMFORT mechanically where it has always been editorially The installation of this mammoth new press with every modern attachment for supplements, colored covers, w th folding and stitching devices, that would print each hour a large number of copies of COMFORT, and print them in a first-class manner, requires preparation of an enlarged plant, and as this matter is written for you, many active masons are laying brick and stone, while stalwart iron workers and carpenters are placing steel beams and laying floors and otherwise engaged on our mammoth addition intended for this largest magazine press in the country.

The monster Press should be in operation early in 1907, when we can all have a copy of the new COM-FORT that will make all the others we have produced and sent to you look ashamed.

ONLY 15 CENTS A YEAR

the present very low subscription rate is based on an eight-page paper, any added pages are as a gift from the Publisher, so that at this time we are giving you a thirty-two-page edition, being twenty-four pages gratis. When the new press is installed it will be possible to print and send to you a much larger monthly printed on a better grade of paper, just as soon as we have the necessary subscription income, so that it resolves itself into the question: How much will you do toward this?

You can now renew or extend your subscription at the present low rate of 15 cents per year and also get up clubs and earn valuable premiums at the 15-cent rate. If you cannot get up a club now be sure and send your own and at least one new subscription.

A Lot of Good New Things Coming

WE ANNOUNCE A STARTLING NEW DETECTIVE STORY TO APPEAR NEXT MONTH. It is called "The Great Chicago Mystery; or, The Man of Many Aliases," By Rosser W. Cobbe, Author of "The Mark of the Beast," etc., etc.

This very remarkable story is written by one thoroughly conversant with Chicago police and the slums of that great city. Step by step he carries the reader along with the detectives in their earnest efforts to defeat criminals and release the city from the thrall of some of its law breaking contingent. As scarcely any great event is entirely disassociated from a love element, so he has told the heart affair which was connected with the operations of THE MAN OF MANY ALIASES, who is himself a rather unusual character in fiction. Adventures occur, some of them so wonderful as to appear almost impossible, and yet the newspapers of that date contain similar, for Mr. Cobbe writes from life as he has found it. The climax of this story attracted considerable interest at the time the occurrence took place, but not even in the newspapers was it given so graphically. It is one of our most realistic serials.

COMFORT readers will find the two new serials that begin in this issue to be of unusual interest and taken in connection with "St. Elmo," and the other stories now running, they make the strongest lot of fiction ever published in any papers of any kind.

DON'T WAIT A large number of COMFORT subscriptions expire before the first of January, and we must call your special attention to the notice to expiring subscribers that appears on this page. Certainly there are none among our subscribers who send the small sum of fifteen cents for a prompt renewal. DON'T WAIT until YOUR PAPER IS STOPPED or the price is advanced to 25 cents before sending in your FIFTEEN CENTS for a renewal, but send today AT ONCE and thus give us time to extend your subscription to January, 1908, then you can be sure to read all of "St. Elmo," and the other interesting stories, all of which will run for some months yet, besides all of the other good things. Look over the fine premiums in this issue and get up a club, then send for the regular Premium List and get up one more club before the price of COMFORT goes up to 25 cents per year.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE WRAPPER IN WHICH THIS PAPER COMES

Every month a certain number of subscriptions expire. The expiring number this month is 217, and the Oct. number was 216, while for December it will be 218. If any one of these numbers appear on the address seal in which we send your copy of COMFORT, please attend to the renewal of your subscription without further notification from us; we do not carry delinquent subscription accounts, nor send COM FORT to any whose subscription has expired.

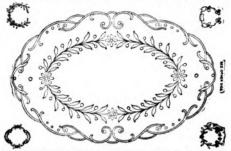

Below is a convenient subscription coupon arranged for your personal use. May we hear from you?

Thirteen Months for 15 Cents

This coupon and 15 cents will entitle you to receive COMFORT until

Name Address. Nov., 1906. 49 New Idea Transfer Designs Over 2000 Square Inches of Patterns

Fancy Work Patterns, Readily Transferable
to any Material
By the use of this new method which has proven snperior to old style perforated paper patterns, one may have an extensive variety of patterns on hand embracing an unlimited quantity of designs for every kind of work. One special feature of these patterns that will please you is the ease and simplicity of transferring the design. By simply dampening the material you are to stamp, laying the design on perfectly smooth and flat and slightly rubbing with a handkerchief or cloth the trick is done and the pattern can be laid aside for future use. The designs are furnished on large sheets of extra strong paper by a patented process and can be transferred to linen, lawn, or any material you may desire to use, with the aid of a cloth (full directions with each).

Our assortment of sixteen sheets, each sheet 10 x 14 inches or 140 square inches of pattern, comprises a great variety of useful and practical articles for personal wear or home adornment, such as Shirt-waists, Doilies and Baby's Cap. Our illustrations give you an idea of some of the patterns we selected while the others are equally as attractive. We have arranged to distribute an immense quantity of these transfer pattern sheets, 10 x 14 inches each, in Sets of sixteen, the equivalent of over twenty-two hundred square inches of standard patterns of the old or verticated extens of the patterns of the old or verticated extens of the patterns of the old or verticated extens of the old or verticated extens of the patterns of the old or verticated extens SHOWING ONE OF THE 16 PATTERN SHEETS REDUCED.

mense quantity of these transfer pattern sheets, 10 X is inches each, in Sets of sixteen, the equivalent of over twenty-two hundred square inches of standard patterns of the old or perforated style.

The following is a list of the chief patterns on each sheet: Shirt-waist Pattern; Guffs and Gollar: Baby's Gap; Half Genterpiece: Doily Pattern; Picture Frame and Baby's Shoes; Sofa Pillow: Bureau or Table Scarl; Back of Belt; Wail Pocket: Tumbler Dolly: Oval Genterpiece: Baby's Bib; Gollar and Guffs; Jewel Bag; Gorset-cover Fronts; Bib; Gollar and Guffs; Jewel Bag; Gorset-cover Fronts; Children's Smail or Fancy Handkerchiefs; Chemisetts.

In addition to these mentioned, others are put on to fill all the space so that in all, we actually give you 49 designs and five alphabets (all different).

Special Offer. These paper patterns are put up we will send you one full Set by mail for a club of only 2 yearly subscribers to this magazine at 15 cents each.

CHASED AND PLAIN BAND HOSE SUPPORTERS. Silk

The above few articles are selected as representing our most popular premiums, also a club of five is a very popular quantity. Many send five subscriptions rather than work up larger clubs. For a club of only five yearly subscribers to our magic monthly, COM-FORT, we will send your choice of any one of these nine articles. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

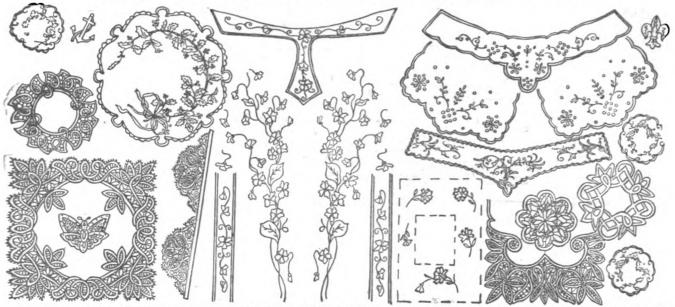

AIR RIFLE. Pneumatic ac-

You may have your choice of any one of the above excellent premium articles for a club of only ten yearly subscribers to COM-FORT at 15c. each. Address

COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

OUR LARGEST OUTFIT OF NEW DESIGNS. CHEMISETTE AND COLLAR.

Over 1000 Square Inches Stamped on Linen.

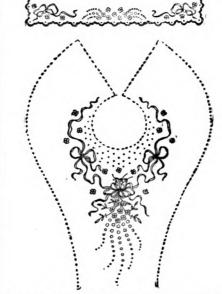

More than 1000 square inches of neat, tasty, up-to-date designs, including all of the latest in Battenberg and Linen Embroidery. Not a poor design among it. This is not a ection of little worthless stuff, but is a great big value. Every article shown will be used and appreciated by any woman who receives it. The designs are all large, of the y latest and in sufficient variety to please any woman. We offer you a perforated shirt-waist design, a handsome collar and cuff set, holly-berry centerpiece, photograph the, three assorted plate doliles, in all 576 square inches of linen designs; also handkerchief, tie end, collar, three assorted doliles, in all 450 square inches of Battenberg lace igns, one of the most complete and largest selections of stamped designs ever offered as a premium. Can be used with perfect satisfaction and cannot help but highly please the most fascinating.

Club Offer. For a club of 3 yearly subscribers to this magazine at 15c. each, we will forward by mail one of these very complete outfits as a reward.

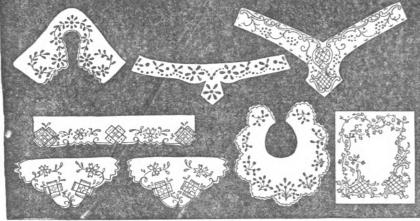

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

These new lawn Chemisettes are all the rage and are now worn more than ever by the better dressers. This simple design is easily and quickly worked with a small quantity of mercerized cotton. You have goods enough to finish it up entire, which if bought at stores all made would cost a lot of money.

Club Offer. For a club of only 2 yearly subscribers to this magazine at 15c. each, we will send you the above outfit of material ready to be embroidered. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

BIB AND BOOTEES FOR BABY. Picture Frame, Collars and Cuffs for a Lady.

washable. Will give thorough satisfaction.

Special Offer. For a club of only 2 yearly subscribers to this magazine at 15c. each, we will send Special Offer. For a club of only 2 yearly subscribers to this magazine at 15c. each, we will send Special Offer. For a club of only 2 yearly subscribers to this magazine at 15c. each, we will send Special Offer. Augusta, Maine.

A new pattern for a baby's cap, consists of four parts, stamped on 208 square inches of lawn and three skeins of white material to work it with.

This affords an excellent opportunity for you to make up a stylish, useful baby's cap or bonnet, and by finishing it with a ruffle and ribbon bows, as shown in our illustration, you have a very handsome bonnet for your own baby, or to present to some friend's favorite infant.

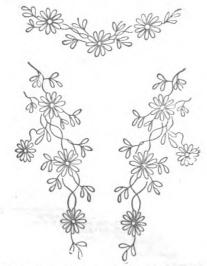

Our outfit is complete; ready to be embroidered and made up except the ruffle and bow, which are to

A baby's bonnet is so useful and desirable we do not need to elaborate on the attractiveness of this offer. Every mother should send for one at once in accordance with our offer below.

Special Club Offer. Send us only 2 yearly subscribers to this magazine at 15c. each. The Cap and three skeins of embroidery cotton will be sent same day we receive your order. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

The Special Premiums shown on this page are all suitable for Holiday Work and are easily earned by getting small clubs of subscribers to this monthly.

Perforated Shirt-Waist Pattern.

and Collar design, perforated upon fine Linen Bond Parchment Paper, furnished with complete directions that any lady can stamp her own shirt-waist, worth in any art store at least 75 cents. We can furnish each in the following designs, if the one filustrated does not please you: Violet, daisy, forget-me-not wild rose or chrysanthemum.

Special Offer. We will send you one of these Shirt-waist patterns if you will send us but one yearly subscriber to this magazine at 15c., and include 5c. additional, making 20c. in all.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Designs on Linen

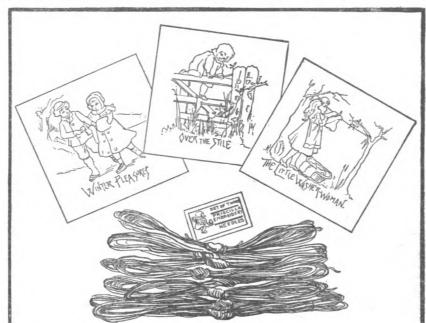

This outfit consists of 324 square inches of embroidery designs. A set of two collars, one Centerpiece, one Bookmark, one Pen-wiper, one Match-safe, one Doiley, two dress ornaments, plainly stamped ready to embroider. An outfit of smaller designs, this suggests itself for those who are learning or do not have much time for fancy work.

Special Offer. As a special inducement we will give you one of these Outfits if you will send but one yearly subscriber at 15c. with 5c. additional, in all 20c. We send postpaid.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

LE PRISCILLA

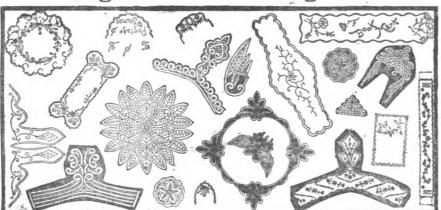

This is a kindergarten Embroidery Set for the little folks and will prove of inestimable value to any mother or instructor of needlework for juvenile. The set consists of three assorted doilies of choice designs, eight embroidery skeins with three embroidery needles. Every mother should see that one of these sets comes into the home.

Special Offer. To have the young folks all supplied with one of these outfits, we will mail one for a single yearly subscriber to this magazine at 15c. if 5c. additional is sent, making 20c. in all, for the outfit, postpaid.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Battenberg and Other Designs on Linen

We offer a very handsome combination of Battenberg and Lineu designs, consisting of 21 of the latest, including two collar and cuff sets, lace tie end, lace handkerchief, stock collar, two linen tie ends, pen cushion top, fagoted collar, bookmark, napkin ring holder, postage-stamp case, four assorted centerpiece designs and numerous other designs, in all 21 handsomely stamped upon 774 square inches of cambric and linen. This set will thoroughly please every lover of needlework.

CLUB OFFER. Send us a club of only 2 yearly subscribers to this magazine at 15c, each for one of these out

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

SHIRT-WAIST PATTERNS.

Two and One Half Yards Goods.

familiar with needlework can embroider this simple design and make up the complete waist from any patterns you are familiar with. We place before you the opportunity to get the stamped goods, two and one half yards, so that all you have to do is to embroider the design with the Utopia Luster we furnish, then cut out the material according to your pattern and make it up. You will then have one of the most fashionable and dainty shirt-waists imaginable, all your own handwork. Embroidered garments are all the rage and we can supply not only this waist, but a Linen Hat to match, Corset Covers, Chemisette, Belts, etc., etc.

Club Offer. For a club of only 9 yearly subscribers to this magazine at only 15c. each, we will send you one of these 2½ yard stamped Chrysanthemum Shirt-waists, including sufficient skeins of mercerized embroidery cotton to work out the design.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

15 Famous American Songs FREE

The good old American Songs are far better than much of the late music. We have books, with Stars and Stripes cover, bound full sheet-music size, that contain a fine collection of these oldtime songs. This collection was gotten up to sell for 50 cents, but extra large editions were afterward secured at a bargain and we will give our readcas the benefit of it. The Album is composed of 32 pages and contains the following 15 songs, with music: America: The Battle Cry of Freedom; Glory Hailelujah; Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean; Dixie; Girl I Left Behind Me: Hail Columbia; Soldier's Farewell; Just Before the Battle, Mother: Maryland, My Maryland; Marching through Georgia: Star Spangled Banner; Tenting on the Old Campground; Tramp, Tramp, Tramp; Yankee Boodle.

Certainly all of our subscribers will desire to have one of these collections of Patriotic Songs and we will send one for a club of only 3 yearly subscribers to COMFORT at 15 cents each.

each for one of these outfits. at 15 cents each.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

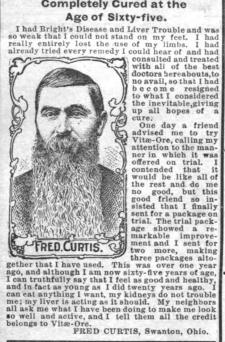

is a Test, a Test at our Risk. We know what we have to offer, we know the public. We trust to the power of what we offer. We trust to the public's sense of Honor and Gratitude. The sick man or woman suffering day by day for lack of the right kind of help, is glad and happy to pay when they get the help. We know this, we know how Vitæ-Ore helps, we know we will get our pay when it has helped, and so we take the risk. We want to take it—all of it. We are glad to do it.

It is not a gamble, not an experiment, but a test, and a test that has lead in thousands of cases to absolute sure conviction, to assurance, to positive knowledge that Vitæ-Ore is a right medicine for sick and ailing, poor, thin, weak, debilitated, worn-out, Rheumatism-racked, Stomach-tortured, Kidney-tyrannized men and women. It is a test that leads to our pay and Vitæ-Ore's popularity. That is why we take

You Don't Risk

One Single, Solitary, Red Cent. You must spend 2 cents for a stamp to write for it or we cannot know that you need it, but we will return a 2cent stamp to you after 30 days if you ask for it. We want the test to be absolutely, entirely and completely free of any and all cost to you if Vitæ-Ore does not help you. We do not want it to cost you one single penny unless the 30-day treatment benefits you, unless it proves Vitæ-Ore the remedy for your ills, as it has proven the remedy for so many thousands of others. We don't want a nickel of your hardearned money unless you are glad, willing and proud to send it for what Vitæ-Ore accomplishes for you. Then we want our pay and deserve it, but not otherwise! We take absolutely all of the risk. We leave it entirely for you to decide, to say that we have earned our pay or that we do not deserve it. Read our trial offer; read what it has accomplished for others, and write today for the $1.00 package on 30 days' trial.

Had Lost the

all ask me waster, and I ten bases.

so well and active, and I ten bases, belongs to Vitæ-Ore.

FRED CURTIS, Swanton, Ohio.

Fifteen Years of Dosing and Drugging

I have been a sufferer from Stomach Trouble, Indigestion and Nervousness for about 15 years and have almost continually been under the treatment of physicians, being compelled usually to use a stomach tube for relief. My husband has spent hundreds of dollars for medicines and doctor bills in our attempt to secure a cure, and I also used Electric Belts with no relief. Three months ago I sent for a trial package of Vitæ-Ore and am now using my third package. I can truthfully say that Indigestion and Nervousness for about 15 years and have almost continually been under the treatment of physicians, being compelled usually to use a stomach tube for relief. My husband has spent hundreds of dollars for medicines and doctor bills in our attempt to secure a cure, and I also used Electric Belts with no relief. Three months ago I sent for a trial package of Vitæ-Ore and am now using my third package. I can truthfully say that it has done me more good than all the medicines I have ever taken. I am gaining in flesh, having taken on thirteen pounds in the last three months, and can sleep well at night. The Nervousness is gone, my food agrees with me and I feel like a very different woman. I cannot praise this great remedy enough and only hope that every sufferer may learn of and use it.

Bethel Springs, Tenn.

Use of His Limbs Our 30-Day Trial Offer

Bright's Disease and Liver Trouble

Age of Sixty-five.

I had Bright's Disease and Liver Trouble and was so weak that I could not stand on my feet. I had already tried every remedy I could hear of and had already tried every remedy I could hear of and had already tried every remedy I could hear of and had already tried every remedy I could hear of and had consulted and treated with all of the best doctors hereabouts, to no avail, so that I had be c o me resigned to what I considered the inevitable, giving up all hopes of a cure.

One day a friend advised me to try Vite-Ore, calling my attention to the manner in which it was some the inevitable and treated to your honor, to your judgment, as to whether or not V.-O. has benefited you. Read what V.-O. is, and write today for a dollar package of Vitae-Ore, enough for 30 days in the toyou on 30 days 'trial. We don't want a penny—we just want a letter from you asking for it, and will be glad to send it to you. We take absolutely all the risk—we take all chances. You don't risk a penny! All we ask is that you use V.-O. On avoil of the best doctors hereabouts, to no avail, so that I had be c o me resigned to what I considered the inevitable, giving up all hopes of a cure.

One day a friend advised me to try Vitee-Ore, calling my attention to the manner in which it was such as the package of Vitae-Ore, enough for 30 days to try to your form of the package of Vitae-Ore, enough for 30 days to try the ore transfer on the risk —we take all chances. You don't risk a penny! All we ask is that you use V.-O. The she the risk —we take all the risk —we take all chances. You don't risk a penny! All we ask is that you use V.-O. The she package of the package

WHAT VITÆ-ORE IS.

Vitæ-Ore is a mineral remedy, a combination of substances from which many world's noted curative springs derive medicinal power and healing virtue. These properties of the springs come from the natural deposits for mineral in the earth through which water forces its way, only a very small proportion of the medicinal substances in these mineral deposits being thus taken up by the liquid. Vitæ-Ore consists of compounds of Iron, Sulphur and Magnesium, elements which are among the chief curative agents in nearly every healing mineral spring, and are necessary for the creation and retention of health. One package of this mineral-substance, mixed with a quart of water, equals in medicinal strength and curative, healing value, many gallons of the world's powerful mineral waters, drunk fresh at the springs.

IS WORTH TRYING FOR!

It is worth writing for. It is worth getting out pen, ink, paper, envelope, and writing us:

"I am sick. I need Vitæ-Ore or something that will cure-me. I have seen your trial offer. Send me a dollar package. I will use it and pay the dollar if I find it has helped me. I will not pay one penny if it does not help me."

That is all it takes. Just a letter asking for it, just your promise to use it. What excuse have you to keep on suffering? How can you continue to look your family in the face and say: "I feel so sick today," or "My back aches," or "That Rheumatic leg is getting worse," or "My stomach is bothering me again," when here, right at your elbow, right within your reach, ready and waiting for you to turn and get it, is the thing that has set thousands right, yours for the mere asking.

SEND FOR IT Without Delay

In all parts of the United States and Canada have testified to the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases as Rheumatism, Kidney, Bladder and Liver Diseases, Dropsy, Stomach Disorders, Female Ailments, Functional Heart Trouble Catarrh of any part, Nervous Prostration, Anæmia, Sores and Ulcers, and worn out debilitated conditions marysville, Cal.—My mother was afflicted with what the doctors called Bright's Disease for about six or seven years; was attended all of that time by physicians. She was finally given up to die and at this time was induced to try Vitæ-Ore. To our surprise and great joy she was cured sound and well by the use of three packages.

CURED STOMACH TROUBLE

CURED BRIGHT'S DISEASE

JOHN WILLIAMS.

CURED RHEUMATISM

MOUNT HOLLY SPRINGS, PA.—I can testify to the value of Vitæ-Ore as a permanent cure for Rheumatism. I had the disease so bad that I could not get out of bed. I used the doctor's medicines faithfully, but they did me no good. I used but two packages of Vitæ-Ore and it cured me effectually and permanently, as it is now more than two years since my cure and I have had no return of the disease.

DAVID LIGHTNER.

CURED CATARRH

Moingona, Iowa.—I have given Vite.—Ore a fair and thorough test and have been greatly benefited by its use. I had been a great sufferer with Catarrh of the Head, Lungs and Stomach, impairing the latter organ so that my diet for about four years was a little bread and tea or hot water, anything causing me intense agony. Since using Vite.—Ore I can now eat any and all vegetables and fruits without the least unpleasantness. It is the best medicine that I have ever used, and I have taken a great deal in the past seventeen years.

JOHN F. McGEE.

EVERY WOMAN Read What Mrs. Walker Tells of

A MESSAGE FOR

Her Terrible Sufferings CURED SOUND AND HALE IN THREE

WEEKS' TIME

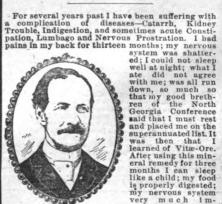

When I sent for a trial package of Vitæ-Ore I was suffering almost death. One doctor told me It was old age approaching, although I am only thirty-nine years old; another said it was caused by a fall which I experienced some time ago, and still another pronounced it female weakness. I suffered terribly for months with pains in my bowels and limbs, and menstruation was very profuse and irregular. At one period I could not sleep for three nights in succession, and had to sit up in bed on account of the terrible pain. I do not see now how I lead to the terrible pain. I do not see now how I had taken it for three days my pain and misery were all gone. Now, after only three weeks' use of the medicine I feel as well as I ever did in my life. I have had no trouble whatever this month. I can plek cotton and ride about on the roads, feeling better every day. I wish I could tell every suffering woman what Vitæ-Ore has done for me. I thank the Lord every day, that I can live and feel well, so that I can tell others what they can do to cure their sufferings.

MRS. LAURA N. WALKER.

Arlington, Okla.

SERMON FOR DOUBTERS

YOU WHO NEED, READ AND HEED

Georgia Conference said that I must rest and placed me on the superannuated list. It was then that I learned of Vitæ-Ore. After using this mineral remedy for three months I can sleep like a child; my food is properly digested; my nervous system very much i mproved; my back has not hurt me for two months past; Catarrh is nearly general health is better than in many vears. I had tried physicians and numerous remedies, but found only temporary relief after months of trial. Under a good God I attribute my present portion of good health to Vitæ-Ore, and I speak its praise, because it is the bridge which is carrying me safely over to the land of complete health. To all who are afflicted I say, take Vitæ-Ore, regain your lost health, and go on your way rejoicing along life's journey.

REV. JNO. F. BALIS, Douglasville, Ga.

RIAL OF VITÆ-ORE Will tell to you its own plain story, a story that has meant comfort, peace and happiness to thousands.

READ THE TESTIMONY. Read it again and again. No stronger words have ever been written about any other medicine; no better expressions are and water, or the sunlight from a tallow candle. It does not take FAITH, does not take CONFIDENCE, does not take BELIEF, does not take even HOPE to cure with Vitæ-Ore. It takes only a trial—all we ask. THIS MEDICINE ENTERS THE VEINS OF THE SICK AND SUFFERING PERSON AND CURES whether the sufferer believes in it or not, whether he wants it or no. Its substances enter the blood, the vital organs, and WORK, WORK—a work that cures.

THEO. NOEL CO.,

COMFORT DEPT. VITÆ-ORE BLDG.

CHICAGO, ILL.

Be sure to subscribe or renew now to begin the opening chapters of this new story, also to continue "St.Elmo" and the other serials now running. COMFORT now only Do this before the rate advances.

15 Cts. a YEAR

DEVOTED TO ART, LITERATURE, SCIENCE, AND THE HOME CIRCLE

Vol XIX

December 1906

No 2

Published at Augusta, Maine

A Million and a Quarter Homes.

Devoted to

Art, Literature, Science, and the Home Circle.

Its Motto Is "Onward and Upward." SUBSCRIPTION.

United States and Cuba. 15d. per year. England. Canada and foreign countries. 32c.

England, Canada and foreign countries.

326.

St BACCHITIONS are entered on our books as soon as received, and are always dated from the current issue, unless otherwise ordered.

Postage fould parts of the United States and Canada is prepaid by us. When making a change of residence, in order to insure the unintermented delivery of COMFORT, it is essential that we be advised of the change in address IMMEDIATELY. As Postmasters cannot forward enough-class matter with stamps, your missing copies of COMFORT will not reach you and we do not supply back numbers.

To CONTRINTIONS: All literary contributions should be accompanied by stamped and address of envelopes for their return in case they are not available. Manuscripts should not be rolled.

Special Notice. We do not supply back numbers.

Entered at the Post Office at Augusta, Maine as second-class mail matter.

Published Monthly by
W. H. GANNETT, Incorporated,
Augusta, Maine.
New York Office, Temple Coart. Chicago (ffice, Marquette Building.

December, 1906

CONTENTS

CRUMBS OF COMFORT A FEW WORDS BY THE EDITOR -CURRENT TOPICS TOLD AROUND THE STOVE THE GREAT CHICAGO MYSTERY: cx,
The Man with Many Ahases Rosser W.
Cobbe IN & AROUND THE HOME, Fancy Work,
Comfort Suters' Corner, etc. 4,5, 10, 13 & 23

JERRY, THE BACKWOODS BOY
ued) Horatio Alger, Jr. 6

COMFORT'S LEAGUE OF COUSINS
ducted by Uncle Charlie 7,9 & 20 A STOLEN PROPOSAL (continued) Mrs.
Mary J. Holmes 8, 12 & 15 nary J. Holmes

1 HE HIDDEN WEDDING TREASURE: or,
The Mystery of the San Francisco Earthquake
(continued) William T. Valentine (continued) William T. Valentine
COMFORT RECITATION CLUB Conductaby Harold C. Hazleton

COMFORT RECITATION CLUB Conductaby Harold C. Hazleton

Miss.
Kate V. St. Maur

I ATS. AND HOW TO AAKE THEM
Comfort's Home Milliamer CORNER FOR BOYS Conducted by ON THROUGH DEATH Short Story
Orna Anice Eastman

15
F. ELMO (continued) Mrs. Augusta J.
Evans Wilson

16, 18 & 27 WHERE THE SWEET MAGNOLIAS
BLOOM Song Andrew B. Sterling
STUB ENDS OF INFORMATION TUN AND PHILOSOPHY NEW INVENTIONS AND DISCOVERIES HOME LAWYER TALKS WITH GIRLS

INFORMATION BUREAU MANNERS & LOOKS . CNE WAY OF WOOING Short Story Stan-COM'N' HOME FOR CHRISTMAS Poem V/HY HE STOPPED DRINKING Short Story A. W. Koenig

Crumbs of Comfort

Mind unemployed is mind unenjoyed. Perseverance and audacity generally win. To climb steep hills requires slow pace at first

That loss s common would not make My own less bitter; rather more; Too common! Never morning wore To evening but some heart did break.

To know how to wait is the great secret of Man is only miserable so far as he thinks Minds that have nothing to confer, find little to perceive.

Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper sprinkle cool patience. Recollection is the only paradise from which we cannot be turned out.

Oh, God, how beautiful the thought,
How merciful the blest decree
That grace can e'er be found when sought,
And naught shut out the soul from thee.
—Elisa Cook.

Persecution is not wrong because it is cruel, but cruel because it is wrong. Through tattered clothes small vices do appear; robes and fine furs hide all. The miser is as much in want of that which he has, as of that which he has not.

It is easy enough for one man to bear another's misfortunes like a Christian. We should not judge of men's merits by their qualifications, but how they use them.

Of this alone is even God deprived—the mak ing that which is past never to have been.

The clouds may drop down titles and estates and wealth may seek us, but wisdom must be sought.

t.
Were I so tall to reach the pole,
Or grasp the ocean with my span,
I must be measured by my soul—
The mind's the standard of the man.
—Watts.

It is an ill thing to be ashamed of one's poverty, but much worse not to make use of means to avoid it.

It is difficult to say who do you the most mischief—enemies with the worst intentions, or friends with the best.

To him who has thought or done, or suffered much, the level days of his childhood seem at an immeasurable distance.

All papes and mammas have exactly that sort All papers and manning uses eachy that sort of sight which distinguishes objects at a distance clearly, while they need spectacles to see those under their very noses.

A Few Words by the Editor

I heard the bells on Christmas day
Their old familiar carols piay,
And wild and sweet the words repeat,
Of peace on earth, goodwill to men.

-Longfellow.

MERRY, MERRY CHRISTMAS to you all! For hundreds of years this greeting has passed from man to man, and for hundreds of years it will continue to pass, without ever losing one whit of its cheeriness and sincerity. There is something about Christmas that draws every atom of goodness in man's nature to the surface, and makes him a little nearer to what God intended him to be than he ever was be-

God intended him to be than he ever was before. On Christmas day, the whole world prostrates itself before the manger of Bethlehem.

All Christendom focuses its attention on the little town that was the birthplace of the Christ child. All over the world they are singing today these immortal lines of Phillips Brookes:

Oh, little town of Bethlehem!
How still we see thee lie;
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep,
The silent stars go by,
Yet in thy dark street shineth
The everlasting Light;
The hopes and fears of all the years,
Are met in thee, tonight.

mankind would again hear the angels singing in the Heavens above, "Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth, and goodwill towards

With the passing of Mrs. Jefferson Davis, the Confederacy has lost another figure that went to make up its brief and stirring history. Mrs. Davis at the ripe age of eighty has gone to join the heroes of the lost cause, in the courts above. A stirring life was hers, and she happily lived to see the day when every vestige of bitterness between North and South had been wiped away, and blue and gray were united under the flag that we love so well. Mrs. Davis, in that sphere to which she has passed, will find both Federal blue and Confederate gray, side by side, even as they are here. The differences that once estranged them are now forgotten, and Confederates and Federalists have but one aim, and that is to uphold the honor and digaim, and that is to uphold the honor and dig-nity of the flag, and to keep our country at the head of the nations of the world.

Blow bugles of battle, the marches of peace; East, West, North and South let the long quarrel cease;
Sing the song of great joy, that the angels began,
Sing of glory to God, and of goodwill to man!

—Whittier.

In making Cuba pay the whole of the costs of the military intervention, that brought peace between the warring factions in that island is good sound common sense. To go out and thresh your neighbor, and have your neighbor come out and thresh you, is no doubt lots of fun for people who like that kind of fun; but when every episode of this kind brings a costly bill, which the belligerent parties must settle, they will probably find some way of coming to an agreement without fighting. Had the Cubans known they were to foot the bills for their latest "set to," they would not have embarked on their recent mix up with any very great enthusiasm, in fact they would have been wise enough to have kept out of it. There is nothing like a good stiff fine for making a man behave himself, especially if that man has none too much ready cash. There making a man behave nimself, especially if that man has none too much ready cash. There will be no more need for military intervention in the Pearl of the Antilles now that Uncle Sam has adopted this device of settling the costs of pugilism upon the pugilists.

King of the soil! bear in mind
Your labor is for future hours,
Advance! spare not! nor look behind!
Plow deep and straight with all your powers!

—Richard Hengist Norne.

The wonders of science cease not. Dr. Sajous of Philadelphia, before the Medical Association of Greater New York, has just discussed his great experiments with andrenilin, which he has recently discovered. By the use of this great compound, a headless dog was kept alive for ten bours. Nothing so potent, in setaining. for ten hours. Nothing so potent in retaining life in the body after respiration and appearance of life has ceased has ever been discovered. Andrenilin opens up a vast life-saving field for physicians and surgeons. People who have been in the water for some hours, and are to all interest and purposes deed from drowning. been in the water for some hours, and are to all intents and purposes dead from drowning, have now a chance of being revived, as andrenilin will keep life in the body, until the water can be expelled from the lungs and natural respiration restored. By experimenting on animals, this fact has been positively proved. There is a substance present in the lungs which absorbs oxygen from the air. This substance, according to Dr. Sajous, is found in the andreninal glands in the regions of the kidneys, hence the name andrenilin.

letters that tell us that Comfort is not only good, but it grows better all the time, so you evidently do appreciate the fact that we are not standing still, but are ever progressing. It is not always easy to keep departments up to the highest pitch of perfection. Writers and literary people have their off days, and you hear readers remarking, "So and So is not as good as he used to be," and "such and such a person does not write as well as he used to do once upon a time." However, we do not think anyone can say this of any of our departments, which never deteriorate, but continually improve in quality and excellence. This improvement will go on through the coming year, and we not only hope to retain the millions of readers we already have, but to gain millions of more friends and admirers before another year has run its course. Those who have not renewed their subscriptions for 1907 should do so immediately, as directly your subscriptions run out, your paper stops. We absolutely do not send the paper after the time very evident from the tens of thousands of day these immortal lines of Phillips Brookes:

Oh, little town of Bethlehem!
How still we see thee lie;
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep,
The silent stars go by,
Yet in thy dark street shineth
The everlasting Light:
The hopes and fears of all the years,
Are met in the, tonight.

And thus the years roll on, Christmas after Christmas, and more and more with every passing year, humanity needs the inspiration of Christmas-to cheer it on its way, and to sweeten the struggle of life with the feeling of human protherhood, and the hope of that eternal happiness which comes to mankind from the manger of that little far-away town in distant Palestine. Some day, the Christmas spirit, with its "Peace on earth, goodwill to men," will not be reserved for one day of the year only, but will be continued to the whole 365.
Can you imagine what a grand and glorious world this would be if every human face retained the Christmas smile, and every human heart the Yule Tide spirit all the year round; George William Curtis says: "In every age some have believed the Christmas spirit to be the ideal, and possible spirit that will prevail eventually in all human society," so your editor is not alone in his ideas upon this subject. Get the Christmas spirit, and follow your eventually in all human society," so your editor is not alone in his ideas upon this subject. Get the Christmas spirit in your hearts then, through all the days of your life other men may become inspired with that same spirit, and follow your example. If every human soul thrilled with this spirit of brotherhood and good fellowship, mankind would again hear the angels singing in the Heavens above, "Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth, and goodwill towards men."

Current Topics Mount McKinley, in Alaska, more than twenty thousand feet high, and believed to be the highest peak in America, has been scaled by Dr. Fred A. Cook, who was surgeon of the Peary Arctic expedition of 1891. His estimate of the height seems to be near twenty-three thousand feet, which is greater than the earlier computation of the United States Geological survey.

An unimproved lot facing Fifth Avenue in New York City has a 150-foot inclosure. Land in that neighborhood is worth $10,000 a front foot, and yet this lot has a high-board fence around it and is entirely idle. A real estate agent offered $500,000. The owner, a woman, thought it was worth $600,000. When the broker returned, with the consent of his client to pay $600,000, she said: "It's the only place my dog, Trixie has to exercise. I think I will keep it for him."

A question involving the rights of Japanese in the United States has arisen in San Francisco. The board of education has established a separate school for children of Oriental parentage, and made mandatory the attendance there of Japanese as well as of Chinese children. The Japanese bitterly resent this treatment against their children, and the Japanese government, through its ambassador at Washington has formally remonstrated, and has demanded for Japanese in the United States the right of equal treatment with American citizens which is expressly guaranteed by the treaty of 1894.

The failure of Lieutenant Peary's latest ex-The failure of Lieutenant Peary's latest expedition to reach the pole was due to the usual cause, the impassability of the ice. He has succeeded in getting farther North than any explorer has ever gone. For several years the record had been held by an Italian explorer, the Duke of D'Abruzzi. This was 86 degrees and 34 minutes, while Peary has succeeded in reaching 87 degrees and 6 minutes, or within 203 miles of the pole, or 35 miles nearer than the Italian. It is inferred from the latest dispatches that Peary will try again, as the Roosevelt is coming southward for repairs and supplies.

The United States grand jury has returned with thirty counts against three defendants charged with frauds in the stamping of boiler tubes furnished to the Government as tested and approved, which according to the charge, had been rejected as defective. These tubes were supplied to six hattleshing Goorgie had been rejected as defective. These tubes were supplied to six battleships, Georgia, Maine, Louisiana, Minnesota, Vermont, Nebraska, and five armored cruisers, Maryland, Tennessee, Washington, Pennsylvania, Colorado, and the protected cruiser, Charleston. It was the battleship Louisiana which carried President and Mrs. Roosevelt to the Isthmus of Panama. The battleship was convoyed by the armored cruisers, Washington and Tennessee.

Several changes in President Roosevelt's Cabinet are to take place. Attorney-General Moody, whose appointment to the Supreme Bench is announced, will be succeeded by Mr. Bonaparte, now Secretary of the Navy. Mr. Metcalf, now at the head of the Department of Concesses and Labor will be Secretary of the according to Dr. Sajous, is found in the andreninal glands in the regions of the kidneys, hence the name andrenilin.

This is the final issue of COMFORT for 1906, and our last meeting for this year. We thank you for all your favors for the twelve months that have now almost passed, and we hope in the year approaching to still further win your confidence and appreciation, and merit your esteem and regard. You will notice one thing about COMFORT—it never deteriorates. We do not have a good number one month, and a poor one the next, as do many other publications. Our progress is steady and constant. It is ever "Onward and Upward," as far as we are concerned, and that you appreciate this fact is will take the place made vacant by Garfield.

Central West Fur Supply

"Some people may think that progress is pushing out all the original inhabitants," said the man with a coonskin vest on, "but there are a good many of the old stock still on this side of the Mississippi, and the hunter who is looking for muskrats, raccoons, possums, foxes, and civet cats, with a mink and a weasel, or an otter now and then can find them in the state of Illinois, and other Middle West states in more or less profusion. During the last winter Illinois trappers were busier than in many years. One firm of dealers in Muscatine has been buying furs at the rate of $3,000 a week, and there are pelt buyers all over the state who are doing nearly as much. It is said that trappers in Illinois will receive $100,000 for furs this season. Iowa, Indiana and other states are doing about the same. Most of the catch is muskrat, but this is not very popular as their pelts bring only from 12 to 15 cents each. Skunks range from 50 cents to $2.50 according to size and condition. Coon skins run from 50 cents to $1.75, possum from 25 to 75, and red fox from $1 to $5. The scarcer the animal the higher the pelt, if its fur is any commercial value at all. It looks as if there might be money in the trapping business, with several hundred thousand dollars being distributed, but there are nearly as many farmer boys out with their guns and traps as there are dollars, and the result is that nobody gets very much out of it except the comparatively few dealers who buy the pelts."

American Homes

"According to the census of 1900," said the man who looked prosperous, "there are 16,239,-797 families in the United States living in 14,-474,777 dwellings, which shows that in some sections of the country there are a good many more than one family to a dwelling, as in some of the crowded cities where the poor are packed like chickens in a coop. There are 6,920,143 families living in their own homes, but there are mortgages on 2,180,229 of these, the others being free. Nearly eight and a half million families live in rented houses. Of those owning their own homes over five millions are native whites, and 372,444 are negroes. Over 48,000 Inwhites, and 372,444 are negroes. Over 30,000 Incidents have homes of their own, and 2.274 Chinese and Japanese. The average size of the families is 4.7 persons. The density of the population is 25.6 persons to the square mile, with the greatest density in the District of Columbia, where it is only one tenth of one person to the square mile, or one person to every ten square miles. Of the states, Rhode Island is the most densely populated, with 407 persons to the square mile; Massachusetts is next with 348.9; New Jersey third with 250.3; Connecticut fourth with 187.5, and Nevada last with 4 of a person to each square mile. If the whole country were as densely populated as the District of Columbia, our population would be about thirteen billions of people, or about eight times the population of the whole world, now. But none of you need be afraid that we shall have that many people to the square mile, because Uncle Sam is the provider for the density in the District of Columbia, and he will not scatter out much beyond the limits of the District." dians have homes of their own, and 2.274 Chi-

Beauty Makers

"The beauty specialists have developed greatly in the past few years," said the man from New York, "and in my town there are scores of them scattered all about. They do a from New York, "and in my town there are scores of them scattered all about. They do a rushing business, too, for the women seem to think that beauty is the first consideration. They pay good prices, and some of the specialists are getting rich at the business. I don't think they can improve much on nature, but the women seem to think differently, and as long as the bills don't come to me, I suppose it is none of my business. I was talking to one not long ago, and I'll just give you a few tips as to what it costs to have your beauty done over. This one was a man and he knows how to charge. For making the face of an old person look young, the price was $150, and no guarantee to keep it that way. To remove, wrinkles costs from $3 to $5 each treatment, and it may require a dozen to get them out, and, probably $5 a week to keep them so. Home treatment costs $20, and electrical face massage from $30 to $60. A face mask to beautify will cost $100, and lotions of some mysterious beautifying effect cost from $5 to $50 a bottle, or box. A crooked nose may be straightened at a cost of $100. When the skin gets too loose on the face, from age or other causes, the skin is cut out and patched up, and operations of this kind cost from $100 to $5.000 according to the wealth and vanity of the person—and it is not always a woman, for the men have some vanity also, and patronize the beauty makers to a considerable extent. Complexions may also be improved, and to turn out one that is really and truly beautiful Complexions may also be improved, and to turn out one that is really and truly beautiful turn out one that is really and truly beautiful will cost $500. There are people to 1 sy that much, too, but how well satisfied they are afterwards, I can't say. In improving the figure, all kinds of appliances are used, and they cost from $5 up. Flesh reducing may be had as low as fifty cents a treatment, but it may require a hundred treatments to show any results worth considering. I think I like to see a fine specimen of human beauty about as well as anybody, but blamed if I don't want it to be natural beauty. and I wouldn't recommend to be natural beauty, and I wouldn't recommend the homeliest woman I know to trust her beauty repairing to anybody but herself with the usual simple applications known to every

The Great Chicago Mystery or,

The Man With Many Aliases

Copyright, 1306, by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Inc.

Four men sat in a luxuriously appointed room, their heads close together, while outside roared the life of a great city
"It can be done," one of the men said decidedly.
He was a powerful man, with a hare-lip, and there was a conscious leadership in his manner.
"I supppose so," chimed in another, licking his lips.

was a conscious leadership in his manner.

"I supppose so," chimed in another, licking his lips.

"If we were in New York, I would pause, but here in Chicago, we're safe enough, for there is no danger of Crit Truman. In New York we all tremble at the thought of Crit Truman and his men."

"Whose dem?" asked a young fellow, with the curiously contracted eyes of an opium fiend.

"The Trumans, as they are called? Why, where have you lived not to have heard of them? Just as slick a bunch of detectives as you want to meet. I owe Crit Truman this," laying a forefinger upon the disfiguring hare-lip. "He split my lip open, and it has never healed. There is Crit himself, a giant in strength; Ralph Dayton, his chief assistant, and Peter Strongman, an Irish boy. Those three are terrors."

"Dis ain't Noo York," grinned the opium fiend.

"You can bet it ain't." replied the man with the hare-lip, then he added:

"When we get things agoin' I'm going to spring a mine. I've had my eye on a fellow in New York, a swell guy, who is connected with a bank. He's a slick one, and I think we can get him on here. He not only is good at doctoring accounts, but the way he can pinch the shiners, is something to open a fellow's eyes."

The other men looked interested.

"I have another lay. We need a swell-looking girl. I know who we can get. She'll come fast enough. No, she's straight as a string, but when we've broken her in, she'll fall in with our plans," and he laughed a wicked laugh, and the others joined him.

That very night Chicago was stirred by a very bold Stickup game, and as usual, the police made joined him.

That very night Chicago was stirred by a very bold Stickup game, and as usual, the police made no arrests, the crooks escaping with the goods, without turning a hair.

CHAPTER I.

THE MAN APPEARS AGAIN.

"UMPH!" ejaculated Crit Tru-The great detective and his assistant, Ralph Dayton, were seated in Crit's office, examining the morning mail.

"What is it, Crit?" Ralph asked.
Crit finished reading the letter in his hand, and then paused, passing it to Ralph, saying:
"Read that aloud, I want to get it right."
His assistant read the following:

Office of the Chief,
Police Department of Chicago.
Mr. Crit Truman, New York City,

Mr. Crit Truman, New York City,

DEAR SIR:

Although I have never met you personally, I believe that several of my men have worked under you in cases you have had in our city, and I am also well acquainted with your methods and ability.

Doubtless you have read of the reign of crime now existing in Chicago, which, however, I hope to be able to dispel.

The matter which I wish to call to your attention, however, is the work of what I believe to be a thoroughly established bunch of crooks, of the most desperate and degenerate character. Their lay lies in the holding up of saloons and cafes; at least, ten of these occurrences have happened in the city within the last week, and the similarity of the methods used have brought home to me the conviction that they are all pulled off by the same gang.

methods used have brought home to me the conviction that they are all pulled off by the same gang.

The leader has been variously described to me and my captains, some victims saying he is tall and fair; others that he is short and dark, and one even made the assertion that from his manner of talk, he was convinced that the man had a hare-lip.

Mr. Truman, I am forced to admit that my men are powerless to cope with the situation. I have had my Flying Squadron and Murder Squad out night and day (several murders have been committed by this gang during the depredations), but so far they have accomplished next to nothing. Every stool-pigeon who has ever given us the least information has been rounded-up, and sweated by me personally, and by my officers, but nothing of value has been learned by us.

Chicago is a proud city, and we who are in control of her welfare, like to feel that we can manage our own affairs, but as the Chief of Police of this city, I realize how heavily the responsibility of my position rests upon me. I have-to, and will, stop the nefarious proceedings of this band of crooks.

Therefore, Mr. Truman, admitting that my men are unable to find any clue which will break up this awful state of affairs, I ask you, as man to man, to give us some of your valuable time (I fully appreciate how busy you are), and to come to the Windy City to lend us your able assistance. Hoping to receive a satisfactory reply, I remain, Very sincerely

The letter was signed by the Chief of Police of Chicago.

"Well, Ralph," Crit said, after a moment's silence, "what do you think of it?"
"What do you mean? Of the request, or of

'First, of the facts regarding the leader of

Ralph silently turned to the paragraph regarding the description of the leader, and placed his finger on the word "hare-lip."

Crit smiled.
"Well, what does that mean, boy?"
"Can't you think?"
"Better tell me."

"It just brought up a little case we participated in on the East Side, about two years

Again Crit smiled.
"I often wonder, Ralph," he said, "if you're a mind reader."

Ralph smiled, too.
"So that's what you're thinking of, too?" he asked, leaning forward a little in his earnest-

"Just the same, boy. Let's see if I recall the case," and the great detective drew thoughtfully upon his cigar as he commenced:

"We were called to investigate a series of

"We were called to investigate a series of crimes, principally connected with the holding up of small saloons on the East Side, and after some little trouble, managed to corral many of the members of the gang, which had committed these crimes."

Crit looked at Ralph for confirmation, and

By Rosser W. Cobbe

Author of "The Mark of the Beast"

some time, at least, to find the leader, for each man had evidently been so intimidated by him and so impressed by his desperate and cruel deeds, that none could be found, even to save deeds, that none could be found, even to save himself, who would reveal the name or whereabouts of the leader."

Crit paused to relight his cigar.

"However," he continued, rather grimly, "we caught him. One of his pals while in jail, awaiting trial, caught a fever, and in his delirium gave his chief away."

"Yes," Ralph said, with a wise nod of the head.

head.

"Yes," Ralph said, with a wise nod of the head.

"I was there myself, and learned that the leader of these desperadoes was one Jim Hollis, alias Jim Holmes, alias Chris Dougherty, alias so many other names it seemed impossible to get to the end of the list."

As Crit paused, Ralph shifted expectantly in his seat, his eyes glistening with the light of recollection, as his chief continued:

"After a little time, during which you, my boy, did some exceptionally clever work, we captured this Hollis, alias Holmes and all the other names, and saw him safely landed in Sing, only to learn later that he had killed his guard, and broken jail, escaping no one ever found out just how, probably through the aid of confederates."

"And then we got him again," Ralph interrupted, laughing grimly.

"We did," Crit acknowledged, and for a moment these two, the great detective and his chief assistant, were silent, the well-trained minds of each busy with recollections of this case, which was but one out of thousands of others they had taken and carried to a successful termination.

After a short time. Crit resumed:

"An leave of these desperadoes was one Jim Hollis, and do a lot more mischief. This practice of settling when money is returned is some-thing alittle against my principles," and Crit threw aside his cigar, and lit a fresh one. After it was fairly going, he asked:

"Anything new on the lists?"

"Several, but not in our line. Two would-be clients want our services in obtaining evidence in divorce cases—"

Crit violently shook his head, and Ralph with a smile on his lips continued:

"Another wants his son watched to discover if he is paying attention to a popular actress."

"What kind of people do they take us for?"

Crit asked indignantly. He and his men only dealt with remendous cases.

"There's a missing girl, but I am afraid it is only the usual foolish runaway episode, which makes work for the divorce courts later."

"Several, but not in our line. Two would-be clients want our services in obtaining the clients want ou ful termination.

After a short time, Crit resumed:
"Yes, we did recapture him, but while we were doing it, The Man with Many Aliases and I had a little misunderstanding, which led

"Perhaps," he answered doubtfully. "Then relative to the bank robbery? Are the officials satisfied with the return of the money?"

"Perfectly."

"That ends it, then, though I think they are wrong. They ought to have prosecuted, for their man's no good, and we'll have trouble with him later on."

"It will be no lesson to him, then?"

"None in the least. Percy Mandeville has the making of a confirmed criminal in his composition, and will eventually land in the pen. Better put him there now, than to let him run wild, and do a lot more mischief. This practice of settling when money is returned is something a little against my principles," and Crit threw aside his cigar, and lit a fresh one. After it was fairly going, he asked:

"Anything new on the lists?"

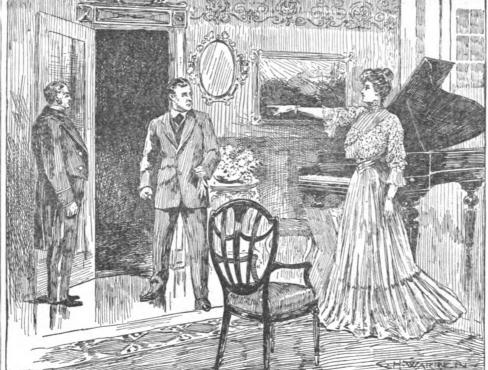

"Several, but not in our line. Two would-be clients want our services in obtaining evidence in divorce cases—"

Crit violently shook his head, and Ralph with a smile on his lips continued:

"Another wants his son watched to discover if he is paying attention to a popular actress."

"What kind of people do they take us for?"

then?"
"Nothing, except—" and Ralph paused.
"Except what?"
"That jewelry robbery on Fifth avenue."
"I remember. Well, I think we have that case pretty well in train, so it can be left for a few days, eh?"
"I think so."
"Yes. Then, Ralph, I've made up my mind

THE MAN TURNED, HIS FACE LIVID WITH RAGE.

to blows," Crit looked at Ralph from under his eyelashes, "and I am afraid that the work I left on him will remain for life."

"It will," was Ralph's admission.

"I suppose I hit him a little harder than was necessary, and I know that my knuckles ached the rest of the day, and—"

"I remember," Ralph broke in. "Oh, what a fight that was! There was I in the corner, drugged and bound, and only half alive, and you half-blinded with blood, standing up and handing out the gaff as fast as it came to you. Then when he came in, you handed it to him proper, a magnificent right swing on the mouth. If I remember, it split him from his nostril to his mouth, and that wound when healed might pass for a —"

"I to catch this man who has twice escaped; who openly boasts that he is greater than all laws."

"Good!" cried Ralph who was already game.

"Yes, sir, I am going to get him, if it takes me to the end of time. I think that I can get him, too, if the fellow our friend in Chicago describes, is one and the same as Mr. Man of the many Aliases."

"Think he is?"

"I do, Ralph. What's your opinion?"

"You've stated it," was the quick reply, as Ralph threw aside the cigar he had been smokling, and rising stretched himself.

"Then wire the chief of the Chicago police department that we start for his city at 8.15, on the Chicago Flyer, on the Pennsylvania line, and we will be with him at eight the next

"Yes," said Crit, quietly, "for a hare-lip."
Again they meditated, then Crit continued, looking at the end of his cigar, which he was

"We landed Hollis in jail all right, but he remained only a short time. I honestly believe that man is the very—the very—"
"The very old boy himself," suggested Ralph laughing.

"You're right," Crit said, but his face was grave. "Yes, the very old boy himself for breaking away from all bonds. I tell you, Ralph, that man is a very dangerous character."
_"Well, I should say he was," came the quick response.

"Such a man must not be left at large," Crit aid musingly.

Knowing his chief as he did, Ralph comprehended just what was passing in the active brain.

"How is our work?" Crit asked at last, raising his head, which had sunk on his breast, and striking a match, which he held with steady fingers to the much neglected cigar.

"Well, pretty fair," Ralph said hesitatingly.
"How's that conspiracy case?"
"I think the confessions we got last night from those two released in the Tomba vertice.

the latter nodded. from those two we landed in the Tombs yester-"We failed, however," Crit continued, "for day will square that."

him, too, if the fellow our friend in Chicago describes, is one and the same as Mr. Man of the many Aliases."

"Think he is?"

"I do, Ralph. What's your opinion?"

"You've stated it," was the quick reply, as Ralph threw aside the cigar he had been smoking, and rising stretched himself.

"Then wire the chief of the Chicago police department that we start for his city at 8.15, on the Chicago Flyer, on the Pennsylvania line, and we will be with him at eight the next morning. Have him meet us at the Union depot there. No, tell him we will drop in upon him, that will be better."

"All right."

"And, I say, boy, when you do that, get

"All right."

"And, I say, boy, when you do that, get Peter, and come back, so we can outline a general plan."

"Shall I'phone the Pennsylvania office for a stateroom?" Ralph asked.

"Pil do that myself. You send the wire, and then I think we'll be ready to think about that very slick criminal of ours," and as he spoke, Crit turned in his chair, and took up his telephone receiver. phone receiver.

CHAPTER II.

TOO STRANGE FOR BELIEF.

"But I really don't."
"Are you sure?"
"Why not? I have asked my heart a question, and it says no. I am sorry for you, but this must be final." "You have encouraged me."

"Mr. Mandeville, I deny that."
"And I tell you that it is so."

The two speakers were standing, and both looked angry. The girl, one of the sweetest to be seen in New York, held her little head high, scornful of the man and his imputation which was utterly false. She had never liked him, and being without any desire to win a love she could not return, had never given him the slightest encouragement.

"You'll pay for this," the man hissed between his teeth, but the girl refused to notice his remark, but crossing the room, pressed the electric button. To the servant who appeared almost immediately, she said almost coidly:

"James, show this man out. If he ever cails again, I am not at home."

The servant bowed. The orders of the daughter of the house were obeyed without question.

The man turned, his face livid with rage, and with a look and gesture the girl never forgot, he left the room. With a bitter sigh Sylvia Lyster sank into a chair, and said half aloud:

"Oh, the wretch! How I hate him! Still I could but spare him on account of Kathie," then she again pressed the bell, and ordered that Miss Gordon be summoned.

As she sat there waiting, she presented a charming picture of a representative American girl of the upper classes of unusual intelligence. Her hair was a soft gold, her eyes were those of a story-book, deep violet, and her skin, delicate as a rose petal, glowed with perfect health. As the door opened, she sprung to her feet, and ran forward, throwing her arms about the young woman who entered.

"Dear Kathie," she whispered, kissing her.

No one but these two knew what Sylvia Lyster had done for Kathie Mandeville, who, deserted by her worthless husband, had been discovered by the society favorite in some of her settlement work, utterly destitute. Sylvia had taken her to her own house, treated her like a rister, and gained from the wife, with her dark Spanish beauty, a passionate devotion nothing would ever change. Sylvia had heard much from Kathie, and could have given information which would have placed the man who had just asked her to be his wife, behind the bars, but on account of his young wife, and a child yet unborn, she remained quiet, although her blood boiled as she thought of his wick gently.

"Because I have something to tell you."

"What is it?"
"Percy Mandeville has just been here and asked me to marry him."

The young wife gasped, then threw back her head:
"Wretch!" she half sobbed.

"Wretch!" she half sobbed.
"You can't love him, yet."
"Sylvia, dear, when you once love a man," she did not notice Sylvia's deep blush, "you will know that it is not just for fair weather. I can't help loving Percy. It's a part of me. Sometime he will be glad of my love, and turn towards me, I am sure of that" and there was a devotion in her face beautiful to see.

Sylvia's face was still flushed when Kathie went back to the suite of rooms assigned to her sylvia's lace was still fushed when kathle went back to the suite of rooms assigned to her by Sylvia who was mistress of her father's big Fifth Avenue home, and at last she went to the telephone, and raising the receiver called a number. When it was given her she was almost too bashful to talk, but at last she managed to ask softly.

aged to ask softly:
"Is that you, Custer?"
"Of course it is."

"Recognize my voice?"

"You know it is the sweetest music in the world to me," was the ardent response and it brought still more color into the lovely face, for Sylvia Lyster's engagement to Custer Quex was only of two days' length.

"Will you come to disper tonicht?" she con-

"Will you come to dinner tonight?" she con-"Will I? Just wait and see. But, darling, a moment, I want to see you alone when I first

"All right," came in sweet tones over the wire. "Then until I see you tonight, good by, sweetheart. I wish I could kiss you right here and now." "Custer!"

"Honest. In half a minute I'll come right up now."
"Wait until dinner," she said with a little laugh.

"Then you'll be waiting for me, where?"
"In the small reception-room, James will show you in." "You blessed one. Say, Sylvia, wear that sweet blue dress you had on night pefore last, will you?"

"It's awfully old."

for in it you promised to marry me, you know. I say, Sylvia, I can't wait for my kisses until tonight, I'm coming right up." How afterwards he wished he had carried out his half-serious threat. serious threat.

"If you do, I'll not be at home," she said with pretty imperiousness, and so after calling her so many endearing names over the wire that she was covered with blushes, Custer Quex at last rung off, and kept looking at the clock to see how the moments dragged, for it seemed ages before he could decently call at the home of his beloved.

of his beloved. That was the last happy afternoon he was to know for many a long day, for when he reached the Lyster mansion that night, he found that Sylvia was missing, and that she had left no trace behind her. trace behind her.

CHAPTER III.

THE DETECTIVES ARRIVE.

"And now to business, Chief," Crit Truman said gravely, two days after his conversation with Ralph, as he and the latter were sitting with the Chief of Police of the city of Chicago, in the latter's private office at headquarters.

"I'm yours truly," responded the chief. "Ask any questions you desire."
Crit and Ralph had at once made their way from the Uinon depot, at Adams and Desplaines streets to the city hall, having breakfasted on
(CONTINUED ON PAGE 14.)

IN @ AROUND The HOME

CONDUCTED BY MRS. WHEELER WILKINSON

Terms Used in Crochet

Ch. chain; ch. st. chain stitch; s. c. single crochet; d. c. double crochet (thread over once); tr. c. treble crochet (thread over twice); dtr. double treble crochet (thread over three times); l. c. long crochet; r. st; roll stitch l. loop; p. picot; r. p. roll picot; sl. st. slip stitch; k. st. knot stitch; sts. stitches; stars mean that the directions given between them should be repeated as indicated before proceeding.

Terms Used in Knitting

k. knit plain; o. over; o. 2, over twice; n. narrow 2 stitches together; p. purl; sl. slip a stitch; tog. together; b. bind; stars and parenthesis indicate

Terms Used in Tatting

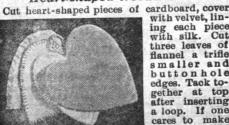

d. s. double stitch; p. picot; l. p. long picot; ch. chain; d. k. double knot; pkt. picot and knot together. * indicates a repetition.

Distributing Christmas Gifts

Distributing Christmas Gifts

HERE I was visiting one Christmas they had a wide open fireplace. The crane still hung in it to be used upon occasion. Christmas morning we found the big iron kettle swung in its place, and both crane and kettle were covered with moss and evergreens. The brickwork of the mantel was decorated with holly. The back log inside the fireplace was a monster selected for Christmas for its rustic beauty. It was a white birch and its silvery bark was covered with lovely lichens and fungus growths. Santa Claus dispensed his Christmas gifts from the capacious depths of the iron kettle hanging from the crane. Then we started that back log to blazing. A lively game which begins and ends at the Christmas tree serves to amuse a crowd of children for a long time. In distributing the gifts one child receives a note reading "Look in the scrap basket." There is a general rush for that receptacle, and in it they find another note telling them to look in "father's hat on the rack," another note indicates somewhere else, and the merry hunt takes them to various places all over the house. When they reach the farthest limit, perhaps the attic, the notes lead down again, and finally to the Christmas tree where a substantial gift is found and pinned to it these words, "Here I am." A cobweb hunt is a jolly one for the whole family. One member of the family arranges the balls of twine after the others have all retired. A central starting point is selected, either the chandelier of the living-room or hall. Each ball of twine has a card attached with the name on it and the end fastened to the starting point, then you unwind the ball as you go, leading it a dizzy maze up and downstairs, behind pictures, around piano legs, through registers and so on. When your work has ceased and you have sought your couch tired but happy, probably someone else will steal out of a room and softly lead your ball of twine a merry dance. One young fellow last Christmas, after a mysterious time followed the lead of his ball of twine

Heart-shaped Needlebook

with vervet, ining each piece with silk. Cut three leaves of flannel a trifle smaller and button hole does Tack tobutton hole edges. Tack to-gether at top after inserting a loop. If one cares to make this for a gift, it would glad-den the heart a with needles of sewing, pins, needles, scissors, etc. A glance at the illustration will show the arrangement.

In confining the four points do not do it too closely, or the folding will not be satisfactory. A little practice will enable one to cut a cool able one to cut a good pattern and if they fold as shown in the illustra-

HEART-SHAPED NEEDLEBOOK. it would den the of any woman, to find it filled with needles of

of any woman, to find it filled with needles of all sorts and sizes, and as they used them bring pleasant thoughts of the giver, making the hours brighter.

For the needlebook which is shown both opened and closed cut out four heart-shaped pieces of cardboard, covering the outside of each heart with some attractive material, silk, satin or velvet—nearly everyone has a box, from which the desired pieces can be taken, and a can be taken, and a small bit is all that is required. The inside of each heart is covered according to the fancy of the maker and arccording to the convenient things peaded in ranged for the convenient things needed tion they will see how easily it is accomplished. Sew ribbon at the top and lower heart and NEEDLEBOOK CLOSED. when closed tie it, and you have not only a durable, but a useful gift at this blessed season—Christmas, when love and goodwill should one all hearts. open all hearts.

An Emergency Bag

Select for this useful bag any attractive durable material. Cover two pieces of cardboard, shaped on both sides as shown in the illustration, and then connect and form the bag by fulling in a piece around three sides; this can be cut either on the straight or bias. On the outside of one side place a pocket for holding some of the smaller articles.

This bag is designed for emergencies, and to fulfill its mission should be fitted out with

For a table cover or centerpiece medium weight linen should be used. In drawing out your pattern, have the center star about three times the size of the smaller ones. Draw this and twenty-five little stars on your linen, these can be placed quite close together, run a thread around on each outline, then buttonhole over this closely all around each star, when finished dampen and press well with a hot iron. Now cut out the stars close to the buttonholing.

On heavy paper draw a perfect circle; put the large star in the center of the circle and baste firmly in place. Now divide the circle into five equal parts, and place five stars, each with a point at the points of division, baste securely. It will now be easy to arrange the three in each corner around this star, and finish by placing one, as shown in the illustration, on each side of the large star.

This much accomplished one can fill in the space between with any sort of wheels or stitches which are usually used in drawnwork.

For a handkerchief proceed in the same way, only using fine linen and thread. A star about seven inches from point to point, makes a good size when finished, and is most dainty and lacy. For a table cover or centerpiece medium weight dainty and lacy.

Centerpiece

See Illustration on Opposite Page.

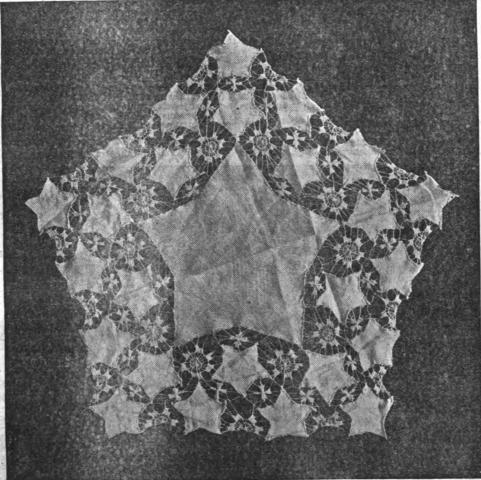

Wheels for edges.

Wheels for edges.
Material required—one spool linen No. 60 and fifteen inch square of linen for the center.
Making chain of eight stitches, join.
1st round.—Ch. 4, 1 d. c. in ring,* ch. 5, 4 d. c.
in ring, repeat twice from *, join.
2d round.—* Ch. 5, 12 d. c. under the ch. 5 sts.
in previous row. Catch to the 2d d. c. in group of 4 d. c. in previous row, repeat from * three times.

times.

3d round.—* 2 d. c. under chain between groups of 12 d. c., ch. 2, 2 d. c. under same ch. Ch. 6, 1 d. c. in 6th d. c. of previous row, ch. 3, 1 d. c. in 7th d. c. of previous row, ch. 6, repeat three times from *.

4th round.—* Start from ch. 3 between groups of 4 d. c. in previous row, ch. 8, then 6 r. sts. under ch. between group 2 d. c. in previous row. For of strong white thread, a pair of scissors, a paper of needles, a paper of pins, a package of adhesive plaster, and one of court plaster. In the pocket place a small bottle of brandy, one of spirit of camphor, one of ammonia, one of arnica. These to be used as restoratives, and soothing lotions. Many a mother would gladly welcome such a sensible serviceable gift.

DRAWNWORK CENTERPIECE OR TABLE COVER. Designed by Sophie Blascke, Beeville, Texas.

Drawnwork Centerpiece

For this handsome and unique design we are indebted to one of the Southern sisters who is quite an expert in this line of needlework.

The five pointed star is used in two sizes for

BOOKMARK.

Children can easily make little bookmarks for teachers or friends by cutting colored flowers from catalogues, and pasting at the top to rather heavy paper of the same outline.

the base of this work, and a table cover, center-piece or handkerchief could be made by this pattern, according to the quality of the mater-ials selected.

r. st. throw thread over the needle twenty times, draw through all and fasten with sl. st.
Then crochet eight, repeat three times from *.
5th round.—S. c. over ch. of eight until firm, 1 s. c. in each other st., continue all around.
6th round.—Ch 4.5 to in at above.

6th round.—Ch. 4, 5 tr. in st above ch. 5, ch.

other st. of last row.

These wheels can also be made of silk or silkateen, and are very ornamental for scarf ends or tidies.

Crocheted Cup and Saucer

1st row.—Ch. 5, join.
2nd row.—Ch. 3, 24 d. c. in ring.
3rd row.—Ch. 3, *2 d. c. in 1 st., and second
d. c. of 2nd row, 1 d. c. in next d. c., repeat from
* to *

4th row .- Ch. 3, * d. c. in 1 st. and 2nd d. c., 2 d. c. in next, repeat from star. 5th row.—Ch. 3, d. c. in each of the 1 st., and 8 d. c., * 2 d. c. in next, 1 d. c. in next 9 d. c., repeat from star.

6th row.—Ch. 3, d. c. in each of the next 9 d. c., * 2 d. c. in next, d. c. in each of next 10 d. c., c., *2 d. c. in next, d. c. in each of next 10 d. c., repeat as before.

7th row.—Ch. 3, d. c. in each of the next 16 d. c., *2 d. c. in next, d. c. in each of next 17 d. c., repeat.
8th row.—Ch. 3, d. c. in each d. c. of row.
9th row.—Ch. 5, d. c. in 2nd d. c., d. c. in next, * ch. 2, sl. st., d. c. in next, ch. 1, sl. st., d. c. in next, repeat from * and you will have 38 spaces.

10th row .- Ch. 3, d. c. in each stitch of 9th 11th row .- * 5 d. c. in first stitch, sl. st., next, fasten into next with s. c., repeat; this finishes

To make the cup fasten the thread into the

To make the cup fasten the thread into the outer edge of the third row of the saucer.

1st row.—Ch. 3, d c. in each d. c. of 3rd row.
2nd row.—Ch. 3, 2 d. c, in next d. c., * 2 d. c. in next, d. c., in each of the next 3 d. c., repeat.
3rd row.—* Ch. 3, d. c. in each of next 8 d. c.,
2 d. c. in next 9 d. c., repeat.
4th row.—Ch. 3, d. c. in each d. c. of 3rd row.
5th row.—Same as 4th row.
6th row.—Same as 5th row.

7th row.—Ch. 5, d. c. in 2nd d. c., ch. 1, sl. st., d. c. in next d. c., * ch. 1, sl. st., d. c. in next,

8th row.—Ch. 3, d. c. in each d. c. of 7th row. 9th row.—*5 d. c. in 2nd d. c., sl. st., fasten in next with s. c., repeat around.

For the Handle For the Handle

Fasten thread to cup at the bottom of top, or ribbon spaces, and work d. c. into each of 5 d. c. of cup, * ch. 3, d. c. in 4 d. c., repeat until there are 8 rows, then fasten to bottom of cup; sew the sides together so as to form a roll, Stiffen with starch or gum arabic and draw the saucer into place over a large saucer. Place a large cup in the crocheted cup and pull the latter into place over it. Shape the handle and dry well. Run baby ribbon through the spaces.

Miss Handy, Athol, Mass.

Shield-shaped Wall Pocket

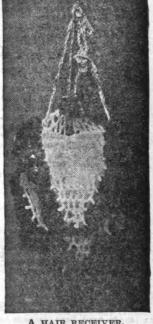

ne ime of the pattern, and catch down with thread or floss. For this, brown braid and orange crochet silk was for its effective-ness, its economy, its speed in working, its adaptability.

A Hair Receiver

For some reason every woman seems to take delight in making bags of one sort or another; they certainly are useful and are useful and one can scarcely have too many, and for this rea-son they are always a safe of-fering. This crocheted one, designed for redesigned for receiving combings, would certainly be a handy article. Darning cotton edged with wool are the materials required. Begin with a chain of nine. Treble crochet in sixth stitch of chain: stitch of chain: chain one, treble crochet in ninth stitch, chain six, three treble crochet in each of the three spaces, chain three, one treble crochet, and so on increasing trebles until you have thirteen, then decrease one every other one every other row to the point.

A HAIR RECEIVER.

Make three of these, join and then finish the edges with a scallop made by working eight treble crochets in each space, finish the bottom with a ball and hang by cord and balls. When done place a tumbler which has been broken off, a tin can gilded, or a cornucopia of heavy paper inside to hold the combings and keep the bag in place.

Duster Bag

For this bag one could use a figured material, or something of solid color decorated, as shown, or with any appropriate design.

DUSTER BAG.

The hoop makes it convenient tohang it up-by, and to keep it in place.

A bag made in this way and filled with cheesecloth dusters is a treasure which any housekeeper would surely appreciate.

Points to Remember

Always write on one side of the paper only and leave space between the lines.

Write recipes, hints and requests on separate paper in stead of including them in the letters.

Mail all letters at least THREE MONTHS before the issue for which they are intended.

Always give your correct name and address, as no letter will be published excepting over it. This enables the sisters to write directly to each other.

the sisters to write directly to each other.

Do not write us for samples or patterns of the fancy work which have appeared. When publishing any particular piece of work—we give the plainest possible directions for making and usually illustrate it—we also give, when possible, the name and address of the party who submitted it, and any further information must be obtained from them. It is absolutely useless for you to write us.

As it has come to our notice that sisters have been asking certain sums for information and patterns that should have been furnished free, we here give notice that no charge should be made or money asked for any offers of assistance or information which have or will appear in any letters here published; should there be, kindly notify us, and the offender will be denied the further use of these columns. As this department is run solely to afford an opportunity for the mutual exchange of ideas, recipes, and helpful information, we do not intend it to be used by anyone for a commercial purpose.

Do not send us exchange notices; we have no exchange column, and cannot publish them.

Do not ask us to publish letters referring to money in

Do not ask us to publish letters referring to money in any way, such as requesting donations or offering articles for sale. Much as we sympathize with the suffering and unfortunate it is impossible to do this as we would be flooded with similar requests.

Do not request souvenir postals unless you have complied with the conditions which entitle you to such a notice. See offer.

All subscribers are cordially invited to write to this department and all stand an equal chance of having their letters appear, whether they are old or new members. As our space is limited, naturally the most interesting helpful letters are selected.

Write fully of your views and ideas, yourself and home-surroundings, "give as freely as ye receive," but if your first letter does not appear, do not feel ut-terly discouraged. Remember the old adage, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again."

DEAR READERS:

DEAR READERS:

Perhaps some of you seeing this page for the first time will wonder just what is the aim and and object of this corner; this and other queries which naturally arise will be answered if you carefully read the above rules. To them I desire to add a few words. We sincerely wish to give you each all the privileges possible, and have, relying upon the honesty of each, individually, inserted offers of various sorts, freely; however, as several cases have been brought to our attention of notices which have been inhowever, as several cases have been brought to our attention of notices which have been inserted purely for advertising purposes (although appearing innocent enough), hereafter only formulas of remedies for various complaints will be published. This method will benefit all without the trouble of corresponding, and also make it impossible for some few to profit in this unfair way.

The writers who have responded to these offers have either been asked directly for money or have been advised to patronize some medical company. As it is impossible for us always to decide whether an offer is made in good faith or has a string of this kind attached we make the above ruling for the protection of all.

We ask the continued interest and help of all that this department may increase in interest and helpfulness as much in the next twelve months as it has in the last.

Many thanks, Mrs. Laney, for the postals.

Many thanks, Mrs. Laney, for the postals. Mrs. J. E. Glover. The quotation to which you referred is:

"Though the mills of God grind slowly, yet they grind exceeding small; Though with patience He stands waiting, with exactness grinds He all."

tis from a translation by Longfellow, Retribution by Friedrich Von Logau, an author of the 17th century.

Miss Annie Wand. We could not publish your request; read rules given above.

Wishing you each a happy, happy Christmas and bright New Year, I will step aside for the many who are anxiously waiting their turn.

many who are anxiously waiting their turn.

Mishing you each a happy, happy Christmas and bright New Year, I will step aside for the many who are anxiously waiting their turn.

Dear Mrs. Wilkinson and Sisters:

I'm only a girl of nineteen years; quite young to ask for admittance, but I'll try my best, although it's the first time I've ever written to so interesting a circle. I am writing about Christmas presents and how to make them. The prettiest presents and how to make them. The prettiest presents I like to make are hemstitched handkerchiefs with either hand-made or lace one can buy; collars and cuffs are also pretty, and besides, are useful. A handkerchief case is made as follows:

Buy two common wire stands, used to set teapots or flatirons on, and one half yard each of two contrasting colors of silk, pale blue and pink. Using a common dinner plate, cut a circle of paper for a pattern, and by this cut two large circles of pink silk, the same of blue and of sheet wadding. Split the latter and sprinkle with sachet powder, if you wish. Place the circles together, pink on one side, blue on the other, with wadding between, stitch around edge on the sewing machine and turn them, finishing the open place neatly by hand. Press both circles thus completed; press with a hot iron. Find the center of a circle and attach to the center of the wire stand, on the bottom or side that curves, having the blue side come next to the wire, and attaching with pink baby ribbon, forming a small bow on the inside. Next, attach all around the edges, allowing the silk to form a frill over the edges, allowing the silk to form a frill over the edge. Make the other side just the same, only fastening a bow of wider pink ribbon on the outside; twist the last over the first and form hinges of the baby ribbon. When finished, you will be pleased with your case. Another handkerchief case is made this way:

Take two pieces of cardboard, each three by three inches, covering with white silk, and padding one slightly. Holding together the two uncovered sides, buttonhole stitch them with st

Here are a few ways to make presents for the "pen" and "pin" friends:

A Blotter

This is especially designed for a gentleman.

Take a large piece of blotting-paper and upon it mount water-color paper; the blotter when finished is about six by twelve inches, perhaps a trifle larger. At one end appears the face of a girl done in sepia, and below it these lines:

"Blot out all the faults in me; Remember only the good in me

The other corners of the blotter may have crossed pipes or some bachelor comfort pictured.

Holder for Hat Pins

Holder for Hat Pins

An odd holder for hat pins is made of a flat bottle, five or six inches high. Make a loose bag of ribbon, place the bottle in it, stuff it out smooth with cotton batting, gather the fullness around the neck of the bottle, leaving a frill, and suspend by a narrow ribbon. Decorate the bag with a bit of embroidery or painting, and use it for stick pins, etc. The bottle holds the hat pins.

I hope that someone will be benefited by these hints. Sisters, here is a verse which I've always loved and repeated many a time:

"Teach me to feel another's woe.

oved and repeated many a time:

"Teach me to feel another's woe,
To hide the fault I see,
That mercy I, to others, show,
That mercy show to me."

I would like to say more about fancy work and myself, but my letter is too long already, and I'm taking the room of some others which are more interesting and useful, so will close with best wishes to all and success to our Comfort.

MISS IDA R. IRVING, COURTBAL:

wishes to all and success to our Comfort.

Miss Ida R. Irving, Courtland, R. F. D., 1, Minn.

Hello, Central:

Give me the Comfort Sisters' corner, please. Sisters, how are everyone of you? I have wanted to write many times. I greatly enjoy this cozy corner of ours and I know that everyone of you do. Our September issue was full of interesting things.

Mrs. Lizzie Warner. Your Hardanger doily is beautiful, and I wish I understood the work. I am going to make a crocheted collar after the pattern of the corner table cover, sent in by Margretta Quinn. I will make it out of very heavy linen thread.

Mrs. Van Dyke. I always look for your interesting letters.

Mrs. Joseph Linden. Your remarks about fires are very good. Our big barn burned to the ground Saturday morning, September 22nd, and all its contents, including wheat, hay and farm implements, were destroyed. It was only the rare presence of mind of my husband that what stock there was in the barn at the time was saved. Our loss was $1,600, with but small insurance.

Helen Carr. I am glad you have such a pleasant place to rest in.

How many realize how much is paid out every year for hats? I know one woman who had five think I should have them published. Any information on this line would be thankfully received. Sisters, keep yourselves dainty and fresh looking. Always do your hair becomingly. I am thirty-four years of age, but look young as a girl. I wear my clothes to harmonize with the rest of myself. I have a fine head of hair and a good complexion; am a blonde.

We hear so much about clean housekeeping, do you ever think it is all right to keep clean hearts and lips?

you ever think it is an right to keep clear heart and lips?

Mrs. J. O. V. Remington. I agree with you about gaining the confidence of our children.

What a good mother you must be, Ina Kellogg.

Write, please, and I will answer. Sisters, send words of cheer to Mrs. Sinai Smith, Slicker, Tyler Co., W. Va. With best wishes for the coming year, Co., W. Va. With best wishes for the coming of Mrs. Carlyle Haverly, Box 30, Alpine, R. F. D.,

Don't fail to promptly renew your sub-scription to COMFORT while the present low 15-cent yearly rate is in force. We may be obliged to advance at any time, but if you send 25 cents now, it will pay for and ex-tend your subscription for two years from the time of its expiration.

the time of its expiration.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:
I have just received my October number of Comport and some of the shut-ins.
I must say that I think more of Comport than any paper I have ever seen. And I especially love the "Sisters' corner."
I will now describe myself. I am eighteen years old, five feet two inches in height, have dark, almost black hair and blue eyes, and am married to the dearest man you could ever imagine.
I quite agree with Miss Handy in thinking we should begin to plan for Christmas even thus early. I will send in a few little hints in regard to making candies that I hope will help someone.

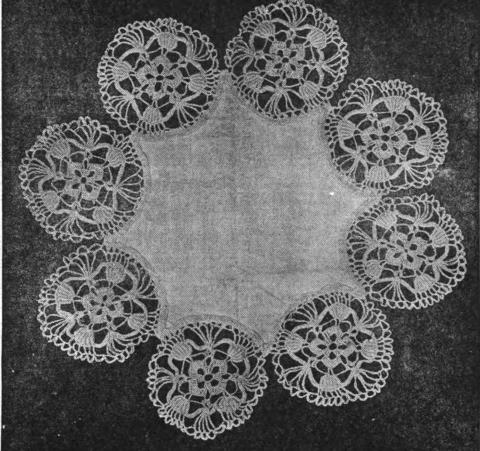

Christmas Candles

Christmas Candies

Christmas Candies

By the way, do you know that a pretty box filled with home-made candies makes a very nice present? A box can be covered with crepe paper, filled and tied up with red ribbon and with a spray of real holly on the cover is a dainty sweet gift.

Take two pounds of confectioner's sugar with half a pint of hot water and bring sharply to a boil; then allow it to boil steadily for eight minutes without touching or stirring it; as soon as it begins to thicken, test it by dropping a little from the spoon, and if it threads lift from the stove, and rub a small spoonful of the mixture against the side of the pan.

CENTERPIECE WITH CROCHETED WHEEL EDGE. By Mrs. Stephen Heckman, Stroudsburg, Pa.

new hats last spring and summer, and then got angry at her husband because he wouldn't pay out eighteen dollars for another one. One of the most stylish hats I have I made myself. It is a beautiful shade of red and is a scratch felt. The breast is a beautiful one with shades of red, blue and green. There is a large choux of navy silk ribbon in front. I am very proud of it for it was made out of a large hat of my little girl, and has been in use three years. The crown is bell shape. I have also a blue silk shirred turban, a jet turban and a black velvet hat. The blue turban and velvet hat have done duty for more than three seasons, but have been taken care of. One can save quite a good bit of money in this way. I have a pyrography outlift and can make many useful things for my home. I made me a set of buttons of rich tan leather and burned a design on them.

How many have a pillow of the leather post cards? They are very odd. The cards are laced together and it takes about twenty-four, I believe, to make a top. I haven't any yet, but intend to start one. It is time to think of Christmas gifts. Mine this year will be inexpensive. It will take about all to build our barn. Cushion tops of green velveteen with a burned head will be among my gifts.

A pretty twine holder is made of a bisque doll about all to build our barn. Cushion tops of green velveteen with a burned head will be among my gifts.

A pretty twine holder is made of a bisque doll head and a roll of crepe paper. Take a salt sack or make a slip about the size of a salt sack. Stuff the upper half with cotton, sew the doll's head onto it; use the lower half of sack to hold the ball of twine. Buttonhole a small hole in bottom of sack for twine to slip through. Always unravel ball of twine from center of ball, for the ball will stay in place and will not roll. Use twine the same color of paper if possible. Take paper and cut in halves the length. Use one half for the skirt; pull out lower edge to form a ruffle. Take a small plece from the other half and form a turban; use the rest for collar and cape. Use for the collar about one third of the length and just turn over, gather and fasten around the neck. This makes a cunning suit for the doll, cape, collar and skirt, also turban. Use baby ribbon to the asmall pair of scissors to the doll's waist under the cape; let them hang down far enough to be handy to use. I hope this is plain enough to follow.

What do the sisters think of the phonetic spelling?
I made my little nine-year-old daughter a sus-

What do the sisters ing?
I made my little nine-year-old daughter a suspender suit out of a pair of brown and white checked trousers. I cut it seven gored and stitched pieces down the seams and trimmed with buttons.

Have any of the sisters a recipe for corn pone,
Southern style?

I would like to receive letters from you and will answer all that I can. Can anyone give me information about having music published? I have composed a great many pieces and have some written out. They are all good music and my friends buttered paper.

Chocoic
late. To melt it, place bowl and set in a hot melted, do not let it be not melted.

cream carefully until meteors.

With this as a foundation many different combinations can be easily made. Take a small amount and flavor with peppermint, then dust with sifted sugar and roll out quite thin, cut in inch squares or circles with a small tin cover, put on buttered platter or paper to cool and you have fine peppermints.

Nut Creams

Can be made by melting a little of the cream until fairly thin, flavoring with coffee and stirring in nuts until thick, cut or roll into balls, dip into some of the cream which is melted to the consistency of syrup and set away to cool.

Nut Balls

Can be made by taking a whole nut, covering with cream and then dipping into the syrup.

Walnut Creams Make little pats and place a half walnut on each

Date Creams Remove the seed, fold the date over a small roll of the cream, then dust with sifted sugar.

Fig Paste

Can be made the same as Nut Creams, only do not melt the cream quite so thin before putting in the chopped figs.

Cocoanut Cakes

Mix the cream thick with cocoanut and drop on

Chocolate Candies

For chocolate candies use the unsweetened chocolate. To melt it, place some in an earthenware bowl and set in a hot oven till the chocolate is melted, do not let it boil, then place in a pan of

Chocolate Creams

Mold the cream into pieces the size of a nutmegether balls or fancy shapes, dust lightly with sitted sugar, then with a toothpick, knitting needle, or something similar, take each up and dip into the warm chocolate, then place in rows on well buttered paper. Wintergreen, coffee, vanila, or other flavors can be used and other dried fruits such as raisins, currants, citron or orange peel, so a great variety of nice bonbons can be made very easily, after one has made up enough of the foundation cream. cream.

For Uncooked Cream Candies

Mix one pound powdered sugar, two teaspoonfuls of cold water, one teaspoonful of vanilla and the white of one unbeaten egg to a stiff paste. Shape in little balls, dry, dip in melted chocolate, and press the halves of walnuts or any other nut meat on either side. Stoned dates or large raisins can be used if wanted.

Peanut Candy

Take one pint of nuts that have been shelled and chopped, stirtwo pounds or four cups of granulated sugar over a slow fire. It will gradually melt, but it is easily burned. When it is of a pale coffee color add the nuts and pour quickly on buttered plates.

Mix two cupfuls of white sugar, two cupfuls of brown sugar, one cup of milk, butter the size of an egg and two squares of chocolate. Stir all the time it is boiling and boil until it bubbles up and looks thick. Flavor with vanilla and pour in buttered pans. Then take two cups of brown sugar, two cups white sugar, one cup milk, butter size of an egg. Cook as you did the other, only when taken from the stove add chopped nuts and pour over the brown part.

MRS. JAMES MARSHALL, Clay Center, R. F. D., 8, Kansas.

Kansas.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

This is my first visit, and I do hope you'll make me welcome. I have received many helps from the sisters' corner, and I want to thank you for them. I am twenty-three years old, five feet one inch tall, weigh one hundred and forty pounds, and have blue eyes and light hair. I live in the Blue mountains, am a bachelor girl, and have a homestead here. We have a beautiful, and best of all, a healthy country. For anyone suffering from pulmonary troubles, these pine-covered hills will certainly benefit them.

benefit them.

Now sisters, I want to ask a favor of you. I wish those who conveniently can, would send me a sofa pillow cover for my "Comfort Cozy Corner." Any kind, color, or shape. I will gladly return all favors.

Now if the sisters do not object, I would like to come again. I would be very glad if some of the sisters would write to me.

Miss Jessie Stewart, Grouse, Oregon.

Miss Jessie Stewart, Grouse, Oregon.

Dear Mrs. Wilkinson:
Again I am asking permission to enter the happy circle over which you preside. When I came last year I guess the Comfort room was filled. I have made many delightful acquaintances, both among those who are shut-in and those who are not. It is a great and good work, this helping the sick and afflicted, or even those, who are only sad and lonely. Mrs. C. S. Anderson. The work you have begun is noble, and if you keep it up, you will always find it pleasant; for there is no greater happiness on earth than that of making others happy. I trust that you may continue in the good work of aiding the shut-ins.

My dear Mrs. McCapprey. I sincerely sympathise with you in your troubles. I will write you later. Now, sisters, one and all, I wish you would write me. I am fifty years old, but don't think for one minute I look it, for I do not. I have such a sunny cheerful disposition it keeps me young.

Now dear Mrs. Wilkinson, with many thanks for your attention, will bow myself out that others may have room.

Mrs. Lena T. Tayler, Stamford, Texas.

MRS. LENA T. TAYLOR, Stamford, Texas.

DEAR SISTERS:
I enjoy reading Comfort, and especially these letters.
I wish I could send all the lonely, suffering ones something, but money is so scarce around this house.
I know how to sympathize with those who have lost their children, as God has taken my precious darling almost five years old. It seems sometimes as though I can't live without her. But God has promised that all things shall work for our good. Oh, for more faith and trust in these lonely hours. I suppose you all have hours of trial.
What terrible calamities have befallen some of our cities during the earthquakes. Our house only trembled a little. I should like to hear from all those interested in the meaning of all these earthquakes, cyclones, fires, etc. I believe I have some light on the subject, which I should like to pass along to those interested.
We are just starting on a new place, and if any have seeds to spare from what they save this year, I would be glad to have some, especially sweet corn or peas.

LOTTIE BRIGGS, Madua, Cal.

DEAR SISTERS:

As I have been a reader of Compose in my cold.

or peas.

LOTTIE BRIGGS, Madua, Cal.

DEAR SISTERS:

AS I have been a reader of Comport in my old Indiana home, ever since it was first published, I will now write you from my new home in the wilds of South Missouri.

We left Sims, Grant Co., Indiana about the middle of June, arriving on our Walnut Grove Farm of one hundred and fifty-four acres, in time to plant a truck-patch.

This is a healthful place to live in; there is an abundance of clear, soft water obtained from driven wells, and the springs and rivers. There is also an abundance of large timber, and the soil is dry, sandy, and rather rocky, but gives good crops of grain, hay and fruit, and is also a good region for cattle.

Neighbors are rather scarce as yet, but we are grain, hay and fruit, and is also a good region for cattle.

Neighbors are rather scarce as yet, but we are fortunate in having five within three quarters of a mile. Still we do not have much time for visiting as yet, for we are all struggling to get a start in this rugged, picturesque section of the country.

Poor, houest people willing to work find this a good place to secure homes, for land and taxes are still low in price.

I will write again when I have had more time to become acquainted, and have seen more of the country.

We are eleven miles northeast of Cabool, and ten miles from Houston.

With many good wishes for all, and our most excellent magazine,

CELIA R. COMER, Elkcreek, Texas Co., Mo.

Watch the number on your wrapper. If it

Watch the number on your wrapper. If it is 219 or less, it means that your subscription has or is about expired and you should renew at once so as to not miss any papers containing the great story, "St. Elmo," which will be continued for some months into 1907; it only costs 15 cents to do it now.

Into 1907; it only costs 15 cents to do it now.

Dear Ladies of Comfort Magazine:

Will you kindly give me your attention while I tell you very briefly how successful I was in cooking a pumpkin today. I selected a fine pumpkin and set it in the oven where I was baking light-bread; by the time the bread was done the pumpkin was well cooked. Then I removed the pumpkin from the oven, cut out a small round piece at the stem and took out all of the seeds from the inside, then the rind peeled off just like paper, and I think that of all the pumpkins ever cooked you would say with me if you were here that this is certainly the best.

Thanking you for your kind attention,

MYETLE M. HOLADAY, Ridgefarm, Ill.

MYRTLE M. HOLADAY, Ridgefarm, Ill.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:
May I come in? I can't stand outside any longer.
Would you like to know who this intruder is? I am a Norway girl, and came to this country four years ago, to my father. I have no mother, you see, so I am my father's housekeeper, and I really do like housekeeping.

Oh sisters! but I do enjoy my single life. I am past the twenties already, but I am having a good time, still don't you think I am right, sisters? I fully agree with Cousin Marion when she advises the cousins to wait. Isn't she a sweet lady? I am really in love with her.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 10.)

JERRY, THE BACKWOODS BOY

Copyright, 1904, by The Mershon Company. All rights reserved.

By Horatio Alger, Jr.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Jerry Blue, a bov fourteen years old, lives with figuire Parkhurst. Going in search of a lost cow he finds hoof prints. He hears an odd sound, and stop. Nerol Stop, I tell you!" Suddenly a horse bursts into view. From one stirrup drags the form of a horseman. Jerry stops the horse, awing the man from death. Henry Maxwell questions Jerry as to his parents and his home. He is squire Parkhurst's bound boy and was taken by him out of the poorhouse in New York City. Jerry does not know how long he was there. A man named Cass takes him away for two years; he is killed and Jerry goes back. Henry Maxwell gives him gold for his bravery. When Jerry is his own master he will try to clear up the mystery of his identity. When Mr. Maxwell goes back to New York he will look into the matter for him. Jerry offers the money back; the man refuses to take it and rides off. Jerry finds the cow, and he wonders about himself. He will find out some day, but he does not dream of the odd things to happen before the secret of his identity is revealed.

A few miles to the south of where Jerry meets Henry Maxwell, night and darkness overtake Dick Clarke, who meets Indian John, and asks him to guide him to a place of shelter. He tempts the man with money, and the Indian, reticent by nature, and Dick Clarke, occupied with thoughts of his own, travel in silence.

CHAPTER IV.

ALL THINGS ARE POSSIBLE TO THE DARING.

ROBABLY neither the Indian nor his companion was sorry to come in sight of the building which was known for twenty miles around as Hill's Tavern.

It was not a large building, and the accommodations which it could offer travelers must have been very limited. But its chief business was not providing lodgings. Travelers were too few in number to make that a very important item. The bar was decidedly the leading feature of the establishment, and the amount of liquor con-sumed in the rude barroom would have appalled an advocate of temperance. It was sumed in the rude barroom would have appalled an advocate of temperance. It was not unusual, when the evenings were pleasant, to find a majority of the settlers living within five miles gathered in the barroom alternately drinking and gossiping. Nor was the patronage confined to the whites. Here, as elsewhere, one of the earliest lessons in civilization for which the Indians were indebted to their white brethren was the taste for rum, or "firewater" as they not inappropriately designated it, and a large share of the proceeds of Indian industry—whenever they could be induced to work—went for intoxicating drinks.

On this particular evening the fury of the elements had prevented the usual collection in the barroom. The landlord had not opened the door for a single customer through the evening, and he had about decided to close for the night when a knock was heard at the door.

Pricking up his ears with professional eagerness, the portly landlord, who rejoiced in the military designation of Captain Hill, hastened to the door which he had already fastened, and withdrawing the bolt, looked out to see who his late guests might be.

At first he only caught sight of the In-Iastened, and withdrawing the bolt, looked out to see who his late guests might be. At first he only caught sight of the Indian, who was generally known in the settlement as Indian John, or Jack. With a feeling of disappointment, for the Indian's patronage would hardly be sufficient to make it worth while to forego his purpose, he said: "You're too late, Jack. I am just going to close." going to close."

going to close."

"Hallo there, landlord!" exclaimed Dick Clarke. coming forward in some alarm lest he should after all be deprived of the shelter which had cost him so much trouble to reach. "Is it the custom in your neighborhood to shut your doors upon guests that reach you no later than nine o'clock, and in such a storm too? If it is, I must say it is the most inhospitable region I ever came into, that's all."

"I beg your pardon, sir," said the landlord with deference. "I didn't see you. I thought it was only Jack here and I knew he might have come in the daytime for the glass of liquor which I suppose is all that lass of liquor which I suppose is all that "I must do Jack, if that is his name, the "I must do Jack, if that is his name, the justice to say that he would never have thought of coming at all, if I had not tried the effect of a little silver upon him. But being here, I suppose he would not object to a little something hot to make him forget the wet and cold now which he as well as myself is suffering."

The Indian who had been standing by in growing a pathy, seemed to understand the meaning of what had been said, for his eye brightened with eagerness, and he ejacu-brightened with eagerness, and he ejaculated eagerly:

"Yes—yes. Me like rum."

"No doubt about that," commented the landlord, adding, "Don't you think you'd feel better for taking a little yourself, sir?"

"Faith, it's not a bad proposition. I think I'll accept it." said the traveler, throwing off his dripping overcoat, and taking a seat near the fireplace in which a large backnear the fireplace in which a large back-log was burning brightly. "I begin to think better of your country, landlord, than I was disposed to do a couple of hours since."

"It's a pleasant country, sir—fine soil."
"I dare say," returned his guest care-"but you'll admit that my reception until now has not been of a nature to make my first impressions very pleasant."

"Then you've never been this way before?" said the landlord, indulging a curiosity for which his fraternity is somewhat "Never in my life before. I didn't know the settlements extended out so far."

"You come mayhap from the city of New York?" suggested the landlord in an inquiring tone.

"Mayhap I do," was the not very decisive "At any rate I have been there. is quite a promising place; a good deal of where I can have plenty of elbow room. However, I might feel differently if I were in a good business in the city. Perhaps you are so engaged, Mr.—ahem, your name es-are so engaged, Mr.—ahem, your name escaped me."

"I don't remember having mentioned it," said Clarke, with a little malicious enjoyment in disappointing the landlord's evident desire to find out who he was.

"Ah, indeed, perhaps not," said the portly host, not abashed. "I only thought it would be convenient to know what to call you. I'm thankful to say that I am not one of those landlords that are constantly prying into the business of their guests and all about them. Are you intending to stay long in this part of the country, sir?"

The inconsistency between the first and the last parts of the landlord's remarks brought a smile to the face of Dick Clarke, who, however, saw fit to cease quizzing his host and communicate at once all that he host and communicate at once all that he

"You may call me Clarke," he said. "As to my stay, that will be guided entirely by circumstances. For an idler like myself I don't knew but I may be as well off here don't know but I may be as well off here as anywhere."

"He is not in business," inferred the landlord. "I dare say he is looking about with the intention of settling down here. I hope he will. He looks like a young man of some means, and would no doubt contrive to spend a part of it with me. The larger the settlement, the better my chances of growing rich." ing rich."
"I trust you will favor my house with

"I trust you will favor my house with your presence as long as you see fit to remain," he said obsequiously.

"I dare say I shall," said Clarke carelessly. "By the way, how long have you been located here?"

"It is four years since I first set up this tavern, called after me, as you see. At that time there were fewer people in the settlement than now, and my customers were few, but more families have come in since, and I am doing pretty well now."

Meanwhile Dick Clarke drew off his boots and proceeded to dry his wet feet at the fire. Leaning luxuriously back in the rocking characteristics.

and proceeded to dry his wet feet at the fire. Leaning luxuriously back in the rocking chair which he occupied, he turned to the landlord, and asked with the air of one not much interested, but who only asked for the sake of keeping up the conversation: "Pray tell me who are some of your chief settlers? It is just possible that I may have met or heard of some of them before."

The landlord, nothing loath to gossip with his guest, commenced: "There's Isaac Davenport; Major Davenport, most people call him. I believe he was an officer in the war. He's about the earliest of our set
"Yes, sir. I can give you a good comfortable room, where I have no doubt you will sleep as sound as a top. But perhaps you will take another glass to serve as a night-cap. It's a sovereign thing to give one a good night's rest."

"That I will with great pleasure," said Captain Hill with a heartiness which left no doubt of his sincerity. "I'll drink your health in a bumper."

"And success to my suit, eh, landlord?"

"Yes, sir. I can give you a good comfortable room, where I have no doubt you will sleep as sound as a top. But perhaps you will take another glass to serve as a night-cap. It's a sovereign thing to give one a good night's rest."

"That I will with great pleasure," said Captain Hill with a heartiness which left no doubt of his sincerity. "I'll drink your health in a bumper."

"And success to my suit, eh, landlord?"

"Yes, sir. I can give you a good comfortable room, where I have no doubt you will sleep as sound as a top. But perhaps you will sleep as sound as a top. But perhaps you will sleep as sound as a top. But perhaps you will sleep as sound as top. But perhaps you will sleep as sound as a top. But perhaps you will sleep as sound as a top. But perhaps you will sleep as sound as a top. But perhaps you will sleep as sound as a top. But perhaps you will sleep as sound as a top. But perhaps you will sleep as sound as a top. But perhaps you will sleep as sound as a top. But perhaps you will sleep as sound as a top. But perhap for the sake of keeping up the conversa-tion: "Pray tell me who are some of your chief settlers? It is just possible that I may have met or heard of some of them before."

The landlord, nothing loath to gossip

The landlord, nothing loath to gossip with his guest, commenced: "There's Isaac Davenport; Major Davenport, most people call him. I believe he was an officer in the war. He's about the earliest of our settlers, and owns a large tract of land. A fine man the Major is."

"Any family?" queried Dick Clarke, half closing his eyes.

"Yes he's got a son; nigh on to twenty-closing his eyes.

"Yes, he's got a son; nigh on to twentytwo he must be now. Henry, the Major's only son, he's taken a good deal of pains with him—sent him off to the East to be educated. Let me see, there's a coilege at Cambridge, isn't there?"

"Yes, Harvard College."

"That's the place. Well, the young man got his schooling there, and a fine scholar he was—at the head of his class, I've heard.
But he's been back here now about a year and a half. Some say he brought home a and a half. Some say he brought home a lot of law books, and is studying law at home, but I don't know for certain about that?

that."
"Who else have you among your principal
"The guest who apparently took men?" asked the guest, who apparently took less interest in young Davenport than the narrator.

narrator.

"There's Squire Parkhurst—"
The traveler started. "What is his first name—his Christian name, I mean?"

"Joseph, I believe. D you know him?"

"Probably not, although I have known a man of that name. But go on, tell me something of this man."

"I don't know very much to tell," answered the landlord. "He lives about five miles from here in a lonely place, and keeps himself very much to himself, which I think is a pity, not so much on his account, but is a pity, not so much on his account, but it must be dull for his daughter, who is as pretty a damsel of eighteen summers as you will be likely to see anywhere about."

"Ah, he has a pretty daughter, then, has he?" said Clarke, veiling under an indifferent manner a stronger feeling of curi-osity than he had yet felt.

"That he has, and I rather think there's a certain young gentleman has found it

"Ha, has she a suitor?" demanded the traveler with a visible air of chagrin, which was somewhat surprising in one who professed to have heard of her for the first time only the moment before.

The landlord, however, was somewhat ob-

The landlord, however, was somewhat obtuse, and noticed nothing remarkable in the tone of his guest.

"It's that same young man that I was just telling you about," he continued, "Major Davenport's son Henry. I oftentimes see them walking or riding together, and I guess Major Davenport's is the only house where Squire Parkhurst goes. As I told you only a minute or two since, he isn't inclined to be very social, and keeps himself pretty much to himself."

"Does Mabel Parkhurst, think you, enis quite a promising place; a good deal of business done there."

"So I have always heard," returned the name was Mabel Parkhurst, otherwise?"

Iandlord. "But after all I don't like being cooped up in a city. Give me the country, landlord," said Dick Clarke with unblushing.

now," continued Clarke, "your representations have so stimulated my curiosity that I shall certainly take the earliest opportunity of making her acquaintance; that is, if I remain here long enough."

"They ain't so come-at-able as some," said the landlord dubiously.

"All things are possible to the daring," said Dick with a careless laugh. "Perhaps I may yet out this college stripling of may yet cut out this college stripling of

"He is a good-looking fellow," said the landlord, who had been won by the young man's frank and affable bearing to take man's frank and affable bearing to take quite a strong interest in his success. As he said this, it was only natural that he should cast a glance at the not over prepossessing countenance of his guest.

Dick Clarke penetrated the landlord's meaning with no great difficulty, but it was not one of his foibles to be sensitive on the score of his personal appearance. Accordingly he said, in a good-humored way:

"And you mean to intimate, friend landlord, that in that respect he has the decided advantage of me."

"I don't deny, sir," said the landlord hastily, not wishing to offend his guest, "that you are a very good-looking man of your years."

your years."

Dick Clarke smilingly surveyed his host's proportions and replied: "Perhaps they don't regard personal appearance so much as you think, my good friend. It isn't all that can sound a woman's heart, or read her preferences. However, it isn't worth that can sound a woman's heart, or read her preferences. However, it isn't worth while to spend too much time upon a girl I have not seen and may not like. I may be very willing to leave her to this young Davenport after all. But I see by your clock in the corner that it is getting late, at any rate for one who has been on a horse's back pretty much all day. I suppose you can furnish me with a comfortable chamber?"

"Yes, sir. I can give you a good com-

"Yes, provided you don't trespass on another's manor."

other's manor."
"That qualification spoils all. But here's one I warrant will drink without any such qualifications. Do you think you can stand another glass, Jack?"
The Indian came forward from the settee on which he was reclining and expressed

The Indian came forward from the settee on which he was reclining and expressed his eager assent.

"Jack is always on hand," said the landlord. "If he keeps on drinking at this rate, he'll lose half his name and become a demi-

The landlord laughed obstreperously his own witticism, which so far put him in good humor that he gave Indian John permission to spend the night on the settee which he had already occupied.

CHAPTER V.

SQUIRE PARKHURST'S HOUSEHOLD.

Presuming that the reader may feel desirous of knowing more of the Parkhursts, in whom Dick Clarke appears to take so mysterious an interest, we propose to change the scene from the rude tavern to the dwelling of Squire Parkhurst. It may be mentioned, by the way, that the title "Squire" was a title of courtesy only, being conferred out of deference to the supposed wealth of the bearer.

The site of the dwelling was well chosen. It crowned the summit of an elevation sloping gradually to a beautiful pond, which, though not large in extent, was a considerable depth. Except on the side that looked toward the house the banks were adorned with sightly trees, some throwing their branches far out over the placid water, and so furnishing a refreshing shelter from the fervor of the summer sun. Mayel Barkhurst often floated in a host kert Mabel Parkhurst often floated in a boat kept for her use upon the pond under the shadow of these fine old trees, sometimes in company with Henry Davenport, who was always ready to r his assistance. Contrary to the usual custom (for the pioneer is not often a man who has an appreciation of the tasteful and beautiful), a few trees had been left standing in the neighborhood of the house, so that its first appearance, when seen through so that its first appearance, when seen through the leaves of the stately trees which stood before it, was pleasingly rural. For this evidence of taste the present occupant was not entitled to the sole credit since the clearing had been originally made by another, who was induced to sell out in consideration of a handsome advance upon the original cost.

In like manner the nucleus of the present dwelling had been erected by the first settler.
It had been but an ordinary log cabin vou only a name clined to be very social, and a seed of punning or pretty much to himself."

"Does Mabel Parkhurst, think you, encourage the attentions of this young man?"
One point, however, his caution had overlooked. He had unwittingly used the young lady's Christian name. The landlord did not fail to notice this slip, and asked with an air of surprise, "You know her, then?"
"From what do you infer that?" inquired Clarke unsuspiciously.

"How should you have known that her are unsuspiciously."
"How should you have known that her are as not provided its accommodations. On two sides ran a rustic piazza, around the columns of which vines had been taught to clamber. It was but a log cabin in the highest a log cabin with the her are set of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as the alog cabin in the highest as the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of the interest of the boys It had been but an ordinary log cabin containing two rooms, and wholly without architectural ornament. The purchaser, invoted to the culture of flowers, and presented with its many hues, crimson and golden pre-dominating, a very attractive picture. This was under the especial charge of Mabel, who had brought the seeds with her from the East.

assurance. "How else should I know it?"
"I suppose I did name it, then," said the landlord, overborne by the other's confident declaration, "although I don't remember it."
"However, though I don't know her now," continued Clarke, "your representations have so stimulated my curiosity that I shall certainly take the earliest opportunity of making her acquaintance; that is, if I remain here long enough."
"They ain't so come-at-able as some," said the landlord dubiously.
"All things are possible to the daring."

As Mehitable had attained the age of thirty-seven years without marrying, it was quite doubtful whether she would ever have an opportunity to do so. It was her habit, however, to indulge in mysterious hints respecting a certain Joshua Perkins, who, she would have it believed, was madly in love with her at some period in the past, but whom she had disappointed with a flinty refusal. She further hinted, for on this point she never came directly to the point, out spoke with a degree of circumlocution and indirectness, that the said Joshua was plunged into such a state of distraction by his disappointment that he made frantic efforts to put an end to his existence, and was only deterred therefrom by the united efforts of his relatives. As Mehitable had attained the age of thirty efforts of his relatives.

Mehitable was in her secret heart jealous of the superior youth and beauty of her young mistress, and was won't to deprecate as far as

Mehitable was in her secret heart jealous of the superior youth and beauty of her young mistress, and was won't to deprecate as far as she dared the tastes and employments to which Male's war partial.

"I doi.'t see the use of giving up so much time to flowers and such trash," she was heard to say more than once. "They ain't good to eat, 'like cabbages and onions. All they are fit for is to smell of, and a body doesn't want to be smelling all the time."

"Didn't you like flowers when you were young, Hitty?" asked Jerry, whose great delight it was to provoke Mehitable.

"When I was young?" retorted Mehitable, pausing from her work. "One would think from the way you talk that I was an'old woman. I'd have you to know that I am not so very much older than Mabel."

Jerry whistled.

This Mehitable correctly interpreted to indicate incredulity, and proceeded, "if you want to whistle, you'd better go out of the house. It's improper and impolite. You'd better be out in the field hoeing them turnips instead of idling 'round here."

"Well, I will, Hitty—"

"There's no call for to address me with such familiarity," interrupted the spinster in a dignified manner. "My name is Mehitable."

"Well, then, Mehitable, would you be willing to tell me how old _ou are?"

"Thank goodness, I ain't ashamed of my age. I'm about twenty-five."

"The wenty-five!" ejaculated Jerry in comise consternation. "Oh, dear me!"

"What's the matter now?" demanded Mehitable sharply.

"Nothing; only I was thinking how bad I'd feel to look old when I was twenty-five."

The spinster gazed vacantly at Jerry for a moment. Then, when she realized what his words meant, she shook her finger at him wrathfully.

"Clear out of this room instantly, Jerry Blue!" she cried. "It you don't, I'll go after you with a brecom!"

"Clear out of this room instantly, Jerry Blue!" she cried. "If you don't, I'll go after you with a broom!"

you with a broom?"
"Don't grow excited."
"Will you go?" and she picked up the broom and flourished it freely.
"All right, I'll go. But I was going to tell you a great secret."
"A secret? What about?"
"Oh, never mind. new."

"Oh, never mind, now."
"But what was it?" demanded the spinster, all her natural curiosity coming to the surface.
"It was about—but I'm afraid of the broom," may be as well to describe the other members of the Parkhurst household. The squire was of the Farkhurst household. The squire was tall of stature, and though but little over forty years of age had begun to stoop somewhat. There were in his face certain indications that his life had been clouded in the past, from the effects of which he had not yet recovered. His temperament was mild, and in speech he was somewhat sparing of words. There was a contrast between his manner and that of his daughter, who was disposed to be lively, and who habitually looked on the bright side of things.

The praises in which the landlord indulged The praises in which the minuted interpretation of medium stature, her figure combined plumpness with rerfect grace and ease of movement. The freeperfect grace and ease of movement. The free-dom with which she exercised in the open air had been in the highest degree beneficial to health, and her clear eye and the rich bloom that mantled upon her cheek evinced nothing of that delicacy and fragility that too often characterize the young ladies of the present day, in large cities.

LEAGUE RULES :

To be kind to dumb animals.
To love our country and protect its flag.

to the Leadue of Cousins for only 20 cents. Join at once. Everybody welcome COMFORT for one year and

CONDUCTED BY UNCLE CHARLIE

MERRY CHRISTMAS to you all.
Another year gone. It seems only a few weeks ago that I was telling you about Billy the Goat swallowing the turkey, and here I am with another Christmas dinner to be thought out, and planned for. The turkey Billy swallowed last year, after six months' sojourn in Florida, was no worse for the ordeal, and he's ready for business. He is going to out his own head off on the 2th of December, as I simply couldn't do the job myself. After he is decapitated he is going to pick his own feathers off to save us the trouble, and is going to roast himself over the top of Mount Vesuvius, as that is the only fire in the world big enough to do the job. After he is roasted we shall carve him into twenty-five thousand ten-pound chunks, and souse the sections with gravy and cranberry sauce, and attach each chunk to twenty-five thousand picture postals, and mail them to every one of the League members. I think that is a neat way of disposing of my Christmas obligations to you, don't you think?

I want to beg you all to renew your subscriptions as early in the month as possible, so as to give the help this end a chance to have a MERRY CHRISTMAS to you all.

tions as early in the month as possible, so as to give the help this end a chance to have a littile time for holiday making and enjoyment. From Christmas to March, the pressure in the subscription department is tremendous, and so to avoid the rush period, and the errors that are always liable to occur, when a person is trying to do forty-eight hours' work in twenty-four, get busy now, and send in your renewals, and send in all the new League members you can. Every reader of COMFORT should come into the C. L. O. C. and help the good work along. It only means adding five cents a year to your "sub" and you're then one of the elect. Don't hesitate, but come in at once. It costs twenty cents to get in; nothing less goes. I want to thank you all for the lovely way you remembered me on my birthday. To Anthony Good, of Willow, Pa., Lawrence Whitby of Chilton, Wis., and Jennie Snyder, Neosha, Wis., I return hearty thanks for five dollars sent in currency. I returned books of my poems to these good souls to cover amount donated. To those who sent their greetings by postal cards, I am just as grateful, and my only regret is I cannot see you all personally, face to face, and tell you how much I appreciate the affection you all lavish upon me.

Will the cousin who sent a dollar anonymously from Oxford, Ohio, send in name? This amount will be retained by the business office until name of sender is received, and it breaks my heart to think I can't get it. To the three cousins who send in the most League members before the first of January, I will send autographed copies of my book of poems; one to to give the help this end a chance to have a little time for holiday making and enjoyment.

cousins who send in the most League members before the first of January, I will send autographed copies of my book of poems; one to each. These are exceedingly handsome books, and well worth trying for. The cousin who sends in three new members is likely to win a book, as the majority of people stay out of contests, thinking they have no show, and so a few hustlers get in, and with very little exertion win everything in sight.

Don't forget the shut-ins at Christmas. This exertion win everything in sight.

Don't forget the shut-ins at Christmas. This is the hardest time of the year for them. Everyone is reveling in health and plenty, while they lie with wan faces on beds of pain, without the necessaries of life. Get ten dimes, without the necessaries of life. Get ten dimes, and mail one to ten individual shut-ins and Christmas will be so much happier to you, and God will send you a blessing for your goodness

Any girl, or woman, desiring a good home and liberal wages, write to Mrs. Collison, Cloverlea Farm, Mayo, Maryland.

Cloverlea Farm, Mayo, Maryland.

A number of you have been sending in five cents, and asking for our club badge and certificate, and League membership. Why do you do this? You know perfectly well it costs twenty cents to join this League. If you are a subscriber, you must subscribe again for another year, as it doesn't pay cost of time to verify your statement that you are already a subscriber. Unless your letter contains twenty cents you will positively not get into the League. Sending five cents is paltry. We want to consider your pockets in everything, but this is not a League of Nickelites. We're all swell twenty centers, and nothing less goes. all swell twenty centers, and nothing less goes.

If you want to get your name on the correspondence list, you must write your name, and address legibly on a slip of paper.

Not one in a hundred do this, though I give you a scolding every month about it. A little bride will now talk about the joys of married life.

Married life.

San Augustine, Texas, Sept. 29, 1906.

Dear Uncle Charlie and Oousins:

I have something to tell you. The last time I wrote to you, I signed my name Miss Willie M. Gray, but there has been a change and now I sign my name Mrs. G.R. Alvis. I was married August 5th to Mr. George Alvis. Uncle, I surely do wish you and the cousins could have been there. My wedding dress was white silk, trimmed with white lace, and I had white flowers in my hair. Mr. Crocket, the Episcopal rector of San Augustine, married us. There was certainly a large crowd there, and we received more bridal presents than you could count. We received glassware of every description, and a set of silver teaspoons, and I just can't tell you what and all we did get, but the nicest was a fine Jersey cow. Uncle, I want you and the cousins to come to see me some time, and see how you like my husband. Uncle, tell the girls if they were to see him, some of them would be attempting to kill me to get me out of their way so they could get him. He is the best and kindest husband to me you ever did see. Uncle, I haven't gone to housekeeping yet, we are boarding. Mr. Alvis is at work in Hemphill, on J. O. Toole's house. We are staying at Hemphill about twenty-one miles from my father's house.

Uncle, do you approve of novel reading, I do. I have read a good many, among them are "Woman Against Woman," "Dora Thorne," Lyndail's Tempiation," "Lorna Doone," "Tempest and Sunshine," "Jessie Graham." and I am "reading 9t have read a good many, among them are "Woman Against Woman," "Dora Thorne," Lyndall's Temptation," "Lorna Doone," "Tempest and Sunshine," "Jessie Graham," and I am reading St. Elmo at present, and have read a good many more too numerous to mention.

Uncle, I am the proudest woman that walks the streets of San Augustine, or any other place. I streets of San Augustine, or any other place. I wish you could see my sweet and loving husband.

He treats me so good and nice. Some people say that a woman's husband ought to be about two or three years older than her, but there are a good many years difference in mine and my husband's age. I was seventeen the 26th of July, and he was thirty-two the 14th of August, but that doesn't stop me from loving him. I love him better than I do my own life. Uncle, please print this for my sake. I'll close for this time. From your loving niece,

MRS. G. R. ALVIS (No. 7,783).

Mrs. Alvis, your letter is very enjoyable, as there is nothing so delightful as looking into a little bride's heart, bubbling over with love for the only man in the world. All the world loves a lower, that's why all the world loves me, because I love everybody. A little seventeen-year-old bride is just the sweetest thing in all the world, and Mrs. Alvis is no exception. I'm glad you've changed your name dear, as Willie for a girl's name gives me a bad case of blind stargers. So, you had white flowers in your hair, that must have been very fetching, and that's where you've got the bulge on me. It you gave me a million dollars I couldn't put flowers in my hair. If you wanted to put flowers on my head, you'd have to nail 'em on. flowers on my head, you'd have to nail 'em on. There's only one thing that grieves me in the letter of this little girl-bride and that is, she has gone boarding. I've had nine letters in the last few weeks from League cousins who have married, and all have gone boarding but one. I know of no worse place for a man to take his wife than into a boarding-house. Mind, I've nothing to say about the man whose business keeps him moving from place to place, as he can't have a home in fifty different places, but I do most emphatically protest against the habit young married folks have of going boarding. A man who can be content with a measily shabby room in a boarding-house and boarding-house food, and can take his wife into such a place and call that "home" has got some queer notions of what home must mean. I've made a study of the folks who frequent boarding-houses, especially the women folks, and I've got opinions of them that would have to be soaked in chloride of lime before they could be put in print. Personally, I'd like to could be put in print. Personally, I'd like to see a law passed in Congress, compelling all able-bodied married couples who live in boardingbodied married couples who live in posturing-houses and hotels, and are permanently located in those places, to go housekeeping at once or pay a fine. I don't mind speaking out fearlessly upon this subject, as I know that every home-making father, and every house-keeping mother, will endorse every word I say. Satan finds employment for idle hands and the women who live in boarding-houses are invariably victims of chronic inertia, or in plain English, laziness. A great many of these variably victims of chronic inertia, or in plain English, laziness. A great many of these women never even get down to breakfast, and the poor idiotic dolt of a husband packs it up on a tray, and she'll lie back on the pillows like a chronic invalid and pick a little bit here and there and waste the rest. "I've a headache, John, dear," she'll say in a half-dying tone, "and I don't seem to have any appetite. I don't know what's come over me." Poor John goes to work worrying about his wife's health, instead of yanking her out of bed and chasing her round the block with a club a half dozen times. Of course she's got a headache and no appetite. The human body to be in a healthy condition, needs exercise, and your female boarding-house habitue never takes any exercise; she either breakfasts in bed or crawls down to table in a wranger of some kind end cise; she either breakfasts in bed or crawls down to table in a wrapper of some kind, and then she nibbles, and crawls back to her room then she nibbles, and crawls back to her room, and overcome by the strenuous exertion, collapses in the rocker, or subsides on a lounge. Later the hired girl fixes up her room, and makes the bed for her. Possibly during this operation, she'll crawl into Mrs. Jones' room next door, to talk about the newly married couple that's come to board, and wonder what the husband does for a living, and where the bride got that dreadful-looking dress, with the green bows and red flounces down the front. Then after an hour of scandal, she returns to her room, grabs a novel, and reads and dozes until lunch time, then she crawls down to her room, grabs a novel, and reads and dozes until lunch time, then she crawls down to lunch, and cackles faintly with other derelicts of her stamp, and crawls back to her room and gets at the novel again. Maybe in the afternoon she'll muster up sufficient energy to dress, and crawl to the corner and get aboard a car and go to the store. It is only two blocks, but she'd die if you asked her to walk it. Then she goes to the counter, and has all the clerks having down goods for her to look at have hauling down goods for her to look at, buys five cents' worth of ribbon, which she has charged and sent home for her, and crawls aboard the car, and crawls back to her home and room. When the poor "gink" of a husband gets home in the evening she is lying on the lounge, and the following conversation takes place: "Oh, John, dear" (she says this in a whisper), "I've had such an exhausting day, a whisper), "I've had such an exhausting day, I never was so tired, I ache all over. It is not good for me to work as hard as I do." "What did you do, dear?" inquires the poor Goop of a husband. "I went to the store for some ribbon," the wife replies proudly, and by the way she says it, and the look of delight on Mr. Gink's face, you'd think she had discovered the North Pole. "Ah," replies the husband, "you always were ambitious Jane, you should not try to do so much, I think you had better have Doctor Dope and stay in bed and rest up tomorrow," and she does. You think this is overdrawn, but it isn't. I've met scores of such women as this. The young woman, the bride, has more energy, and she sews a bit, and gads and gossips, but after awhile she falls into the same rut as the others, her energy and ambition dies, and she lolls around in a wrapper, and crawls to and from the table, and per, and crawls to and from the table, and reads and dreams, and dreams and reads, until she is as useless as the other female curios that rust out in boarding-houses. There is another danger in boarding-houses, and that is the worst of all. There are a whole lot of men in these places that you have to meet and know, ones will be the ones that will appear the nicest to you. They will offer you cigars, and after awhile you will invite them to your room, after awhile you will invite them to your room, and introduce them to your wife, and maybe you have a friendly game of cards, and you all get to be very great friends, and the man makes himself as much at home in your room, as though it were his. He's a good fellow you think, and don't mind. Then business calls you away for a couple of weeks, and what more natural than your male friend knowing your wife is lonely, should try to make things agreeable for her in your absence, and he does, and that is the beginning of the end. If you analyze the divorce records, you'll find that seventy per cent. of them occur among boarding-house and hotel folks. The boarding-house atmosphere is distinctly demoralizing, and tends to take off those fine edges that are the safeguard of virtue, and throws one into the society of all sorts of people, many of and tends to take off those fine edges that are the safeguard of virtue, and throws one into the society of all sorts of people, many of whom are mere human flotsam and jetsom—adventurers of the worst type. To all young married folks I say, keep away from the boarding-house. It will ruin your energy; it will kill your ambition, and maybe ruin your happiness and blight your life. Boarding-houses are admirable institutions for single men, and those whose business keeps them on the move, but they are not admirable institutions for young working girls, who at once become the target of every man in the house. Girls, don't marry a man unless he can give you a home. If he can't afford to furnish a house of a few rooms, wait until he can. Better live in a soap box or a chicken coop, that's your own, than a palace rented of others, where you've nothing to do but loll and gab and read and acquire habits of sloth. The strength of a nation lies in its homes, its weakness lies in its boarding-houses. A man will die for his home, but the man never lived that would raise a finger to protect his A man will die for his home, but the man never A man will die for his home, but the man never lived that would raise a finger to protect his hash house. Now, little bride, these remarks are not for you, as your husband's business keeps him moving, and I know you'll have a home soon, and a happy one. I'm glad you got so many presents. One present I certainly envy you, and that's the Jersey cow. If I could get a present like that I'd marry every man, woman and child in America. In fact, if I could get that cow I'd, yee, dad binged if I wouldn't marry the cow herself, but if I did marry her, I'll be hanged, drawn and quartered, and eternally bejiggered if I'd ever take her to a boarding-house and hash dispensary.

Our next letter is one of great interest.

tered, and eternally bejiggered if I'd ever take her to a boarding-house and hash dispensary.

Our next letter is one of great interest.

CHILENO VALLEY, CAL., Sept. 28, 1906.

UNCLE CHARLIE AND COMFORT COUSINS:

This is a very beautiful part of California—right in the Coast Range, and only about seven miles from the beach of old ocean. The wind blows up the valley almost every day in summer; but we are very nicely situated in a little valley that branches off from the main one, and the wind seldom reaches us. The crops slaway grow nicely for the people here; no matter how they blight in other places. Our house is situated at the foot of three hills which rise on the west, northeast and east. At the top is a tableland from which we can see for miles in every direction.

How many of the cousins experienced the earth quake of the eighteenth of Aprill It caught us in bed, as I suppose most everyone was. It did not take us long to get into the open, you may be sure. It seemed as if the earth would surely open and swallow us up. The ground heaved, roiled, rocked and tossed like the waves of the sea. It is said that the shock lasted less than a minute, but, for at least fifteen minutes, here at our place, the shake seemed to be almost continuous. Of course, not hard all this disturbance was going on in the earth, the sky overhead was serene and blue, with a few flecks of white clouds on its surface, the sir was balmy, and the sun had just kissed the highest mountains. It seemed strange that such a mighty convulsion of nature should come on such a lovely morning. We believed a volcano had burst out somewhere—there are several extinct ones near here. When we returned to the house, we found everything in chaos; stove down, soot all over, milk all over the floor, mixed with the other mixture. We had to pick our way subst for a little while till we could clean up the mess.

We lived in fear and trembling all that day expecting a heavier shock all the time. In one ofour fields it broke open the earth in cracks from one to now live in on the same ranch we call our home.

Chileno Valley was settled by Spaniards long ago.
Jesse's ancestors owned this whole township, known as Rancho Laguna de San Antonio. It was long ago sold, and now Swiss people own all the land around here and the Spanish people are all gone.
Well, our letter is long, enough. If Billy the Goat, does not get this will write again some day. So good by.

JESSE AND MAY WILLIAMS (Nos. 12,065). Cousin May, your letter is indeed of deep and stirring interest. We have had a great many "quake" letters, but none like yours. You were far away from those who compare notes, and exchange news with you, and I've no doubt suffered more from mental shock than those who were in the cities, and were sustained by excitement and the presence of fellow sufferers. It is always hardest when we suffer alone. For all you knew, all the rest of your state had been engulfed in ruin and utterly destroyed. The suspense must have been terrible. May and suspense must have been terrible. May and Jesse, we are proud to have such genuine Americans in our League. Not many Californians are living in the same house in which they were born, and thirty-five years of residence on one ranch in a comparatively new country, speaks well for you and yours. We are all grateful your homestead was saved from complete destruction, and Billy the Goat restrets he was not on hand to like but he country. grets he was not on hand, to lick up the soot and milk, as he says a few yards of that across one's chest before breakfast is an excellent tonic worst of all. There are a whole lot of men in these places that you have to meet and know, that you would not allow over your doorsill, if you had a real home. The most objectionable ried. I don't like to see prosperous, handsome, thirty-five-year-old boys single. Cousins, get after Jesse

Here's a letter from a youthful, but old friend of ours.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, Sept., 23, 1906. DEAR UNCLE DOUGLAS:

I am in my first year at High School. I drive four miles into the Bluffs every day. My sister is a graduate of the Boston College of Oratory, in Boston, Mass.

Boston, Mass.

I should like to hear you sing. Sometime I may go to New York and study vocal music; then I shall go and see you and if I sing good enough you may write a song for me.

I use my hog money for my music lessons.

My red pig got to be a hog and I sold it, and have to feed another piggie. I guess you remember me as the girl with the pigs.

I hope you will have a lot of birthdays.

I have one brother and a sister teaching school.

Did I tell you my grandfather Garner was a cousin to Alexander Stephens of the South, and my grandmother was a cousin to Hon. W. H. Grady, the orator of the South? You seem to like the South. With lots of love.

Bravo. Hazel. your letter is finely written.

Bravo, Hazel, your letter is finely written, and you give every promise of becoming a very smart young lady. Hazel says she drives four miles into the Bluffs every day. My, oh, my, did you ever hear the like of that? Fancy that poor faithful gee gee tunneling four miles into the earth, burrowing all that tremendous distance into the towering Bluffs. Fancy what a time Hazel's mamma must have washing her pretty frocks after she's been digging her airy, fairy, dainty, little nose into four miles of dirt. Oh, Hazel, my dear, do, do, give up that very unladylike habit of driving four miles into the Bluffs. We should all like to hear Hazel's sister make a speech. Oratory is a divine gift, but it is not to be wondered at that Hazel's sister can declaim, when we consider the fact that she is a relative of the late Hon. W. H. Grady, the great Southern orator, and late editor of the Atlanta Constitution. The gift of oratory is a rare one. Webster was a great orator, so was Henry Ward Beecher and Patrick Henry. Oratory and speech-making are very different things. Most anyone can make a fairly good speech, but orators are very scarce. Orators make language into rippling music, and by the magic of their words, and the magnetism of their personalities, sway human hearts, and play on the human emotions as a pianist plays on the notes of a piano. Maria is a great orator when she gets on the roof at night, and lays down the law to her gentleman felline friends, as to what is and is not dignified conduct for midnight observation by gentlemen cats in the presence of their lady friends. Hazel hopes I will have a lot of birth-Bravo, Hazel, your letter is finely written, by gentlemen cats in the presence of their lady friends. Hazel hopes I will have a lot of birthdays, and so do I. I remember having thirty-seven in one month once. Every place I visited (and I still keep up the practice.) I'd say "This is quite an important occasion for me, it's my birthday." Then everyone hustled around for lemonade, cake and coffee, and I held the center of the stage. Whenever conversation is lagging, and you want to be "IT" just say, "Isn't it strange, I never thought of it, but it is my birthday." You will say, "Oh, but it is my birthday." You will say, "Oh, but it is my birthday." You will say, "Oh, but it is my birthday." You will say, "Oh, but it is my birthday." You will say the latter it is in't right to have more than one birthday every year." No more it is for ordinary people, but men of genius like Toby and myself have got a right to be born as often as we like. Folks tell me I was born on the Fifth of September, and I ought to know as I was there at the time, but somehow I forgot to make a note of the occasion, and people might have got mixed on the date, so to make sure of getting it right, I have a birthday celebration all the year round. Hog money, Hazel! I never got a show to hog money. I'm sorry your pig got to be a hog. What made a respectable piggle get to be a hog. You should have taught him better, Hazel. Toby got to be a hog the other day, and I had to chastise him, now he's just a plain dog again. If you'll divvey up with the hog money, Hazel, I'll write you a heart touching ballad entitled, "The day we chewed the bristles off the old hog's tail." You could have the bristles off the old hog's tail." You could have the bristles off the old hog's tail." You could be sell the other half for music lessons. You'd better have the front half, as there's more music that end, and you like music, for I remember now that you are studying to be a piggydonna. I'll have the part that goes under the fence rails last. It isn't as handsome as your end but I think it is more meaty, and wi by gentlemen cats in the presence of their lady friends. Hazel hopes I will have a lot of birth-days, and so do I. I remember having thirty-

Our next letter is capital, read it and judge for yourself. PEACH, WASH., Sept. 30, 1906.

PEACH, WASH., Sept. 30, 1998.

DEAR UNCLE CHARLIE:

I've come to take you on a short trip through the country in which I live. I have been a member of the League of Cousins since last October. I am five feet seven inches in height, with gray eyes and brown hair. I was sweet sixteen last July. I live 100 miles from Spokane City, one of the busiest little cities in the northwest, the population of which in 1904 was 73,852, of which 11,585 were school children, over five years of age. Well, Uncle, here ittile cities in the northwest, the population of which in 1904 was 73,862, of which 11,585 were school children, over five years of age. Well, Uncle, here we are at Davenport (Queen City of the Big Bend,) ready to start on a ride through Lincoln Co. We'll now drive northwest from town, down along the ranges of Cottonwood Creek for a number of miles, passing many prosperous ranchers' homes. Now we see acres of grain where the reaper's are busy, and again in the distance we hear the toot-toot of a steam thresher at work, or again we see large straw stacks where the thresher has already passed. And next we come to the head of Hawk Creek Canyon, and commence the gradual descent towards the Columbia river. In some portions the canyon is very narrow, showing a sheer descent of several hundred feet, and now again the canyon widens and we see the home of the hardy rancher nestling beneath the high basaltic rocks. A short distance further down the canyon and we approach one of the richest hay and fruit sections known. Stack after stack of hay we now see which have just been cut and harvested from the rich bottomiand. We drive on further down and Hawk Creek can now be seen dancing through the meadows. And next we come to Hawk Creek Falls, a straight drop of fifty feet. The valley from here widens, and the fruit farms are in sight. Here irrigation is king, and this is one of the richest and most developed fruit districts in Eastern Washington. Almost any kind of fruit can be grown in this lovely valley. The first fruit shipped out is strawberries and dew-berries, and blackberries follow in quick succession. Great quantities of peaches also grow in this little valley. The peach crop is so importent a part of its yearly output that this postoffice is called "Pesoh," and the same name would apply to the whole valley. In passing through, it looks like a village, the farms being divided into tracts of a few acres each. And now, Uncle, the majestic Columbia comes into view, and the scene is a grand one. The river winding singu

A STOLEN PROPOSAL

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Arthur Leighton rector of St Marks, is in love with Anna Roman from Thornton Hastings, his college classmate, and opens to the second page. He will spend the summer at Saratoga, where Mrs. Julia Meredith takes her niece, Miss Anna Ruthven. He's expected to fall in love and marry her, but he has presentiments that Arthur is interested in 19 as if she were already his wife. Arthur Leighton determines the matter shall be settled before Anna leaves Hanover with Mrs. Mcredith He writes a letter, asking her to be his wife. Mrs. Julia Meredith arrives at the farmhouse. She and Anna go down to the Gien. Cunningly when the heaves he had a down to the Gien. Cunningly when the heaves he had a down to the Gien. Cunningly when the heaves he had a down to the Gien. Cunningly when the heaves he had a down to the Gien. Cunningly when the heaves he had a down to the Gien. Cunningly when the heaves he had a down to the Gien. Cunningly when the heaves at her death goes to Anna and she expects her to make a brilliant match. There is no one in Hanover whom she, as a Ruthren, would care to marry, and as she ask the question, the rector comes around a rock where they are sitting. It for Anna, and slips the letter into it, and trusts to faithful Esther, who takes it to Anna's room. Mrs. Meredith suspects something, and finding the letter in the book, partially unsealed, thinks it her duty, as the sister of Anna's dead father, not to let her throw herself away, and Anna little suspects how her and the how feverally Arthur Leighton prays that night that God will grant him the priceless gift of Anna Ruthven's love. The following Sunday the rector listens to Anna Ruthven, as she sings, "Oh, come let us sing unto the Lord," and he cannot think she means to darken its church. Anna Ruthven is introduced to Panny Hetherton how she had met Mr. Leighton range is a single she had great regard for him and the single she had great regard for him, or how she had net Mr. Leighton many Hetherton how she had met Mr. Le

CHAPTER VIII. (CONTINUED.)

CHAPTER VIII. (CONTINUED.)

HERE is a way to stop the gossip and make it right for me to see you. Promise to be my wife, and not even Captain Humphreys will say aught against it."

Arthur's voice trembled a little now, for the mention of Capt. Humphreys had brought a thought of Anna, whose brown eyes seemed for an instant to look reproachfully upon that wooing. But Arthur had gone too far to retract—he had committed himself, and now he had only to wait for Lucy's answer.

There was no deception about her. Hers was a nature clear as crystal, and, with a gush of glad tears, she promised to be the rector's wife, hiding her face in his bosom, and telling him, brokenly, how unworthy she was, how foolish and how unsuited to the place, but promising to do the best she could do not to bring him into disgrace on account of her shortcomings.

"With the knowledge that you love me, I can do anything," she said, and her white hand crept slowly into the cold, clammy one which lay so listlessly in Arthur's lap.

He was already repenting, for he felt that it was sin to take that warm, trusting, loving heart in exchange for the half-lifeless one he should render in return, the heart where scarcely a pulse of joy was beating, even though he held his promised wife, and she as fair and beautiful as ever promised wife could be."

"I can make her happy, and I will," he thought, pressing the warm fingers which quivered at his touch.

"I can make her happy, and I will," he thought, pressing the warm fingers which quivered at his touch.

But he did not kiss her again. He could not, for the brown eyes, which still seemed looking at him as if asking what he did. There was a strange spell about those phantom eyes, and they made him say to Lucy, who was now sitting demurely at

"I could not clear my conscience if I did

"I could not clear my conscience if I do not confess that you are not the first wo-man that I have asked to be my wife." There was a sudden start, and Lucy's face was pale as ashes, while her hand went quickly to her side, where the heart-beats were so visible, warning Arthur to be careful how he startled her, so when she her? Did you love her very much?" he answered indifferently:

"I would rather not to"

answered indifferently:
"I would rather not tell you who it was, as that might be a breach of confidence. She did not care to be my wife, and so that dream was over and I was left for you."

you."

He did not say how much he loved her, but Lucy forgot the omission and asked:

"Was she young and pretty?"

"Young and pretty both, but not as beautiful as you," Arthur replied, his fingers

By Mrs. Mary J. Holmes

softly parting back the golden curls from the face looking so trustingly in his.

And in that he answered truly. He had seen no face as beautiful of its kind as Lucy's was, and he was glad that he could tell her so. He knew how it would please her, and partly make amends for the tender words which he could not speak for the phantom eyes haunting him so strange.

But Lucy was not done yet, and Arthur der words which he could not speak for the phantom eyes haunting him so strangely. And Lucy, who took all things for granted, was more than content, only she wondered that he did not kiss her again, and wished that she knew the girl who had come so near being in her place. But she respected his wishes too much to ask, al. what he had said, and she tried to make herself glad that he had been so frank with her, and not left his other love affair to the chance of her discovering it afterwards at a time when it might be painful to her.

at a time when it might be painful to her.
"I wish I had something to confess," she thought, but from the scores of her flirtations, and even offers, for she had not lacked for them, she could not find one lacked for them, she could not find one where her own feelings had been enlisted in ever so slight a degree, until she remembered Thornton Hastings, who for one whole week had paid her such attentions as made her drive around on purpose to look at the house on Madison Square where the future Mrs. Hastings was to live. But look at the house on Madison Square where the future Mrs. Hastings was to live. But his coolness afterwards, and his comment on her frivolity had terribly angered her, making her think that she hated him, as she had told Anna. Now, however, as she remembered the drive and the house, she nestled closer to Arthur, and told him all about it, fingering the buttons on his dressing-gown as she told it, and never dreaming of the pang she was inflicting, as Arthur thought how mysterious were God's

But Lucy was not done yet, and Arthur felt as if the earth was giving way beneath his feet when, as he lifted her into the saddle and took her hand at parting, she said, "Now, remember I am not going to be jealous of that other love. There is only pearous of that other love. There is only one person that could make me so, and that is Anna Ruthven; but I know it was not she, for that night that we all came from Mrs. Hobbs', and she went with me upstairs, I asked her honestly if you had ever offered yourself to her, and she told me that you had not. You showed a lack of tests you had not. You showed a lack of taste, I think, but I am glad that it was not

Lucy was far down the road ere Arthur recovered from the shock her last words had given him. What did it mean, and why had Anna said that he had never proposed? Was there some mistake and he the victim of it? There was a blinding mist before the young man's eyes as he returned to his study, and went over again, with all the incidents of Anna's refusal, even to the reading of the letter which he already knew by heart. Then, as the thought came over him that possibly Mrs. Meredith had played him false in some way, he groaned aloud, and the great sweat-drops fell upon the table where he leaned his head. But this could not be, he reasoned. Lucy was mistaken. She had not heard aright. Somebody, surely, was mistaken, or he had com-Was there some mistake and he the victim frosts. Anna had been very sick since that morning in September when she sat on the plazza at the Ocean House and read Lucy Harcourt's letter. The faint was a precursor of fever, the physician said, when summoned to her aid, and in a tremor of fear and distress Mrs. Meredith had had her at once removed to New York, and that was the last that Anna remembered.

From the moment that her aching head touched the pillow in Aunt Meredith's house all consciousness had fled, and for weeks she had hovered so near to death that the telegraph wires bore daily messages to Hanover, where the aged couple who had cared for her since her childhood wept, and prayed, and watched for tidings from their Hanover, where the aged couple who had cared for her since her childhood wept, and prayed, and watched for tidings from their darling. They could not go to her, for Grandpa Humphreys had broken his leg, and his wife could not leave him, so they waited with what patience they could for the daily bulletins which Mrs. Meredith sent, appreciating their anxiety, and feeling glad withal of anything which kept them from New York.

"She had best be prayed for in church," the old man had said, and so Sunday after Sunday Arthur read the prayer for the sick, his voice trembling as it had never trembled before, and a keener sorrow in his heart than he had ever known when saying the solemn words. Heretofore the persons prayed for had been comparatively strangers, people in whom he felt only the interest a pastor feels in all his flock, but now it was Anna, whose case he took to God, and he always smothered a sob during the moment he waited for the fervent response the congregation made, the "Amen" which came from the pew where Lucy sat sounding louder and heartier than all the rest, and having in it a sound of the tears that fell so fast on Lucy's book as she asked that Anna might not die. Oh, how he longed to go to her, but this he could not that fell so fast on Lucy's book as she asked that Anna might not die. Oh, how he longed to go to her, but this he could not do, and so he had sent Lucy, who bent so tenderly above the sick girl, whispering loving words in her ear, and dropping kisses upon her lips which uttered no response, save once, when Lucy said:

"Do you remember Arthur?"

Then they murmured faintly:

"Yes. Arthur. I remember him and the

"Do you remember Arthur?"

Then they murmured faintly:

"Yes, Arthur, I remember him, and the Christmas song, and the gathering in the church; but that was long ago. There's much that has happened since then."

"And I am to marry Arthur," Lucy had said again, but this time there was no sign that she was understood, and that afternoon she went back to Hanover loaded with Testaments for the children of St. Mark's, and new books for the Sunday school, and accompanied by Valencia, who, having a serious difference with her mistress, Mrs. Meredith, offered her services to Lucy, and was at once accepted.

That was near the middle of October; now it was towards the last, and Anna was so much better that she sat up for an hour or more, and listened with some degree of interest to what Mrs. Meredith told her of the days when she lay so unconscious of all that was passing around her, never even heeding the kindly voice of Thornton Hastings, who more than once had stood by her pillow with his hand on her feverish brow, and whose thoughtfulness was visible in the choice bouquets that he sent each day, with notes of anxious inquiry when he did not come himself.

Anna had not seen him yet since her convalescence. She would rather not see anyone until strong enough to talk, she said; and so Thornton waited patiently for the interview that she had promised him when she was stronger, but every day he sent her fruits and flowers, and books of prints which he thought would interest her, and which always made her cheeks grow hot which he thought would interest her, and which always made her cheeks grow hot and her heart beat regretfully, for she thought of the answer she would give him when he came, and she shrank from wounding him.

"He is too good too poble to have and the short of the state good too poble to have and the short of the state good too poble to have and the short of the state good too poble to have and the short of the state good too poble to have and the short of the state good too poble to have and the short of th wounding him.

"He is too good, too noble, to have an unwilling wife," she said, but that did not make it the less hard to tell him so, and when at last she was well enough to see him, she waited his coming nervously, starting when she heard his step, and trembling like a leaf when he drew near her chair. It was a very thin, wasted hand which he took in his, holding it for a moment between his own, and then laying it gently back upon her lap.

He had come for the answer to the ques-

He had come for the answer to the ques-tion put six weeks before, and Anna gave tion put six weeks before, and Anna gave it to him.

Kindly, considerately, but decidedly, she told him that she could not be his wife, simply because she did not love him as he ought to be loved."

"It is nothing personal," she said, working nervously at the heavy fringe of her shawl. "I respect you more than any man that I ever knew, but one, and had I met you years ago—before——"

"I understand you," said Thornton, coming to her aid. "You have tried to love mc, but cannot, because your affections arg given to another."

but cannot, because your affections are given to another."

Anna bowed her head in silence. Then

Anna bowed her head in silence. Then after a moment she continued:
"You must forgive me, Mr. Hastings, for not telling you this at once. I did not know then but I could love you—at least I means to try, for you see this other one—"
The fingers got terribly tangled in the fringe as Anna gasped for breath, and went on:

"He does not know, and never will; that is, he never cared for me, nor guessed how foolish I was to give him my love unsought." Then it is not Arthur Leighton, and that

Mr. Hastings said, involuntarily, and Anna looked quickly up, her cheeks growing paler than they were before, as she replied:

"I don't know what you mean. I never "I don't know what you mean. I never

"You never refused Mr. Leighton."
"You never refused Mr. Leighton?"
Thornton exclaimed, forgetting all discretion in his surprise at this flat contradiction.
"I have Arthur's word for it,
(CONTINUED ON PAGE 12.)

WITH A MOAN SHE STRETCHED OUT HER HANDS TO THORNTON.

ways, and wondered that he had not re-versed the matter, and given Lucy to Thornton Hastings rather than to him, who up his pallid face. "God forgive the wrong versed the matter, and given Lucy to Thornton Hastings rather than to him, who did not half deserve her.

"I know now that I never cared a bit for Thornton Hastings, though I might if he had not been so mean as to call me frivolous." Lucy said, as she arose to go, then, suddenly turning to the rector, she added: "I shall never ask you who your first love was, but I would like to know if you have quite forgotten her."

"Have you forgotten Thornton Hastings?" Arthur asked, laughingly, and Lucy replied, "Of course not; one never forgets, but I don't care a pin for him now, and did I tell you that Fanny writes that rumor says that he will marry Anna Ruthven?"

"Yes, no, I did not know—I am not surprised," and Arthur stooped to pick up a book lying on the floor, thus hiding his face from Lucy, who, woman-like, was glad to report a piece of gossip, and continued: "She is a great belle, Fanny says—dresses beautifully and in perfect taste, besides talking as if she knew something, and this pleases Mr. Hastings, who takes her out to drive and ride, and all this after I warned her against him, and told her just what he said about me. I am surprised at her."

Lucy was drawing on her gauntlets, and Lucy was drawing on her gauntlets, and Arthur was waiting to see her out, but she still lingered on the threshold, and at last said to him, "I wonder that you never fell in love with Anna yourself, I am sure if I were you I would prefer her to me. She

I have done in asking Lucy to be my wife when my heart belonged to Anna. God help me to forget the one and love the other help me to forget the one and love the other as I ought. She is a lovely little girl, trusting me so wholly that I can make her happy, and I will; but Anna! oh, Anna!"

It was a despairing cry, such as a newlyengaged man should never have sent after another than his affianced bride. Arthur thought so, too, fighting back his first love with an iron will, and, after that first hour of anguish, burying it so far from sight that he went that night to Captain Humphreys and told of his engagement; then that he went that night to Captain Humpireys and told of his engagement; then called upon his bride-elect, trying so hard to be satisfied that, when, at a late hour, he returned to the rectory, he was more than content, and, by way of fortifying himself still further, wrote the letter which Thornton Hastings read at Newport.

And that was how it happened.

CHAPTER IX.

SOMEBODY PLAYED HER FALSE.

Through the rich curtains that shaded the windows of a room looking out on Fifth Avenue, the late October sun was shining, and as its red light played among the flowarthur was waiting to see her out, but she still lingered on the threshold, and at last said to him. "I wonder that you never fell in love with Anna yourself, I am sure if I were you I would prefer her to me. She knows something and I do not, but I am river closely for some two miles further up the valley, and the banks are lined with magnificent orchards and charming homes. Two miles from Peach we turn to the right, and after driving a short distance we some to where my home is, where we will be welcomed by father, mother and two grown brothers of mine. Then after eating a bowl of Johnny-cake and milk, we are ready to resume our journey. The next place of interest is the ferry where the Indians cross the river; the Colvil Reservation being on the other side of the river. Driving on a couple of miles now, we are where the Spokane river empties into the Columbia. Then ascending a high plateau Old Fort Spokane can be seen. This fort was established in 1879 and was so used until 1898 when it was abandoned for military purposes. It is one of the most picturesque locations in Eastern Washington, and was considered one of the finest military posts in the Northwest for many years, but is now used for schools for the Indian children of the adjoining reservations.

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 7.)

reservations.

There were sixteen teachers last year, and nearly three hundred pupils in attendance. Leaving the valley by another route, we start back through the famous Egypt country, "the garden spot of the Big Bend," where thousands of acres of wheat land is to be seen. Of the 25 miles from the Fort back to Davenport, nearly the entire distance is lined with farms, having large well-built houses and barns. But now we are to town, so after seeing you on board your train back to Augusta, and with a farewell wave of the handkerchief as the train pulls out of sight. pulls out of sight,

I am your loving niece,

ETHEL PAIGE (No. 9,693).

Fine, Ethel, fine! Why can't more of you write bright descriptive letters like Ethel's? Nearly all your letters are as like as two peas, and not one in a thousand of you ever attempt to make your epistles worth while. All you seem to crave is to get in print, and you jumble up a few sentences about nothing, and are wild-eyed because I don't print what you send. You all have as good opportunities of writing interesting letters as Ethel has. Ethel's letter had lots of little errors, and very few attempts at punctuation, but I've fixed all that up, and anyhow it had news and information and gave us a capital idea of this favored section, and you all want to thank Ethel heartily for writing so entertainingly. Now, Ethel, just a moment, I want you to tell me what you mean by saying you saw the road hugging the river. I've been a close observer of Nature for years, but I never saw a road hugging a river in my life. You'll excuse me from hugging anything as damp as a river. When I hug anything, I want it dry, you bet. You also say that Hawk Creek is dancing through the meadows, and I fear your imagination is running wild. Who ever saw a dancing creek, why that's almost as bad as a hugging road. I don't wonder the creek has some falls, and drops fifty feet, if it makes a jack mule idiot of itself, and goes dancing and prancing all over the country. Ethel, you live at Peach, and Peach is rightly named if you live in it, for your letter is a peach, and so are you.

Another poet wants to give the flowers of her soul to the world. This time it is a poetess that Another poet wants to give the flowers of her soul to the world. This time it is a poetess that yearns to be heard.

yearns to be heard.

Pana, Ill, Aug. 29, 1906.

DEAR Uncle Charlie:

I love to read the cousins' letters and will tell you about myself next time.

Mother has taken Comfour three years. I have every number of the three years, of which I have made books of each year's reading in each book, they are sewed and bound and they look fine. I also have your photograph in my locket so you see you are thought of more then you know. Inclosed I send you a little verse I wrote one moonlight eve under a big maple tree. I wish you had been there, but as you were not I send the verse to you. Hoping you will not find this tiresome, I will close with love to all.

Your niece,

Chloie M. Simons, Pana, R. F. D., 2. Ill.

The Moon

The Moon
It was a still summer's eve,
The moon had just rose.
A kind smiling face it was.
Which, shone so brightly—
In the deep blue of the sky.
No frown or care-look was there.
So unlike the faces, it looked apond.

Oh! If we could all-ways smile, Allways be as bright as He. Would we not be happy? "Yes" in-deed we would. And why not you ask? Ha me! you could not if you tryed, Keep as smiling a face as the moon.

Chloie, I thank you for the lovely things you say about me. I thank you for wearing my picture in your locket, though I think it mighty tough on the locket, and as for being mighty tough on the locket, and as for being under the maple tree with you, while you were composing that exquisite poem you sent in, well dear, I'd have given three legs, and half a dozen wings to have been Johnny on the spot, and watched the noble and beautiful thoughts coming to a boil, in your fertile and sublimely poetic brain. You say it was a still summer's eve. I'm glad it was still, because if it had moved, you might not have been able to write as divinely as you have. If it had been one of those wobbly evenings, that keep bobbing up and down and won't stand still, you never could have put Shakespeare on the blink, and given us this masterpiece of verse. But for Heaven's sake, whose face was it you saw smiling up in the sky? Toby says you refer to the Heaven's sake, whose face was It you saw smining up in the sky? Toby says you refer to the moon's face, but I never liked the moon, as it gets full every month. I don't like the moon to get full, and certainly no moon that gets full is entitled to shine in a prohibition state. But oh, if it is the moon's face you refer to, how could it "looked a pond" as you say in the dark like of your first snasm. The moon looked a pond, surely you must have been out in a rainstorm, and not a still night. The moon found a still and got full, and that accounts for its looking like "a pond." Toby says you mean "upon," and that you've been butting inmean "upon," and that you've been butting into Carnegie's reformed spelling, and have got a new and improved method, and have converted "upon" into "apond." If you have put upon into apond, dearie, pull it out before it gets drowned. I had an idea that the moon was referred to as a "she" instead of a "he," but there's supposed to be a man in it (unless he fell into the pond), so I guess Chloie is nearer correct on the matter of sex than I. You mean "Ah me!" don't you, Chloie? not "Ha me!" There's a lot of difference in that little expression. Ah me! is poetic, Ha me! is where you're supposed to get the laugh, and most poets get that. Anyway you've done finely, Chloie, though you've ignored rhyme entirely, and as for rhythm and meter, dear, you've told them to skiddoo entirely. Anyway, Chloie, I still wish I'd been under the maple tree, when you composed your poem, and I don't wonder the moon smiled when you were doing it, if I'd been there I'd have more than smiled, I'd have had a fit. smiled, I'd have had a fit.

A little Pennsylvania girl is bursting to say

EXPORT, PA., July 5, 1906. DEAR UNCLE CHARLIE.

EXPORT, PA., July 5, 1906.

DEAR UNCLE CHARLIE:

I will come now with a few lines, and try to get a seat on your precious lap. And I hope, Uncle, that you are well.

I am five feet, five inches tall, have chestnut colored hair and eyes, weigh one hundred and sixteen pounds.

Uncle Charlie, I wore my League button, and one day a man accosted me, and looking at the button he read aloud; "Counterfeiters Cousins," and then he said, he was going to have you and the whole bunch of cousins arrested. I told him he was mis taken, and that if Uncle Charlie ever got hold of him that he would knock him sprawling, and that Billy would eat him up for lunch.

Uncle, were you ever at a park, they are very nice places. I would like to see you ride in a roller coaster. I was at a large park not very long ago, and was on a merry-go-round, and as it went around the people would grab for the rings at the side, and everybody tried to get the brass one; for who ever got it, got a free ride. My companion got the brass ring the first time we got on, but I would have liked to have seen you and Billy there grabbing for them.

I suppose, Uncle, you are busy picking cherries now, and Maria is busy canning them.

I live on a farm of one hundred and six acres, with plenty of fruit of all kinds, and there are three cross roads in front of our house. We had three hundred little chickens, but a good many died with the gaps. Uncle Charlie, I suppose you never had the gaps. Uncle Charlie, I suppose you never had the gaps. Uncle Charlie, I suppose you never had the gaps. Uncle Charlie, I suppose you never had the gaps that all the cousins to write to me, and I will answer all their letters, even if I have to pile them on a hay wagon to haul them to the office.

Your loving cousin,

Anna Rose Paulisik (No. 12,889).

Anna, yours is a bright, jolly, cheery little letter, and I fancy I see you digging your nose

Anna, yours is a bright, jolly, cheery little letter, and I fancy I see you digging your nose in the ink bottle and inscribing it to me in your spare moments. You ask me if I ever had the "gaps?" deedy and I have lots of times. I your spare moments. You ask me if I ever had the "gaps?" deedy and I have lots of times. I remember once I was taking a swim in the sea, and a tramp stole all my clothes, except my coat and shoes. When I got out of the water I put on my coat and shoes, and made a run for my hotel at the other end of the town. I had to go all up the Main St., and I had seven thousand people chasing me, though there were only six hundred living in the place. You'll wonder why they chased me. Well it was because I had the "gaps." There was a gap between my coat and shoes that caused all the excitement. Once, when I was calling on Miss Ermyntrude Poodleface, the family Ki Yi bit out three yards of my rearward clothing. I had a most painful attack of the "gaps" then. A lady pinned a bedspread over the gap, or I'd never have got home. On, I know all about the gaps, and if your chickens had "gaps" similar to mine, I don't wonder they cashed in their checks, and skiddooed for a better world. Billy the Goat has requested me to tell you he swallowed two merry-go-rounds last week, and they were fine eating. When he wants a ride he opens his mouth and falls in. You tell that guy that made sassy remarks about me that I will soak him a punch in the rotunda if he gets too gay. There is nothing counterfeit about us, we are the genuine eighteen-carat goods, and nobody can hand us a lemon. We have no counterfeet in our bunch. I had a girl once, and folks said she had cork legs and counterfeit feet, so I got down on my knees to count her feet, I'd counted two, and was going once, and folks said she had cork legs and counterfeit feet, so I got down on my knees to count her feet, I'd counted two, and was going to count the other three, when she lifted one that hit me a kerzazzer in the boko. I never tried to count her feet after that, but I'll swear by the way that hoof got busy on my smeller, that she had sixty-seven feet on each leg, and real feet at that. I met with defeat from defeet that time. Anna, you say you have cross roads. What have you been doing to make your roads cross. All our roads around here are in the best of humor, we have not a single cross road in this section. I suppose you have been doing this section. I suppose you have been doing something naughty to make the roads cross. Poor roads, don't annoy them and they won't be cross.

Here is an interesting letter from a sailor

ROYAL MAIL STEAMER CEDRIC, WHITE STAR LINE DOCK, NEW YORK CITY, June 29, 1906.

MY DEAR UNCLE CHARLIE:

I suppose you have no objection to admitting a sailor boy into your happy circle. As you will see, I am on the great White Star Liner, the Cedric, which plies between New York and Liverpool, England, I have crossed the ocean scores of times, for I have been going to sea for over thirty years, and am now just over forty, so you see I began early.

and am now just over forty, so you see I began early.

I am an Englishman by birth, and my home is in Liverpool, England, but I am just as much at home in America, as on the other side. To show you that I like America, when I was a very young man, I enlisted in the American Navy, in which I spent three years. I was first on the old "Constellation," and then joined the "Trenton," which, shortly after I left her was wrecked off the coast of Samoa.

I have been on the White Star Line for nearly twenty years. We make twelve round trips per year, so you can calculate how many times I have crossed the pond. I was in the "Germanic" many years, and was aboard of her when she sank at her dock in New York harbor.

She was a grand ship, the pride of the seas in her day, 'but you could put her inside the giant "Cedric" on which I am now. The "Cedric" is over seven hundred feet long, and was the biggest ship in the world until the other day, when the German's built one a few feet longer. The "Cedric" is so enormous that it takes a very heavy sea to shake us up. We carry enough people aboard each trip to start a good-sized town.

"JACK ASHORE." FUN AT CONEY ISLAND

carry enough people about the carry the wireless telegraphy apparatus, and are never long out of touch of land, and we talk to the other vessels as we cross, though they are often hundreds of miles away, and we can't see them.

After the "Germanic" went out of service, I was aboard the "Majestic" for a long time. During the Boer war we quit our regular trips, and took troops to South Africa. We took out hundreds of poor fellows who never came home again. From the "Majestic" I was sent to the giant "Cedric" where I am now.

A P 550 What With 00000000000 This You Can (D) Oi1 00000000000 Heater motore, motore

With a Perfection Oil Heater you can heat a cold bed-room, make a sick-room more comfortable, warm a chilly hallway, heat water quickly, and do many things better than can be done with any other stove no matter what fuel it burns. The superiority of the lies in the fact that it generates intense heat without smoke or smell. The oil fount and the wick carrier are made of brass throughout, which insures durability. Gives great heat at small cost. Fount has oil indicator and handle. Heater is light and portable. Absolutely safe and simple—wick cannot be turned too high or too low. Operated as easily as a lamp. All parts easily cleaned. Two finishes—nickel and japan. Every heater warranted. If not at your dealer's write nearest agency for descriptive circular.

PERFECTION Oil Heater

(Equipped with Smokeless Device)

The Rayo Lamp and is the best all-round house lamp made. Gives a clear, steady light. Is the safest lamp you can buy. Brass throughout and nickel plated. Equipped with the latest improved burner. Handsome—simple—satisfactory. Every lamp warranted. Write to nearest agency if you cannot get it from your dealer.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY

them many times, and I know them well, and have had pleasant chats with them all. Pierrepont Morgan always crosses with us, and he always has a cheery "Hullo, Clegg" for me.

It's all hard work at sea. It's midnight before I'm through, and we are up at 5 A. M. in the morning, and I'm on my feet all day. We are about eight days at sea then six ashore.

The salaries for our work are not large, but there are plenty of tips, and that makes our positions enviable ones. When we get ashore we are like birds let loose from a cage. I inclose you a picture so you can see how we cut up and enjoy ourselves ashore.

Now, Uncle Charlie, tell all the cousins to write to me, and I shall be especially glad to hear from all the girl cousins, as we sailors dearly love the gentler and sweeter sex. I forgot to say I am never seasick, and it doesn't matter if the seas are running mountains high it does not bother Jack. Love to you all. Write to me all, please, and I will have the whole ship dying with envy. The address I gave will find me.

Your nautical cousin, Jack Clegg.

Jack, old boy, I am delighted to hear from keep the contractions of the course o

I will have the whole ship dying with envy. The address I gave will find me.
Your nautical cousin, Jack Clegg.
Jack, old boy, I am delighted to hear from you. It's fine to go to sea if you only know how. Most of the cousins don't know much about the sea, so I'll explain a little about it. First you board the ship. It costs a good deal of money to board a ship, as a ship eats lots of coal, and you need a big room to accommodate a boarder that's 700 feet long. Still you can't go to sea, unless you board the ship. When you get on the ship you are on the deck. When you get on the ship you are on the deck. When you want to play cards you go up on the deck and deal it. When you want eggs you go to the main hatchway, when you get short of food you either wait for a choppy sea, or wait until the ocean rolls. Ocean rolls are very fine, they don't fill you, they empty you instead. When the captain wants to tell the time, he looks at the larboard watch. The sailors attend the sails, you can also attend the sails, but you won't pick up any bargains. Whatever you do you must be careful not to sit on the starboard tack. If you want exercise you can go up and box the compass. If you run short of girls, wait until the ship strikes eight belles and make a mash on one of them. The ship travels not by miles but by knots. The ship goes into port on the tide, you see it gets all tied in knots; you must unravel this the best way you can. When the ship goes into harbor, she crosses the bar. This is a Prohibition bar, water only is served. The rear of a ship never looks pleasant as it has a stern appearance. Jack gets lots of tips. Let us all pray Cousin Jack, to quit his evil ways, and be good. Here is a fine and intellectual young man, spending the best years of his life running a bar aboard ship, and handing out jags, brannigans, coffin nails highballs, liquid degeneracy and alcoholic death, to the thirsty and unwary of all nations. Half the strawberries on people's sniffers, have been irrigated and fostered by this erring young ma us see if we cannot reform Jack. It will be a tough proposition, but we'll do it yet. I forgot to say that girls are fond of going to say, and they are particularly fond of rough weather as that is the time the heavy "swells" come aboard, and the girlies are dead stuck on the heavy swells. the heavy swells.

Our monthly shut-in letter is an unusually sad and pathetic epistle.

"JACK ASHORE." FUN AT CONEY ISLAND.

One a few feet longer. The "Cedric" is so enormous that it takes a very heavy sea to shake us up. We carry enough people aboard each trip to start a good-sized town.

We carry the wireless telegraphy apparatus.

We carry the wireless telegraphy apparatus, and are never long out of touch of land, and we talk to the other vessels as we cross, though they are often hundreds of miles away, and we can't see them.

After the "Germanic" went out of service, I was aboard the "Majestic" for a long time. During the Boer war we quit our regular trips, and took troops tellows who never came home again. From the "Majestic" I was sent to the giant "Cedric" where iam now.

My duty is handing out the drink to thirsty passengers. Nearly all the greatest men in America and England have crossed with me, some of sufferer from indigestion and nervous troubles. Is uffer constantly with sick stomach, caused by indigestion, and I have been this way now for over six years. The only peace I get is when I sleep, and that is very little. Sometimes I will go for several nights in succession and don't sleep at all. I have been confined to my bed, entirely helpless, for twenty-one years, and during all those long, weary years not able to sit up, walk or turn myself in bed, and no one to care for me but my poor old mother, who is now seventy-two years of age.

Uncle Charlie, you know my mother has had a hard road to travel as well as myself. She has watched over me, and worked over me day and night with unceasing care. I tell you, as I lie here in a semi-living condition, when a mother is gone, your all is gone, for there is no one that will care for you, and has the true, heartfelt love that a mother has for her children. Sometimes I think, what am I kept here suffering for, as my life is ne enjoyment to me in this condition. Without health there is no real enjoyment. We don't know how to appreciate health until it is lost. I had rather have my health and be compelled to labor hard every day of my life as a bireling, from dawn of day until nightfall, and nothing for my daily fare but dry bread and water, and nothing but the bare earth for my bed, and the canopy of heaven above for my roof, than to be in the condition. The thought of having to give up all my cherished hopes and aims and having to live helpless the rest of my days, at times seems more than human mind can stand. What I have suffered in the past twenty-one years in body and mind God only knows.

All those kind friends who wrote me, forgive me for not answering. I've been too ill to do much corresponding. Won't you all write to me and make my Christmas bright enough to deaden the pain for a few days? I'll do my best to reply. And now God bless you all and God have pity on all who are in my condition.

Lawrence wrote me a personal letter of thirty pages, that told a ta who are in my condition. LAWRENCE M. BIRD.

Lawrence wrote me a personal letter of thirty pages, that told a tale of suffering he mercifully spared you. Lawrence is allowed five dollars per month by the county authorities for his own and his mother's support, an amount insufficient to keep them in any sort of comfort for three days, let alone thirty. Lawrence and his mother went to the poorhouse, but conditions there were so terrible that it made my blood boil when I read of them. Lawrence's mother (God bless her dear, brave, devoted, noble soul) is a terrible sufferer from rupture, and she has to do the hardest physical labor, lifting her son, chopping wood, etc.,—enough to kill her in her condition. Often she has to lie for hours, until she can regain strength enough to attend to her helpless son. For over twenty years this patient, heroic soul has nursed her sick boy, and in a sense he is better off than she, for when she succumbs, no one is there to wait upon her. Lawrence's great trouble is that he has to do without milk and trouble is that he has to do without milk and trouble is that he has to do without milk and butter, and eat coarse food that his weak stomach rejects. Five dollars a month won't buy delicacies, and how they exist on it at all is a mystery to me. If the county gave them, or loaned them a cow, this poor fellow would be able to get proper nourishment, and this cruel nausea that racks and weakens him would cease. If I had the spending of the Russell Sage millions, I would organize a traveling hospital equipped with a staff of expert surgeons, physicians and nurses—an operating room on wheels. Chronic cases, tens of thousands of them that are scattered over the country could be examined, and if necessary, opertry could be examined, and if necessary, operated on, and a trained nurse left to take charge ated on, and a trained nurse left to take charge of the case until the patient could be left in the care of his friends. Sick folks in the back woods and rural districts never get proper medical attention, and do not have a fair chance to get well. A skilled surgeon could put at least forty per cent. of these sufferers on their feet, and skilled physicians could outline a general course of treatment that would greatly relieve those who could not be cured. I like to talk in a practical way, not in the air. God would rather we did things ourselves, when we can do them, than pray about it. There are billions ready for bloody warfare, billions for drink, show and pleasure, but our sick are sent to the poorhouse, which is generally several times worse than Sheol itself, or given five dollars a month to starve on. Some day perhaps we so-called Christians will know

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 20.)

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED PROM PAGE 5.)

Sisters. don't you think that a divorce is a sin? I do. I think that a man and a woman ought to know and fully understand each other before they are bound together for a lifetime. I don't see what alis the American girls. It seems to be a fashion to get married as quickly as possible, and then in a half year or perhaps a year, they are having a divorce case. No, I am for a happy married life, if I can't have that it is a great deal better to stay single.

Would you like to hear something about my fancy work, and other spare time occupations? I can do most anything in the line of fancy work, and Hardanger is my favorite; it is a little more work, but I think it is very simple. I play the piano and sing a little, and I do some reading and studying. I can translate books from English into Norwegian and other languages, and vice versa, and that's what I enjoy the most of all.

My father and I have taken some very interesting trips in this country and in Europe; and sometime I will tell you all about them.

May I give you some good hints?

When washing clothes in the winter dip the top ends of napkins, handkerchiefs, towels, etc., in very strong salt water, and it will prevent them from tearing.

Don't pile up your fine china after washing them, they are apt to crack, but spread them out until cold.

On't use soap on gilt china.

A few lemon drops on stewed chicken improves it.

it.

Put a sprinkle of flour in the pan when frying eggs; they will brown better and won't pop.

A little kerosene instead of soap, put in the water when washing woodwork, will make the grease spots and fly specks disappear quickly.

Viola Stephenson, Crooksville. Did you ever try to pick out patterns from lace for cross-stitch patterns. You can get some pretty ones that way.

Minda Horgue, Irma, Lincoln Co., Wis.

Heap on more wood!—the wind is chill;
But let it whistle as it will,
We'll keep our merry Christmas still.

Well keep our merry Christmas atill.

Mr Planas: The process of the well of cool to be appeared to this old, old porm. I am thinking of the many that have not the wood or cool to be appeared to the old, old porm. I am thinking of the many that have not the well of cool to be appeared to the old of the process of the cool of the process of portion of the process of portion of plants, is case of poverty and price. Profile of the process of MY DEARS:

As I sit writing in my comfortable room, my mind reverts to this old, old poem. I am thinking of the many that have not the wood or coal to "heap on", also to a circumstance that occurred in one of our Chairling communities some years ago. A young have been forthcoming had there been a stamp inclosed.

A. P. Hollwood. "J. A. D." lives in a land abounding in the most beautiful laurel and holly, where wreaths and roping are made a business of. Can you not write to some florists, who might like to handle your goods?

Mrs. Josephine Doern. I could tell you of many goor and suffering ones that have been helped by our dear Compostr people, and they keep right at it, too, no let up.

Mrs. Pitts. I shall surely send some of my girls shat are contemplating matrimony, to see you, you have so many useful hints and ideas. Do come with another bright, instructive letter. Keep your Comports in one of those paper racks, or have some other way of keeping our valuable magazine? "Love Comport?" of course you do, so does everyone that has ever seen it.

Estella F. Your banana cake is fine, for "J. A. D." tried it. Come again. There are so many useful hints, patterns and ideas in our paper, among them, those cute little brownie dolls, I would enjoy seeing one, and I am not a youngster either.

How that Venetian gentleman is swearing to his lady-love, that he and she will go boating and floating through life, I should think it would be slighting through life, I should think it would be slighting them.

for a change, further along I see they "marry." Now they go riding and a gliding while he's guiding, they must be in an automobile, wonder what make it is? I am referring to the beautiful piece of music the Comport people gave us in the September number, if you have not tried it do so at once; did you hear me playing it? Such music, reading, instruction, and information all in the pages of our own dear Comport.

Ere another month rolls around nineteen hundred and six will be gone, let us be merry and jolly while it lasts those of us who can, and amid all our joys let us not forget the needy, the poor little ones, the lonely old man or woman, toiling along life's rough path alone, forsaken, friendless, forgotten. Their name is legion, look for them. To all my girls, and boys, that have sent me souvenirs and gifts, I say God bless you, to our kind Comport people I send greetings, to one and all a merry, merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

"J. A. D." (Mrs. Van Dyke.)

Dear Comport Readers:

DEAR COMFORT READERS:
I will give E. Davis and others, two recipes for

Book Lovers' Paste

Soak one fourth ounce of gum arabic crystals in two ounces of cold rain-water. Mix one ounce of rice flour with one half pint of rain-water (first dampen the flour with a little of the water, and pour on the rest boiling,) add the gum water, and cook for ten minutes, remove from the fire, and stir in five drops of cloves; keep in covered jars.

Perpetual Paste

Dissolve one ounce of alum in one quart of soft water; add flour to the consistency of cream; stir in one tablespoonful of powdered rosin, two or three cloves, and boil to a mush, stirring constantly. Keep corked, and it will keep indefinitely. I hope the above will supply the wants of all interested, perhaps there are several like myself who enjoy making scrapbooks.

enjoy making scrapbooks.

Mrs. J. A. D. I should like to shake hands with enjoy making scrapbooks.

Mrs. J. A. D. I should like to shake hands with you.

Mrs. J. T. Kinsella. You surely have to hustle to get around to all the tasks, and teach school, too.

I live on a farm, and have six in the family, and really, sometimes I seem to get so far behind I cannot see my way clear, but I generally get there after awhile. If one has strength to push their work they have much cause for gratitude, but if their work pushes them it is apt to make things look a bit dark.

I milk four cows, raise chickens (when they don't die of the gapes), turkeys, etc., sew, wash, scrub, cook, iron, paint pillow shams, etc., when I can find a market for them, tend the garden, pickle, preserve, jelly, can and powder fruit for table use, and really sometimes I think no set of people ever eat so much, vet I am anxious when one of the family loses his or her appetite, and try all sorts of remedies to get the digestive organs in good working order again. After all, good health is the mainspring of happiness, and the little chubby bears around our feet with clinging fingers, mussing our most treasured dress, of more worth than all the world. God bless the bables, what is home without them.

We farmers' wives sometimes live a sorry life—

EDITOR AND SISTERS OF THE CORNEE:

I have been a silent listener to your social chats, but now I should like to draw my chair closer into your circle. I am only a common little married woman of twenty-two years, and I live in one of the earthquake stricken cities, the once beautiful City of Roses, the county-seat of Sonoma. Our city was quite severely shaken and the business portion laid in ruins, and many private dwellings. The smoke from burning San Francisco appeared like a fog from here. But our sorrowful catastrophe was only a calamity as liable to happen at one place as another. It is only a fulfillment of the scripture. "There shall be earthquakes in divers places." California is no more unsafe to live in now than any other state. Our city is fast building up.

divers places." California is no more unsafe to live in now than any other state. Our city is fast building up.

I notice many recipes are given in the corner, and I am going to give one that may be of benefit to many troubled with rheumatism. It cured my husband in a few days. Simply dissolve in a wine-glass of water a slight half teaspoonful of common cooking soda and drink once or twice a day, before retiring is best.

I wish the sisters would send me velvet or silk pleces for a quilt. I cannot promise anything in return, but my heartlest thanks and sincere appreciation. I do love nice piecework, but find it hard to get the material. And I want to make some pretty articles for baby.

And now, sisters, a word about a dear sweet but afflicted member of your circle whose letter I noticed in July Comfort. It was a sad and pitiful letter but very encouraging, written by a dear Christian lady, Mrs. Lizzie Billingslea. She wished a letter party on her 55th birthday the 23th of July, and I hope she received a very nice encouraging one, and if you did not write in time for her birthday, why write anyway, sweet and cheering letters. Let us endeavor to do all the good in this world that we can; it should be a pleasure as well as a duty to brighter and cheer our fellow travelers on the road of life, and remember:

"Just a little sunshine makes the roses grow; In the darkened places flowers begin to show."

"Just a little sunshine makes the roses grow; In the darkened places flowers begin to show."

So let us all be sunbeams and brighten and cheer so let us an be sunocams and origine and cheek the tired and weary, that are drooping by the wayside, pointing them to that Homeland shore where all is brighter still and suffering is unknown. Let us, however, help them to enjoy this life as well as to be ready for that better one.

MRS. OLIVE DUCHARM, 222 2nd St., Santa Ross.

Sonoma Co., Cal.

MRS. OLIVE DUCHARM, 222 2nd St., Santa Ross., Sonoma Co., Cal.

My Drar Mrs. Wilkinson:

I have been a reader of Comport ever since I learned my a, b, c's. I caunot say like so many do that I like the sisters' corner best, for each department is good in its own way, and I enjoy them all. I have been an invalid for nearly a year, and last spring I lost my little baby; it died without ever opening its eyes to the light of this world. It is far better off I know, but it was so hard, so bitterly hard to give it up. I used to enjoy all outdoor exercise, and could walk miles and miles, but I can never do it again for I am partially paralyzed. I have but little use of my hands and can hardly walk. I try to be patient and say, "thy will be done," but it is hard for one so young, as I to be deprived of all that goes to make life bright and cheerful.

I am a writer, with some success, and a hope of better things for the future. I have been married a short time, only a year, and we have lived with my parents, so I have had no experience in house-keeping. I am a very good cook and have tried a number of Comfort's recipes.

Betta Sweeny. You say truly "there are no ghosts," but it is equally true that the spirit of the dead comes to us, some of us are gifted with eyes to see, some of us are not. That is one of the gifts God gave to me and for which I thank him. Any of you who wish to know more about spiritualism and will write inclosing stamp, I will try and answer to the best of my ability.

I wonder how many of you are interested in autographs? I am and should like for everybody to send me a scrap of paper with their name and a verse or bit of sentiment, any thought of your own, or some favorite author. I would appreciate a photograph, too. I assure you I will treasure them as a miser does gold. You need not be afraid to send them, for I shall treat them as I would the photograph of my sister or brother, if the boys choose to send one to help cheeran invalid's cheerless days. Send me your baby's photograph with the dear l

MRS. MAY A. PAYTON, Stuarts Draft, Virginia.

DEAR MRS. WILEINSON AND SISTERS:

I have been a reader of Comport for a long while.
I think every page is well worth the price paid for the many columns of good sound reading matter which it brings to so many homes.

Did any of you ever make books of cloth for the little ones. They are attractive made of colored cambric or white, overcast with bright zephyr around the leaves to keep them from fraying or curling, and put on a back of table oilcloth. Fill with pictures from magazines, seed catalogues, and fruit cans, or any pictures that will interest the little ones.

would some of the sisters send me some pieces for a patchwork quilt. I am making one for my baby's crib, and I will try and return the favor any baby's crib, and I will try and return the ravor any way you wish.

I enjoy cooking and have some very nice recipes, and try the sisters' recipes every month.
I will send two of my tested recipes, Lemon Queens and Mocha Tart.
I have some nice postals of the great disaster that befell our lovely city; I will be very glad to send them to anybody who wishes them.

MRS. JOHN LYNCH, 524 1-2 Noe Street, San Francisco. Cal.

DEAR COMPORT SISTERS:

Your letters are all read with much interest.

A good way to curl ostrich plumes and boas is to hang in a sunny window. They will fluff up beautifully.

As it will be nearly time for Christmas presents when this is published I'll send a few hints of home-made articles.

For the laughter-loving friends why not cut out all the comical sayings you can find and paste in a small album labled, "Book of Laughter." They are fine for dreary days. Butchers' linen at fitteen cents per yard can be used in many ways, hemstitched, embroidered, etc.

Get some lavender flowers and make large pads of silkolene with the flowers in for bureau drawers.

Get some lavender nowers and make large pads of silkolene with the flowers in for bureau drawers, or any sachet can be used of course.

Take an old tin pail and cover with putty and press pieces of broken crockery closely all over it. Gild between pieces and you have the prettiest Mosaic jardeniere with hardly any cost. An old tray can be used the same way and make a placque for the wall, or easel.

I could give more hints, but I am afraid my letter is too long.

D. A. FANEY, Lynbrook, N. Y.

Is too long.

D. A. Faney, Lynbrook, N. Y.

DEAR FRIENDS:

Comfort is a dear little magazine and I would not be without it. It is indeed a comfort to me, and to many others, I am sure, especially to those who are afflicted and unable to get around. To those persons, confined to their beds and chairs, and shut-in from all active pursuits year after year, the helpful and interesting letters of the readers, are what an oasis in the desert is to the thirsty wanderer; and the fancy work department and entertaining stories brighten many an otherwise lonely hour. And it means so much to shut-in people to have their wants made known. I know, for I am a shut-in.

Now, my friend, you have never printed any requests for me before, and I've never had a real letter party; so will you please ask the many readers of Comfort to give me a shower of letters on Christmas day, Dec. 25th, and to send me crochet patterns. I'll answer as many letters as possible, but those inclosing a stamp will be sure of a prompt reply.

Miss Edith E. Sholl, 77 Newton Ave., L. I. City,

Now, my friend, you have never printed any redetermined for the sails. Is it not hard, sisters, for just think his mother may die before he comes back. So for our sakes please pray for his safe return.

I like the song department in our paper; who can send me the song, "Don't Cry Little Girl, Don't Cry." I would be very pleased to receive it, and will return the kindness in some way.

This is my favorite cake recipe:
One cup of sugar, one half cup of butter, one half cup of milk, whitas of four eggs, two scant cups of Sour, one rounding temporal of baking powder.

Now, my friend, you have never printed any redeasts for me before, and I've never had a real letter party; so will you please ask the many readers of Comport to give me a shower of letters on Christmas day, Dec. 25th, and to send me crochet patterns. I'll answer as many letters as possible, but those inclosing a stamp will be sure of a prompt reply.

Miss Edith E. Sholl, 77 Newton Ave., L. I. City, N. Y.

Dear Sisters:

As I never see any letters from this part of Arkansas, I will write a short one. I have been a comstant reader of Comport for six years. I think we have a great little paper, so much valuable information it brings to us every month. I would like to correspond with some of the people in the South as I am thinking of going there. My father has bronchitis, so the oold winters here are bad for him. I hope this may chance to meet some eye that will inform me of the best place to go to for my father's health. I would like to get where he can get the sea breeze, and I would like to correspond with some doctor in some of the warmer states on this subject. Please tell me all about the chances for a girl to get work, etc. I can do most any kind of work in the house or out of doors.

DELLA WILLIAMS, Watalula, Arkansas.

Letters of Thanks

DRAR COMPORT SISTERS:

DEAR COMPORT SISTERS:

I want to thank all those who have answered my request in regard to sending quilt blocks, and literature. I have certainly received some good papers, but I am sorry to say that my husband has been so sick that he could not read them. He has been sick for fourteen months, and has been worse for about five weeks. I am thankful to say that since I wrote my first letter he has professed religion, and has been baptized.

I have had a hard time since he has been sick, all the work to do. The horse, the cows, the hogs, and the chickens to feed, the milking, the churning, and all the inside work to do, besides my husband to wait upon.

I find a great deal of comfort in reading the contents of our dear, little paper, when I have time.

read it.

May God bless all the readers, and especially the dear shut-ins. Pray for me, and the restoration of my dear husband's health.

MES. W. F. WILKERSON, Montpelier, Va. dea

DEAR SISTERS OF COMPORT:
I cannot say too much in praise of this monthly visitor. In response to my request in the May number, I received over two hundred letters, all of which I answered, and from among them I have which I answered, and from among them I have secured several good correspondents, one letter written in red ink, from a doctor in South Carolina, remains unanswered, as my little girl destroyed it while I was reading another, so if you see this, doctor, please excuse me for not writing.

I notice many say "send stamped envelopes for reply." I do not think this fair for one to pay the postage both ways; how many agree with me, of course, I except the invalids and shut-ins.

I expect to move to Mississippi soon, and when settled will tell you how I like my new home.

DEAR SISTERS:

DEAR SISTERS:

I have moved from Dogwood, Ala., and while sending my new address, I also wish to thank all who have in any way cheered and brightened my suffering life. Success to Comport.

Miss C. A. Barger, Box 91, Montevallo, Ala.

Requests from Shut-ins

DEAR SISTERS:

I come from a little town of four hundred and fifty inhabitants, situated about sixty miles from the coast, and seven from the Ohoopee river. I am a shut-in and through Comport have become greatly interested in drawmork. Will some of the sisters who do it send me samples. I would certainly appreciate it and only wish I could say I will return the favor, but think I could.

Hoping all of this large band will spend a happy Christmas and enjoy a bright New Year, I remain, MRS. B. KENNEDY, Collins, Gs.

MRS. B. KENNEDY, COHINS, GR.

DEAR SISTERS:

I have been an invalid for three years, and they seem long years to me, for there is so little I can do to pass the time. I am the youngest of fourteen children and am twenty-nine years old. I enjoy this circle and should appreciate letters. I will answer all containing stamps. I would also like pieces of slik or velvet, twelve by twelve inches square.

May God be with you all through the trials of this life and give you help and strength is the wish of your suffering sister,

"Tyrussie Stogsdell, Bent, Ky.

DEAR SISTERS:

I can sympathize with you all. I thought I was heavily afflicted till I read of so many others, so very much worse off. I can walk with crutches and manage to do most of my work and sewing, though I have curvature of the spine, and am badly out of shape.

As I have seen requests for California beer seeds thought I would offer some to the sisters. I also have fly poison. I will give seeds to all sending stamps and addressed envelopes.

This paper is truly a comfort to cripples and shut-ins. I always watch auxiously for its coming. MRS. CLEMEN SMITH, Mandeville, R. F. D., 1, Ga. DEAR SISTERS:

MRS. CLEMEN SMITH, Mandeville, R. F. D., 1, Ga.
DEAR SISTERS:

I am a helpless invalid, and haven't walked for two years. I am: twenty-six years old. I would gladly appreciate silk pieces, crochet thread, reading matter or anything to pass away the lonely hours.
MARY L. Anderson, Farmington, New Mex.
Miss Eugenia Moon. Cody, Va., a sufferer confined to the house, asks to be remembered by the sisters in any way.

in any way.

Will the many readers of Comport kindly send reading matter and little gifts to Mrs. Charles Davis of Bristol, New Hampshire. She is a widow and suffers much pain from rheumatism; especially in her hands, and is worthy of all the help you can give her. She will be very thankful for what you send her.

wint you A Friend.

Will the sisters give letter parties to Enid M. Leslie, Germania, R. F. D., 12, Iowa, an invalid girl of sixteen years, and also Mrs. Christina Tarup, Box 19, Germania, R. F. D., 1, Iowa, a Danish woman of seventy-three, alone in this country without a relative. Christmas surprise parties would be greatly appreciated. Mrs. H. W. Rosa.

Drew C. Cochrane, Box 124, Plain Dealing, La., is a helpless invalid from inflammatory rheumatism, who needs bright reading matter, and cheery letters.

Mrs. Abbie Borrill, Delano, Minn., was paralyzed six years ago, the entire right side rendered useless; kindly remember her in any way which will be cheering and helpful.

A FRIEND.

Aggie Whitfield, Somerset, Manitoba, an incurable patient, asks for good papers or books, also a letter party, Christmas or later.

Will someone send me the novel, "The Mystery of Raven Rock," by Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth. It is the sequel to "Unknown." I will return the book or return favor in any way possible.

MISS ADDIE NEWMAN, Port Okla, R. F. D., 2, Okla.

I would like flower seeds of all kinds. I will try to return favors in some way.

MRS. FRANK WHITMAN, Longfellow, Texas.

Will some of the sisters send in their recipes for making biscuits and biscuit rolls.

VALLIE WALEER, Orange, Texas.

Miss Bertha Bertelsen, Annawan, Ill., would like March, 1905, Comfort.

would like back numbers of Comport from April to August. Postage will be refunded.

I would like to receive any kind of a little son-venir of remembrance and your name and address; should like something from each state. Mrs. Bers. F. Corry, Box 142, Greenwich, Conn.

Will the sister who sent four two-cent stamps and requested me to write her, please send her address as I could not make it out.

MES. C. A. GODARD, East Nassau, N. Y.

Will the Compour sisters help me celebrate the twentieth anniversary of our marriage, January 20, 1907, by giving usa letter party; seeds and bulbs would also be appreciated. Mrs. Belle Coss, Sprule, Ky.

Will the sisters of Componer please send me ribbons two or two and one half inches wide and tan inches long, any bright color, for bookmark. I would like one from every state.

Muss Alson N. HAT, 630 Race St., Logansport, Ind.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 12.)

The Hidden Wedding Treasure

The Mystery of the San Francisco Earthquake

Copyrigh , 1906, by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Inc.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Rosalle Bronson, one of the belles of San Francisco, is to marry Ireton Kensington, who whispers, "tomorrow evening, my darling, you will be my bride, and all the world will envy me my wife," "and me my husband," she answers. As she utters these words, John Bronson, her father, who has worked his way from a penniless boy to a wealthy man tells how he made his first fifty dollars, and that with all that has come from it in bright twenty dollar gold pieces is to be her wedding gift. Judgs Kensington asks, "Is it wise to put any great amount of money where it may be stolen?" Bronson tells the Judge not to worry. More than a million from fifty dollars! Bronson says every cent is made honestly. "Men of the Western coast have chances such as come to few. It is the Garden Spot of the World. San Francisco will be the metropolis of America." Lawrence Felton, a New Yorker, thinks no city can equal New York. The lovers part for the night. Ireton Kensington and his father start for the Palace Hotel. They meet Gerald Phayeton and Lawrence Felton, who tells Ireton his punishment is to stay with them all night. Violet Hilton is to be maid of honor and later will marry Gerald Phayeton. Lawrence Felton a startacted to a beautiful widow. Once they had been nearer and dearer. Suddenly the three are thrown on their faces and before they can rise a tall building falls, burying Gerald beneath its ruins. Ireton rushes to the Palace Hotel and bears his father out, while Lawrence Felton goes to Mrs. Roton's rescue. They hear, "This way, quick!" and looking up see Rosalie in a motor.

CHAPTER V.

THE PRESENT DAY OF JUDGMENT.

THE PRESENT DAY OF JUDGMENT.

ANY years ago, Rosalie had seen a picture depicting the Day of Judgment, and as she gazed wildly out of her window she was strongly reminded of it. Suddenly, with trembling limbs, and shaking fingers, she reached for her strong field glasses, and trained them upon the quaking buildings in the valley.

No written or spoken words will ever convey a proper idea of the horrible sight. Way up on Nob's Hill as she was, she could feel the mighty shock, and her eyes, straining through the glasses, could see the terrific havoc.

Building after building tottered, swayed, and then fell into a pile of ruins, and quicker than it takes to speak of the catastrophe. With a mighty start, she forced herself from the window, and tottered out of the house, a white silk motoring cloak thrown about her nightrobe, her bare feet in bedroom slippers. Guided almost by instinct, she hastened to the garage, and as skillfully as a man, drove her car from the building, and out into the road. Once more a thought came to her, and she almost flew into the house, caught up a medicine chest her father always kept on hand in memory of the days when he had to be his own physician, and a pair of his boots. Softly she called him:

"Dear, dear," but no answer came, and so deciding that he had left before her, she returned to her machine, sprung to the wheel, and sent the machine thundering along the road, over which so many happy ones had journeyed that very night before.

"My wedding day," she suddenly whispered, her face flaming, then turning very white, for the

"My wedding day," she suddenly whispered, her face flaming, then turning very white, for the sounds from every side made her turn faint.

"The Palace Hotel," next came from her lips, already bleeding, and she turned her wheel in that direction. Never before had such sights been borne in upon a girl's sight, and may they never again. She had been just a gay girl, with a tender uplifting of spirit the night before, but now she was a heartbroken woman, with hands like iron, nerves of steel, racing against time to save those whom she loved.

Many cried to her for help, but she did not stop.

whom she loved.

Many cried to her for help, but she did not stop.

In those sad moments, she could not think of anyone save Ireton. To rescue him, she would have trampled everybody under foot. To keep his dear face from harm of earthquake and fire, she would face from harm of earthquake and fire, she would have given her own life.

Only too well she realized the meaning of those dread words, now. Earthquake and fire! Perhaps not a single soul in the city had been in an earthquake before, yet all knew what those mighty shocks meant. Few had been involved in a city fire, yet none needed any explanation. From lips to lips came the seething words:
"Earthquake and fire!"
Over the wheel bent the girl, her long hair blowing back in the wind, her face set and white as death, and through her own lips hissed the words:
"Earthquake and fire."
Just then, with a terrible crash, the Palace Hotel, the pride of the great city, fell, its walls falling in upon the famous palm gardens, and crushing out life from many who had gone to rest in perfect rest and security.

and security.

Then there was borne in upon her eyes, her

Then there was borne in upon her eyes, her lover's voice:
"My father."
Another voice, and one she recognized, that of Lawrence Felton:
"My wife," and she understood in the light of the blazing fire, what had puzzled her, and knew Lawrence's secret.
"I pray that they may become re-united," she breathed, keeping her keen eyes in constant action, for she hoped to deliver these two loved ones into the arms of those who were seeking them.

It was terrible, and she feared that her machine would be stopped every moment, when she saw, in the brilliant light Ireton's father fall into her lover's arms, and at the same moment, Lawrence catch up the stately Mrs. Roton, and then she said in a cool, clear voice, which rang out over the noise and terror: and terror:

and terror:
"This way, quick!"
Both men turned, crazed with grief, and saw, sitting above them, in her white and gold motor, in her white garments, showing up against the murky flame lit sky, what looked like an angel, and the next instant they and their sacred burdens were in the tonneau, and whirling away, saved for the moment. the moment.

the moment.

The Judge, dressing as quickly as possible, he run into the street in somewhat scanty attire, but proved how calm was his presence of mind, for they were barely rescued, when he asked with tru they were barely rescued, when he asked with true dignity:

"And where is your good father, Rosalie?"

"He? Oh, dear's all right. He's been through too many things not to know how to take care of himself," and she laughed gladly, driving along toward her home on Nob's Hill. "If this were only New York," Felton groaned, bending over his wife, and Rosalie still smilling, cried:

"If you use your eyes, Lawrence, you'll find a'bag of medicine under the seat there."

Judge Kensington sighed deeply, then asked slowly:

Judge Kensington sighed deeply, then asked slowly:

"Where did you get this bag?"

"It's father's. He always has it in the house. A man who has gone through everything out here, keeps prepared for all accidents. Lawrence, is Mrs. Roton about aroused?"

"You took your father's medicine chest? Wretched girl, you have undone him!" stormed the old man, glad to discover a flaw, for he was hungry, dirty, and thoroughly upset.

"I undone my father! What does he mean, Ireton?" and the tears streamed down her face.

"Nothing, dear, he is just beside himself, forgive him," came the re-assuring whisper, and she started to send the motor still faster, when she was stopped by half a dozen men in uniforms, who demanded her automobile.

By William T. Valentine

"This is a private machine, and is used to convey injured people to places of safety," Ireton said sternly.

"We must seize it. The injured ones will be given shelter with the rest," came from the blue uniforms.

The young bride to be rose in her seat, drawing her white cloak about her, and said very simply:

"It and all I have will be placed at your service as soon as two injured people are put in the hospital," but she was interrupted by one of the soldiers, who said quietly:

"I am sorry, Madame, but we have orders to treat all alike," and seeing that there was no use to remonstrate, Ireton lifted first his promised bride, and his father out, and then helped Lawrence Felton with Mrs. Roton. He was keen enough to take with them the chest of medicine, and as they looked after the vanishing automobile, the sun burst over the city.

Turning toward Rosalie, he whispered:

"Our wedding day, darling," and then she broke down, buried her face on his shoulder and sobbed bitterly, while Judge Kensington said bitterly:

"That great fortune in twenty dollar gold pieces, I'd just like to know where it is now."

CHAPTER VI.

THE RENEWAL OF A LOVE THOUGHT DEAD.

Like some stricken creature, Katherine Roton lay, her head on Lawrence's shoulder, and with sympathetic tears in her violet eyes, the beautiful Rosalie laid her gently on the ground, and reaching for the medicine chest, used several medicines, the value of which she well knew, and she soon had the satisfaction of seeing the dark eyes open, and a crimson flush spread to the young face.

"I do not know where I am," whispered the lovely widow, trying to cover her face.

widow, trying to cover her face. "You are with me, dear," Ro Rosalie returned, her own face sympathetic. "But my dress," gl "But my dress," glancing with dismay at her handsome evening gown of violet gauze.

"Never mind, you are better off than I," Rosalie returned, then she said decidedly: "Heard what? Do not keep me longer in sus-

"Heard what? Do not keep me longer in suspense."

"Do you want to know?" she said, snuggling up against him, and smiling tenderly.

"Kathie, are you going to drive me crazy?"

"Is it possible that your lawyers never told you?"

"Tell me dearie, what? please."

A soft, white hand stole about his neck, a wife's smile claimed his eyes, as she said gently:

"Lawrence, my love, we have never been divorced, for there was a flaw in your bill."

"Never divorced?"

"No, but I was so cruelly hurt that you did nothing to make my position more bearable, for I was neither wife nor widow," and there was a sob in the soft voice.

For an instant Lawrence looked at her, then drawing her face against his, he said like a man taking an oath:

"As long as I live hereafter, sweetheart, your position can never be questioned," and he doubtless would have said more to assure her, had not their second love making been broken in upon by the wailing tone of Judge Kensington, who cried plaintively:

"I'm hungry. I want something to eat." the waining was ...
plaintively:
"I'm hungry. I want something to eat."

CHAPTER VII.

SAINT AND SINNER TRAVELED THE SAME ROAD.

saint and sinner travelled the same road.

Ireton had always admired his lady-love, believing her possessed of all the desirable qualities for a bride, but as he watched her flying about administering to the wounded, strengthening the weak, and sympathizing with the bereft, he realized that there was another woman within, and that he was even more fortunate than he had thought.

With other rich men he labored, performing tasks way beyond his strength, yet not feeling the tax he placed upon himself, spurred on by his manhood and athletic love of sport.

The hours flew by, and when new detonations told that water was being used to check the flames, he felt a little of the dread leave his heart, but he shuddered for fear the awful confusion would part him dered for fear the awful confusion would part him from the woman who was to have been his bride

WITH A LOW TENDER CRY, SHE SLIPPED HER ARM ABOUT HIM. It was nearly sunset, and he had been looking nearly an hour for her, his hands burned and bleeding, his face singed, and his eyes bloodshot. Here and there he came upon strange little groups, and at last discovered their meaning. In the middle of streets, by water mains, huddled in piles of debris, anywhere that promised the slightest hope of security, Ireton saw men and women kneeling to receive a blessing from one of the representatives of the Man of God, clothed in the dignity of his office. Once he overheard several men talking:

"Yes, it's much better that these men and women marry, for the men can then protect the girls. Oh.

"Take this," pressing a medicine glass to her lips, "and then you will feel able to borrow an evening coat," holding out her hand for Lawrence's coat which he had been tendering her for at least ten which he had been tendering her for at least ten minutes.

Mrs. Roton gave a little sob, and started to put it on, then shook her head.

"I cannot take it," she said in a very low voice.

"Why not," Rosalie said, picking it up, and trying to cover the dazzling arms and shoulders.

"I could not take a coat from anyone else," came in a low voice, and Lawrence shivered as he heard it, but not from the cold in a low voice, and Lawrence shivered as he heard it, but not from the cold.

"Who is it? Who owns the coat?"

The woman's face grew ghastly pale, she looked as though she would faint, then she whispered:

"It belongs to a man who was once my husband," and Rosalie, with a tender laugh, almost pushed Lawrence Felton forward, and drew Judge Kensington away, asking him something about the treasure he had mentioned, but about which she took no interest, feeling too worried about the great catastrophe.

Mrs. Roton raised her great dark eyes, then as they rested upon Lawrence's grimed face, she gave a little cry, and held out her hands:

"Darling," he sobbed catching them, and covering them with mad kisses.

"Darling," he sobbed catching them, and covering them with mad kisses.
"You recognized me all along?" she asked in a whisper.

"Didn't you?"
"To be sure, but then I'm a woman," she said

"To be sure, but then I'm a woman," she said softly.

"I can love, too," was his prompt reply.
All about them was carnage and death. A mighty city was being devoured by earthquake and flames, and yet these two, once husband and wife, now reunited, saw nothing of what was going on, but begged the other for forgiveness, and vowed never to be parted again.

"As soon as we can find a prescher or instice of to be parted again.

"As soon as we can find a preacher or justice of the peace, we'll be married again. I cannot endure life without you, and if you can forgive my cruelty, if you can!" wonder if I can forgive?" Katherine said half

"I wonder if I can forgive?" Katherine said half coyly.

"Tell me, tell me?" Lawrence cried, carefully wrapping his coat about her, and wondering if a man ever had so lovely a wife before.

"There is no real need," came from the lips of her who had so long been known as Mrs. Roton.

"Yes, darling there is, because through my blind way of acting, we really are not husband and wife."

Katherine hesitated, then asked, with an entrancing expression on her sweet face:

"Then you never heard?"

"You bet, this is the kind of work that tries out the good in both sexes. A woman who is unselfish and forgets herself to aid another can be trusted, so can she trust a man of refinement who works side by side with a day laborer, and has nothing to say about caste distinctions," and Ireton recognized in the first speaker, a bank president, and in the other a labor leader.

Perhaps it was only then that the idea came to him; perhaps it had been there all day, although unrecognized, but suddenly it sprung into being, and he started almost on a run for Rosalie.

According to their plans she was to have become his bride that night at eight, and not even an earthquake should prevent.

"Our match was made in Heaven," he said to himself, "and not even Heaven shall intervene." but it seemed as though he would never find her. On and on he went. Intruding into family groups, always welcomed, for people facing such a calamity are akin with the world, but he could not discover his promised bride.

"I know her, she is an angel," came from many throats, but none could give the now frantic man any instructions, until at last one, draped in a shawl, with his feet in golf bags, said in a voice sadly out of gear with his costume, so cultured was it, for he was a leading singer:

"I saw her at four o'clock, moving toward Telegraph Hill, helping Judge Kensington. Know her? Why boy, I knew her when both of you were in nurse's hands."

Telegraph Hill! Oh that was so far away. On the opposite side of the city, and he was weary and worn, but he must find her and guard her. On he stumbled, a blood-red mist before his eyes, his hands clutching out before him, when a soft clasp of his arm, made him stop, and he gazed vacantly into Mrs. Roton's eyes.

marry, for the men can then protect the girls. Oh, no, that one never saw the girl until they were thrown together in the morning's work," and the other replied:

"You bet, this is the kind of work that tries out the good in both sexes. A woman who is unselfish and forgets herself to aid another can be trusted,

"You?" he gasped, and he looked long at the

"You?" he gasped, and he looked long at the woman.

"Yes, I'm here, and I have poor Lawrence over here with me. My friend, we want to be married again, get us a clergyman."

"You married," he whispered. Somehow it did not seem quite delicate for Felton to marry a third time, and especially when his second wife was still living.

"We thought we were divorced, but now we see that was wrong, and that we still love each other," she said bravely, and Ireton, with a quick, half mad cry caught both her hands, saying delightedly:

"Of course you must, but, my dear, Rosalie and I must marry, too."

"Yes, of course, but where is Rosalie?" Mrs. Roton asked wearily.

"Where? That is just it. Where is she, I am mad," and Ireton stumbled, then fell heavily to the ground.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE PURIFICATION OF SOULS.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE PURIFICATION OF SOULS.

As Rosalie heard poor, old Judge Kensington, whom she had known as so honored and dignified a member of the bench, wailing for iood, she regained her self-possession, and reaching into the medicine chest, took out several little biscuits, which contained great sustaining properties and slipped them into his hands.

"I want food," moaned the old man pettishly, "not pills."

Rosalie gave a merry laugh:
"Nonsense, Judge," she said gayly, "you know that my father never made a mistake about such matters. Eat the biscuits, and you will be better right away," and the Judge knowing that she spoke the truth, ate the biscuits, grumbling all the while over the fact that he was to be found in dressing-gown, at nine o'clock in the morning.
"Never mind, Judge," she said sweetly, as she labored among the dead and dying, "it is comfortable for you," and this helped him a little, for he realized that a good many of the lost in the streets would have given a little fortune to be as well clothed.

While grumbling that his son failed to give him undivided attention, he absorbed all he could of Rosalie, and pleasantly informed her that he felt that his son was to be congratulated:
"Why?" Rosalie asked, laughing at his serious voice.

"Because I approve of you," the Judge returned, then asked in the rest learner.

Rosalie, and pleasantly informed her that he felt that his son was to be congratulated:

"Why?" Rosalie asked, laughing at his serious voice.

"Because I approve of you," the Judge returned, then asked in the next breath:

"Where is your father?"

"In a safe place, father knows how to take care of himself," was her reply, as she rejoiced that she had such a father. Other women might have to care for men of his age, but not she, for John Bronson had passed through too much not to understand California, his dear old state, too well to be harmed by it.

"I hope he is," came in a gloomy tone.

"Oh I know it," Rosalie laughed, then started off, working along the line of injured, steadily followed by the tottering old Judge.

Soldiers and physicians spoke in-words of praise of this tall, strong young girl, who could do the work of three, and never seemed weary. All the time, too, she was followed by her future father-in-law, and no one tried to separate them, although there were many who wished that the hitherto dignified judge possessed some of the qualities he admired in Rosalie.

Gradually the soft grays of evening began to shadow the scene of frightful carnage, and there were those who lost sight of Rosalie and her whining body guard, yet all could testify that Judge Kensington was with her, for each had heard his supplications, as he begged her to keep away from the common people, and her cheery voice replyin that it would be difficult to discover social status in the strangely dressed crowds which thronged the streets.

Some had, like the Judge himself, caught up the graments lying near the bed. Others had not un-in the strangely dressed crowds which thronged the streets.

Some had, like the Judge himself, caught up the garments lying near the bed. Others had not undressed, as was the case with Mrs. Roton, who was sitting by her window thinking about her husband, and wondering if they would ever be brought together again. There were many who were so frightened that they had rushed out in nightrobes, while still others had managed to loot from those more fortunate. It was a day none would ever forget, and through it all Rosalie had worked steadily, always trying to guide her ill-tempered charge back to the spot where they had left Lawrence and Mrs. Roton.

back to the spot where they had left Lawrence and Mrs. Roton.

Now that evening was stealing over the desolated city, her eyes instinctively filled, for she could not but think of her wedding, and of the emotions this hour would have brought forth, had it not been for the terrible moments of life and death, through which she had passed since she had been awakened from her dream that terrible morning. With the memory of her dream came a thought of Gerald, and she cried suddenly:

"Judge, have we seen Gerald?"

"How should I know?" he returned, then asking petulantly:

"How should I know?" he returned, then asking petulantly:

"Where's another biscuit?" and forgetting entirely to thank her for it, when Rosalie pressed it into his greedy old hands.

"Now tell me, if you remember anything about him?" she asked again.
"I don't know," the Judge replied testily, "you're always thinking of someone else. We, Ireton and me are the ones for you to keep your mind upon, and yet I believe you are in earnest when you say you love him!"

"Oh, Judge! In earnest! How can you be so crue!! You know my whole mind is bound up in him," then she started forward a little, slipped to her knees, gazed at a man lying on the grass, and with a low, tender cry, slipped her arms about him, and even the Judge did not need to be told that Ireton was found.

CHAPTER IX. HOW BRAVE IS LOVE.

The stone which struck Gerald, was not a large one, but when he recovered himself, he was drenched with blood, and thankfully bound up his cut head with one of the silk handkerchiefs he had used in dancing with Violet the very night before, for he realized that another day was present, filled with horror and perhaps the deepest bereavement he was to know, for "Violet, where was she, the love of his life?"

Staggering, thrown to the ground by the second shock, yet struggling almost blindly towards her home, he was delighted to find her, wandering blindly in the street. When she saw him, she made a wild rush, and was nearly trodden underfoot. With a rare presence of mind, Gerald cried:

"Go slow, Violet, I'm here all right!" but when he reached her all their surroundings faded, he remembered that in spite of the terrible catastrophe, he held his darling in his arms, and kissed her like one would a being risen from the dead.

Violet saw nothing out of the way in her lover's kisses, for her mind was filled with him, and their love of each other, and it is difficult if anyone about noticed, for when the dead still walk, and the living are missing, ordinary conventions are forgotten.

"But you are hurt, Gerry," Violet cried, calling the living are missing, ordanal forgotten.

"But you are hurt, Gerry," Violet cried, calling him by an old, childish pet name.

"Never mind, you are not, sweetheart," he replied, again kissing her, until she stopped him, to retie his head, and Gerald wondered at her deftness.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 19.)

Comfort Recitation Club

Conducted by Harold C. Hazleton

EDITOR'S NOTE.—This is the sixth article in this department and we invite you all to read the introduction appearing in January issue where first article appeared.

MERRY, merry Christmas to you, and a happy new year. May every day in it bring some good thing to you, to each and every one of you. One thing I can safely prophesy, and that is that you will all take Comfort the whole year through. I have three selections for you this month and, in order to find space for them, I must cut my letter short, so good by till next time.

Cousin Hal.

A Christmas Blessing

Years ago, while Christmas carols echoed all adown the

In their home a lonely couple sat, their evening meal to eat; "What's thy sorrow?" asked the good man of his wife, who silent wept;
"Mourning am I for our Rachel." To her side he softly crept;

Talked they long, till call for service to the cottage swift Loth to leave his wife so lonely, sadly forth old Jerry went.

Past the windows brightly lighted, all aglow with Christmas cheer. mas cheer, Meeting parents hasting homeward with their gifts for children dear;

Pausing where his aid was needed, heard a child's voice singing low All about the Christ-child, coming to our earth so long ago.

"'Tis an orphan," said the porter; "much she wanders sad and lone; sad and lone; Homeless child! I fain would take her, but I scarce can feed my own."

Jerry at his work was musing, thinking of his dear lost When he caught the sweet words ringing, "Peace on earth and mercy mild."
Surely 'twas a time for mercy. Quick to think and act, ne said,

"To my home I'll take the singer: she shall no more beg for bread." As the midnight bells were ringing out upon the frosty reached the little cottage with his Christmas gift so When the good wife heard the story,-"We can't do too great a thing."

Said she softly, "Since God gave us His own Son to be our King!"

Then a heavenly guest was with them, for when warm hearts, beating true. hearts, beating true, Open to take in the lost ones, Jesus Christ will enter, too.

Lesson Talk

The above selection conveys the true Christian spirit, giving help and happiness to others. Give it in a clear narrative style. It is more effective if recited rather slowly and quietly. The gestures are simple and graceful. The selection may be rendered quite as well by a child as by an adult. In the first line prolong the word "Years" a little, to give an idea of the lapse of time. In the first and second stanzas! The your voice and expression convey the quiet sadness felt by the old couple. Impersonate their voices when they speak, letting your voice be heavy for the man and lighter for the woman. Do not overdo this, however, lest child's voice sing-you descend to the ridiculous. Fig. 30 shows you the wife's gesture when replying to her husband. Let voice and face express her emotions.

In the third verse you have still another character introduced. If the porter speaks from the left, let Jerry speak from the right. Let some difference be shown in the tone of their voices also. Fig. 31 shows the gesture when Jerry first hears the singing. He is somewhat startled and surprised to hear a child sing there. He also strikes a listening attitude when the words "Peace on earth and mercy mild" are recited. These words could be sung from behind the scene, if desired. In the last verse show how gladly the wife undertakes the care of the orphan. Also bring out the idea clearly how, in blessing others, they, themselves, were blest.

Christmas in Other Lands

Christmas in Other Lands

FOR FOUR CHILDREN.

FIRST CHILD.

From the wild Northland where the wolf's long how!

Stirs the depths of down in the ocean fow!,
And the white bear prowls with stealthy creep
To the spot where the seal lies fast asleep,
And the sledges flash through the silence vast,
Like a glittering dream, now here, now past,
On this waste of sparkle and waste of snow
'Neath skies aflame with a crimson glow;
The feet of the Christ-child softly fall,
And Christmas dawn brings cheer to all. FIRST CHILD.

SECOND CHILD.

In the homestead low in the quiet vale
Where the farm-dog follows Dobbin's trail
To the pasture lot, now cold and bare,
And sniffs with glee the snow-filled air.
In his home of busy houshold joys,
'Mong the rosy girls, and sturdy boys,
Bweet Peace descends on wings of light,
And all exclaim, "'Tis Christmas night,
The dear Christ-child is hovering near,
Let each one share our Christmas cheer!"

THIRD CHILD.

On the prairies vast where cyclones sweep,
And where sturdy men world-harvests reap,
Where the skies are such an airy blue
An angel's robe might flutter through;
And the lark flings down her music sweet,
A chain of song, each link complete;
Then a white day comes, so bland so wild,
It bears in arms the sweet Christ-child,
And hearts touch heart, and hands touch hand,
While Christmas light illumes the land.

In the land of palms and of orange trees, Whose lamps of gold swing in the breeze, Where the pickaninny's black eyes glow, O'er swarthy cheeks and teeth of snow, And the dusky hand is raised to bless The gift that makes his misery less! For rich and poor and young and old FOURTH CHILD.

Lo, want and sin

Flee from the blessed eyes of Him,
The dear Christ-child, who far and near Gives Christmas love and Christmas cheer.

-G. A. Brown.

In every Christmas entertainment there are sure to be pieces desired in which more than one child can take part. Such selections are not easy to find, and I feel sure that this one will be welcomed

"NOW HERE, NOW

she is telling, the first child pointing toward the North, etc. At the last they join hands and recite

North, etc. At the last they join hands and recite in chorus.

First child:—Show how the winter bear prowls. Indicate the spot where the seal sleeps. Fig. 32 shows the gesture for the sixth line, on the words "now here" raise the right hand, "now past" bring the right hand up, completing the gesture, as shown in the illustration. In the next line throw both hands out to show what a wide "waste of snow." Look up to the sky in the next line. The last lines are spoken softly.

Second child:—Indicate where the dog follows Dobbin. Your gestures throughout are nearly all "indicating gestures." With the words "Sweet peace descends," etc., bring the hands up and let them descend softly and gracefully. Fig. 33 shows the finished gesture. The last lines are spoken joyfully.

the finished gesture. The last lines are spoken loyfully. Third child:—The gestures here are also simple, and if you have studied the previous lessons you will have no trouble. Speak the entire verse in a bright, clear voice. Fourth child:—Indicate the "lamps of gold" (oranges of course.) Show how the pickaninny's eyes snap, and also his smile. In the firth line raise the hand in blessing. The last three lines are given in a clear, ringing voice, and rather slowly.

How He Does It

He comes right down the chimney
When the Christmas bells are rung,
When little folks are fast asleep,
And stockings are all hung,
All loaded down with pretty things,
With guns and dolls and drums;
So be sure and hang your stockings
Where he'll see 'em when he comes.

You might hear him swiftly coming, Riding on the Winter blast,
His reindeer team a-jingling
And their hoof-beats failing fast.
His furs are black with chimney soot
His beard is white with snow,
His sleigh is full of pretty toys,
You ought to hear him go!

He lights upon the sleety roof
And doesn't stop a minute.
He jumps upon the chimney top,
And down he plumps within it.
He pauses on the hearthstone,
And be takes a little peep
To see if all the curly heads
Are safe in bed asleep.

He goes about on tiptoe,
Nor makes a bit of noise,
He fils up all the stockings,
With sugar plums and toys;
And then he gives a little laugh,
Pops up the chimney quick,
And off he jingles on the wind,
This jolly old Saint Nick.

Lesson Talk

Lesson Talk

This selection may be given by a little girl or by a little boy, between three and seven years of age. In the first verse show wonder. The gestures are simple and natural throughout. In children's pieces it is better not to put in too many gestures. The child himself will feel where they are needed. Teach the little one to enter into the spirit of the piece and, as far as possible, let him give it in his own natural way. In the second stanza the child may assume a listening attitude. In the third stanza indicate the furs and beard. The last two stanzas have a little more acting. Indicate, with the hand, how he jumped down the chimney. Show how he pauses and takes a "little peep," and "goes about on tiptoe." Fig. 34 shows a gesture which may be used when Fig. 34. "POPS UP the "pops up the chimney." It THE CHIMNEY should be made quickly. The whole piece is to be recited in a bright, childish manner.

Address all letters for this department to Cousin Hall, care of Comfort, Augusta, Maine.

A STOLEN PROPOSAL

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 8.)

written to me last June, while Mrs. Meredith was there, I think."
"He surely could not have meant it, because it never occurred. Once I was foolish enough to think that he was going to, but he did not. There is some great mis-take," Anna found strength to say and then she lay back in her easy-chair panting for breath, her brain all in a whirl as she thought of the possibility that she was once so near the greatest happiness she had ever desired, and which was now lost o her forever. He brought her smelling salts, he gave her ice water to drink, and then, kneeling beside her, he fanned her gently, while he beside her, he fanned her gently, while he said: "there surely is a mistake, and, I fear, a great wrong, too, somewhere. Were all your servants trustworthy, no one who would withhold a letter if he had written? Were you always at home when he called?" Thornton questioned her rapidly, for there was a suspicion in his mind as to the real culprit; but he would not hint it to Anna unless she suggested it herself. And this she was not likely to do. Mrs. Meredith had been too kind to her during the past summer and especially during her illness, summer, and especially during her illness, to allow of such a thought concerning her, and, in a maze of perplexity, she replied to his inquiries: "We keep but one servant, Esther, and she, I know, is trusty. Besides, who could have refused him but me? Grandfather would not, I know, because—because——"

She hesitated a little and her cheeks blushed scarlet, as she added: "I sometimes thought he wished it to be."

If Thornton had previously a doubt as to the other man who stood between himself and Anna, that doubt was now removed, and laying aside all thought of self, he exclaimed, "I tell you there is a great wrong somewhere. Arthur never told an untruth; he thought you refused him; he thinks so still, and I never shall rest till I have solved the mystery. I will write to him today."

For an instant there swept over Anna a feeling of unutterable joy as she thought of what the end might be; then, as she remembered Lucy, her heart seemed to stop its beating, and with a moan, she stretched her hands towards Thornton, who had risen as if to leave her.

"No no: you must not interfere." she

as if to leave her.

as if to leave her.

"No, no; you must not interfere," she said. "It is too late, too late. Don't you remember Lucy? Don't you know that she is to be his wife? Lucy must not be sacrificed for me. I can bear it the best."

She knew that she had betrayed her secret and she tried to take it back, but Thornton interrupted her with "Never mind now. Anna: I guessed it all before and it.

Thornton interrupted her with "Never mind now, Anna; I guessed it all before, and it hurts my pride less to know that it is Arthur whom you prefer to me; I do not blame you for it."

He smoothed her hair pityingly, while he stood over her for a moment, wondering what his duty was. Anna had told him plainly what it was. He must leave Arthur and Lucy alone. She insisted upon having it so, and he promised her at last that he would not interfere; then, taking her hand, he pressed it for a moment between his it so, and he promised her at last that he would not interfere; then, taking her hand, he pressed it for a moment between his own and went out from her presence. In the hall below he met with Mrs. Meredith, who he knew was waiting anxiously to hear the result of that long interview.

"Your niece will never be my wife, and I am satisfied to have it so," he said; then as he saw the lowering of her brow, he continued: "I have long suspected that she loved another, and my suspicions are confirmed, though there's something that I cannot understand," and fixing his eyes searchingly upon Mrs. Meredith, he told her what Arthur had written and of Anna's denial of the same. "Somebody played her false," he said, rather enjoying the look of terror and shame which crept into the haughty woman's eyes, as she tried to appear natural and express her own surprise at what she had heard.

"I was right in my conjecture," Thornton thought, as he took his leave of Mrs. Meredith, who could not face Anna then, but need restlessly up and down her spa-ton thought, as he took his leave of Mrs.

Meredith, who could not face Anna then, but paced restlessly up and down her spacious rooms, wondering how much Thornton had suspected and what the end would be.
She had sinned for naught. Anna had upset all her cherished plans, and, could she have gone back for a few months and done her work again, she would have left the letter lying where she had found it. But that could not be now. She must reap as she had sown, and resolving finally to hope for the best and abide the result, she went up to Anna, who, having no suspicion of her, hurt her ten times more cruelly by the perfect faith with which she confided the story to her than bitter reproaches would have done.

have done.

"I know that you wanted me to marry Mr. Hastings," Anna said, "and I would if I could have conscientiously done so, but I could not; for, I may now confess to you. I did love Arthur so much, and once I hoped that he loved me."

The cold, hard woman, who had brought this grief on her niece, could only answer that it did not matter.

that it did not matter.

She was not very sorry, although she had wished her to marry Mr. Hastings, but she must not fret about that, or about anything. She would be better by and by, and forget that she had ever loved Arthur forget that she had ever loved Arthur Leighton.

"At least," and she spoke entreatingly now, "you will not demean yourself to let him know of the mistake. It would scarcely be womanly, and he may have gotten over it. Present circumstances would have proved as much."

Mrs. Meredith felt that her secret was comparatively safe, and, with her spirits lightened, she kissed her niece lovingly, and told her of a trip to Europe which she had in view, promising that if she went Anna should go with her, and so not be at home when the marriage of Arthur and Lucy took place. took place.

It was appointed for the 15th of January, that being the day when Lucy came of age, and the very afternoon succeeding Anna's interview with Mr. Hastings the little lady came down to New York to direct her bridal came down to New York to direct her bridal trousseau making in the city.

She was brimming over with happiness. and her face was a perfect gleam of sunshine, when she came the next day into Anna's room, and throwing off her wrappings, plunged at once into the subject uppermost in her thoughts, telling first how she and Arthur had quarreled.

"Not quarreled as Uncle and Aunt Hetherton and lots of people do, but differed so seriously that I cried, and had to give up, too," she said. "I wanted you for bridesmaid, and, do you think, he objected! Not objected to you, but to bridesmaids in general, and he carried his point, so unless Fanny is married at the same time, as perhaps she will be, we are just to stand up stiff and straight alone, except as you'll all be round me in the aisle. You'll be well by that time, and I want you very near me," Lucy said, squeezing fondly the ley hand whose coldness made her start and exclaim:

hand whose coldness made her start and exclaim:

"Why, Anna, how cold you are, and how, pale you are looking! You have been so sick, and I am well. It don't seem quiteright, does it? And Arthur, too, is looking thin and worn—so thin that I have coaxed him to wear whiskers to cover the hollows in his cheeks. He looks a heap better now, though he was always handsome. I do so wonder that you two never fell in love, and I tell him so nearly every time I see him."

It was terrible to Anna to sit and hear all this, and the room grew dark as she listened; but she forced back her pain and, stroking the curly head almost resting in her lap, she said kindly:

"You love him very much, don't you, darling, so much that it would be hard to give him up?"

give him up?"
"Yes, oh, yes, I could not give him up now, except to God. I trust that I could de that, though once I could not do that, I am sure," and nestling closer to Anna, Lucy whispered to her of the new-born hope that she was better than she used to be that whispered to her of the new-born hope that she was better than she used to be, that daily interviews with Arthur had not been without their effect, and now, she trusted, she tried to do right, from a higher motive than just the pleasing of him. "God bless you, darling." was Anna's response, as she clasped the hand of the young girl who was now far more worthy to be Arthur's wife than once she had been.

been.

If Anna had ever a thought of telling Arthur, it would have been put aside by that interview with Lucy. She could not harm that pure, loving, trusting girl, and she sent her from her with a kiss and a blessing, praying silently that she might never know a shadow of the pain which she was suffering.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 15.)

S a Day Sure and we will show you address and we will show you will be to make $3 a day absolutely sure: we absolutely sure: we absolutely sure: we applain the business fully, retuenber we guarantee a clear profits as plain the business fully, retuenber we guarantee a clear profits of $3 for every day's work, absolutely sure. Write at once. BOYAL MANUFACTURING CO., Box 1700 Detroit, Mich.

WANTED Reliable Men in every locality throughout goods, tacking up show cards on trees, fences, bridges, and all conspleuous places; distributing small advertising matter. Commission or salary $80 a month and expenses $3.50 a day. Steady employment to good reliable men. We lay out your work for you. No experience needed. Write for full particulars. SALUS MEDICINAL CO., London, Ontario, Canada.

Darken Your Gray Hair

DUBY'S OZARK HERBS restore gray, streaked or faded hair to its natural color, beauty and softness. Prevents the hair from falling out, promotes its growth, cures and prevents dandruff, and gives the hair a soft, glossy and healthy appearance. IT WILL NOT STAIN THE SCALP, is not sticky or dirty, contains no sugar of lead, uitrate silver, copperas, or poisons of any kind, but is composed of roots, herbs, harks and flowers. PACKAGE MAKES ONE PINT. It will produce the most luxuriant tresses from dry, coarse and wiry

OZARK HERB CO., Block 3, St. Louis, Mo.

Music Lessons Free

IN YOUR OWN HOME.

A wonderful offer to every lover of music, whether a beginner or an advanced player.

Ninety-six lessons (or a less number if you desire) for either Piano, Organ, Violin, Guitar, Banjo, Cornet or Mandolin will be given free to make our home study courses for these instruments known in your locality. You will get one lesson weekly, and your only expense during the time you take the lessons will be the cost of postage and the music you use, which is small. Write at once. It will mean much to you to get our free booklet. It will place you under no obligation whatever to us if you never write again. You and your friends should know of this work. Hundreds of our pupils write: "Wish I had known of your school before" "Have learned more in one term in my home with your weekly lessons than in three terms with private teachers and at a great deal less expense." "Everything is so thorough and complete." "The lessons are marvels of simplicity, and my 11-year-old boy has not had the least trouble to learn." One minister writes: "As each succeeding lesson comes I am more and more fully persuaded I made no mistake in becoming your pupil."

We have been established seven years—have pupil."

We have been established seven years—have hundreds of pupils from eight years of age to seventy. Don't say you cannot learn music till you send for our free booklet and tuition offer.
It will be sent by return mailfree. Address U. S.
SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Box 12 J, 19 Union Square,
New York City.

BY KATE V. SAINT MAUR.

Copyright, 1906 by W. II. Gannett, Publisher, Inc.

For Fattening

E have coops six feet long by two and a half wide, with yards six by ten, into which from five to ten birds are placed three weeks before killing. Fowls of a year old, when properly prepared, make good roasters; taken from the general yard, they are tough, and fit only for soup. Cockerels of ten or twelve weeks old will, by special fattening and inactivity, become plump very quickly. The roost in a coop is only a foot from the floor; yard and floor of coop are of firmly trampled earth, with no loose gravel, sand, or scratching material of any description, the object being to keep the birds as placid as possible.

Morning, noon and night, mash is fed, as it is more easily digested and assimilated than whole corn. The first ten days, mash consists of ground feed, one third of a teaspoonful of salt, one pint of boiled and mashed carrots, potatoes or beets, mixed and moistened with skim milk; last ten days, one quart of corn meal, one dessert spoonful of powdered charcoal, one pound of potatoes and two onions, boiled and mashed. Mix all together, and make quite soft with skim milk in which beef such has been boiled. Such is only about six cents a pound. Half a pound, chopped fine, is sufficient for two quarts of milk. Simmer for fifteen minutes. Feed in V-shaped troughs, as much as the birds will eat in fifteen minutes. It must not be allowed to stand before them continually, or they will become satiated. It was an old Frenchman who gave me the hint about suck, which is excellent, making the flesh deliciously tender and juicy.

After the fattening has been successfully accomplished, correct killing and dressing must follow, to insure excellence. Twenty-four hours before killing, birds are removed to individual coops, a foot and a half square, with wire netting sides, floor of slats half an inch apart, and legs two feet high. The open flooring and elevated position allow the droppings to fall through, and out of the birds' reach. For twelve hours they have milk before them all the time, but no food; last twelve hour

Killing and Dressing

The most humane and best way of slaughter-The most humane and best way of slaughtering the poor things is to have a string with a moose at one end, suspended from a beam in some out-house. Slip the bird's feet through the noose. Instruct the operator to stand with his back to the bird, take the body under his left arm, breast uppermost, the read in his left hand, open the beak by pressin; at the sides between thumb and finger, and, with a French killing-knife, stab up into the roof of the mouth. Give a quick turn to the left, and withdraw the knife. Leave the bird suspended for a few minutes before taking the feet from the noose.

Plucking must be done at once. Commence with the long wing and tail feathers; then from the shanks, down the inside of the thigh, and over the breast to the neck. Take only a few feathers at a time; grasp as closely to the skin as possible, and pull quickly towards the head. At first it may be difficult to remove the feathers without tearing the skin, but a little assurance and some practice will render it quite easy. After the feathers, all the pinfeathers or quills have to be extracted. Then hang the bird up to become quite cold before drawing; but don't delay more than two hours.

Cut off the head with a sharp knife, leaving about three inches of the neck, slit the skin at the back lengthwise, push back, and cut out the neck bone close to the body. With the point of the knife, sever the membrane which holds the windpipe close to the breast, cut off the shanks, make a straight cut from the end of the breastbone, being careful to sever the of the breastbone, being careful to sever the skinny flesh only. Continue to cut in a circle around the vent, and the bird can be drawn without any unseemly exposure or soiling of

Birds Should Be Drawn at Once

Place a peeled onion or piece of charcoal in the body, and hang up in a cold cellar for twenty-four hours. Following the above method of drawing leaves the bird unmarred, and the neck skin, being folded under the back, after the stuffing has been put in, holds it firmly in place for roasting and carving. The few stitches necessary, from the breastbone down, do not show when the bird is trussed. down, do not show when the bird is trussed. The gizzard and liver must be carefully severed from the remaining parts to avoid breaking the gall-bag, which is a small sack lying between the two parts of the liver. Hold the gizzard with the narrow, smooth line that runs on one side, uppermost. Lay the edge of the knife on the line, and make a small, shallow cut, which will reveal a gray colored inner bag, that is to be removed intact; hence the necessity for the cut being shallow.

that is to be removed intact; hence the neces-sity for the cut being shallow.

It has not yet become the general market custom in this country to draw and truss birds at once; but private customers will quickly appreciate the improvement in flavor that immediate attention to cleanliness makes, and before long, I firmly believe, the present cus-tom of keeping and shipping undrawn birds will be condemned by the health authorities. will be condemned by the health authorities. When birds are going to customers, instead of being sent in a sprawling condition, they are trussed as for roasting, leaving a piece of charcoal inside to insure perfect sweetness.

Ducks are treated in the same way, except that we give them quantities of water-cress and green celery during the fattening process. The former we have a quantity of, both wild and under cultivation; and the latter is sown broadcast, just to cut green for this purpose.

Correspondence

I have received several letters asking for the description of the Rhode Island Reds. Colorespecially seems to be troubling many of our correspond-Silk or satin pieces. Favors returned.

ents, and it really is the most difficult point to ents, and it really is the most difficult point to describe on paper.

Broadly speaking, the Rhode Island Reds resemble the old-fashioned game fowl in color, though in shape and weight they are widely different. The folks who write, expressing doubt about the purity of birds which are like Buff Wyandottes, have cause for their doubt. The pointed end of a chestnut freshly taken from the burr, and rubbed until it shines, is about the quality of color, though almost two shades darker. Healthy, lustrous feathers catch and radiate so much light, that even a well-colored bird may look pale in a strong light, or too dark in a heavy shade. The well-bred bird will have good under-color, even the quills being slightly tinted. The Rhode Island Red Club publishes the following as the standard of color:

Color of the Male

Beak, red horn color or yellow; Eyes, red; Face, bright red; Combs, Wattles and Ear-lobes, bright red; Neck, red, harmonizing with back and breast; Wings, primaries, lower web, black, upper web, red; secondaries, lower web, red, upper web, black; wing bows and wing coverts, red; Tail, main tail feathers and sickle feathers, black or greenish black, tail coverts, mainly black, but may become russet or red as they approach the saddle; Shanks and Toes, yellow or red horn color, a line of red pigment down the sides of shanks is desirable; Plumage, general surface rich brilliant red except where black is specified. Free from shafting, mealy appearance, or brassy effect. Depth of color (red) is slightly accentuated on wing bows and back, but the less contrast between these parts and the hackle, or breast, the better; a harmonious biending is what is desired. The bird should be so brilliant in luster as to have a glossed appearance. The under-color and quill of the feather should be red or salmon. With the saddle parted, showing the under-color at the base of the tail, the appearance should be red or salmon, not whitish or smoky. Black or white in the under-color of any section is undesirable. Other things being equal, the specimen having the richest under-color shall receive the award.

Color of Female

Beak, red horn color or yellow; Eyes, red; Face, bright red; Comb, Wattles and Ear-lobes, bright red; Neck, red, the tips of the lower hackle feathers should have a black ticking, not a heavy lacing; Wings, primaries, lower web, black, upper web, red; secondaries, lower web, red, upper web, black; flight coverts, black; wing bows and wing coverts, red; Tail, black, or greenish black; Shanks and Toes, rich yellow, or red horn color; Plumage, general surface color lighter and more even than in the male, free from shafting or mealy appearance, Except where black is specified, the color is a rich even shade of bright red, not so brilliant in luster as the male. The under-color, and quills of the feather should be red or salmon. Black or white in the under-color of any section is undesirable. Other things being equal, the specimen having the richest under-color shall receive the award.

having the richest under-color shall receive the award.

B. J. S.—How large should a house and flying-yard be for one pair of Homer pigeons? I only have a small lot, so cannot keep more, but would like to have a squab now and then to eat.

A.—As one pair of birds would not supply much bodily heat, the coop would have to be made very warm. Two thicknesses of wood, with an inner lining of tar-paper, and the outside covered with the same, would be necessary. Four feet by three feet, and four feet high, would make a comfortable home for one, or even two, pairs of birds. There must be two nests for each pair of birds. A box two feet long, one foot deep, and one foot high, with a partition through the middle, and an earthern nest (specially sold at all poultry supply stores) in each compartment, is the correct accommodation to provide. Fasten the box up, about a foot from the roof, at the back or side of the house. Put up a perch, and keep a drinking fountain into which the birds cannot step, in the house during the winter. The yard will do if it is as high as the house, and four feet long; but every additional inch of height and length, up to twelve feet, will be an advantage.

L. W.—Please tell me, if possible, what is the matter with my turkeys? They seem to sleep and additional inch of height and length, up to twelve feet, will be an advantage.

L. W.—Please tell me, if possible, what is the matter with my turkeys? They seem to sleep and eat, but seem to stand and sit around sleepy and dumpy, and their manure is streaked with yellow. Their heads stay nice and red. They are four months old, and did very well until a week or so ago. They have plenty of oyster shells for grit, and I have been giving them barley and the new whole corn lately. Has that anything to do with it? A.—At this time of the year I always receive letters giving similar descriptions to the above, about turkeys and chickens. The trouble arises from the use of the new corn, which causes indigestion. New grain of all kinds should have been in a crib for at least a month before feeding. In your case, another mistake is considering oyster shell as grit. If your birds are still suffering, put them on a vegetable and meat diet for a few days, and feed little until in condition.

L. W. P.—How long are pigeons profitable as

L. W. P.—How long are pigeons profitable as breeders? and what is generally done with them

A.—For the best results, not more than three years. After that age they can be skinned and stewed, but it is quite as profitable to kill and feed to the other poultry.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

Miscellaneous Requests

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 10.)

Will the sisters remember one who lost her home in the San Francisco disaster, with any kind of fancy work and also letters. Mrs. LILLY BARQUIN, Great Falls, Cascade Co.,

I have a canary whose feet and legs are getting pink and swollen, and he will sit on one at a time and hold the other up in his feathers. He cannot shut up his claws as the inside of his foot seems to be swollen. One of our birds had to be killed a ne swollen. One of our birds had to be killed a few months ago on account of same trouble, but was much worse and seemed to be in such pain. The cushion part of her feet cracked open and were raw and sore. Who can tell me what to do for my suffering bird. Please write direct to me.

Miss ELLEN BENSON, 5205 First Ave., Woodlawn,

Mrs. M. F. Russell, Nobleboro, R. F. D., Maine. Blocks of bleached cotton, nine by nine inches, with sender's name and address worked in blue silkateen in the center.

Mrs. H. Skjerven, Michigan, N. D. Calico of gingham pieces, seven by five inches. Favor re-turned if possible.

Miss Inez Sherck, Box 32, West Lodi, Ohio. Silk. satin and velvet pieces.

Miss May Rhoads, Milton, Ulster Co., N. Y. Silk r wool pieces and scraps of wool yarns and silka-

Alta Hugle, Box 5, Parkersburg, R. F. D., 1, Ill Pieced blocks of calico, nine inches square, with name and address of sender worked on each.

Ollie Smith, Piney Creek, N.C. One half yard ribbon, two inches wide, with sender's name and address. I will return favors.

Mrs. H. A. Dickinson, Box 165, Lake Park, Iowa Blocks of worsted crazy-work, twelve by twelve inches, with sender's initials on each. Favors returned.

Mrs. Mary Farley, Whitepost, Ky. Pieces o calico for friendship quilt. Bertha Upshaw, Guilford, Kans. Woolen or silk pieces for patchwork.

Mrs. Effie L. Van Alstine, Box 39, Paris, R. F. D. 2, Mich. Pieces of gingham, any size or color. Miss Ellen Meier, Spirit, Mo. Silk, satin or velvet pieces and address of senders.

YOUR CREDIT IS GOOD WHERE YOU LIVE

NO MATTER

Furniture, Carpets, Rugs, Stoves, Sewing Machines, Etc. SOLD ON EASY MONTHLY PAYMENTS.

People all over the United States can now buy their Home-Furnishings on Credit,
FREE by Mail from the Largest House Furnishing Concern on Earth,
We TRUST EVERYBODY. NO INTEREST TO PAY. NO SEGURITY
ASKED. Whether you purchase a single article or an entire CREDIT autilit, we guarantee to sell it to you for less than if you paid
ALL CASH elsewhere, and at the same time ALLOW YOU THE USE OF THE GOODS WHILE PAYING FOR THEM. A 2,000,000 HOUSE FURNISHING ORGANIZATION.

The People's Outfitting Co. of Detroit, Mich., is at the head of a chain of ten great house furnishing stores, situated throughout the United States. This immense organization, by reason of the great outlet they create, are able to demand concessions and advantages in the way of low cost prices from the manufacturers, that no other concern is able to obtain, which enables them to absolutely undersell all competitors, and at the same time give you from 12 to 15 months in which to pay for your goods. OUR DOUBLE BINDING GUARANTEE OF SATISFACTION goes with every purchase made from us. We ship every article ordered with the distinct agreement that if it does not prove entirely satisfactory in every respect, or if it is not the greatest value to be had for the price, your money will be refunded, including freight charges both ways. FREE TWO GREAT CATALOGUES FREE

Mail us a postal card with your name and address and we will send you our easy payment credit catalogues absolutely Free of Charge. Catalogue A. a beautifully illustrated book in colors, of Furniture, Carpets, Rugs, Lace Curtains, etc. Catalogue B, showing the best in our great line of Steel Ranges Base Burners and Heaters.

To give you an idea of the great bargains to be found in our catalogues and to demonstrate the adtages of our easy payment plan, we will ship you this elegant Morris Chair. exactly as shown in the bull of solid oak with claw feet and reversible velvet velour cushions or $5.35, upon receipt of a cash with order, balance payable in easy monthly installments of 50c. per month.

People's Outfitting Co., 23-29 Michigan Ave., Detroit, Mich.

Terms: 75c. cash, 50c. each month.

Miss Ollie Smythe, Box 36, Piney Creek, N. C. Silk, satin and velvet pieces. Favors returned. Miss Annie C. Yendrik, Belt, Montana. Silk satin and velvet. I will return favors.

Correspondents Wanted

Correspondents Wanted

Mary Austin, Gabriel, Ark. Ellen Blazer, Box 40, Parrottsville, R. F. D., 3, Tenn. Miss Fannie Laytham, Alburn, Ky., young people. Miss Hazel Smith, Del. Water Gap, Pa., young people. Daniel Smith, Eureka, Kans. Mr. Robert S. Landergin, 627 Bailey St., Philadelphia, Pa. Mr. Iredell V. Lee, Fairoaks, N. C., young people. especially from the; West. Thos. Lee Mann, Glamorgan, Va., young people. Everett Hughes, Box 691, Storm Lake, Iowa. Mary Ownbey, Kirksville, Mo., young people. Mr. C. E. Johnson, Box 99, Tyler, R. F. D., 1, Texas. Miss Frances Davis, So. Akron. Ohio. Mrs. Kaiser, 2nd and Arch St., West Palmyrs, N. J. Miss Margie Oloflin, Lakin, Kearney Co., Kans. Charles Claar, Springfield, R. F. D., 6, Ohio. Frank Ownbey, Kirksville, Mo., young people. Miss Verda Melbourne, 2841 N. 17th St., Kansas City, Kans. Mrs. Geo. L. Bowman, Box 24, West Charleston, W. Va. Miss J. Johnson, Box 99, Tyler, R. F. D., 1, Texas. Ida Miller, Box 24, Jamesport, R. F. D., 2, Mo. Mr. A. R. Cooper, Box 124, Melbourne, Ark. Ruth Parker, Box 477, Manistique, Mich., young people. R. L. Peters, Jr., Charleston, R. F. D., 1, Miss. Miss Mary Hughes, 1159 Wash. Ave., Racine, Wis., young people. Isabelle Taylor, Laurel, Indiana. Clarence H. Scholl, 536 Wythe Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., young people. Hattle Musgrove, Chattahochee, Fla. Miss Leona V. Callen, Beckwith, Cal., young people. Miss May Kramer, Kramer Ranch, Mancos, Colo. Mrs. Jennie Arnold, Petersburg, Ind. Mrs. C. L. Bugbee, Lillibridge, Fla. Miss Hazel Hamet, Pulaski, Ohio, young people. Mrs. Mamie P. Reagan, McLoud, R. F. D., 3, Okla. Katie Smith, Mt. Savage, Alleghany Co., Md., young people. Miss Idie Hanna, St. Amant, La., Dec. 21, 1906. Mr. Edward Acorn, English, R. F. D., 2, Ky., young people earing the surname of Sabin from all parts of the country.

Comforting Hints from the Sisters

Comforting Hints from the Sisters

To cure catarrh. One tablespoonful of black pepper, one tablespoonful of table sait, one tablespoonful of plug tobacco. Pulverize all together and snuff up in nostrils a number of time seach day.

Mrs. F. C. Prouty, Brattleboro, Vt.

day. MRS. F. C. PROUTT, Brattleboro, vt.

For hard breasts. Take catnip and fry it in lard until it becomes hard and crisp like crocklings, then strain and apply to the breasts, rubbing it in well. I have also used it with great success on a mare, ewe and sow.

MRS. M. J. HOSTETTER, Shipshewana, Ind.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE STOMACH. Use the white of an egg beaten to a froth and sweetened; it is also excellent for whooping-cough.

MRS. J. H. F.

To cure EARACHE. Take the kernels from peach seeds, tie them up in a cloth and beat into a pulp, and put a drop or so in the ear until relieved. I have never known this to fail.

MRS. E. J. PHILLIPS, Manchester Mills, Macon, Ga.

To REMOVE IRON RUST or whiten clothes, soak in butternilk a day or so. FOR SORE GUMS when baby is teething, rub wel with camphor; this heals them and makes then cut their teeth much easier.

MRS. LIZZIE YATES, Onyx, Ark.

To cure Boils. Bind on prunes, changing frequently, until they come to a head.

Mrs. H. A. Stewart, Hill City, Kans.

MRS. H. A. STEWART, Hill City, Kans.
GASOLINE FOR WASHING CLOTHES. Sisters, try this and report success: To one half tub of very hot water add one half bar of soap, shaved up, and one half teacup of gasoline. Clothes can be washed in this, after soaking or not, with one half the rubbing and will be clean and white.

MRS. HATTIE NICHOLS, Deltabridge, La.

To MAKE A GOOD STOVE POLISH. One ounce asphatom varnish, one pound plumbago, one bar good laundry soap, dissolve in one quart warm water; first the soap, then plumbago; last stir in

MRS. JENNIE LEONARD, To CLEAN KITCHEN PAINT SO it will not become shabby and dull looking, use bran water made by putting one pound of bran in one gallon of water, allow it to set an hour or so before using.

ALICE L. GURNEY, Box 128, Jackman, Me.

To wash Flannels. Put one tablespoonful of glycerine to each pail of water.

H. E. Nantz, Eadston, Ky.

REMOVE HOT GREASE from a floor, cover quickly with flour and the control before taking up.

MRS. H. W. ROBA, Germania, Iowa.

Lie down with

To cure severe headaches. Lie down with a hot water bottle applied to the spine and indulge frequently in hot mustard foot baths.

GOOSE OIL rubbed into the joints will often benefit one and relieve the pain caused by rheumatism. To cure fever blisters. Touch with a drop of sweet spirits of niter.

To remove fish scales. Pour on hot water until the scales curl up. Then scrape quickly with a sharp knife; wash in several waters, having the last cold and well salted, so no slime will be left.

To cure infant's Cold. A mixture of a teaspoonful each of turpentine, camphor and quinine, and a tablespoonful of lard is a good liniment to use for summer colds in infants. Rub in well.

MISS QUEENIE V. BLACK, Whiteville, N. C.

Tested Recipes from Comfort Sisters The writer's name or initials will appear at the end of or more of the recipes.—Editor.

Roman Punch, No. 1

One pint of lemon juice, one quart of water, one pound of sugar, six eggs, whites, two tablespoonfuls of rum. Freeze lemon juice, water and sugar, then add the whites of the eggs and the rum; turn freezer a few minutes after adding these.

Roman Punch, No. 2

Make two quarts of good rich lemonade, quite sweet, put into freezer and turn until it begins to congeal, then add one half pint of brandy, and one half pint of Jamaica rum and finish freezing. To the same amount of lemonade can be added if desired after partly freezing, the whites of three eggs (without beating) and one half cupful each of brandy and wine, then freeze.

Roman Punch, No. 3

Put into the freezer a pint of cold water, add the juice of six lemons, and two oranges, one pound of powdered sugar; when partly frozen add one gill of rum (eight tablespoonfuls,) half pint champagne, half a gill of brandy (four tablespoonfuls,) and freeze. Any of these can be made without the liquors and are very nice, or plain, every-day ise cream can be substituted.

Hungarian Goulash

If one wishes it pickled use one cup of vinegar, two cups of water, or as much vinegar as suits the taste. Now take whole cloves, black pepper, onlone cut fine, and salt; lay your meat in this; let it stand twelve hours or even longer. Then put over a gentle fire and boll slowly until done; strain the broth, and pour over the meat, put into frying-pan and let get hot; add four tablespoonfuls of flour to the lard, stir till smooth and thick, add some of the broth until it is a nice thick gravy. Pour over the meat. If too thick can be thinned with water.

WHAT SHALL Xmas?

Consider this practical suggestion—a savings bank book. No gift is more appropriate for child, relative or friend. With ONE BOLLAR or upward you can open a savings account by mail at

4 PER CENT. INTEREST with

The Citizens Savings and Trust Company, Cleveland, Ohio.

The pass-book will be mailed in a holiday envelope with your compliments, in time to be received on Xmas morning. The practice of depositing additional sums will cultivate the habits of thrift and economy, leading to independence.

cultivate the habits of turne and cooled.

dependence.

Write to the bank for booklet "A" telling more about the advantages of Banking by Mail and why this old established bank with its assets of over Forty-two Million Dollars is an absolutely safe place for savings of any amount.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES STEREOPTICONS You Can Make BIG MONEY Entertaining

the Public.

Nothing affords better opportunities for men with smill capital.

Outfits and explicit instructions at a surprisingly low cost. THE FIELD IS LARGE, comprising the regular theatre and lecture circuit, also local fields in Churches, Public Schools, Lodges and General Public Gatherings. Our Entertainment Charles of the Charl Supply Catalogue fully explains special offer. Sent Free. CHICAGO PROJECTING CO., 225 Dearborn St., Dept. 168, Chicago

Money in Poultry F. FOY, Box 2 .Des Moines, lows

Hats, and How to Make Them

By Comfort's Home Milliner

EDITOR'S NOTE:-This is the second article on Hat Making. We invite you to read the first installment appearing in COMFORT'S November number. Any questions you desire answered relating to this department should be addressed table with the front towards you. Lay a corner of the velvet over the back (which is the open space on frame, between the high points), far enough so it will go underfirmly. Then draw the velvet loosely around from the back toward the right (which will be the left side of hat), laying small plaits every inch, and when about half way between back and front, lay a bunch of plaits and let the velvet stand up six inches; draw down a little to edge of brim, and then full up another bunch, and draw this down to edge of brim, which should be exactly in front. Continue to carry the velvet around hat until the back is reached, where you started. You will have fulled in enough all along the brim to entirely use the yard and a quarter, without cutting it at all. Have it go a little beyond the wire around head size. Take a lot of pins and pin the looseness in brim and crown into creases and careless folds; this will take some time. Try it on during this process, to adjust the fullness so it will be becoming. Some faces need the yeivet yery adjust the fullne faces need the velvet very loose and fluffy at the sides, while others look better if the hat is rather narrow; it all depends upon the shape of the face and the way the hair is worn; if the hair is worn pompa-

the shape of the face and the way the hair is worn po m padour, or if fluffy and loose, the velvet can be left looser and the hat will be round, when finished: but if the hair is worn plain and parted, the hat should be narrower and follow more closely the outlines of the head. You may have to change the arrangement two or three times before it is satisfactory, but don't be discouraged, for this is the whole trimming of the hat. When all the folds are pinned exactly right, take a large needle and coarse thread and tack the velvet firmly to frame, removing the pins as you go along. The space at the left front, between the two high folds, is where the plume is put in. Sew it firmly to velvet and frame, and then lay a fold of the velvet ap against it at the back. This is all there is to the making of a toque, as shown in our initial cut, except the lining.

Linings are usually made of China silk, black or white as preferred, but a cotton lining material comes in both black and white, which wears even better than silk and is usually used on medium-priced hats. One eighth of a yard is the usual width, cut on the straight way. Run a hem one half inch wide, for the draw ribbon, before putting lining in hat. Then start at, the back; lay raw edge toward crown (the wrong side up), and sew firmly to velvet around head hole, all around the hat, lapping an inch at the back. Then with a tape needle run in narrow ribbon or galloon; draw up as tight as you wish it, and tie ribbon in a tiny bow knot. If the hair is dressed high, do not draw the lining up very tight, as plenty of space should be left in the crown for the hair.

Milliners usually have their names and addresses, sometimes with a crest, stamped in gold on silk or ribbon—and one of these is sewn into each hat lining. This is called a Tip.

It is difficult to describe clearly the puffings of velvet and the exact way the folds are laid, in making a toque, but if the illustrations are looked at carefully, our description, we hope, will be perfectly clear. No bandeau is left side to raise the hat to a becoming angle.

Now COMFORT Subscribers Can Secure an Outfit to Make the Above Toque Hat Without Cost.

In order that Comport subscribers may get the practical value of these lessons, we have arranged with a large Boston millinery establishment to furnish the frame, ostrich plume and other material to complete an outfit for making the hat illustrated and described above, so you can by getting a club of only 14 subscribers to Comport at 15 cents each, make one without cost for yourself, or to sell. As a made-up hat of this description sells at from $4.98 to $8.50 at the city milliners', you can at once see what a favorable offer it is. The outfit consists of one Toque frame, one and one fourth yards black velvet for trimming and outer covering, one egnuine, Black Ostrich Tip Plume, one eighth yard Black Material for lining, assorted milliners' needles—all of which will be sent by COMFORT HAT DEPT., Augusta, Maine, free, express or postpaid.

If you have material of your own for trimming, we will send only the hat frame—extra hat wire—enough for making two extra frames—tie wire and assorted needles, for a club of 4 subscribers at 15 cents each.

About Covering Frames

About Covering Frames

In our last article we said we would describe this month how to cover a frame plain—with velvet or any material of similar weight—which is one of the most difficult things in millinery to do well.

Use a frame with buck-ram brim, if possible; if you have to use a wire frame, cover both sides of brim with muslin, as described in last article, so the wires will not show on the velvet when it is drawn tight across them. Lay velvet face down on table and place frame on it so the front comes on the bias, or in a corner; hold firmly, and cut velvet one half inch larger than brim. Then lay this circle and describing this month a Toque Frame Fig. 1, and two illustrations of the Toque Hattmade up—which is specially suitable for a middle-aged wo m an. The materials used are a wire frame, black velvet, black plame, and lining.

One and one fourth yards of velvet, both ends cut streight, are used—all in one piece. Lay the frame on a table with the front towards you. Lay a corner of the velvet over the back (which is the open space on frame, between the high points), far enough so it will go underround head size; pinelvet loosely around the two whole and truin in edge over wire around head size; pinelvet loosely around the two whole will be the sold within and draw this down to exactly in front. taround hat until the tarted. You will have the brim to entirely use hout cutting it at all. wire around head size, he looseness in brim wireless folds; this will aring this process, to these broad-brimmed hats, sometimes a small, high crown, commonly known as a bell crown, and sometimes a large, loose crown, or Tam O' Shanter. The small crown s would be covered plain and the large ones loose. To cover a crown plain, cut a piece of velvet an inch larger than top, of crown than top of crown and lay on top and bring down over edges and sew there. Then cut a bias band one inch wider than height inch wider than height of crown; catch-stitch both edges, turning in each edge one half inch. Draw this band smoothly around crown, starting at the back, and let top edge go just even with top of crown. If a loose, large crown is desired, cut a circular piece of velvet about one half yard across; turn in edge and gather, making four or five rows of gathering; fit around crown and draw all the threads up tight and fasten. This gives a shirred effect around the crown, and the location in the start of the same and the crown, and the location in the same and the crown, and the location in the same and the crown, and the location in the same and the crown, and the location in the same as a shirred effect around the crown, and the location in the same and the same and the same as a shirred effect around the crown, and the location in the same are same as a same and the same are same as a same and the same are same as a same are same are same as a same are same as a same are same as a same are same as a same are same are same are same as a same are same ar to the hair; or a ruche of tulle or lace; or simply a band of velvet with two short loops and ends and a small buckle to match the larger one on top. The trimming of the bandeau depends entirely upon how the hair is worn. The majority of present style hats have more trimming on the bandeaux than on the hats themselves.

A SEVERE HAT. P. 3. 5.

majority of present style hats have more trimming on the bandeaux than on the hats themselves. Our next article will describe the making of petal edge, rosettes, gauze wings and butterflys, and will describe a hat which may be trimmed with this sort of decoration.

The Great Chicago Mystery or, The Man with Many Aliases

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3.)

the train, and were cordially received by the anxious Chicago dignitary. The three had exchanged greetings, and the usual common-places, when Crit settled down upon the business which had brought him from New York City.

"You say, Chief," he asked briefly, "that a gang of guns are operating here, apparently well organized, and their game consists chiefly in the holding up of small saloons and the like?"

"That's just it, Mr. Truman," replied the official, repeating:

"That's just it, hir. Human,
official, repeating:
"That's just it. They have a pretty good game, too, and one we can't break up, so it seems, but I am hoping great things," and he smiled cor-

Crit did not stop for any courtesies. His time was so very valuable, and he knew he was even then required in New York, for while the even then required in New York, for while the train was rounding the Horseshoe bend and he and Ralph were enjoying the superb scenery, a telegram was handed him, which read:

"Percy Mandeville disappeared. Think he went to Chicago. Took Sylvia Lyster with him."

The name signed was that of the president.

nim."
The name signed was that of the president of the bank Percy Mandeville had robbed.
Ralph had started when he saw the name of the girl, and exclaimed:
"Crit, that's the girl whose people wanted you to look after. I mentioned it the other morning." morning.

morning."
Crit smiled, and replied:
"It's not the first time that cases which seem very simple on the surface develop into thrilling ones," and Ralph nodded.
Crit remembered this and many other matters, as he said brusquely:
"Well,Chief, to facilitate matters, I want you to give me and my assistants a complete account of the doings. Any point that might prove of the least assistance, I want you to let me have."
"Then you'll have a good lot."
"All right, Nothing you know about the

"Then you'll have a good lot."

"All right, Nothing you know about the case is too small to be overlooked. You have been a police official too long for me to remind you of that," and Crit smiled, to soften the severity of his words.

The chief passed cigars, and after they were comfortably settled, he began:

"About a month ago, a report was made to me regarding the holding up of a small saloon on the South Side. Now, although this saloon was a small one, it was located on a very busy street, and had an excellent trade."

"Ralph, take that street, number and name of

"Ralph, take that street, number and name of proprietor," Crit interrupted.

After giving the desired information, which Ralph recorded, the chief continued:
"Right at the busiest time of the night, a young man entered and bought a drink of whiskey, and immediately went out of the place. At the time there were several customers in the place, three at the bar, and four playing cards at a table.

place, three at the bar, and four playing cards at a table.

"Not five minutes after the lad had left, in walks four guys, all masked to below the eyes, and each with a drawn cannon. The foremost one spoke quickly and brusquely, and as cool as you please, saying:

"'Up with you hands, you. Not a move now. Red, get that dough. I'm in a big hurry now, men, and I don't want to waste any time.'"
"He seemed to have a proper appreciation of Red, get that dough. I'm in a big hurry now, men, and I don't want to waste any time."

"He seemed to have a proper appreciation of the value of his time," Crit said gravely, exchanging glances with Ralph. Both men remembered hearing almost the same words in another place at another time.

"All this time he had the barkeeper covered," the chief continued, "and they said his hand was just as steady as a rock, and while he spoke quickly, he was not the least excited." "An old timer, all right," Crit suggested.

"Yes, undoubtedly," agreed the chief. "They lined the customers up against the wall, and a systematic search was made of them. Nothing was overlooked; even a pair of diamond cuff buttons were taken from one of the men."

"Cool," Ralph said in a low tone. Really the man was theirs without any doubt. His methods had not changed in the least.

"The cash register was rifled, and the man behind the bar thrust a bottle of whiskey into his pocket. This, however was detected by the leader, who made him return it."

Here Crit smiled at Ralph, who winked back at him.

"Go on with your story. Chief." Crit cried.

Here Crit smiled at Ralph, who winked back at him.

"Go on with your story, Chief," Crit cried.

"This as I said occurred about a month ago. Since that time places have been stuckup without number, and all in just about the same way, showing that it is a case of one gang."

"Same methods all through?"

"That's it, Mr. Truman, and my men can't get the bunch. Can you?"

"I think I can," Crit answered, smiling at the eagerness of the chief.

"And you'll take up this case?"

"Yes, I think I will."

"Well then, Crit Truman, if you'll solve the mystery, you'll have the gratitude of the Chicago people, to say nothing of mine."

"Hold on, Chief, hold on," laughed Crit, "I haven't caught the man yet."

"No—but you will, I'm sure. In case you need any assistance, every member of the force, including myself is at your service, at any time, (CONTINUED ON PAGE 21.)

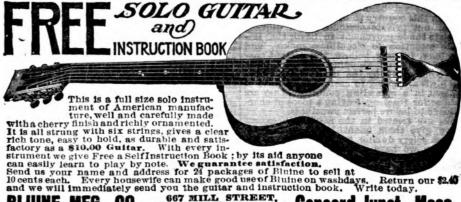

WE WANT a live traveler in every part of the United States to handle a fast seller as a side line. Liberal cash commission. Any active man can carn three to five dollars per day without interfering with regular business. CUTICLINE CO., Bath, Me., Dept. B.

991 Silk Fringe. Envelope, Gold Berel Edge, CARDS
Hilden Name Carda, eds. 200 Leve CARDS Verses, 125 Silah and Rawy Jokes, 1-Pack Acquaintance and COLUMBUS CARD CO., 131 Sr. St., Columbus, Ohio.

BLUINE MFG. CO., (The old Reliable Firm.) Concord Junct., Mass.

This Elegant Long Loose $5.50 Back Black Cheviot Coat

Furs of all kinds

Send $1.00 Deposit give size wanted and we will send you this elegant extra quality black cheviot loose back cont C. O. D. by express subject to examination, the belance, 84.50 and express charges, to be paid the agent after you find the coat perfectly satisfactory, as swell and handsome a cost as you ever saw, and the equal of any coat sold in your home stores at from $10 to $12; otherwise it will be returned at our expense and we will promptly refund your $1.00. Order the coat or write Free Special Fashion to -day for our big Free Special Fashion Book of rare and beautiful fall and winter styles of shirt waists, tailor made suits, jackets, capes and skirts, and immense assortments of dainty muslin underwear and children's and infants' garments, millinery, shoes,

John M. Smyth Co. 150-151 West Chicage

Easy Money for You. QUICK SELLER.

Absolutely new. Every woman that sews has need of it. Sells for $.50. Write immediately for liberal proposition to agents, stating experience. CHASBERT CO., Dept. E., Stoughton, Mass able; low price; everyone buys; A GENTS WATTEN.

Opportunity for you. Send 2 cent stamp for sample.
PROF. LONG, 415 Ash Street, PEKIN, ILLe

klet. Address Fine Art School of Drawing, die 816 Omaha Building, Chicago, Illa.

Souvenir Post Cards, Views, Comics, Holiday, Birthday, Leather, Specialties, etc. Post Card Albums. Best cards at the lowest prices to collectors and dealers. Our large catalog (6000 subjects) and full value in handsome samples of different styles 10 cents. National Post Card Co., 726 Logan Bidg., Philadelphia, Pa

(with reservoir and closet, as illustrated, a trific extra.) For full description of this wonderful steel range bargain, with les wer REE SIVE CATABOUR. In our own, the largest stove foundry in the world, in Newark, Ohlo, ve make every variety of the highest grade stoves and ranges, and sell them direct to the user at about one-half the lowest prices asked by others. Every stove covered by others, every small, every stove offered on thirty days free trial, and we agree to always furnish any repairs in the years to come. We cas you will have your stove in just a few days after you order it. PRICES HAVE JUST NOW BEEN GREATLY REDUCED, as shown by our latest FREE Stove Catalogue. Our Acmée Triumph Acme Renown and Acme Regal Steel Ranges have been greatly reduced in price; marvelously low prices on our entire line of stoves, including Oak heating stoves, beautiful base burners—about one-half regular retail prices. We have new stove offers that will please and surprise you, write us a letter or a postal card and simply say, "Send me your Free Stove Catalogue," mention this paper, and by return mail you will receive, postpaid, our very latest special Stove Book, with large pletures and complete descriptions of our entire line of stoves, all the wonderful low prices, the greatest stove offer you ever received. Our FREE PROFIT SHARING PLAN is also explained. Don't buy a stove as home or elsewhere until you get this NEW STOVE CATALOGUE and jail our new offers. Write today. Address, SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO.. CHICAGO.

SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO.

By Uncle John

Miniature Mill Wheel

on the outside, and stick into each a fan-shaped piece of tinor card board. Mount the wheel on a notched pasteboard box, and poard box, and pour sand or water down upon the paddles, making it revolve after the fashion of an old mill wheel. The whole device, made plain by the cuts, can be rigged up in a few minutes.

Physical Exercise

We all know that regular exercise increases the size and strength of the muscles, but few know exactly why this takes place. The reason simply stated is this. The moving of a muscle causes heat and heat in turn caused an increased flow of blood. The blood leaves after the sediment which some grows to be muscle. increased flow of blood. The blood leaves after it a sediment which soon grows to be muscle. Any other way of producing heat, such as rubbing, tapping with hand, slipping iron rings over the arm will have the effect of accelerating the flow of blood and likewise enlarging the muscle, but there is no muscle as good as that developed by natural motions of the limbs such as walking and running.

Stained Hands

If you stain your hands with anything that will not wash off with soap and water, use salt of lemons if you have it handy, and if not, common salt. Use it as you would common boap, and if you are not successful in removing the stains, wash your hands in horseradish and milk. Never use saids or alkales to cleaned milk. Never use acids or alkalies to cleanse the skin, for it has a tendency to dry it up and cause chaps.

Blackboard

A blackboard is handy for drawing and figuring during the long winter evenings.

may be made of four long strips.
When you have secured three of the same length cut small tri-angular pieces off the corners of two of them as shown in "a". Now place the three together in the shape of an inverted "v", and drill a hole, into which put a loosely fitting bolt. Nail on a crosspiece to crosspiece to keep the outside legs spread out at the right angle, and in the front or face of this crosspiece put two hooks for the black-board to rest upon. Put an eye screw in the hadden screw in the back of it about the center, and another in the single or back leg, and connect them with a piece of cord. A good wide piece of pine, painted black several times will do for the writing-board. A grooved block to which a piece of carpet has been tacked will do for an

Corns

A corn is simply a callous spot and is caused by the constant rubbing of the shoe on the foot or one toe against the other. The first thing to do is to get a larger shoe, and if possible, one without tips. Next pare off as much as possible, and before going to bed at night soak the feet in warm water and apply on the corn a poultice of sugar and common laundry soap kneaded together. This does not act as quickly as some remedies, but it is harmless and unfailing.

Game of Guess

There are few games as absorbing as the game of guess, played with pennies, marbles, grains of corn or any small object. The two players who take part begin by equally dividing the number of forfeits. Then the first one secretly places any number of the objects in his hand and presenting it to the sight of his opponent, the players have the sight of his opponent. asks him to guess how many it contains. It his answer is seven and it is found to contain ten, he must pay over the difference between his guess and the real number, which in this case is three. Each take a turn at guessing, and the first one losing all, is, of course, beaten. If you give this game a trial you will find yourself as deeply engrossed as if the forfeits were dollars instead of grains of corns.

The Coat Hold

Here is a quick and harmless way to render a fractious companion helpless. Grasp him firmly by the coat lapels and with the same sudden movement push them downward and backward till they are only a few inches above his elbows, then quickly draw them together and button the first button of the coat and you have him as helpless as if he was tied with rope. The whole thing can be accomplished in about a second, and as may be imagined, is

Won Through Death

By Orna Anice Eastman

Copyright, 1906, by W. H. Gannett, Publisher.

LICIA stopped, her merry eyes spark-LICIA stopped, her merry eyes sparkling, her red lips parted, and looked up into the face of Kenneth.
"Honestly?" she asked, with that bewitching little flicker of her eyelashes, which in another might have been termed the shadow of a wink.
"Honestly," Kenneth cried, trying to lay his hand upon her rounded arm, but failing, for she kent just out of his reach.

hand upon her rounded arm, but failing, for she kept just out of his reach.
"You love me?"
"Don't play, Alicia," Ken said sharply, his mouth trembling, "I've said it, and I can't tell you any more."
"Oh, yes, you can. I want to know just when you first felt that I was "The Only Woman;" when you realized my many perfections, and just how you summoned up sufficient courage to ten me of your great secret." and the girl's merry laugh rang out secret," and the girl's merry laugh rang out upon the still air.

'Alicia, you are cruelty itself," he said hoarsely.

Alicia laughed again. She was so young,

Alicia laughed again. She was so young, barely sixteen, and knew nothing of the strength or power of love.
"Don't, Ken, dear boy," she said gaspingly. "I'm just a little girl, and I can't take you scriously," she pleaded.
"I tell you I love you," he said doggedly, but she could only laugh, and dance away from him, her gay voice ringing out on the air, heavy with the scent of pine needles, for they were walking in the immense pine woods back of her father's house.

As the sunlight flickered through the green

As the sunlight flickered through the green needles, upon her golden head, it brought out new beauties in the sweet fresh face, guiltless of any artificial aids, and plunged the stalwart young farmer all the deeper in love, although through the very strength of his feeling he could not plead as one less in earnest might.

"Don't you understand love?" he asked, a

"Don't you understand love?" he asked, a tender tone coming in his voice.
"I love father and mother, and you, but as to wanting to be silly over the matter, no," she replied, her happy young face free from care, her lovely violet eyes unshadowed of the grande passion.
"It'll come to you some day, and hit you

"It'll come to you some day, and hit you hard," the young man cried moodly, but she only danced before him, laughing and singing, her heart as light as her little feet, which barely touched the heavy carpet of pine

Kenneth Marling had loved the dainty little Kenneth Marling had loved the dainty little creature from the day she had been shown to him, a boy of ten, in her little white clothes, dancing about the house. Six years separated them in age, but just now he f it old in comparison with her girlish thoughtlessness and he wondered if the girl would ever mature into the woman, grudging her the carelessness of youth. He had waited to press his suit until he had a home ready for her, but when this had been obtained rather unexpectedly through the death of an uncle, he could keep still no longer, and had poured out his overfull heart, to be met with laughter and jest.

"Alicia, let me teach you what is in my

"Alicia, let me teach you what is in my heart," he said brokenly, and the girl turn-ing her head saw the misery in his face, and stopped. you really feel bad, dear?" she asked

"Do you really feel bad, dear?" sne asked sympathetically.
"Of course," he replied quite simply.
"I'm awfully sorry. Teach me if you can, I'm willing," was her sudden gracious reply, and trembling, hoping, and yet fearing, he gently took her in his arms, and kissed her upon her girlish lips. "Is that love?" she asked, looking earnestly at him. .

"No," he said with a sudden passion, "t..at is only what I hope for. I cannot kiss you as I would for fear I turn your heart away from me, but, darling, I love you, and I would die for you," and his dark eyes glowed. Alicia shook her head very gently, yet decidedly. "Ken, give it up, I can't love you," she said oftly, "because I'd rather you didn't kiss

The young man's face paled, but he still kept his arms about her, whispering tenderly:
"But, Alicia, my life is bound up in you.
My darling doesn't care for anyone else?"

"Is there anything in me you don't like?" "No, but you are just Ken, that's all. I'd do a lot for you, but I only love you as a dear friend, that's all."

'Do you want me to marry someone else?' he asked, hope once more making a sugges-

"Yes, if it would make you happy," she replied without the slightest hesitation.

Kenneth Marling turned away with a groan.
Evidently there was no hope for him, and he felt that life was not worth the living. He staggered slightly, then stumbled, and fell. Allicia's merry laugh rang out, but was checked in its birth, for she understood the terrible danger.

They had been walking on the shore of a little bay, noted for its fatal quicksands. Hitherto none had been found outside the matter to none had been found outside the water, but when Kenneth fell, he sank immediately to his knees, and Alicia realized that one of these terrible spots lined the shore and that Kenneth had fallen into it.

"Ken!" she cried in horror.
The young man looked at her, then with the sweat pouring down his face tried to draw out first one leg and then the other. In vain, the dread sand sucked him in further, and he knew that it was only a matter of a few moments until he would be drawn down to moments until he would be drawn down to an awful death. "Alicia, darling," he cried. How cruel it was to die, loving her as he did! She did not answer for an instant, and he looking about helplessly gave a sudden cry of admiration. With all the strength of her strong young with all the strength of her strong young body, nourished in the open air, she wrenched off one of the pine boughs, and running, threw it across the quivering sand, until its branches were buried in the sullen waters of the ghast-

With a face set and tense with excitement With a face set and tense with excitement, she crawled out on the limb, wondrously large for her hands to have jerked off, and held out her arms, saying with a tone in her voice Kenneth had never heard before:

The cords stood out in their necks; Alicia's whole body was wrenched, but as they pulled, their teeth set, she saw that they were gaining on the horrible sand.

"Pull," she cried, straining back, then she felt that he was weakening against the frightful suction of the guickened.

felt that he was weakening against the frightful suction of the quicksand. A marvelous glow came into those eyes, and she said in gasps that could scarcely be heard:
"One more try, Ken, darling, for my sake, for I love you," then she gave a superhuman heave of her body, and the two rolled utterly exhausted into the plus needles safe while heave of her body, and the two rolled utterly exhausted into the pine needles, safe, while the cruel sands glutted on the pine branch, sucking it in until its last needle was lost, and nothing but the treacherous dimples of the brown sand marked the death hole. Bruised, trembling, gasping, they sat and watched, then as the sands closed over the last one of the green needles, Kenneth turned to Alicia, and whispered:

"Your dear words saved me as much as your strength, but tell me, sweetheart, did your strength, but tell me, sweetheart, did you really mean them?" Alicia, her lips bleeding where she had bitten them in her terrible efforts, returned softly:

"Yes, I meant them, and a lot more, Ken dear, I learned when I saw you there, that I did know what love means," and he realized that the girl had grown into the woman, and that through death he had won his bride.

A STOLEN PROPOSAL

(CONTINUED PROM PAGE 12.)

CHAPTER X.

MRS. MEREDITH HAS A CONSCIENCE.

CHAPTER X.

MRS. MEREDITH HAS A CONSCIENCE.

She had one years before, but, since the summer day when she sent from her the white-faced man whose heart she had broken, it had been handening over with a stony crust which nothing it seemed could break. And yet there were times when she was softened and wished that much that she had done might be blotted out from the great book in which even she believed.

There was many a misdeed recorded there against her, she knew, and occasionally there stole over her a strange disquietude as to how she could confront them when they all came up against her.

Usually she could cast such thoughts aside by a drive down gay Broadway; but the sight of Anna's white face, and the knowing what made it so white was a constant reproach, and conscience gradually awakened from its torpor enough to whisper of the only restitution in her power—that of confession to Arthur.

But from this she shrank nervously. She could not humble herself thus to anyone, and she would not either. Then, came the fear lest by another than herself her guilt should come to light. What if Thornton Hastings should find her out? She was half afraid that he suspected her now, and that gave her the keenest pang of all, for she respected Thornton highly, and it would cost her much to lose his good opinion.

She had lost him for her niece, but she could not spare him for herself, and so, in sad perplexity, which wore on her visibly, the autumn days went on until at last she sat one morning in her dressing-room and read in a foreign paper:

"Died, at Strasburg, August 31st, Edward Coleman, age 46."

That was all; but the paper dropped from the trembling hands, and the prond woman of the world bowed her head and wept aloud. She was not Mrs. Meredith now. She was Julia Ruthven again, and she stood with Edward Coleman out in the grassy orchard where the apple blossoms were dropping from the trees and the air was full of insects' hum and the song of matin birds. She was the wealthy Mrs. Meredith now, and he was dead in Stra

"I can at least do right in that respect," she said.
"I can undo the past to some extent and lessen the load of sin rolling upon my shoulders. I will write to Arthur Leighton. I surely need tell no one else; not yet, at least, lest he has outlived his love for Anna. I can trust to his discretion and to his honor, too. He will not betray me, unless it is Anna. I can trust to his discretion and to his hopor, too. He will not betray me, unless it is necessary, and then only to Anna. Edward would bid me do it if he could speak. He was something like Arthur Leighton."

And, so, with the dead man in Strasburg before her eyes, Mrs. Merodith nerved herself to write to Arthur Leighton, confessing the fraud imposed upon him, imploring his forgiveness and begging him to spare her as much as possible.

"I know from Anna's own lips how much she has always loved you," she wrote in conclusion; "but she does not know of the stolen letter, and I leave you to make such use of the knowledge as you shall think proper."

She did not put in a single plea for the poor little Lucy, dancing so gayly over the mine just ready to explode. She was purely selfish still, with all her qualms of conscience, and thought only of Anna, whom she would make happy at another's sacrifice. So she never hinted that it was possible for Arthur to keep his word pledged to Lucy Harcourt, and, as she finished her letter and placed it in an envelope with the one that Arthur had sent to Anna, her thoughts, leaped forward to the wedding she would give her niece—a wedding not quite like that she had designed for Mrs. Thornton Hastings, but a quiet, elegant affair, just suited to a clergyman who was marrying a Ruthven.

CHAPTER XI.

THE LETTER RECEIVED.

Arthur had been spending the evening at Prospect Hill. The Hethertons had returned and would remain until after the fifteenth, and since they had come the rector had found it even pleasanter calling there than it had been before, with only his bride-elect to entertain him. Sure of Dr. Bellamy, Fanny had laid aside her sharpness, and was exceedingly bright and witty, while now, that it was settled, the colonel was too much a gentleman to be otherwise than gracious to his future nephew; and Mrs.

Hetherton was always polite and ladylike, so that the rector looked forward with a good deal of interest to the evenings that he usually gave to Lucy, who though satisfied to have him in her sight, still preferred the olden time, when she had him all to herself and was not disquieted by the fear that she did not know enough for him, as she often was when she heard him talking to Fanny and her uncle of things she did not understand.

This evening, however, the family were away and she received him alone, trying so hard to come up to his capacity, talking so intelligibly of books she had been reading, and looking so lovely in her winter crimson dress, besides being so sweetly affectionate and confiding, that for once since his engagement Arthur was more than content and returned her modest caresses with a warmth he had not felt before. He did love her, he said to himself, or, it least, he was learning to love her very much; and when at last he took his leave, and she went with him to the door, there was an unwonted kindness in his manner as he gently pushed her back, for the first snow of the season was falling, and the large flakes dropped upon her golden hair from which he tenderly brushes the snow away as he bids her goodnight.

"Pull" she cried straining back then she "Teanot let my darling catch cold," he said, "I cannot let my darling catch cold," he said, "I cannot let my darling catch cold," he goodnight.

See illustration on first page.
"I cannot let my darling catch cold," he said, and Lucy felt a strange thrill of joy, for never before had he called her his darling, and sometimes she had thought that the love she received was not as great as the love she gave.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The continuation of this fascinating story will be told in the January number. If you are not a subscriber send 16 cents for twelve months, and read this story to the end.

ATENTS SECURED OR FEE RETURNED. Free reports as to Patentability. Illustrated Guide

Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent free.

pieces and when sold send us the 27, and we post-live, send you both the watch and ring, and a chain, laddes or naturetyle. ERIE MFG. OO. DEFT. 23. OHICAGO BEST CURE FOR SORE EYES
Testimonials prove it. Hon. H. I., Olse

Testimonials prove it. Hon. II. I. Olsea, Northwood, Ia., member of State Legislature, says: "I was nearly blind and paid $1,000 trying to get cured of granulated eyelids and ulcers on the eyeballs without success; two bottles of the Arntz Eye Cure cured me." Mrs. Henry Drehoft, 900 So. E. 7th St., Des Moines, Ia.: "I suffered from cataracts and ulcers on the eyes for 20 years. Three bottles of the Arntz Eye Cure have restored perfect sight." L. N. Walters, Hopkins, Mo.: "I suffered from corneal opacities, caused by neuralgia; got well by using the Arntz Eye Cure." Face & cents per bottle; 3 bottles, $1.25. Testimonial letter sent Face, ARNTZ OPT. GO., 203 6th Awe., DES MOINES, IOWA.

Wanted for our Pergod Steel Gassell Steel Control of the Control o

MEN'S FINE SUIT 54

To widely advertise our great tailor-ing shops and make our fine clothing and low prices famous, we will sell 10,000 men's suits of MAW SLUE WOOL CASSMERE at $4.95 each and as a spec-ial premium and adv. we will give CASSIMETE at $4.95 each and as a lail premium and adv. we will a tree with each suit at 4.95 a pair of handsome, latest style, fine fancy striped worsted trousers.

The Suit is Graham's finest color fabric affirm, considered and navy blue costimere, a firm color fabric firm to the first fi The Free Trousers which we give with the suit: $4.95 are made of beautiful dar fancy striped worsted, are ver stylish, finely tailored and pefect fitting. The is the mest asto ishing and weaderful citching offer emade and we openingly challenge at the medium of the stripe III & Send $1.00 de firm to Send $1.00 deposite equal k. Send $1.

ST. ELMO

By Mrs. Augusta J. Evans Wilson

Copyright, 1866, by G. W. Carlton.

Copyright, 1894, by Mrs. Augustus J. Evans Wilson.

Copyright, 1896, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

[All Rights Reserved.]

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Edne Earl sings "He stood and measured the earth and the everlasting mountains were scattered, the perpetual the everlasting mountains were scattered, the perpetual messes a duel where "honorable satisfaction" is obtained, and Harry Dent's alles dead. The body is carried to the wife or too he will be a state of the wife or too he will be a state of the wife or too he will be a state of the person of the person of the person of the will be a state of the w

CHAPTER XXIII. (CONTINUED.)

DNA opened the locket, and if Gertrude had stepped into the golden frame, the likeness could not have been more startling. She looked at it until her lips blanched and were tightly compressed, and the memory of Gertrude became paramount. Murray Hammond's face she barely glanced at, and its extraordinary beauty stared at her like that of some avenging angel. With a shudder she put it away, and turned to the letters that St. Elmo had written to Agnes and to Murray, in the early, happy days of his engagement.

Tender, beautiful, loving letters, that breathed the most devoted attachment and the purest plety; letters that were full of lofty aspirations, and religious fervor, and generous schemes for the assistance and enlightenment of the poor about Le Bocage; and especially for "my noble, matchless Murray." Among the papers were several designs for charitable buildings: a house of industry, an asylum for the blind, and a free schoolhouse. In an exquisite ivory casket, containing a splendid set of diamonds, and the costly betrothal ring, bearing the initials, Edna found a sheet of paper around which the blasing necklace was twisted. Disengaging it, she saw that it was a narration of all that had stung him to desperation on the night of the murder.

As she read the burning taunts, the insults, the ridicule heaped by the two under the apple tree upon the fond, faithful, generous, absent friend, she felt the indignant blood as the apple tree upon the fond, faithful, generous, absent friend, she felt the indignant blood as the apple tree upon the fond, faithful, generous, absent friend, she felt the indignant blood as the apple tree upon the fond, faithful, generous, absent friend, she felt the indignant blood as the apple tree upon the fond, faithful, generous, absent friend, she felt the indignant blood as the apple tree upon the fond, faithful, generous, absent friend, she felt the indignant blood as the apple tree upon the fond, faithful, generous, absent friend, she felt the indignant blood as the apple tree upon the fond, faithful, generous, absent friend, she felt the indignant blood as the apple tree upon the fond, faithful, generous, absent friend, she felt the indignant blood as the apple tree upon the fond, faithful, generous, absent friend, she felt the indignant blood as the apple tree upon the fond, faithful, generous, absent friend, she felt the indignant blood as the apple tree upon the fond, faithful, generous, absent friend, she felt the indignant blood as the apple tree upon the fond faithful, generous, absent friend, she felt the indignant blood as the faithful, generous, absent friend, she felt the upon the felt given the departing and the prayer the filt was often as Love showed her the figure of Mr. Murray, indicated the proper faithful the apple to make a disparation and the proper faithful the apple tree upon her features, which told that she was calmly, deliberately shaking hands with the expelled, the departing hagar of her heart's hope and happiness.

"To the mercy of God, and the love of Christ, and the judgment of your own conscience, I commit you. Henceforth we walk different paths, and after tonight the Ringing for a servant, she sent back the box, and even his own note, which she longed to keep, but would not trust herself to see again; and dreading reflection, and too miserable to sleep, she went to Mrs. Murray's room, and remained with her till three o'clock.

Then Mr. Murray's voice rang through the house, calling for the carriage, and as Edna put on her hat and coat, he knocked at his mother's door.

"It is raining very hard, and you must not think of going to the train, as you intended."

"But, my son, the carriage is close and—"

"I cannot permit you to expose yourself so unnecessarily, and, in short, I will not take you, so there is an end of it. Of course I can stand the weather, and I will go over with

"ST. ELMO" IN BOOK FORM

Edna, and put her under the care of some one on the train. As soon as possible send her down to the carriage. I shall order her trunks strapped on."

He was very pale and stern, and his voice strapped on."

He was very pale and stern, and his voice rang coldly clear as he turned and went downstairs.

The parting was very painful, and Mrs. Murray followed the orphan to the front door. (See tilustration in November.)

"St. Elmo. I wish you would let me go." I do not mind the rain."

"St. Elmo, I wish you would let me go." I do not mird the rain."

"Impossible. You know I have an unconquerable horror of scenes, and I do not at all fancy witnessing one that threatens to last until the train leaves. Go upstairs and cry yourself to sleep in ten minutes; that will be much more sensible. Come, Edna, are you ready?"

The orphan was folded in a last embrace, and M. Murans folded in a last embrace, yourself to sleep in ten minutes; that will be much more sensible. Come, Edna, are you ready?"

The orphan was folded in a last embrace, and Mr. Murray held out his hand, drew her from his mother's arms, and taking his seat beside her in the carriage, ordered the coachman to drive on.

The night was very dark, the wind sobbed down the avenue, and the rain fell in such torrents that as Edna leaned out for a last look at the stately mansion, which she had learned to love so well, she could only discern the outline of the bronze monsters by the glimmer of the light burning in the hall. She shrank far back in one corner, and her fingers clutched each other convulsively; but when they had passed through the gate and entered the main road Mr. Murray's hand was laid on hers—the cold fingers were unlocked gently but firmly, and raised to his lips.

She made an effort to withdraw them, but found it useless, and the trial which she had fancied was at an end seemed only beginning. "Edna, this is the last time I shall ever speak to you of myself; the last time I shall ever speak to you of myself; the last time I shall ever speak to you of my for me, have some mercy on yourself. You cannot know how I dread the thought of your leaving me, and being roughly handled by a cold, selfish, ruthless world. Oh! it maddens me when I think of your giving your precious life, which would so glorify my home and gladden my desolate heart, to a public, who will trample upon you

While budding at thy sight, my pilgrim's staff Gave out green leaves with morning dews impearled.

I seek no copy now of life's first half:
Leave here the pages with long musing curled,
Write me new my future's epigraph.
New angel mine—unhoped-for in the world!"

He had passed his arm around her and drawn her close to his side, and the pleading tenderness of his low voice was indeed hard to resist.

"No, Mr. Murray, my decision is unalterable. If you do really love me, spare me, spare me, further entreaty. Before we part there are some things I should like to say, and I have little time left. Will you hear me?"

He did not answer, but tightened his arm, drew her head to his bosom, and leaned his face down on hers.

"Mr. Murray, I want to leave my Bible with you, because there are many passages marked which would greatly comfort and help you. It is the most precious thing I possess, for Grandpa gave it to me when I was a little girl, and I could not bear to leave it with anyone but you. I have it here in my hand; will you look into it sometimes if I give it to you?"

He merely put out his hand and took it from her.

She paused a few seconds and as he re-

He merely put out his hand and took it from her.

She paused a few seconds, and as he remained silent, she continued:

"Mr. Hammond is the best friend you have on earth. Yesterday, having seen you enter the church and suspecting what passed, he spoke to me of you, and oh! he pleaded for you as only he could! He urged me not to judge you too harshly; not to leave you, and these were his words: 'Edna, if I, whom he has robbed of all that made life beautiful; if I, standing here alone in my old age, in sight of the graves of my murdered darlings, if I can forgive him, and pray for him, and, as God is my witness, love him! you have no right to visit my injuries and my sorrows upon him!" Mr. Murray, he can help, you, and he will, if you will only permit him. If you could realize how deeply he is interested in your happiness, you could not fail to reverence that religion which enables him to triumph over all the natural feelings of resentment. Mr. Murray, you have deciared again and again that you love me. Oh! if it be true, meet me in heaven! I know that I am weak and sinful; but I am trying to correct the faults of my character, I am striving to do what I believe to be my duty, and I hope at last to find a home with my God. For several years, ever since you went abroad, I have been praying for you; and while I live I shall not cease to do so. Oh! will you not pray for yourself? Mr. Murray, I believe I shall not be happy even in heaven if I do not see you there. On earth we are parted—your crimes divide us; but there! there! Oh! for my sake, make an effort to redeem yourself, and meet me there!" __ne felt his strong frame tremble, and __heavy shuddering sigh broke from his lips and swept across her cheek. But when he spoke his words contained no hint of the promise she longed to receive:

"Edna, my shadow has fallen across your heart, and I am not afraid that you will give me as little thought as possible; you will struggle to crush your aching heart, and endeavor to be famous. But amid your ovations the memory of a lonely man, who loves you infinitely better than all the world for which you forsook him, will come like a breath from the sepulcher, to wither your bays; and my words, my pleading words, will haunt you, rising above the paeans of your public worshipers. When the laurel crown you covet now shall become a chaplet of thorns piercing your temples, or a band of iron that makes your brow ache, you will think mournfully of the days gone by, when I prayed for the privilege of resting your weary head here on my heart. You cannot forget me. Sinful and all unworthy as I confess myself, I am conqueror, I triumph now, even though you never permit me to look upon your face again; for I believe I have a place in my darling's heart which ne other man, which not the whole world can usurp or fill! You are too proud to acknowledge it, too truthful to deny it; but, my pure Pearl, my heart feels it as well as yours, and it is a comfort of which all time cannot rob me. Without it, how could I face my future, have made, and here seal, all my own! Good by."

He strained her to him and pressed his lips twice to hers, then the carriage stopped at the railroad station.

He handed her out, found a seat for her in the cars, which had just arrived, arranged her wrappings comfortably, and went back te attend to her trunks. She sat near an open window, and though it rained heavily, he buttoned his coat to the throat, and stood just beneath it, with his eyes bent down. Twice she pronounced his name, but he did not seem to hear her, and Edna put her hand lightly on his shoulder and said:

"Do not stand here in the rain. In a few minutes we shall start, and I prefer that you should not wait. Please go home at once, Mr. Murray."

He should his head, but caught her hand and

Murray."
He shook his head, but caught her hand and leaned his cheek against the soft palm, passing it gently and caressingly over his haggard ing it gently and caressingly over his haggard face.

The engine whistled; Mr. Murray pressed a long, warm kiss on the hand he had taken, the cars moved on; and as he lifted his hat, giving her one of his imperial, graceful bows, Edna had a last glimpse of the dark, chiselled, repulsive yet handsome face that had throws its baleful image deep in her young heart, and defied all her efforts to expel it. The wind howled around the cars, the rain fell heavily, beating a dismal tattoo on the glass, the night was mournfully dreary, and the orphan sank back and lowered her veil, and hid her face in her hands.

Henceforth she felt that in obedience to her own decision and flat

"They stood aloof, the scars remaining Like cliffs that had been rent asunder; A dreary sea now flows between; But neither heat nor frost nor thunder Shall wholly do away, I ween, The marks of that which once hath been."

. CHAPTER XXIV.

"IF I HAD NEVER GONE AWAY FROM HERE."

As day dawned the drab clouds blanched, broke up in marbled masses, the rain ceased, the wind sang out of the west, heralding the coming blue and gold, and at noon not one pearly vapor sail dotted the sky. During the afternoon Edna looked anxiously for the first glimpse of "Lookout," but a trifling accident detained the train for several hours, and it was almost twilight when she saw it. The kind and gentlemanly conductor on the cars accompanied Edna to the hotel, and gave her a parcel containing several late papers. As she sat in her small room, weary and yet sleepless, she tried to divert her thoughts by reading the journals, and found in three of them notices of the last number of — Magazine, and especial mention of her essay: "Keeping the Vigil of St. Martin under the Pines of Grutil."

The extravagant laudations of this article surprised her, and she saw that while much curiosity was indulged concerning the authorship, one of the editors ventured to attribute it to a celebrated and very able writer, whose genious and erudition had lifted him to an enviable eminence in the world of American letters. The criticisms were efforts, cut out the friendly notices, intending te enforts, cut out the friendly notices, intending te enclose them in a letter to Mrs. Murray.

Unable to sleep, giving audience to memories of her early childhood, she passed the night at her window, watching the constellations go down behind the dark, frowning mass of rock that lifted its

Unable to sleep, giving audience to memories of her early childhood, she passed the night at her window, watching the constellations go down behind the dark, frowning mass of rock that lifted its parapets to the midnight sky, and in the morning light saw the cold, misty cowl drawn over the venerable hoary head.

The village had changed so materially that she could scarcely recognize any of the old landmarks, and the people who kept the hotel could tell her nothing about Peter Wood, the miller. After breakfast she took a box containing some flowers packed in wet cotton, and walked out on the road leading in the direction of the blacksmith's shop. Very soon the trees became familiar, she remembered every turn of the road and bend of the fences; and at last the grove of oak and chestnut shading the knoll at the intersection of the roads met her eye. She looked for the forge and bellows, for the anvil and slack-tub; but shop and shed had fallen to decay, and only a heap of rubbish, overgrown with rank weeds and vines, marked the spot where she had spent so many happy hours. The glowing yellow chestnut leaves dropped down at her feet, and the oaks tossed their gnarled arms as if welcoming the wanderer whose head they had shaded in infancy, and, stiffing a moan, the orphan hurried on.

She saw that the timber had been cut down, and shaded in infancy, and, stifling a mean, the orphan hurried on.

She saw that the timber had been cut down, and fences enclosed cultivated fields where forests had stood when she went away. At a sudden bend in the narrow, irregular road when she held her breath and leaned forward to see the old house where she was born and reared, a sharp cry of pain escaped her. Not a vestige of the homestead remained, save the rocky chimney, standing immemoriam in the center of a cornfield. She leaned against the low fence, and tears trickled down her cheeks as memory rebuilt the loghouse, and placed the split-bottomed rocking-chair on the porch in front, and filled it with the figure of a white-haired (CONTINUED ON PAGE 18.)

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 18.)

Where the Sweet Magnolias Bloom.

By the Author and Composer of "My Old New Hampshire Home."

SPECIAL OFFER
This month we publish "Where the Sweet Magnolias Bloom," one of our usual and famous successes, and you will thoroughly enjoy it. Knowing that many of our readers desire to secure Full Sheet Music Size Copies of this Song, we have arranged with the publishers to offer you one copy free as a club premium for only 3 yearly subscribed to the State of the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," "Gondolier," "Nilver Heels," "The music store. Get up your club at once and send to COMFORT at 15 cents per year; also we will furnish, on the same terms, "Hiawatha," "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," "Gondolier," "Nilver they at any music store. Get up your club at once and send to COMFORT. Angusta, Maine.

The publishers of the above music are Messrs. Whitney, Warner Co., Detroit. Mich. They have just issued a fine 50-page music catalogue containing extracts, same as we print here above, of some of the most popular late Marches, Waltzes, Songs, and Dances; they will send this catalogue free to all who mention COMFORT and write them at once for it. You can get an idea of all of the most popular music by running over the chorus to songs and snatches of other tunes you will find printed

FREE CATALOGUE

The publishers of the above, of some of the most popular music by running over the chorus to songs and snatches of other tunes you will find printed

FREE CATALOGUE

Copyright assigned to Shapiro Bernstein & Von Tilzer.

ELMO

eld man, with his pipe in his hand and his blurred eves staring at the moon.

Through the brown corn-stalks she could see the gaping mouth of the well, now partly filled with rabbish. Close to the fence, and beyond the reach of plough and hoe, a yellow four-o'clock, with closed flowers, marked the location of the little garden; and one tall larkspur leaned against the fence, sole survivor of the blue pets that Edna had loved so well in the early years.

How carefully she had worked and weeded this little plat; how proud she once was of her rosemary and pinks, her double feathery poppies, her sweetscented lemon-grass; how eagerly she had transplanted wood violets and purple phlox from the forest; how often she had sat on the steps watching for her grandfather's return, and stringing those four-o'clock blossoms into golden crowns for her own young head; and how gayly she had sometimes swung them over Brindle's horns, when she went out to milk her.

With a sob she turned away and walked in the direction of the burying-ground; for there, certainly, she would find all unchanged; graves at least were permanent.

The little spring bubbled as of yore, the brush

With a sob she turned away and wared in the direction of the burying-ground; for there, certainly, she would find all unchanged; graves at least were permanent.

The little spring bubbled as of yore, the brush creepers made a tangled tapestry around it, and grimson and blue convolvulus swung their velvety, dew-beaded chalices above it, as on that June morning long ago when she stood there filling her bucket, waiting for the sunrise.

She took off her gloves, knelt down beside the spring, and dipping up the cold, sparkling water in her palms, bathed her aching eyes, and almost cheated herself into the belief that she heard again Grip's fierce bark ringing through the woods, and the slow, drowsy tinkle of Brindle's bell. Turning aside from the beaten track, she entered the thick grove of chestnuts, and looked around for the grave of the Dents; but the mound had disappeared, and though she recognized the particular tree which had formerly overhung it, and searched the ground carefully, she could discover no trace of the hillock where she had so often scattered flowers. A squirrel leaped and frisked in the boughs above her, and she started a rabbit from the thick grass and fallen yellow leaves; but neither these, nor the twitter of gossiping orioles, mor the harsh, hungry cry of a bluebird told her a syllable of all that had happened in her absence.

She conjectured that the bodies had probably been disinterred by friends and removed to Georgia; and she hurried on toward the hillside, where the neighborhood graveyard was situated. The rude, unpainted paling still enclosed it, and rows of headboards stretched away among grass and weeds; but whose was that shining marble shaft, standing in the center of a neatly arranged square, around which ran a handsome iron railing? On that very spot, in years gone by, had stood a piece of pine board: "Sacred to the memory of Aaron Hunt, an honest blacksmith and true Christian."

Who had dared to disturb his bones, to violate his leat the true recommended and the story for the Asron Hunt, an honest blacksmith and clue Christian."

Who had dared to disturb his bones, to violate his last resting-place, and to steal his grave for the interment of some wealthy stranger? A cry of horror and astonishment broke from the orphan's trembling lips, and she shaded her eyes with her hand, and tried to read the name inscribed on the monument of the sacrilegious interloper. But bitter, scalding tears of indignation blinded her. The dashed them away, but they gathered and fell faster; and, unbolting the gate, she entered the inclosure and stepped close to the marble.

ERECTED

ERECTED IN HONOR OF AARON HUNT: BY HIS DEVOTED GRANDDAUGHTER.

These gilded words were traced on the polished surface of the pure white obelisk, and on each corner of the square pedestal or base stood beautifully carved vases, from which dropped glossy tendrils of ivy.

surface of the pure white obelisk, and on each corner of the square pedestal or base stood beautifully carved vases, from which dropped glossy tendrils of ivy.

As Edna looked in amazement at the glittering shaft, which rose twenty feet in the autumn air; as he rubbed her eyes and re-read the golden inscription, and looked at the sanded walks, and the well-trimmed evergreens, which told that careful hands kept the lot in order, she sank down at the base of the beautiful monument, and laid her hot cheek on the cold marble.

"Oh, Grandpa, Grandpa! He is not altogether wicked and callous as we once thought him, or he could never have done this! Forgive your poor little Pearl, if she cannot help loving one who, for her sake, honors your dear name and memory! Oh, Grandpa! if I had never gone away from here. If I could have died before I saw him again! before this great pain fell upon my heart!"

She knew now where St. Elmo Murray went that aight, after he had watched her from behind the sarcophagus and the mummies; knew that only his hand could have erected this noble pillar of record; and most fully did she appreciate the delicate feeling which made him so proudly reticent on this subject. He wished no element of gratitude in the love he had endeavored to win, and soorned to take advantage of her devoted affection for her grandfather, by touching her heart with a knowledge of the tribute paid to his memory. Until this moment she had sternly refused to permit herself to believe all his protestations of love; had tried to think that he merely desired to make her acknowledge his power, and confess an affection fattering to his vanity. But today she felt that all he had avowed was true; that his proud, bitter heart was indeed entirely hers; that this assurance filled her own heart with a measureless joy, a rapture that made her eyes sparkle through their tears and brought a momentary glow to her checks. Hour after hour passed; she took no note of time, and sat there pondering her past life, thinking how the dusty heart days gone by, now lay on the step, blinking at the sun and the flies that now and then buzzed over the golden balsam, whose crimson seed glowed in the evening sunshine.

Over the rocky well rose a rude arbor, where a scuppernong vine clambered and hung its rich, luscious brown clusters; and here, with a pipe between her lips, and at her feet a basket full of red pepper-pods, which she was busily engaged in stringing, sat an elderly woman. She was clad in blue and yellow plaid homespun, and wore a white apron and a snowy muslin cap, whose crimped ruffles pressed caressingly the grizzled hair combed as amoothly over her temples. Presently she laid her pipe down on the top of the mossy well, where the dripping bucket sat, and lifted the scarlet wreath of peppers, eyed it satisfactorily, and, as she resumed her work, began to hum "Auid Lang Syne."

The countenance was so peaceful and earnest and honest, that, as Edna stood watching it, a warm, loving light came into her own beautiful eyes, and she put out both hands unconsciously, and stepped into the little arbor.

Her shadow fell upon the matronly face, and the woman rose and courtesied.

"Good evening, miss. Will you be seated? There is room enough for two on my bench."

The orphan did not speak for a moment, but looked up in the brown, wrinkled face, and then, pushing back her bonnet and veil, she said eagerly:

"Mrs. Wood, don't you know me?"

The miller's wife looked curiously at her visitor, glanced at her dress, and shook her head.

"No, miss; if I ever set my eyes on you before, it's more than I remember, and Dorothy Wood has a powerful memory, they say, and seldom forgets faces."

"Do you remember Aaron Hunt, and his daughter Heater?"

"To be sure I do; but you a'n't neither the one vertile the one a powerful memory, they say, and seldom forgets faces."

"Do you remember Aaron Hunt, and his daughter Hester?"

"To be sure I do; but you a'n't neither the one nor the other, I take it. Stop—let me see. Aha! Tabitha, Willis, you children, run here—quick! But, no—it can't be. You can't be Edna Earl?"

She shaded her eyes from the glare of the sun and stepped forward, and looked searchingly at the stranger; then the coral wreath fell from her fingers, she stretched out her arms, and the large mouth trembled and twitched.

"Are you—can you be—little Edna? Aaron Hunt's grandchild?"

"I am the poor little Edna you took such tender care of in her great affliction——"
"Samson and the Philistines! Little Edna—so you are! What was I thinking about, that I didn't know you right away? God bless your pretty white face!"

She caught the orphan in her strong arms and bired becaught the orphan in her strong arms and

"Game of in her great affliction—"
"Samson and the Philistines! Little Edna—so you are! What was I thinking about, that I didn't know you right away? God bless your pretty white face!"

She caught the orphan in her strong arms and kissed her, and cried and laughed alternately.

A young girl, apparently about Edna's age, and a tall lank young man, with yellow hair full of meal-dust, came out of the house, and looked on in the stupid wonder.

"Why, children! don't you know little Edna that lived at Aaron Hunt's—his granddaughter? This is my Tabitha and my son Willis, that tends the mill and takes care of us, now my poor Peter—God rest his soull—is dead and buried these three years. Bring song seats, Willis. Sit down here by me, Edna, and take off your bonnet, child, and let me see you. Umph! umph! Who'd have thought if? What a powerful handsome woman you have made, to be sure! to be sure! Well! well! The very saints up in glory can't begin to tell what children will turn out! Lean your face this way. Why, you a'n't no more like that little bare-footed, tangled-haired, rosy-faced Edna that used to run around these woods in striped homespun, hunting the cows, than I, Dorothy Elmira Wood, am like the Queen of Sheba when she went up visiting to Jerusalem to call on Solomon. How wonderful pretty you are! And how soft and white your like the Queen of Sheba when she went up visiting to Jerusalem to call on Solomon. How wonderful pretty you are! And how soft and white your like the Queen of Sheba when she went up visiting to Jerusalem to call on Solomon. How wonderful pretty you are have the county. You are like your mother, Hester Earl; and ahe was the loveliest, mild little pink in the county. You are like your mother, Hester Earl; and ahe was the own of the provide the place of the provide his provide his

That she should prove competent to teach the neighbor's children had been Asron Hunt's loftiset ambition for his darling; and now she was deemed worthy to speak to her race through the solumus of a periodical that few women were considered able to fill.

She wondered if he were not really cognizant of tail; if heer the was a firled of the was a considered able to fill.

She wondered if he were not really cognizant of the fill if he was a firled been was a considered able to fill.

She wondered if he were not really cognizant of the fill if he was a power of the fill if he was a power of the fill if he was a considered able to fill if he was a firled been was a considered able to fill.

The shaft threw a long slanting shadow eastward as the orphan rose, and, taking from the box the fragrant flowers which she had brought from Le Bocage, arranged them in the damp soil of one of the vases, and twined their bright-hand petals among the dark green ivy leaves. One shining wreath she broke and laid away tenderly in the box, and and she stood there, looking at a garliand of poppy leaves chiseled around the inscription, neither flush nor tremor told aught that passed in her mind, and her sculptured features were calm, as the afternoon sun showed how pale and fixed her face had grown. She climbed upon the broad base and pressed her lips to her grandfather's name, and there was a mourntil sweetness in her voice as she said aloud:

"Pray God to pardon him, Grandpal Pray Christ to comfort and save his precious soul! Oh, Grandpat Pray Christ to comfort and save his precious soul! Oh, Grandpat Pray Christ to comfort and save his precious soul! Oh, Grandpat Pray Christ to comfort and save his precious soul! Oh, Grandpat Pray God to pardon him, Grandpat Pray Christ to comfort and save his precious soul! Oh, Grandpat Pray God to pardon him, Grandpat Pray Christ to comfort and save his precious soull can be supported by the case of the proper soull be supported by the save supported by the save supported by the save supported by t

She put her brawny brown hand on Edna's fore-ead, and smoothed the bands of hair, and sighed heavily.

"Mrs. Wood, I should like to see Brindle once

She put her brawny brown hand on Edna's forehead, and smoothed the bands of hair, and sighed heavily.

"Mrs. Wood, I should like to see Brindle once more."

"Lord bless your soul, honey! she has been dead these three years! Why, you forget cows don't hang on as long as Methuselah, and Brindle was no yearling when we took her. She mired down in the swamp, back of the millpond, and before we could find her she was dead. But her calf is as pretty a young thing as ever you saw; speckled all over, most as thick as a guinea, and the children call her 'Speckle.' Willis, step out and see if the heifer is in sight. Edna, a'n't you going to stay with me tonight?"

"Thank you, Mrs. Wood, I should like very much to do so, but have not time, and must get back to Chattanooga before the train leaves, for I am obliged to go on tonight."

"Well, anyhow, lay off your bonnet and stay and let me give you some supper, and then we will all go back with you, that is, if you a'n't too proud to ride to town in our cart? We have got a new cart, but it is only a miller's cart, and maybe it won't suit your fine, fashionable clothes."

"I shall be very glad to stay, and I only wish it was the same old cart that took me to the depot, more than five years ago. Please give me some water."

Mrs. Wood rolled up her sleeves, put away her prepared some refreshments for her guest.

A table was set under the apple tree, a snowy cotton cloth spread over it, and yellow butter, tempting as Goshen's, and a loaf of fresh bread, and honey amber-hued, and buttermilk, and cider, and stewed pears, and a dish of ripe red apples crowned the board.

The air was laden with the fragrance it stole in crossing a hayfield beyond the road, the bees darted in and out of their hives, and a peacock spread his iridescent feathers to catch the level yellow rays of the setting sun, and from the distant mill-pond came the gable of gees, as the noisy fleet breasted the ripples.

Speckle, who had been driven to the gate for Edna's inspection, stood close to the paling, thrus ville came thundering in, and the usual rush and bustle ensued.

Mrs. Wood gave the orphan a hearty kiss and warm embrace, and bidding her "Be sure to write soon, and say how you are getting along!" the kind-hearted woman left the cars, wiping her eyes with the corner of her apron.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 27.)

Cancerol has the Confidence of the People.

A record of successful cancer cures of people from every part of the Union and in every situation about the body contained in a valuable free book, which will be sent to those interested. Write to-day. Address Dr. L. T. Leach, Drawer 88 S, Indian-apolis, Ind.

oured to stay oured. Eminent judges, ministers, congressmen and the medical press declare my cures permanent. I cure after others fall. WRITE TO-DAY FOR FREE BOOKLET.

Address, Dr. W. Towns, Fond du Lac, Wis.

VETERINARY COURSE AT HOME 4 1200 year and upwards can be made taking our Veterinary 4 1200 Course at home during spare time; taught in simplest Regilah; Diploma granted, positions obtained for successful students; cost within reach of all; satisfaction guaranteed; particulears free. ONTABLIO WETERINAMY COMMESTORDENCE SCHOOL, Dopt. 10, London, Canada, ASTHMA GURED TO STAY GURED No relapse." No return of choking spells or other asthmatic symptoms. Whotsel system of treatment approved by best U. S. medical authorities as the only system known to perms nently FREE TEST TREATMENT including medicines, prepared for any one giving a full description of the case and sending name of 2 asthmatic sufferers. Address FRAME WHETZEL, M.D., Dept. L. American Express Building, Chicago.

THIS BEAUTIFUL RING FREE!

Set with four Sapphires, surrounded with six bright sparking im. Diamonds. This is positively the most beautiful ring

This is positively the most beaufful ring ever given and can be had without costing you one cent by selling only four of our large beaufful plotters at 20. We send plctures at ones, all charge paid, all different, printed in advance. We trust you with pictures until sold. You can also carn a Watch, Camera, Air Gun, etc., if you don't care for ring. PUSH CO., Dept. 71, 89 Washington St., Chicago.

Grandfather's Cure for Constipation

REAT medicine,—the Sawbuck. Two hours a day sawing wood will keep anyone's Bowels regular.

No need of pills, Cathartics, Castor Oil, nor "Physic," if you'll only work the Sawbuck regularly.

Exercise is Nature's Cure for Constinetion and,—a Ten-Mile walk will do, if you haven't got a wood-pile.

But, if you will take your Exercise in an Easy Chair, there's only one way to do that, because,—there's only one kind of Artificial Exercise for the Bowels and its name is "CASCARETS."

Cascarets are the only means to exercise the Bowel Muscles without work.

*

They don't Purge, Gripe, nor "upset your Stomach," because they don't act like "Physics."

They don't flush out your Bowels and Intestines with a costly waste of Digestive Juice, as Salts, Castor Oil, Calomel, Jalap, or Aperient Waters always do.

No-Cascarets strengthen and stimulate the Bowel Muscles, that line the Food passages and that tighten up when food touches them, thus driving the food to its

A Cascaret acts on your Bowel Muscles as if you had just sawed a cord of wood, or walked ten miles.

Cascarets move the Food Naturally, digesting it without waste of tomorrow's Gastric Juice.

The thin, flat, Ten-Cent Box is made to fit your Vest pocket, or "My Lady's" Purse. Druggists-10 Cents a Box.

Carry it constantly with you and take a Cascaret whenever you suspect you need

Be very careful to get the genuine made only by the Sterling Remedy Company, and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC."

We have just secured a large lot of Home Songs bound in Music Album form. These songs are printed on the best of heavy paper, regular sheet-music size. This 35-page book has a fine colored pisture cover and contains the following ten familiar Home Songs, with words and music: Home, Sweet Home; Way Down upon the Suwance River; My Old Kentucky Homes; The Old Oaken Bucket; Nearer My God to Thee; Afterwards; One Sweetly Solemn Though; The Last Rose of Summer; Love's Old Sweet Song; Alice, Where Art Thou.

Anyone desiring to have this fine collection of collected music can now secure the book free by sending a club of only 215-cent subscribers to this paper. Get them early. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

LADIES' HANDBAG.

place. The soft leather from which the new handbags this the new handbags this in BROWN, BLACK and GRAY is finished with a fuster which is much more effective than dull finished iesther and all seams are welted. The style, shape and beauty of these Bags leaves nothing to be desired as a FASHIONABLE HANDBAG, and there is no comparison between this Bag and any other way of the comparison between the Bag and any other way of the comparison between the Bag and any other way. The second of the landsome pubble effect of the leather is shown. Read our generous offer.

CLUD Office We have these Bags in Brown, Gray and expense carefully wrapped and protected, as a free premium strong of the second of t expense carefully wrapped and protested, as a free prentile fit for a club of only 9 yearly subscribers to GOMFORT at CENTS each. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Mains

TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY GOOD OLD SONGS

This volume contains the words and music of the choicest gems of the old and familiar songs we used to sling when we were young. The singing of these songs will not only "drive dull care sway," but bring new and continued happiness and cheerfulness into every home which it enters. It has been arranged with great care and we are positive that it is the best book of the kind published. It contains 25-0 Bongs including all the following: Good Byc, Charlie; In the Starlight; When You and I Were Young, Annie; Battle of Bunker Hill; Black Eyed Susan; Killarney; Speed Away, Speed Away, Soed Awa

Sub. Dept. THE HEARTHSTONE, 52 Duane St., New York, P. O. Box 1198.

Some Good Stories Told Comfort Subscribers

Copyright, 1906, by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Inc.

It Might Have Been Worse

It was very unfortunate that the brother of the groom should be stricken with typhoid fever just a few days before the wedding was to take place. But such things will happen in the best-regulated of families. As the wedding was to be a home affair, with but few guests outside of the immediate relatives, the plans were not altered; things were left quite as they had been arranged in the beginning. But in case the condition of the patient warranted it, the wedding would of course be postponed.

The bride-elect met the man of her heart just before they were to descend to the drawing-room be-

The bride-elect met the man of her heart just before they were to descend to the drawing-room below.

"How is your brother?" she asked nervously.

"He is quite ill tonight, dearest," was the reply.

"And in case he grows worse, the nurse is to 'phone me here. Of course then we shall not go away on a wedding journey."

"Oh, of course not," she returned. "So they will 'phone here if he gets worse."

"Yes, they will 'phone here."

* * The wedding ceremony was at its most critical point when the telephone bell tinkled loudly.

The bride-elect dropped her bouquet. The groom turned his head and watched Perkins, the butler, cross the hall and enter the den.

"Wait," whispered the woman in shimmering white, to the minister, "wait."

A deathlike silence followed. Every head was turned in the direction of the den.

A moment later the butler emerged.

"What is it, Perkins?" cried the bride-elect.

"What is it?"

Perkins halted, but said nothing.

"What is it, Perkins? Speak!"

Again her clear voice rang out. But the butler held his peace.

"Why don't you speak?" asked the troubled groom.

"It's nothing sir." Perkins now managed to artis-

"Why don't you speak?" asked the troubled groom.
"It's nothing, sir," Perkins now managed to articulate. "That is—well, it shouldn't be told now, anyway."
Shouldn't be told?" repeated the bride-elect. "Then he is decidedly worse. Oh, Perkins, speak. I must know, I must know. Don't you see how nervous I'm getting? Perkins, speak. I command you!"
Perkins cast a startled look at the assemblage.

Perkins cast a startled look at the assemblage.

"Perkins," the bride-elect exclaimed, "Perkins, do you hear me? I command you to speak! I command you to speak!

mand you!"
"Well," the butler began, "the dressmaker says she forgot to send your hip-pads with your dress, but she'll git 'em right over to you."

Papa.—"Willie, what piece of music is that your sister is playing in the parlor?"

Willie.—"That's the 'Angels are Sleeping,' papa."
Papa.—"Oh, is ti—excuse me, I thought it was 'The Battle of Manila Bay.' Well, you go in and tell sister if that's the 'Angels are Sleeping,' to put down the soft pedal hard, or she'll darn soon wake 'em all up."

Clerk.—"A friend of mine has died and he is to be buried tomorrow afternoon. I would like to go to the funeral. Can I get off?"

Head of Firm.—"No, you can't. Business before pleasure."

Obeying Instructions

Felicia was a little Polish girl. She held the position of nurse-maid in the family of a doctor. The first time she took her little charge out in his gocart the doctor's wife said to her:
"Now, Felicia, you can take the baby out riding for a little while; but be sure to stay on this street so I can call you if I want you."
"All right," Felicia said, and wheeled the baby out of the yard.
A short time afterward the doctor's wife thought she would go out and see how the nurse-maid was getting on. She became startled when she could see neither maid nor baby. She went to the sidewalk and looked up and down. But there was no out into the street. There she saw the little nurse-maid wheeling the baby down the middle of the roadway.
"Felicia" she called to her. "what are you doing roadway.

"Felicia," she called to her, "what are you doing out in the street?"

And Felicia at once apprised her mistress that she had told her to be sure to stay "on" this street.

"Yes, it was turr'ble sad 'bout Weary Waggles," sighed Tired Thomas. "He got the tremens something awful, but we thought he'd pull through, till all of a sudden he said that he was workin' an'—an' workin' in a soap factory; an' then when he lay back an' smiled so peaceful we knowed poor Weary was goin' ter die!"

That Boy Once More

Willie (at table, company present).—"Papa, Aunt's got more hair on her head than she had this morning. Gee, it's grown quick."

Papa.—"Be quiet and eat your supper, sir."

Willie.—"Pa, that's a switch Auntie's wearing on her head aint it?"

Papa.—"One more word out of you and you'll be wearing one on your pants."

Willie.—"Couldn't Auntie wear hers on her pan—" pan___"Silence, sir ! ! ! ! !"

He hailed from the old State of Ind., He left on account of the wina; He then built a new house, Bought his wife a fine blouse, After which he no longer sinned.

Rev. James M. Pullman, D. D., of Lynn, Mass, the well-known Universalist clergyman and a brother of the late George M. Pullman, founder of Pullman's Palace Car Company, possesses a genial personality and a fund of wit and humor that makes him a most entertaining companion. Dr. Pullman has traveled extensively and he is especially fond of relating anecdotes of a certain Western trip that he and his brother George took some years ago through a rough and but partially civilized mining district, in the Rocky Mountains.

After a hard day's travel they had reached a collection of miner's shanties, it could hardly be called a town, where they found both a hotel and a barber shop. To their eyes the latter was fully as welcome a sight as the former and they lost no time in availing themselves of its civilizing influence. Dr. Pullman was the first to submit himself to the mercy of the proprietor—a small, under-sized man who gave every evidence of being a newcomer in those parts, or in the language of the locality, a "tender-foot." But he was a good barber and everything was going smoothly when the door opened and there entered a burly ruffian clad in buckskin and wearing an array of six-shooters that gave him an extremely formidable appearance. Striding across the room he marched straight up to the barber and in more of a growl than anything else, asked:

"Whose turn is it next?"

The barber kept right on shaving, but shook his head toward Dr. Pullman's brother as much as to say "That gentleman is next." Muttering an oath and drawing one of his weapons he walked over to the table where Mr. George M. Pullman was seated and laying the gun down on it with mach force turned to the barber and said in more of a growl than before:

"Now whose turn is it next?"

Without answering a word the barber stopped shaving, laid down his razor, opened a drawer and took out a large revolver which was the exact duplicate of the one the cowboy had drawn. Then he very deliberately walked over to the table and leaning over brought his own weapon down on the table beside that of the stranger and looking him in the eye said:

"In this here shop gentlemens takes their turns."

The bluff was called.

STUB ENDS OF INFORMATION

The Chinese had a dictionary as early as 1100

Silver was first coined by Phidon, King of Argos, 859 B. C.

Bandanna is from the Indian word and means to bind or tie.

The nickname of the present Prince of Wales is "The Sardine." The first coaca in England was made for the Earl of Rutland in 1565.

The English had all their fine dyeing done in Holland until 1608.

Calico first came from the town Calicut, India, famous for cotton cloth. In 1905 there were 9,756 voluntary resignations from the government service.

The island of Zanzibar produces nine tenths of the world's production of cloves.

The bodies of three Apostles, Peter, Simon and Jude are buried in St. Peter's at Rome.

In the House of the 59th Congress, 20,475 bills were introduced, and in the Senate, 6,551.

Egyptian mummy bodies are used in making the finest liquid brown paint used by artists. The science of geography was brought to Europe by the Moors of Barbary about 1240.

The first volunteer fire company in the U.S. was the Union of Philadelphia about 1738.

In 1404 a Swiss manufacturer in Paris made the first hat as we know that useful article.

It is estimated that thirteen millions of the hu-man race have perished by earthquakes. Sir Humphry Davy invented the electric light about the beginning of the nineteenth century.

The Shah of Persia has decided to give his country constitution and other modern conveniences.

Haakon, the new King of Norway, says he has an bsolute horror of the snap-shot photographers. Sound travels through the air at 1,140 feet per second, and through the water at the rate of 4,700

The finger nail of a person in good health grows at the rate of about one sixteenth of an inch every

Though the diving bell had been known since the time of Aristotle, it was not put into practical use until 1715.

Cotton was known in Arabia in the time of Mahomet, A. D. 627, and was brought to Europe by his followers.

Daguerre, the discoverer of the daguerreotype, in 1839 received a pension of 6,000 francs from the French government. By cremation, a body weighing 144 pounds can be reduced in fifty minutes to not more than four pounds of lime-dust.

Transparent glass is believed to have been first used about 750 B. C. The Egyptians were probably the first glass makers.

Corsets were first used in France and Germany in the thirteenth century, and a century later put on by English women.

Richard Canfield, the most famous and richest professional gambler in America, has not touched a card in twenty years.

About ninety-four per cent. of all human beings use the right hand in preference to the left. There is no good reason for it.

Sea birds, far from shore, get their drinking water by flying close under rain clouds and catching the drops as they fall.

The woman school teacher—the school marm as we call her, is not, as yet, popular in Germany, and she is struggling for recognition.

The annual pay-roll of government employees under civil service rules amounts to $133,913,362. There are 300,615 names on the roll.

Alexander the Great was buried in a coffin of gold, and the coffin of King Arthur of England was trunk of an oak tree hollowed out. Musk, placed in the mortar in building the mosque of St. Sophia at Constantinople, has scented the structure for a thousand years.

Scientifically a "bite" of food should contain about three tenths of a cubic inch and should be chewed for half a minute before swallowing.

Last year the United States imported 87,000,000 pounds of crude rubber valued at $51,000,000, which was manufactured into products worth $140,000,000 Miss Estelle Reel is the highest paid woman in the government service. She is traveling super-visor of Indian schools and receives $250 a month and expenses. William Winter, aged seventy-one, has been ramatic critic of the New York Tribune for forty six years. Last season he wrote ninety columns of matter for his paper.

Two hundred thousand Americans go to Europe annually, about half being first-class passengers, and it is estimated that they spend a hundred millions of dollars every year.

The salaries of our U. S. Senators amount to $450,000 a year, and of Representatives, $1,953,000. The total salary list of statesmen and their various assistants in and about the capitol building at Washington is $5,565,075.

The first printing press in America was set up in 1639 at Cambridge, Mass., by Stephen Day, and the first book was printed in the following year. The first newspaper was printed at Boston in 1690. Its name was Publick Occurrences. The first newspaper established on the Pacific coast did not appear until 1844—154 years later.

Get This Gold Pair Free!

Spectacle-wearers! Listen! I want to prove to you positively that the Dr. Haux famous Perfect Vision Spectacles are ever so much better than any you have ever used before. That is the reason why I am making the following very extraordinary offer. Send me your name and address and I will mail you my Perfect Home Eye Tester, free.

Then when you return me the Eye Tester with your test I will send you a complete five dollar family set of the Dr. Haux famous Perfect Vision Spectacles for only $1, and this will include a handsome pair of Rolled Gold Spectacles absolutely free of charge.

I also hereby positively agree to return you your dollar willingly if you yourself don't find them to be the most perfect-fitting, clearest and best you have ever bought anywhere, at any price. Send for my free Eye Tester today. Address,

DR. HAUX SPECTACLE CO., St. Louis, Mo. Dept.37 RE I WANT AGENTS ALSO. NOTE-The above is the largest Mail Order Spectacle House in the world, and absolutely reliable)

Use this Range 30 Days FREE

It's my Imperial Steel Range with 40 per cent more exclusive reatures than are on any other range. For instance: the ODOR HOOD, which carries all the odor out of the house and concentrates the heat where it belongs. Another exclusive feature is the STONE OVEN BOTTOM, which absorbs and stores the heat—which would otherwise go to waste, and keeps the oven at an even temperature. Still another exclusive feature is the ASH SIFTER, which enables you to sift the ashes right in the range, and does away with the disagreeable dirt and dust. The OVEN THERMOMETER measures time and shows you when the oven is at the proper degree for baking and roasts. That you may appreciate the exclusive features of the IMPERIAL, I will send you one on 30 DAYS' FREE TRIAL, Freight Prepaid, and if you don't say it's the handsomest looker, best cooker and baker of any range you ever saw, send it right back; you don't have to keep it. If you want to keep it, I will sell it to you on EASY MONTHLY PAYMENTS. My Catalogue tells you all about the exclusive features; how the IMPERIALS are made and why they do your cooking in half the time and save half the fuel of other ranges; Write for Catalogue today. It's FREE.

H. F. TINNERMAN, Owner, IMPERIAL SIEEL RANGE CO.,

83 State Street, Cleveland, Ohlo

ber. GUARANTEE. FOLDING SAWING MACHINE CO., 158-164 E. Harrison St., Chicago, Illinois.

under my pillow, that explains why I have it," and he drew out of his pajama vest pocket, a neat leather case, and drawing Gerald a little aside from the crowd, bound it up professionally, Violet, under his instructions, making bandages from two clean silk handkerchiefs. In gratitude, Gerald insisted upon bestowing upon the physician knew how hard he would be pressed, and that he must reserve his vitality.

"Thanks," he said in his pleasant manner, "I find my card case is missing, too, but today we will have to trust to the honor of each other," and then he gave them his name, one which made them open their eyes, for it ranked among the leaders of his profession, not only in San Francisco. Both told theirs, and then Gerald said gently:

"Doctor, let us help all we can. Neither of us know the fate of our nearest and dearest. We are engaged to be married," he added, for suddenly he felt that an awful fate had fallen upon the women of San Francisco, thrown many of them upon entire strangers.

"I am glad to hear it. My advice is that you marry her as soon as you find a clergyman who is unhurt, she will need your protection. Help? Indeed you can, especially Miss Hilton, come with me," and following the almost furiously funny garb of the doctor, Gerald and Violet were soon working as never before in their happy young lives. Now and again they had an opportunity to whisper a word or two of love, and then learned to reverence their friend, the physician, who seemed possessed of a power beyond ordinary.

At last, at a time when the evening before they would have declared that this hour would have found them preparing for Rosalie's wedding, they heard her voice sobbing:

"Ireton, dear Ireton, open your eyes, dear. I am here, yes, and the Judge, too, and all our friends, our near ones, except father and Violet and Gerald God grant that they are safe!" and Violet and Gerald rushing forward were happy to add:

"And we are, too," when Ireton opened his eyes, and asked almost weakly:

"Where is Rosalie?" and none looked as th

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Read the next chapter, "The Wedding of Rosalie," when other hearts are united, and lives made brighter. 15 cents sent now, and you will receive COMFORT, the best paper published for the money, until January, 1908. The price will soon be admired.

Cure for Liquor and Tobacco.

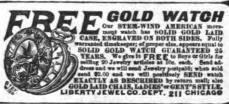

The Kansas Anti-Liquor Society is mailing free a recipe for the cure of the liquor habit. It can be given secretly in food. Also one for the tobacco habit that can be given secretly. The only request they make is that you do not sell recipes, but give copies to friends. Add. with stamp, Kansas Anti-Liquor Soc'y, 78 Gray Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

Outfit Free to Agents Best selling Handkerchiefs, Dress Goods and Fancy Goods on the market. Quick sellers, big profits. Deal direct with a large manufacturer. Send stamp for full particulars. FREEPORT NFG. CO., 351 & 253 Ja; St., Brooklyn, N.Y., Dept. GO.

Your Poems May Be Worth
THOUSANDS OF BOLLARS
Send them to us for the music.
WRITERS Accept no offer before reading
Music. Song and Money. It is free.
HAYES MUSIC CO., 39 Star Bidg., Chicago.

Get the Hook and Play the New Game of Checkers, Checker-Board and Man Fame of The letter and best game played after the style of the edgame of Checkers, "Skidtoo" and 28 are the anusing features of the game. It is just patented but easy to learn and both old and young are delighted. We want to let you try it, and to help introduce to your friends, will send a complete game—a Folding Checker-board, 8x9 inches, and 38 men—free if you enclose only dents for mailing, etc. Will also send Premium List and show you how to make money.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

RAILROADING WANTED FIREMEN AND BRAKEMEN for all Railroads. Experience unnecessary. Firemen $100, become Engineers and earn $150. Positions awaiting competent men. State age, height and weight (important). Name position preferred. RAILWAY ASSOCIATION, Room 98—227 Monroe St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Hunting Boy's This is a genuine HAMILTON TAKE-DOWN HUNTING RIFLE. Shoots le This is a genuine HAMILTON TAKEDOWN HUNTING RIFLE. Shoots long and short 22-calibre cartridges; will kill at 100 yards.
It has black walnut stock, steel barrel with rifled brass inner tube, steel frame, peep sights, lever action, automatic shell extractor. Very latest model and perfect in every way. We give it free for selling only 30 packages of BLUINE at 10 cents a package. Send us your name and address. We trust you. Return our $3,00 after the sale of our BLUINE and we will send the rifle at once. Address We will send the ripe at once. Address BLUINE MANUFACTURING CO., 665 MILL STREET, CONCORD JUNCTION, MASS. Catalogs! Send 2c stamp for our superb catalog and circulars. Many new, useful household articles. STANDARD SUPPLY Co., Mt. Zion, Pa.

OOST CARDS National Capital. Set of Beautiful Souvenir Cards and our Club List, 25c.
You will receive cards from everywhere for exchange.
LEE & CO., Dept. B, WASHINGTON, D. C.

ELECTRIC Supplies, Telephones, Novelties, Dynabelts, books, toys. Big Catalog 4c. We undersell all. Wantagents. OHIO ELECTRIC WORKS, Cleveland, Ohio.

FOR 406, We mail Webster's Modern Diction-old Dr. Brown's $1.00 Book of Secrets and mirror 50c. ART NOVELTY CO., Buffalo, N. Y.

RODS The latest improved; sold under guarantee. Used for locating mines, lost treasures. etc. Cir. 2c. Add. L.A. Lowry, P. O. Box 1301-05, Denver, Colo.

294 I Hidden Name, Priendahlp, Slik Fringe and Premium Articles. Sample Album of Phoest Carlo and Rigest Premium List, all for a rount stamp Oillo CaRD COMPANY, CADIE, OHIO.

CASH FOR YOUR FUR no matter where you are. If or buy fur write today for our new plan to make extra s on fur. Corry Hide & Fur Co., Box 30, Corry. Pa.

SONG Musical Compositions. We pay
We Compose and Arrange melody FREE of charge.
GEO. JABERG MUSIC CO. 124 W. 7th St., Cincinnati, O.

SINGING Taught by Correspondence. SINGING Send for handsome booklet on VOICE CULTURE FREE ILLINOIS CONSERVATORY, 813 Lakeside Bldg. Chicago.

Farmers' Sons Wanted with knowledge of farm dynamics and fair education to work in an office, 840 a month with advancement, steady employment, must be honest and reliable. Branch offices of the association are being established in each state. Apply at once, giving full particulars. The Veterinary Science Association, Dept. 12, London, Canada.

Own early, prince rules (Cards type, paper, cards. The PRESS CO., Meriden, Conn.

Made Weekly Distributing Circulars, packages, Over-seeing Out-Door Advertising. Mew Plan. Experience not needed. No canvassing. MERCHANTS OUT-DOOR ADV. CO., Chicago.

WANTED YOUNG MEN Fireman Blectrician Passenger Brakeman Letter Carrier Bailway Mail Clerk Comotive Prepare yourself at home. Positions open in every state. Name position for sample leaves open in every Send Nothing But Your Name and Address. We will send you, postpaid, 5 large handsome Stamped Dollies and 5 Pin Cushion Covers, Holly, Violet and Strawberry patterns, ready for embroidering. Sellthem at 10c. each. Send us the $1.00 collected and we will promptly send you the beautiful Roman Gold Finish, Seamless Nethersole Bracelet FREE.

Hemenher We Trust You. Write to-day for the doiles and cushion covers. Your success is certain, they sell at sight in every home. All bracelets sent without initials. Our reliability is established. We refer you to any bank in this city or Editor of this paper. Thousands of young ladles have received one of our beautiful bracelets by this plan. Sterling Jewelry Co., Dept. T, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

SPECIAL CUT PRICES

John M. Smyth Co. Madison Street, Chicago

Comfort's League of Cousins

how to properly care for our sick and suffering poor, for we don't know how to do it yet, more's the pity.

Comfort's League of Cousins

Comfort's League of Cousins

For the information of those who have not been regular readers of Comfort, and others who are becoming interested in the Cousins' League for the first time, and are ignorant of its aim and objects, the following facts will be of interest:

The League of Cousins was founded as a means of bringing the scattered members of Comfort's immense circle of readers into one big, happy family. Its aim is to promote a feeling of kinship and relationship among all readers. It was primarily started as a society for the juvenile members of Comfort's family, only, but those of more mature years clamored for admittance so persistently that it was deemed advisable to impose no age limit; thus all are eligible to admittance into our League provided they conform to its rules and are animated by the child spirit.

Though the older folks are admitted, the young folks will always be the first consideration, and Uncle Charlie will write his page with a view of entertaining our young people solely.

Those who wish to join our League can do so by subscribing to Comfort for one year or inducing some one else to subscribe, and sending us their subscription. No premiums will be given those sending in members for the League.

If you are already a subscriber you can join by renewing your subscription, or subscribing a year ahead. You can have the membership card and button sent to yourself and the Comfort to a friend, if you already take the paper. All who join the League will receive a button and a handsome certificate of membership, also Comfort for one year, and the privilege of having their names in the letter list.

How to become a Member

In order to become a deall-fieldged League member

How to become a Member

the letter list.

How to become a Member

In order to become a full-fledged League member and procure a card and button, you must become a paid-in-advance Comport subscriber by sending fifteen cents to the subscription department, for yourself, or renew your own subscriptions now. When you do this, send five cents extra, or twenty cents in all, and say that you wish to join Comport's League of Cousins.

The five cents additional pays your membership fee and for the League button and membership card engrossed with your own name and membership number. All previous League membership offers are hereby withdrawn and only those who strictly comply with our above offer will be admitted to membership. It costs but twenty cents to join the League, a League which promises to be the greatest society of young people on earth. Never in the world's history was so much given for so little. Never could twenty cents be invested to such advantage, and bring such splendid returns. Don't hesitate, join us at once and induce your friends to do likewise.

All those League members, who desire a list of the cousins residing in their several states, can secure the same by sending a stamped addressed envelope and five cents in stamps to Nellie Rutherford, 1442 Pacific St., Brooklyn, N. Y., our grand secretary. Some of the lists contain hundreds of names, so our secretary must have some trifling remuseration as she is devoting the whole of her time to this work.

Shut-ins Needing Christmas Cheer

Shut-ins Needing Christmas Cheer

The following shut-ins need all the Christ-

The following shut-ins need all the Christmas cheer you can possibly send them:

Ben C. Knight (54), Enfield, N. C. Ben entirely depends on those who pity the suffering for his support. He is entirely helpless, and is desperately poor. Who will be his Santa Claus? Mrs. D. Morris (34), Mt. Vernon, R. F. D., 2, Ga. Crippled for fifteen years. Send her letters, reading matter, silk and woolen pieces, and anything that will help a poor and needy woman. Edith Fishleigh (27), 159 Fourth Street, Wyandotte, Mich. Great sufferer for seven years, is raffling a mandolin, twenty-five cents a ticket, so she can get an invalid chair. Victoria Lareau, Hemingford, Quebec, Canada. Her birthday falls on Christmas day, charming little girl, does beautiful needlework. Flora Nichols (20), Wellston, Ohio, is paralyzed. Needs letters only. Mary E. Luke, Baxter, R. F. D., 3, Tenn. Wants cheery letters, will answer if postage is inclosed. Put something in your letters besides words. Thomas P. Day, Fauvel, Province Quebec, Canada. An invalid for seventeen years, great sufferer from hip disease. Mother just dead, left all alone, wants cheer and sympathy. Fanny D. Cunningham (14), Mineral Wells, Texas. Helpless, poor and lonely. Who will be her good angel? Rebecca Whitford, Finleyson, Ga. You know of this poor little cripple. Make her Christmas worth while. Fred W. Bizell (24), Newton Grove, N. C. Writes an admirable letter, has been helpless for twelve years from rheumatism. Bear him in mind. Isaac Price, Lenoir, N. C. Has been in bed thirty-eight years. Friends are trying to get him a wheel chair, so he can be wheeled out into the blessed sunshine. Will he get it? Depends on you. Myrtle Poole (23), 627 East Temple St., Washington Court House, Ohio. Myrtle is bedridden and very needy, a sweet, patient little angel, a particular pet of mine, make her forget her trouble for one day in the year. Ellen Kinney, Brockport, N. Y. Friends are trying to pay for the little home she lives in, so she may at least have shelter. Eugenia Moon, Cody, Va poorhouse, unable to move. Cassie M. Brown (30), Alexander Place, Clinton, Ark. Helpless through an accident, desperately poor, refined, educated, writes beautifully. Wants cheery letters and good reading matter. Henry S. Bent, Turbine, Tenn. A dear, nice boy, fine writer, good Christian, helpless and needy. Please make his Christmas worth while. James Wall, Oxford, R. F. D., 4, N. C. You all know Jim, and his condition which cannot be altered, but you can do much to make him forget his sufferings, mind you do it. M. Edith Myers, Brush Valley, Pa. Fine writer. Send Santa Claus to her. Andrew Millslagle (30), Borland, N. C. Cripple from rheumatism, craves your sympathy and sunshine. Mildred Carpenter, 621 Bird St., Parkersburg, W. Va. Mildred is seven years old, and has been a cripple all her life; on the birthday of the Christ child, don't forget this little one. M. Lillian Perkins, Hemlock Creek, Lucern, Pa. Minister's widow, helpless in bed for thirteen years, poor and needy.

There's a dandy list. I shall get a report from all the shut, ins. and shell know evently.

There's a dandy list. I shall get a report from all the shut-ins, and shall know exactly what Santa Claus brought them. Your Christmas will be all the happier if you remember these poor souls. And now from the depths of my heart, a heart that loves every one of you, of my heart, a heart that loves every one of you, I wish you a Merry, Merry Christmas. Those who want to write me real Christmas letters should get them to Augusta by December 20th, and then I am sure to have time to read them all by the 25th. I would like to hear from every one of you, and only wish I could send you each a present, but the best I can do is to send you my love, and that you have in abundance, and look out for the turkey. Once more a Merry, Merry Christmas, and God bless you all. Lovingly yours,

Uncle Charlie

Uncle Charlie's Poems-Sure cure for the blues, Uncle Charlie, care COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

A blue topaz of sky blue color has been discovered in Rhodesia.

A recent French invention is shells filled with oil, which are intended to calm a stormy sea when fired into it.

A machine, which literally manufactures musical notes, is a recent invention. It is called a telhar-monium.

A Swiss watchmaker has made a watch with a phonograph attachment that calls out the hours as they pass.

Herr Gentsch of Vienna, has produced an artificial gutta-percha from a mixture of caoutchoe and polin rosin.

A sweat band which may be tightened or loosened, and thereby adapted to fit the head of the wearer is among the recent inventions.

Among the recent inventions is a hymnal and prayer-book, fitted with a purse in which money for the contribution can be carried.

Tantalite has found another use. Pens have been made of tantalite which are said to be harder than steel and more elastic than gold.

Dr. W. J. Goodhue, who has devoted many yes to the study of leprosy, says he has discovered t germ of the disease in the mosquito and vermin.

A process for tempering gold to the hardness of steel, and in making all kinds of surgical instru-ments out of the hardened metal has been invented.

Aluminum paper, which is practically a new article of production, is said to preserve the sweetness of butter that is wrapped in it for a very long time. A new process of manufacturing hollow tin soldiers has been devised. Hitherto the soldiers have been cast solid, and are some sixty per cent. lighter.

Baron Von Welsbach, discoverer of the incandes-cent mantle, has invented a device by which when the gas tip is turned on, a shower of brilliant sparks lights the gas. A labor-saving device in counting and wrapping coin has been constructed by Edward Van Winkle an electrical engineer, for one of his clients who is the inventor.

A French horticulturist has discovered that roses and mignonettes cannot live together. Rose and mignonette, placed together in a vase, both wither within half an hour.

An Italian has invented a machine for printing railroad tickets as they are needed. The apparatus can print and register 400 different kinds of tickets, with station, date and fare.

A new species of rats has been discovered in South America that have phosphorescent skins, which burn with a terrifying greenish glare at night. In the daytime they look like ordinary rats.

A celebrated German specialist has recently been experimenting with ink to find which color gathers the least amount of microbes. They develop more rapidly in red than in black, violet or blue.

In Italy, an engineering feat has recently been completed in the effecting of complete drainage for a district of 460 square miles, by the cutting of a canal on which 6,000 men have been occupied since 1901.

A collar supporter for lace collars, which will hold the filmsy collar in an upright position, and not cause discomfort to the wearer, or be visible when the collar is worn, is among the latest inven-

Recent efforts to measure the duration of flashes of lightning seem to show that it is often as brief as one-forty-thousandth part of a second. A flash lasting the fitteth part of a second is considered about the extreme duration.

Among the recent inventions is an automatic sparring machine. It is driven by an electric motor, and can be made to rain blows as rapidly as the best boxer can receive them; or it can be operated slowly for the instruction of the novice.

A device, by which the amount of material remaining in a bolt of ribbon can be ascertained at a glance, has been invented. The tape is marked with inches, feet, and yards, and the paper slit at regular intervals, passing the ribbon in and out through the slits. It will lessen the work of stocktaking.

ST. VITUS' DANCE, Sure Cure. Get Circular. BLU 663

Consumption

remedies they had tried failed, and they believed their case hopeless.

Write at once to the Yonkerman Consumption Cure Co., 1300 Water St., Kalamazoo, Mich., and they will gladly send you the book by return mail free and also a generous supply of the New Treatment, absolutely free, for they want every sufferer to have this wonderful cure before it is too late. Don't wait—write today. It may mean the saving of your life.

ASTHMA CURED BEFORE

will send by express to any sufferer a bottle of NE'S ASTHMA CURE. If it cures send me $1; t does not, don't. Give express office.

J. LANE, Dept. C., St. Marys, Kas.

BE AN ACTOR OR ACTRESS
Best paying profession in the world. Engagements secured when qualified. Write for Free Booklet on elocution and dramatic art by correspondence. CHICAGO SCHOOL OF ELECUTION, 841 Chicago Opera House Building, CHICAGO

Agents--Brand New Article—Patents of Patents of Patents

‱ SONG POEMS №

I will write the music and present to Big N.Y.Publishers. I made a fortune writing songs; my experience will aid you, My songs "Blue Bell" and "Way Down in My Heart" achieved world-wide fame, Write to-day for Free Booklet EDWARD MADDEN, 36 Madden Hidg., New York

BIG VALUE FOR 10 CENTS,

YOUR FORTUNE TOLD Send two cent stamp with birth date and I will send you a pen picture of your life from the cradle to the grave. All matters of business, love, marriage and health, plainly told by the greatest Astrologer living. Patrona astonished and satisfied. PRF. LEO AMII, Popt. 31. REINGEFORT. EARLY PROF. LEO AMZI, Dept. 31, BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

I Pay $25 for the rare half dollars of 1858
$40 for the Stellas of 1879, $200 for 1880, $30 for the gold dollars of 1875 and $50 for the three dollars 1875. $25 for dimes 1894 m.m. S. $1 to $250 each for the Territorial coins 1849 to 1861,

CERTAIN COINS

and from $1 to $300 for thou-sands of other rare coins, stamps and paper money. Send a stamp for an illustrated circular it may lead to wealth and independent WANTED lead to wealth and independence. Address the most reliable coin dealer. 18 years at the present location. W. VON BERGEN, Scollay Sq., C, Boston, Mass,

Ш AND OUTFIT

All Imported Brass.

Mounted German

Storeopticon, with double telescopic lenses, non-explosive lamp, fity handsome colored pictures, including two continuous sildes. This is a square lantern with patent chimney, exactly like the picture. It will give

Fine Exhibitions, for which you can charge an admission fee, and thus earn money as well
as delight your friends.
Write today for only M packages of BLUINE to sell among BLUINE
to se AND OUTFIT

MILL STREET. . . (The Old Reliable Fi

FREE

BOY'S AIR RIFLE

weighs 2 lbs.; elegantly finished, steel barrel, all working parts nickeled; walnut stock, pistol grip, peep sights; used indoors or for killing small game; shoots BB shot and darts: most accurate rife made. Send us your name and address for only 24 pieces of Jewelry to sell at sec. each, return $2.40 when sold and we will send this rife at once and a free supply of shot.

EAGLE WATCH CO., Dept. 217 East Boston, Mass.

This catchy new Pillow Top, entitled

I'D LEAVE MY HAPPY HOME FOR YOU and showing the chicken chasing a butterfly, is tinted by hand in natural fast colors on Tan Belmont cloth, size 21 x 21 inches. This pillow top is sure to please all who see it. We want every lady to have one, and also to read our interesting lady's magazine, Popular Fashions, which contains the best serial and short stories, fancy work, household hints, fashion, tollet and health talks. We guarantee you will like both. Anyway, we want you to become acquainted with our fine illustrated magazine and so we will send you one of these very pretty and catchy pillow tops free by mail if you will send us only 15 cents for a full trial subscription to our magazine. The 15 cents pays for magazine and we give you the Pillow Top Free. Sendtoday.

Popular Fashions Magazine, Dept. 36

291-3 Congress Street, Boston, Mass.

The Great Chicago Mystery The Man With Many Aliases

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 14.)

in any place, and I know there is not a lad on the force, likewise including myself, but what would be crazy to be of use to New York's great detective."

Crit was pleased, indeed there are few men who would not have been at so sincere a tribute to his ability, and he smiled genially as he re-

"Thanks, Chief, thanks, but I think I've got about all the force I need, with me." The chief looked a little disappointed, but he appreciated the fact that if he was to look for any help from the Easterner, he must permit him to work in his own way. He was a little astonished, when Crit asked:

"Chief, have you ever heard of a gun by the name of Jim Hollis?"

(Who?, 'Four-time Jim?''

"Who? 'Four-time Jim?'" "Well that may be another one of his many

"Who? 'Four-time Jim?'"

"Well that may be another one of his many aliases."

"Why yes, let me see. He was pinched about two months ago, it seems to me, when we raided a fence on South Clark street. Lack of evidence against him, caused his release."

"Where is the fence now?"

"Either up or down, Mr. Truman. He died in jail last week. Had quick consumption, but that wasn't known at the time."

"That's bad," Crit said. "He might have given us some valuable information. Who else was included in the arrest, Chief?"

"Just now, I don't know, but I can easily find out by consulting the records."

"How long will that take?"

"No time at all. Perhaps you and your assistant may like to take a bath and freshen up a bit, and while you are doing so, I'll get the information you wish," the chief suggested.

"All right, good idea," Crit said cheerfully. "Come on, Ralph, we'll stretch ourselves. Chief, be sure and get the names and if any, the aliases of all who were with Hollis at the time. We'll be back within an hour, and bring with us the remainder of our force. That'll give you time enough, eh?"

"Plenty, Mr. Truman," cried the chief, escorting his distinguished visitors from his office.

As they emerged from the City Hall, they office.

As they emerged from the City Hall, they were joined by Peter, who had been waiting, Crit considering it better not to overburden the chief first shot.

"Everything looks like Hollis' work," Crit said in a low tone to Peter.

"Same old methods?" asked the lad, who was fully informed regarding the other case, upon which they all had worked some two years previously.

previously.

"Yes, everything so far as I can see points to him as the leader," Crit continued, half to himself.

"See, there's a split lip; the episode of the cuff buttons (you remember he once tore a man's coat robbing him of a fine cameo he was wearing?); that of the whiskey bottle (for Jim Hollis never takes a drink nor will he permit his associates to do so when they are doing a job), and lastly his presence in this city, so short time ago, and in a fence's joint."

Peter listened eagerly, and from Crit's few words gathered a pretty good idea of what had been communicated by the chief.

"Mr. Hollis, I don't think you'd continue to do business with such boldness if you knew that Crit Truman was in Chicago."

Crit's face was very grave as he thus spoke,

that Crit Truman was in Chicago."

Crit's face was very grave as he thus spoke,
for he felt very strongly upon this matter.

"I don't think a thing about the matter, I know," laughed Ralph.

"I say, Jim Hollis swore that if he'd get free again, he'd never let you take him alive," Peter broke in.

"That's just what he did say. When I came around to his cell to try and get a confession from him, he said:

around to his cell to try and get a confession from him, he said:

"I'll get out of this yet, Truman, and when I do, look out."

"I answered:

"Other guineas have answered me the same, but so far, I'm all to the merry, and most of the other lads are on the blink."

"He smiled grimly, that scar showing up in a nasty way, and said:

"Crit Truman, I swear you'll never take me alive.""

"Guess at that time, you never thought you'd have to try," Ralph suggested.

"Not then, but it does now, and I mean to show him just how much attention I pay to his talk." Raiph and Peter, looking at the grim jaw and somber eyes, thought:
"He will, too."

"Mr. Truman, I have your information. I have a man who was taken at the same time as "Four-time' Jim, and got pushed through for something else. He only did ten days, and got out, but he's pinched again—this time for dipping—and he's waiting trial at the Harrison street station. We can go there at once, if you wish."

"Is dipping his regular lay?" asked Crit, as the three detectives with the chief emerged into the street.

into the street.

"Yes, but he's a cheap crook. Dips, does second story work sometimes, and most anything in a crooked line if he has a leader to earry him along. Can't do a thing without a guiding spirit."

"Oftentimes the worst kind of a crook,"

Ralph suggested, while Peter asked:
"What's the lad's name, Chief?"
"Like the rest of them, he's got four or five, although he's only about twenty, but I think his real name is Christie Ferris. He's a product of Chicago's tough kid gangs and as for sweating him—well some of the best of the boys gave it up. You can have a try yourself, though."

The three detectives said nothing, but they were confident they knew a thing or two about tweating, which would surprise the worthy chief, but they held their tongues, and entered the attains with their companion and constitution. the station with their companion, and were taken immediately to the cell in which Christie Ferris was confined.

Crit decided to see the lad alone, so telling the others to remain out of earshot, much to the disappointment of the chief, he said the disappointment of the chief, he said cheerily:

"Hello, Ferris, in again, hey?"
The prisoner looked at him in a sullen manner, asking defiantly:
"Where'd you ever see me?"
"That don't make any difference, you don't remember me, I see," Crit replied coldly.
"This is what I've come to say, and you'd better listen."
The prisoner could not meet the keen eyes better listen."

The prisoner could not meet the keen eyes of the detective, who continued:

"About two months ago you were caught with Jim Hollis in a raid on a fence, and while there was no evidence against you, and Hollis escaped punishment, you were railroaded through for ten days."

The course fellow beoked interested now. He

The young fellow looked interested now. He did not know the man who was so well informed, but he recognized that he understood

"Well, what of dat?" Christie asked, as the "Well, what of dat?" Christie asked, as the detective paused to light his cigar.

"Oh nothing much," replied Crit, "only that yesterday you were pinched for dipping a lady's pocketbook, when you had never done the job."
"Say, Mister, will you please go tell dat to de Loot?" cried the prisoner eagerly.
"Well, am I right or am I wrong?" Crit asked, although he did not need any reply. Ferris's face told the story.
"Right? O' course you're right. I don't know where yuh get your infermation, mister, but you're a wise cooper, an' dey got to give it to yuh. I wasn't widdin ten miles o' dat job yestiddy, and here I get it right away."
Crit smiled inwardly. This had been a bold stroke, and he was well pleased with his success.

His familiarity with the methods sometimes used by the police when they wish a scapegoat on whom to fasten a crime, the real perpetrator of which cannot be found, helped him to come to the decision that Ferris was innocent. He was also helped in arriving at it by the fact that Ferris had been "railroaded" through a that Ferris had been "railroaded" through a short time previously, and so felt that his premise was a plausible one.

Having struck one good blow, Crit continued, speaking in that frank, yet kindly manner which won so many:

"Look here, Ferris, never mind who I am, just remember I'm your friend at present, and that's more than you can say of some you know."

The boy raised himself, and glaring cried:

The boy raised himself, and glaring cried:
"I say, Mister, what's yuh driving at?"
"Do you want to know who it was got you in here this time?"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Read the next chapter, "A Keen Bit of Work," and watch the coils as they slowly tighten around the guilty, bringing the desired results. If not a subscriber send 15 cents and read this story to the end. The price will soon be advanced.

herein will be prepared at our expense by eminent counsel.

Inasmuch as it is one of the principal missions of COM-FORT to aid in upbuilding and upholding the sanctity of the home, no advice will be given on matters pertaining to divorce. Any paid-up subscriber to COMFORT is electome to submit inquiries, which, so far as possible, will be answered in this department. If any reader, other than a subscriber, wishes to take advantage of this privilege, it may be done by sending fifteen (16) cents, in silver or stamps, for an annual subscription to COMFORT thus obtaining all the benefits which our subscribers enjoy including a copy of the magazine for one year.

Should any subscriber desire an immediate, special opinion on any legal question, privately mailed, it may be had by sending one dollar with a letter asking such adeice, addressing the same to "THE EDITOR, COMFORT'S HOME LAW FER," Augusta, Maine, and in reply a carefully prepared opinion will be sent in an early mail.

Full names and addresses must be signed by all persons seeking advice in this column but not necessarily for publication. Unless otherwise requested, initials only will be published.

After having a shave and bath, the three detectives made their way back to the office of the chief, who greeted Crit and Ralph heartily, but looked at Peter.

"The rest of my force, Chief," Crit said, with a twinkle in his eyes.

"Peter?" the chief asked, showing that he had heard of that young man.

"The same," Crit replied, and the chief and Peter having shaken hands, the former said:

"Mr. Truman, I have your information. I have a man who was taken at the same time as time as man who was taken at the same time as time as man who was taken at the same time as time as man who was taken at the same time as time as man who was taken at the same time as time as man who was taken at the same time as time as man who was taken at the same time as time as man who was taken at the same time as time as man who was taken at the same time as ti

Mrs. M. W. L.—We do not think there is any immediate danger of your son's being drafted for military duty. We cannot discuss the justice or injustice of female sufferage. If there has been a trustee appointed of your property, we think the trustee should be the one to convey your property.

property, we think the trustee should be the one to convey your property.

G. C. M.—Upon such a state of facts as you submit in your statement to us, we are of the opinion, that upon the death of a husband, intestate leaving no children or descendants of children, the widow would inherit, and be entitled to his whole estate both real and personal in the following States, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Kansas, Minnesota, Mississippi, New Mexico, and Wisconsin. We think she would be entitled to his entire personal estate, but not the whole of his real property in the following States, Illinois, Maryland, Ohio, Oregon, and Texas, but we are of the opinion that in case he owned real estate in one State, and resided in another, that the descent of the real estate would follow the laws of the State where the property was situated, and not the laws of the State where he resided at the time of his death, and, of course, if he left a will the disposition of all his property would follow the terms of the will.

Miss B. A. T.—We are of the opinion, that your remedy would be by an action for damages for breach of contract against the firm you mention.

M. M. H.—We are of the opinion, that your chances of actablishing wourtile to the load deaded we haven.

against the firm you mention.

M. M. H.—We are of the opinion, that your chances of establishing your title to the land deeded you by your father have been damaged by your failure to bring an action at once, but possibly you could still prove your case and explain your laches. We think your claim for supporting your mother would be in the nature of a claim against her, and that you could not get a court to allow you to take real estate in place of money, except by way of selling the real estate to satisfy your claim, or by way of some settlement authorized by the court.

necessary for her to join in the deed of such property, but we do think it is the custom for purchasers to require the signature of both to deeds of such property.

the signature of both to deeds of such property.

J. L. D.—Under the laws of the State from which you write, we are of the opinion that, if a man die leaving a widow and no child or children, nor descendants of any child or children, and no will, his personal property would all go to the widow, and one half of his real estate; and the other half of his real estate, would go to his father, mother, brothers, or sisters, or their descendants; but if he leaves a widow and no father, mother, brother, sister, nor any descendants of any brother or sister, then the whole of the real estate also would go to the widow.

R. V. D.—Unon your statements to us we are of the whole of the real estate also would go to the widow.

R. V. D.—Upon your statements to us we are of the opinion, that the people to whom you owe the money could collect either from your parents or yourself, even though you were a minor at the time the debt was contracted, as minors can be bound for necessaries. We do not think they could collect from your husband as he cannot be bound for debts contracted by you before marriage. If you have no property they, of course, would be unable to collect their judgment after they had recovered it. We think on your statements you owe it to your own self-respect to try to pay the money.

W. R.—It will be necessary for you to have a tax search think on your statements you owe it to your own selfrespect to try to pay the money.

W. R.—It will be necessary for you to have a tax search made in the County of the State in which the land your grandmother owns is located, in order to learn whether it has been sold for taxes, and it will also be necessary for you to learn whether anyone else has held possession of the land for long enough period to create a title by adverse possession. We are of the opinion that the statute of limitations in the State you mention runs in ten years.
If no other person has acquired title to this property in either of the ways mentioned above, and if your grandmother's title is an absolute one in fee simple, we are of the opinion, that she is the owner of the land.

B. P.—Under the laws of the State from which you write, we are of the opinion, that the woman you mention can dispose of her separate property by will or otherwise without her husband's consent except that she cannot without his consent dispose of his right to curtesy in her real estate. His right to curtesy in her estate is in case he survives her, the use of one third of her real estate for the term of his life. You state no grounds upon which we think this man could be sent to prison.

B. F.—Under the laws of the State from which you write, we are of the opinion that, unless your stepmother leaves a will, you would not upon her death be entitled to any portion of her estate; if she leaves no husband or children, her estate would go to her father, mother, brothers, or sisters, or their descendants.

A. L. W.—Upon your statements to me, we are of the opinion, that the local authorities can compel the two or sisters, or their descendants.

A. L. W.—Upon your statements to me, we are of the opinion, that the local authorities can compel the two sons, of the old man you mention, either jointly or severally, to prevent their father from becoming a public charge, as we think that a man has no right to turn over his property to his children, and then become a public charge. We cannot imagine such a state of facts, as that an old man should turn over his whole property to his son, and become penniless in his helpless old age, unless either, a fraud was perpetrated upon him, in which event the deed could be set aside by an action in law or equity, or unless some agreement was made at the time the deed was executed providing for his future support, and care. Such a contract would not be set up in the deed, but might be a separate agreement, or might be even only an oral agreement. We advise you to investigate and see whether there was not some such agreement made at the time the deed you mention was executed.

NOTICE

Uncle Charlie's Poems as a Premium

It will be good news to millions of our readers to know that we have arranged with Uncle Charlie to have his book of poems put on our premium list, and so give a chance to all those who are unable to spare the purchase price of fifty cents, to secure the book by raising clubs and working for same. This valuable book has been gotten up in such splendid style, that the price asked for it but little more than covers the cost of production, and therefore we are paying Uncle Charlie the full advertised price for same, so that he may be at no loss in placing this book upon our premium list.

Many of our readers, also many of the members of the League of Cousins, have asked for a chance to work for this delightful volume of irresistible fun, and helpful inspiration, and by this arrangement with Uncle Charlie, all who send us seven one year 15c subscriptions to COMFORT will receive his splendid book of poems as a premium.

Two hundred and fifty of the leading newspapers and periodicals of the United States have reviewed Uncle Charlie's book, and all have praised it in the most enthusiastic manner. There has not been a single dissenting voice in the general chorus of praise. We have offered many premiums, but we leel sure not one will appeal more forcibly to our readers than this, not only for its intrinsic literary value, but for the warm sentiment of appreciation and affection that exists for the one who brought the work into existence. Now that our readers can secure Uncle Charlie's poems with very little effort, we feel sure that this delightful book will soon be in the home of every COMFORT reader in the land. Remember a club of only Seven one year subscriptions, at 15 cents each, secures this work delivered, postage paid, at your homes.

- I WILL HELP YOU . MAKE MONEY (The same as I have helped over 5,000 others)

No matter where you are located or what your former occupation, if you are honest and ambittious, I will teach you the Real Estate, insurance and General Brokerage Business thorough by mail, appoint you SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE of my Company (the largest in America), and assist you to become a prosperous and successful business man with an income of $5,000 to $5,000 annually.

Unusual opportunity for men without cap-tial to become independent for life. Valu-able Book and full particulars TRES, Write today. Address either office. EDWIN R. MARDEN, President 368 Athenseum Bldg. or 368 Maryland Bldg. Chicago, Ill. Washington, D.C.

If you are a state mason, a machinist, a building contractor, a mechanic of any kind, or if you need tools or supplies or general hardware for the home or farm, then before you buy, write for our graft free special tool and hardware catalog, which represents a gigantic two million dollar stock of tools and supplies and general hardware of every description at marvelously cut prices. This wonderful catalog illustrates and describes every tool made, in all the latest improved types, made by manufacturers whose names are famous the world over. You will find all your favorite makes, the ones you know climates, the contractor of the contractor

Andrew Bells and Garden Tools, Scales, Game Traps, Mill TANGED FIRMER CHISEL Ling, Poultry Notting Bath Ware and Farm Implements of all kinds—everything at wholesale prices. Don't pay whacking big profits to retail dealers for hardware but send at once, to-day, for our great free special catalog of Tools and General Mardware and buy at wholesale prices. John M. Smyth Co. Madleon Street Chicago

Can Cure Cancer

At Home Without Pain, Plaster or Operation and I Tell You How, Free.

and cure of the deadly can-cer. I have made some most astonishing cures. I believe every person with cancer should know of this marvelous medicine and its wonderful cures, and I will be glad to give full information to a Solid Gold Wat 25 years; also a Gold-Filled King, set with a Spark-ling Gem, are given free to any one for selling entry to the solid send your name and address for Jeweiry. When sold send us the $2.40, and we send the Watch and Ring. FRIEND SUPPLY CO., Dept. 73, Boston, M

FREE Character Reading
By Graphology By Graphology

expert. Send name and address and 2 one cent stamp for FREE reading from your Hand Writing. PROF. HUGO LANZA. Dept. C, Southport, Conn.

FREE DINNER SET
PIECES
Queen Baking Powder, giving a Glass Water Set free to each purchaser of a can. Also many other premiuma.
WE PAY FREIGHT. Write for our plans. American Supply Co., Dept. 57, 900-906 N. 2nd St., St. Louis, Ma.

LIVE COAT FREE

Fun and Money for Boys and Girls. We will give you a fine pure blooded Angora Goat, with long shaggy fleece, Fras for just a little of your spare time. Easy to get, easy to keep, costs almost nothing to feed. Fine pets, great playmates; better than a dog, good as a Shetland Pony. Wool is worth good money. If you want one, just send us your name and address, Columbian Household Magazine, Dept. G. 16, Box 1276, Boston, Mass

160 SONGS FREE

Just think of it,
160 Popular Favorities, Songs that everybody wants to know and sing,
FREE, with the nusse. Just the book you have been looking for. We send with it a Chart of Chords
with which anyone can play the ac companiment to any song. All sant
free by mail to every person sending usonly 10c. to pay for a full trial anbscription to our Popular Illos
trated Magazine.
1cd Magazine, Dept. 20

Popular Illustrated Magazine, Dept. 30 391 Congress Street, BOSTON, MASS.

20 POST CARD & 6C.

CALIFORNIA EARTHQUAKE
We have collected a large assortment of Photo Views of San Francisco and Vicinity, which are published in Post Card Size.

Francisco. Some of the Photos are gs follows:

A View of Burning Clity at Dusk, taken from Bay; Looking South from Kohl Building; thuiss of Seven Million Dollar Clity Hall; The Ferry Building; Ruins on Kearney St., Chromaticle and Call Building; Marchaud's Restaurant; Baking Bread for Refugees; View down Ellis St.; Union Square showing Clity Hall; The Church We show a reduced size cut of a building to give a small idea of what the earthquake has done for San Comprehensive. We show a reduced size cut of a building to give a small idea of what the earthquake has done for San Comprehensive. We show a reduced size cut of a building to give a small idea of what the earthquake Handward San Comprehensive. We show a reduced size cut of a building; Marchaud's Restaurant; Baking Bread for Refugees; View down Ellis St.; Union Square showing; St. John's Chief and Collect St. Bomine Church View of City Toom Ferry Tower; Lodge in Children's Playground; Golden Gate Park; Preparing Coffee for Refugees.

We cannot give you any idea of these View by any amount of description, but there are twenty Views 31-2 x 51-2 inches each and each Photois really worth what we now charge you for the entire lot as we want you to see them and desire to introduce our estalogue of other views and General Premium List. As many are selling these lots of pictures at from 10 to 25 cents each left, you may want some for sale or gifts, so make this offer: Send only 6 cents and we will forward Views and Catalogue postpaid, also price list showing hew you can make moany solling the Photos.

SOUVENIR VIEW CO. Bex 923, Augusta, Maine.

SPECTACLES at wholesale, Send wanted. COULTER OPTICAL CO. Chicago, III.

AGENTS Get out of the rut. Own your business. $3 a day sure. Expensive Samples free. T. M. SAYMAN, 2181 Franklin Ave., St. Louis, Mo. $25 PER WEEK and traveling expenses paid salesmen to sell goods to grocery dealers; experience unnecessary. PURITY C. R. CO., Chicago.

in C. S. A. money sent to any address for $1. Will give $50 to any one who can detect it. FRANK O. SHILLING, Navarre, Ohio.

AGENTS WANTED Sell $1 bottle Sarsaparilla for 35c; best seller; 200 per cent profit. Write today for terms. F. R. GREENE, 25 Lake St., CHICAGO.

LADIES to work on piecework $3.00 per doz. All materials furnished. No Canvassing, steady work.

Your Fortune; send you Life Reading, also Photo' your future Husband or Wife, with True Luck Charm and Wedding Ring. All for 10 CTR, and your birthdate. LOOK BOX 100, DEP. F PALATINE, ILL.

SONG-POEMS and musical manuscript arranged. Publication secured. Cash or royalty if available. Wainwright Music Co., 78-149 Evergreen Ave., Chicago

LADY SEWERS wanted to finish off shields at home; 310 per 100, can make 2 an hour. Work sent prepaid to reliable women. Send reply envel-opfore particulars. UNIVERSAL CO., Dept.29, Phila., Pa

$83 SALARY and liberal commission also expenses paid Monthly. Best proposition on | Market for Agents.

BAILEY PORTRAIT CO., 30 Potomac Ave., Chicago.

THE GREATEST OFFER EVER MADE, Send name and address if you want this beauti-ful Roman Brooch Sunburst set with im. diamond., Chain

GANCER GURED WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS.

MR. M. YANT, CRETE, NEB., Says of Our Mild Method of Curing Cancer: "You have performed one of the most miraculous cures in my case ever heard of."

No need of cutting off a woman's breast or a man's chesk or nose in a vain attempt to cure cancer. No use of applying burning plasters to the flesh and torturing those aiready weak from suffering. Thousands of persons successfully treated. This wonderful Mild Method is also a never-failing cure for tumors, catarrh, ugly ulcers, piles, fistula, and all other skin and blood diseases. Write to-day for free illustrated book.

DR. BYE, 701 Bye Bidg., Kansas City, Me.

chine for light sewing gloves, etc., and obtain good satisfight sewing, mending gloves, etc., and obtain good satisfaction, and every little girl will be more than pleased with it. We give it free for selling only two dozen pieces of our Swell Art Jewelry at 10 cents each. Send us your name and address at once and we will send you the Jewelry postpaid and trust you. Return our $2.40 after the sale and we will send you the Reliance Sewing Machine, needle, and full spool of thread without delay. Address, FRIEND SUPPLY CO., Dept. 973, Boston, Mass.

Write Today for our big

LL

SEWING

We will give you a Reliance Sewing Machine, a perfect beauty, made of iron and nickeled steel and hands omely ornamented.

With it you can make clothes for your dolls and help mamma with her sewing. It is per-fectly safe and easy to run. Ladies

整四

50 000 760 00000000

GIRLS!

Talks with @Girls

Conducted by Cousin Marion In order that each cousin may be answered n this column, no cousin must ask more than hree questions in one month.

HIS is the last month of another year, dear Cousins, and we must look back a minute to see what there is in it to teach us how to make the new one better than the old, for we must improve, you know. But let us not waste time in useless regrets. We have all made mistakes, and will make more, but we must not think of them event as marks to show us where not to them except as marks to show us where not to go again. Let us take up the new with new energy and new faith and work onward and upward. I wish you all a Merry Christmas, and I wish you all to do what you can to make it merry for those who may not be so merry as you. Now let us get to work.

The first is from Sunshine, Petaluma, Cal., who is eighteen and wants to know if she should disobey her parents and marry a man forty years old. Most emphatically she should not. The man is old enough to be her father and should teach her to obey her parents. However, we mustn't ask too much of him, and if Sunshine will wait till she is of age, and the man is all right, she can marry him and obey him instead of her parents.

and obey him instead of her parents.

Cecilia, Hiron, Wis.—A young girl of sixteen teaching school will not add greatly to her ability as a teacher, by receiving very much attention from young men. (2) Girls of every age go to country dances. There is no rule, but don't begin too early. (2) The proper time to return from an evening buggy-ride is about ten o'clock, but custom varies. Or it might rain.

Educ Chicago Ill—Drop them both. When a

Edna, Chicago, Ill.—Drop them both. When a girl is "very much in love" with two men it is a sure sign she can't be very much in love with either. As for marrying, you had better wait until you can love but one. Divided love won't work in double harness.

in double harness.

Curiosity, Novasota, Texas.—My, my, and there is a dispute in Texas about which finger the engagement ring goes on? And hundreds of pretty Texas girls become engaged every week? I can hardly believe it. Try the third finger of the left hand and see if it doesn't feel more natural there than anywhere else. (2) It is permitted to kiss your fiance as often as you please. But you won't please if you do it too often. It is also your privilege to ask him to take you anywhere you want to go. He wouldn't want you to go with any other man, would he? Really, dear, I didn't think a Texas girl could be so green.

Pinkie, Petaluma, Cal.—If you are beginning to differ over your religion before you marry, you will do much more of it after you marry, so you had better not marry. (2) If the young man comes to see you three nights in the week, you should be satisfied. How many nights do you want him to what is the matter. But make your letter merely one of friendly inquiry.

Agatha, Fon du Lac, Wis.—Write to him and ask what is the matter. But make your letter merely one of friendly inquiry.

Violet, Emerson, Ark.—Tell him what the people are saying and if you do not want him to come to see you, ask him not to. You say he is all right. If he is, he will respect your wishes.

Puzzled Girlie, Boonville, Cal.—If you love the man very much and he asks you not to go with a certain man whom he does not like and you do, do you think yourself you ought to disregard the wish of the man you love and who loves you? If you do, then go with the other man. (2) Don't marry the man you do not care enough for, and don't continue keeping company with him. (3) No.

Petunia Leaf, Maryville, La.—You should never marry one man when it brings tears to your eyes to look at the picture of another. You do not love the man you are engaged to, and are doing yourself and him a wrong to become his wife. Eighteen is too young to marry, anyway. Wait till you are twenty-one.

Gray Eyes, Goodwater, Ala.—Don't be too nice to Gray Eyes, Goodwater, Ala.—Don't be too nice to him, but be pleasant and persuading, and wait awhile. If he thinks you are for him, you will know it in good time. (2) Rings may be exchanged without any serious results.

Sweet Girl, Weimar, Texas.—It is not customary for the lady to go part way home with the young man when he has called, but it might be done. (2) Better wait till he asks you yet more times. Once is too soon.

Rose, Elgin, Ill.—If it isn't in the Bible it ought to be, that cousins should not marry.

Black Eyes, Cape Girardeau, Mo.-It is quite proper to make the young man a Christmas present.

Doubtful, Roseberg, Oregon.—It is not exactly improper for a girl to have her picture taken with a young man, if he is the right kind, but it is better not to, because strangers who see the picture do not know the circumstances and may make remarks not complimentary. Groups of three or more are well enough. In your case you should have asked the young man's mother to have come into the picture with you. Your sweetheart has acted very nicely, indeed, about it. He ought to make a very good husband.

Jack. Warsaw. Ill.—You are wise to wait till you make a very good husband.

Jack, Warsaw, Ill.—You are wise to wait till you are older and better qualified to become a wife with a house on her hands. If the young man is doing well in California, and likes it there, of course, go out there and live. Wherever you can do the best and be happiest is the place for you. It is not wrong to accept the attention of another man as long as "Fred" does not object, and is too far away to look after you, socially. man as long as "Fred" does not object, and is too far away to look after you, socially.

Mary D., Mooresville, Ia.—He would probably make your married life unhappy and you had better not risk him.

Anxious Lassie, Orient, S. D.—If no one objects, why should you make the engagement long, and not marry this year? You have been engaged nearly a year, and that is long enough. (2) Wear a white evening dress if your fiance wants you to. He will think it is becoming, and what do you care for other people's opinions?

Anxious Ann, University Place, Neb.—If the young man is rich and respectable as you say, your parents' objection is uncalled for, and you might elope with him. They would forgive you as soon as they saw how well you were being provided for.

Friendless, Camden, S. C.—You may overcome your bashfulness by going into company as often as you can and trying to be agreeable to all you meet. Don't be afraid to talk, but compel yourself to take part in conversation. Go away from home as often as possible and meet strangers. You can make friends by thinking of others more than you do of yourself, which you are not now doing.

Blue Eyes, Springfield Mass.—If it takes the young man two years and a half to come to the point, he is too slow for any use, and you should send him along. Ask him flatly if he loves you enough to marry you. That will start him up some. I don't like that kind of a man.

Prox, St. Francisville, La.—I think you are really in love with him and are too young to know it. You show the usual signs. Tell him to keep on pleading for a year, at least. By that time you will be older. (2) Two years, though young people do not wear mourning so long, and should not wear it at all, I think.

Doll, Carns, Neb.—It is hardly an appropriate present, but there are always idiots at weddings who seem to think they are privileged to do anything. You can only tell the person who proposes to make it that if she does, you will never receive her into your home when you are married.

Girl Wife, Nevada City, Cal.—I am glad to know that your marriage at fourteen has turned out hap-pily. Just the same I am glad to know that when a trainload of passengers is wrecked, at least, one person is not killed. Twenty years from now, your opinion may be changed.

opinion may be changed.

Theodosia, Pickens, N. C.—Your engagement is all right, and you will lose nothing by waiting. "Mizpah" is the word usually used in rings. Put that, or anything you wish. The less the better, because, as you say, the waiting may end it. Possibly you had better put the motto of the state of Washington—Alki, meaning, by and by.

Lonesone Girl, Mount Vernon, Nob. It is raise.

Lonesome Girl, Mount Vernon, Neb.—It is wise to be careful, and you had better not be popular, if you have to be "fast" to be so. Ask the young man to call and be pleasant to him. Maybe he is the one.

There, dears, all your questions are answered, and I am perfectly sure some of them are just the answers you wanted. You see this is the Christmas month, and the spirit of Santa Claus is in the air, and he never brings us anything except what we want. May he come to you all, and to all others this year with full stockings. By, by, until the New Year.

COUSIN MARION.

COUSIN MARION.

Every Lady Read This.

Years ago when I was a sufferer, an old nurse told me of a wonderful cure for Leucorrhea, Displacements, Painful Periods, Uterine and Ovarian troubles. It cured me in one month. It is a simple harmless lotion that can be prepared by any one having the recipe. I will send it Free to every suffering sister who writes to me. Address Mrs. L. D. Hudnut, South Bend, Ind.

CUTE CHRISTMAS GIFT.

To make one of the most unique indestructible toys for the children, send for one of our "Teddy Bear" paper patterns and make up one of these popular Bear Toys, cut the material out, sew it up and stuff with sawdust and you have a substitute for the two and three dollar bears now so popular. See pattern offer on page 26, pattern number 4137.

COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

AGENTS WANTED in every county to sell the Good commis- Transparent Handlo sion paid.

Write for terms. Novelty Cutlery Co.. No. 76, Bar St., Canton, O.

BOYS Sample copy of finest Boys' Magazine out. Campbell Pub. Co., Dept.B, Des Moines, Ia.

WE PAY $36 A WEEK AND EXPENSES to men with rigs to In-terpretable HFG. CO.. DRPT. 58, 4 PARSONS, KANB.

GREENBACKS $100 IN STAGE MONEY FOR 100

Good Pay WANTED MEN everywhere-to distribute circulars, advertis-ing matter, tack signs, etc. NA-TIONAL ADV. BUREAU, 214 Oakland Bank Bidg., Chicago.

or Morphine Habit Cured. Free trial treatment. We specially desire cases where other rendies failed. Confidential. HARRIS INSTITUTE, Room 558 400 W. 23d St., New York.

Past, present, future by America's Leading Astrologer. All personal matters of business, health, friends, travel, changes, love affairs, marriage plainly told. Life Reading sent (sealed) for birth-date, 2c, stamp. ADDRESS LEON A. KYRA CO., BOX 683, SYRACUSE, N. V.

for Lavine
Post Cards Free
Far Yau

Id kinds such as Everybody Works but Father, Papa Keeps a Buildog Now, Pim Laying for You, Pim Sorry we lefet, I Got Mine, Why Do the Gliris Refuse Mer
You MUST gets set of these IMMENSE HITTS to mail by your friends. Everybody gelip Fost Card cray. AR so. Sond TEN cents for our new story paper 1 year and get 16 rds free. HOME SWEET HOME, Dept. 31 , CHICAGO, ILL.

EAGLE WATCH COMPANY,
Dept. 67. East Boston, Mass.

STOMACH

TROUBLES

Dr. Young's PEPTOPADS and PEPTOLETS cure where medicines alone fail. They regulate the bowels, relieve soreness, and strengthen the nerves and muscles of the stomach in either sex. You can soon eat what you want without fear of distress. The cures effected are marvelous. If you have Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Distress after. Eating, Nervousness, Dizziness, Heart Fluttering, Sick Headache, etc., send 10c to cover cost of packing and malling, and I will send you a $1.00 treatment absolutely free. It will relieve you immediately. Address, DR. G. C. YOUNG, 116 National Bank Bldg., Jackson, Michigar

Beautiful Prize Free!

CAN you arrange these four groups of letters into the names of four States of the United States? To everyone who answers this puzzle and names not less than three of the States correctly we will give a prize of the magnificent picture, "Welcome Gifts," a fine work of art, 16x.20 inches, showing flowers in eight beautiful colors, a handsome ornament for any home that you will always be proud of. If you are smart enough to solve this puzzle, you will be entitled to this fine picture absolutely free, immediately. We make this remarkable offer to advertise our splendid family this remarkable offer to advertise our splendid family readers. In addition to the botter already has a half millione this big magazine on trial three months free. When core this big magazine on trial three months free, when core this big magazine on trial three months free. When core this advertisement right away and help us fortuduce our magazine. Address at once, PUZZLE DEP" 526 Jackson St., Topeka, Kan.

Has latest design motor, governor, springs and bearings. Wind the motor spring and move the start lever, and the governor regulates the speed. Absolutely the most valuable talking machine ever offered. We give it free for selling only 40 packages of BLUIRS at 10 cents a package, BLUIRS sells very easily. Send us your name and address. We trust you and send your talking machine and Columbia record the same day that you return our $4.00 received from the sale. We guarantee satisfaction. BLUINE MFG. CO., 664, Mill St., Concord Junction, Mass.

Does it Flutter, Palpitate or Skip Beats? Have you Shortness of Breath, Tenderness, Numbness or Pain in left side, Dizziness, Fainting Spells, Spots before the eyes, Sudden Starting in sleep, Nightmare, Hungry or Weak Spells, Oppressed in sleep, Nightmare, Hungry or Weak Spells, Oppressed Feeling in chest, Choking Sensation in throat, Painful to lie on left side, Cold Hands or Feet, Difficult Breathing, Dropsy, Swelling of the feet or ankles, or Neuralgia around the heart? Hyou have one or more of the above symptoms of heart disease, don't fail to use Dr. Kinsman's Celebrated Heart Tablets. One out of four has a weak or diseased heart. Three-fourths of these do not know they have heart trouble and thousands die who have been wrongfully treated for the Stomach, Lungs, Kidneys or Nerves. Don't drop dead like hundreds of others, when Dr. Kinsman's Heart Tablets are within your reach.

FREE TREATMENT COUPON Any sufferer cutting out this coupon and mailing it, with their name and P. O. address, to Dr. F. G. Kinsman, Box 862. Augusta, Maine, will receive a box of Heart Tablets for trial, by return mail, free of charge, of Heart Tablets for trial, by return mail, free of charge. Enclose stamp for postage. Don't risk death by delay.

BEAUTIFUL PICTURES

GOLD SCROLL FRAMES

and are ready for the wall just as re-ceived from us. They are new—just out. TREMENDOUS SELLERS; agents delighted.

FREE OFFER

We will send you an assortment of twelve of these beautiful fast selling pictures. Keep two for your own wall, and sell the other ten to your friends at 22 cents each. When sold, send us the 82 50 collected, and we will send you YOUR CHOICE of silverware set, cluster scarf, require diamond ring ebony tollet set, lace curtains guaranteed watch, talking and sleeping doll, concert accordion, burnt wood outfit, magic lantern with 60 views, upright steam with 60 views, upright steam, and sleeping doll, concert accordion, burnt wood outfit, magic lantern with 60 views, upright steam, as the control of the concert accordion, burnt wood outfit, magic lantern with 60 views, upright steam, as the control of the effort.

YOU KEEP TWO PICTURES for yourself, just for writing us—just for an honest effort. Just writing a War and W

Just write us a line today; say: "Send me the 12 pictures, 10 to sell for 25 cents each, to earn premium, and two to keep." We run all the risk, pay all postage, take back pictures not sold, and give you two of them outright for your trouble in writing us, and pay you liberally for what you sell. Write today; it will only take a minute. Address

W. W. CO., 63-69 Washington Street, Dept. 141, CHICAGO

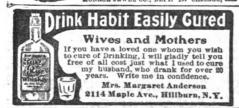

Write Today for our big log of Music Goods, which illustrates and describes the largest assortment in the world of Organs, Pianos, Violins, Guitars, Banjos and music goods of all kinds, and tells all about our wonderful offer to give free 24 weekly music lessens on the Organ, Piano, Violin, Guitar, Mandolin or Banjo. We sell Organs at $18.55 up; Pianos at $58.75 up; Wallis at $1.85 up; Pianos at $58.75 up; Mandolins at $1.85 up; Pianos at $1.85 u John M. Smyth Co. 150-151 West Chicago a sewing machine and want the best sewing machine made at less than one-the best sewing machine tables than one-third agent's or deal-with the best sewing sewing machine stated and describes our famous light ranning and noise less 'Faultless' line in full (over fifty types), tells all about the wonderful improved and perfect mechanism of these best of all machines, gives hundreds of testimonials from people using these unmatchable machines and explains convincingly why our light running and noise less 'Faultless' machines surposs any other machines, machines and explains convincingly what the name, make or price may be. For your own good, for conomy's sake before put by what the name, make or price may be. For your, own good, for conomy is aske before put by what the name, make or price what the name, make or price may be. For your, own good, for the whole of the whole o

Gold Watch AND RING FREE We give a Stem-Wind, SolidGold Laid, guaranteed Watch, engraved on both sides; proper sizes; appears equal to 25-year SOLAD GOLD WATCH; also GOLD LAID Ring est with a sparking gem, brill hant as a GENUINE $50 DIAMOND, for selling 50 jewelry articles at 10e each.
Send address and we will send jewelry postpakit when sold send 25 and we will sand watch and fring
GOR GENT'S SIZE AND STYLE.
MONROE JEWEL CO., DEPT. 107 CHICAGO, ILL

TO WOMEN WHO DREAD MOTHERHOOD!

Information How They May Give Birth to Happy, Healthy Children Absolutely Without Pain-Sent Free.

No woman need any longer dread the pains of child-birth; or remain childless. Dr. J. H. Dye has devoted his life to relieving the sorrows of women. He has proved that all pain at child-birth may be entirely banished, and he will gladly tell you how it may be done absolutely free of charge. Send your name and address to Dr. J. H. Dye, 107 Lewis Block, Buffalo, N. Y., and he will send you, postpaid, his wonderful book which tells how to give birth to happy, healthy children, absolutely without pain; also how to cure sterility. Do not delay but write today. without pain; also ho delay but write today.

This Fine Picture Free

This Family Record is a magnificent work of art, 16x20 inches, in ten beautiful colors; background solid gold; spaces for pictures of the family, also beautiful colors; background solid gold; spaces for pictures of the family, also beautiful serolls on which to register marriages, births and deaths. It is a picture of dazzling beauty that you will always be proud of. To introduce our splendid fa mily magazine and story paper, which aiready has a half million readers, we give it to anyone who sends 10c (stamps or silver) months and picture. We make this unusual offer become a regular subscriber. Send at or

HOUSEHOLD, 640 Jackson St., TOPEKA, KAN-BUYS THE MODEL K GENUINE ECONOMY HAND CREAM SEPARATOR, 400 POUNDS PER HOUR CAPACITY,

the best Separator made in the world, a regular $100.00 machine, and offered on 60 days free trial. For a limited time, the best Separator made in the worn, a regular $100.00 machine, and offered on until our surplus machines are sold, we offer this big 400 pounds per hour capacity new into the proved Model K Economy Hang. Cream collections of the proved Model K Economy Hang. Cream collections of the proved Model K Economy Hang. Cream collections are supported to the proved Model K Economy Hang. Cream collections of the provent made regardless of name or price, and offered for a free 60 days trial on your own farm. In our Free Cream Separator Catalogue we show large illustrations and complete descriptions of this wonderful explanation of our free trial plan, our liberal terms and payment conditions; also illustrations and descriptions of our entire line of cream separators, the very best made in the world and sold on our free trial plan at one-third the prices charged by others. Don't fail to write today for our Big Free Special Cream Separator Catalogue, the greatest cream separator book every farmer; showing why our cream separator factories; our $1.000.00 in gold challenge to every separator manufacturer and our wonderful Profit Sharing Plan, by which you get valuable goods free if you buy from us; everything is explained in this Free Separator Catalogue turns of the profit sharing plan, by which you get valuable goods free if you buy from us; everything is explained in this Free Separator Catalogue turns of the profit sharing plan, by which you get valuable goods free if you buy from us; everything is explained in this Free Separator Catalogue turns of the profit sharing plan, by which you get valuable goods free if you buy from us; everything so the manufacturer and our wonderful Profit Sharing Plan, by which you get valuable goods free if you buy from us; everything and then pay $7.5, 9.5 to this genuine Improved Economy Catalogue to a complete description of this marvelous separator Baccand Separator Sep

Comfort Sisters' Corner

Tested Recipes from Comfort Sisters

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 13.) Another Way of Making the Goulash

Two tablespoonfuls of lard put into a frying-pan add four tablespoonfuls of flour same as in number one, gradually add hot water and vinegar to suit taste. Or one can leave out the vinegar. Bread toasted brown and cut up in squares and dropped in, as in soup, is nice. It may be used as a gravy for potatoes, etc.

Mayonnaise Dressing

Mayonnaise Dressing

One teaspoonful each of ground mustard and powdered sugar, one half teaspoonful of salt, one quarter saltspoonful of cayenne, yolks of two raw eggs, one pint of salad oil, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Mix the first four ingredients in a small bowl; add the eggs; stir well with a wooden spoon. Add the oil, a few drops at a time, stirring until it thickens. If by chance you add too much oil, do not attempt to stir it all in at once, but take it up gradually. When the dressing is thick, thin it with a little lemon; then add oil and lemon alternately, and lastly the vinegar. When ready to serve, add half a cup of whipped cream if you like; the cream makes it whiter and thinner. Never mix the dressing with the salad until ready to serve.

Home: made Marshmallows

Dissolve three ounces of gum arabic, in one half pint of hot water, strain, and add one half pint of powdered sugar. Boil ten minutes, or until the syrup has the consistency of honey, stirring all the time; remove from the fire, and add the white of an egg beaten stiff. Mix it thoroughly, and add two teaspoonfuls of orange flower flavor; pour the paste into a pan dusted with corn starch, and spread about one inch thick. Cut into squares, and when cold roll it in confectioner's sugar.

Fruit Candy

One cocoanut grated. Take one and one half pounds of granulated sugar, wet with the milk of the cocoanut, put in a saucepan, and let it heat slowly, then boil rapidly five minutes, then add the cocoanut, and boil ten minutes longer, stirring constantly. Try a little on a plate, and if it forms a firm paste take from the fire; pour half of it on a large tin lined with paraffine paper; then add to the remainder of the cream, one quarter pound of stoned raisins, one half pound of blanched sliced almonds (pouring boiling water on the almonds before slicing), one pound of pecan nuts, one half cup of hickory-nut meats, all chopped finely. Mix well; pour this over the other cream, and cut into bars.

Dine Peach Sweet Pickles

Vine Peach Sweet Pickles

Take one peck vine peaches, one quart vinegar, two pounds sugar, two ounces ground cinnamon tied in a bag; peel and halve the peaches, remove seed and stick two or three cloves in each half peach; heat vinegar and sugar and cinnamon together, then put in vine peaches and cook until tender, taking care not to let them get very soft; take out carefully and place in jar; let vinegar boil until thickened a little, then pour over fruit; repeat this two mornings, then cover closely and set away in cool, dry place until wanted.

Preserved Vine Peaches

Preserved Uine Peaches
Peel, halve and remove seeds from vine peaches selected to each pound of fruit so prepared; allow one pound of white sugar, sprinkle sugar over fruit and let stand over night, pour off juice into a preserving kettle and let it come to a boil, then place fruit in and cook until a fork will pierce it easily; to each quart of fruit add one small lemon sliced thinly and cook with fruit; take out carefully and place in jars; let syrup boil a few minutes to thicken, then skim and pour over fruit; seal closely.

Canned Vine Peaches

Prepare same as for preserving; to each can of fruit allow one half pound of sugar; half a lemon and one cup of water; let sugar and water come to a boil, then place in fruit and lemon, cooking until tender. Place in jars, boil juice for fifteen minutes and pour over fruit. MRS. L. M. MCGEE.

Apple Frosting

White of one egg, one cup of granulated sugar, one apple grated; mix all together and beat for fifteen minutes.

MRS. AURELIA SAYRE, Sibley, Mich.

German Coffee Cake

German Coffee Cake

One yeast cake, one medium-sized potato, one small cup of butter and lard mixed, one large cup of white sugar, two, eggs, one small nutmeg, one quart sweet milk, one teaspoonful of salt, one and one half cups of seeded raisins, and flour enough to mix. In the evening, dissolve the yeast, and boil and mash fine the potato. Warm half of the milk, and make a sponge as for bread, using enough flour to form a thick batter. Let rise over night. In the morning warm the rest of the milk, and add the butter and lard. Beat the eggs well, add sugar, salt, grated nutmeg, and raisins, and stir all together. Work in flour to make a stiff dough, after adding the sponge. Flour the board, and knead the dough enough to get it into shape. Butter a jar, place the dough in it and set to rise in a warm place. When light roll out into a sheet about an inch thick, and place in a baking-tin. Let rise in a warm place till light, and bake in a moderate oven. While baking brush it over several times with a caramel made of one cup of sugar, one half cup of sweet cream, butter the size of half an egg. and a teaspoonful of cinnamon boiled together. Spread the caramel over-the cake just as you would baste a turkey while it was roasting.

MRS. J. H. STANEET, Pingree, N. Dak.

Lemon Queens

MRS. J. H. STANEET, Pingree, N. Dak.

Lemon Queens

One half cup of butter, and one cup of sugar added gradually, cream; four eggs, one and one fourth cups of sifted flour, grated rind of one half lemon, one tablespoonful of lemon muice, one fourth teaspoonful of salt, one fourth teaspoonful of soda. To creamed butter and sugar, add one egg at a time beating vigorously, then the lemon rind. Mix salt and soda with a little of flour, and lemon juice last. Butter gem pans, and fill half full, beating vigorously before putting in pans. Bake from twenty to thirty minutes.

Mocha Tart

Five eggs, beat-yolks with one and one half cups of granulated sugar, one cup of flour, one half pound of chopped nuts, use one half in batter, and one half on whipped cream, one and one half table-spoonfuls mocha in batter, the same in cream when whipped, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, bake in two layers, and put cream in between with chopped nuts sprinkled on each layer.

MRS. JOHN LYNCH, 6241-2 Noe St., San Francisco,

Maple Fudge

Cal.

Three cups of granulated sugar, one cup of cream or milk, one half cup of pecans (shelled), one half cup of walnuts (shelled), one cup coccanut, two teaspoonfuls of Henderson's Maple Essence. Put sugar and cream in granite saucepan, and bring to a boil, cook until syrup spins hair, then add butter the size of a large walnut, and stir in the Maple Essence, stir in the nuts and the coccanut, finely chopped, beat until the mixture begins to grain, turn into a greased pan, and when it is cool, yet not firm, mark into squares. Wrap the squares neatly in paraffine paper. in paraffine paper.

Maple Jelly

One half box of Knox Gelatine, scant cup of cold water, one pint of boiling water, one cup of sugar, one teaspoonful of Henderson's Maple Essence. Soak the gelatine in cold water until soft, then add the boiling water, sugar, and Maple Essence. Do not allow to boil. When well dissolved strain through a fiannel bag.

Sauce for Pudding

Whites of two eggs, beaten stiff, one and one half cups of sugar, one cup of milk. Cook until it thickens, then add the eggs, and one teaspoonful of tincture of vanilla.

MRS. J. L. ROGERS, 69 W. 94th St., New York, N. Y.

Comfort Postal Request

How to Get a Lot of Souvenir Postals Free

How to Get a Lot of Souvenir Postals Free

This exchanging of Post Cards has become a great fad all over the world and we are now helping our readers get thousands of postals without cost.

Get up a club of subscribers to this paper and have your name put in this list free; you will then receive many exchanges in souvenir postals of all kinds, and will be in a position to return postals of all kinds, and will be in a position to return postals of all kinds, and will be in a position to return postals of all kinds, and will be in a position to return postals of all kinds, and will be in a position to return postals of all kinds, and will be in a position to return postals of all kinds, and will be in a position to return postals of all kinds, and will be in a position to return postals of all kinds, and will be in a position to return postals of all kinds, and will be in a position of a postal postals. Some parties have received his postals are ready of a postal postals and the postals and the postals are ready as a postal paper for 15 cents a year, and we have a very large assortment of elegant Souvenir Post Gards. We will send an assortment of six cards for clubs of three, or twelve for a club of five. As we have thousands of cards, we are ready to help you get a large collection without any outlay on your part whatever. In sending in your club, say whether you want them from any particular city or just assorted up. You can start your collection this way and then exchange with others as you see their name in the list.

HEREAFTER, we cannot insert requests for cards in this column unless you take advantage of this offer. Send us a club of twenty-live subscribers and we will send you our Banner assortment of one hundred American, Foreign and Comic Postals. Below we give a list of some of our regular cards: New York City Views including Flatiron Building, Waldorf Astoria Hotel, Crant's Tomb. Central Park Views, Brooklyn Bridge, Broadway, New York Harbor, Post Office, Statue of Liberty, and hundreds of others comp

Stasia Burr, 561 S. 4th St., San Jose, Cal., colored views. Mary Birkel, 2350 Cedar Ave., Louisville, Ky. Allie M. Winslow, Wessfield, R. F. D., 23, N. Y. William Ray, 1222 7th Ave., Greeley, Col. Judson M. Erbe, Nora Springs, Jowa. Alden F. Keyes Jr., Box 141, Wareham, Mass. Mrs. I. B. Collins, Apache. R. F. D., 2, Okla. Miss Pearl Miller, 710 West 1st Street, Rome, Ga. Wauda A. Bergen, Masonic Home Cottage, Utica, N. Y. Clara M. Hinkley, 26 Kerr St., Buffalo, N. Y. Miss Ester C. Quigley, 724 Howard Ave., New Haven, Conn. Horacc T. Bailey, Box 52, Testus, Missouri. Fred H. Duttweiler, Box 24, Jeffersonville, N. Y. E. McNulty, 2292 15th St., San Francisco, Cal. Miss Grace Bergstresser, Locust Gap, Pa. Mary Day. Trinidad, Humboldt Co., Cal. Miss Rosina C. Lampert, 807 W. Fayette St., Syracuse, N. Y. Miss May Dee Jones, Bridgeport, Ala. Miss Altha Perry, Kingman, Ariz. Blanche H. Velloz, 4 Pine St., Amsterdam, N. Y. Mrs. F. M. Richardson, Salisbury, N. H. A. W. Lanigan, 44 College Ave., Waterville, Maine.

Good Old Songs We All Love

By special request from many of our readers we print the words of a few songs, and will continue to do so each month as space allows. We invite our readers to send in the words of popular old songs which they think would please our six millions of readers. In copying, give each line of poetry a line by itself, do not run it in, as though solid. Please write on one side of paper only.

"Au Revoir"

Say au revoir, but not good by,
For parting brings a bitter sigh;
The past is gone, though mem'ry lives,
One changing thought the future is.
Our duty first, love must not need
What might have been had fate decreed.
'Twere better far had we not met,
I loved you then, I love you yet.

CHORUS.

Say au revoir, but not good by, The past is dead, love cannot die. "Twere better far had we not met, I loved you then, I love you yet.

The waters glide; the oars lie still. A rippling laugh; a word at will. Where angels fear, fools dare not tread, Shall live for e'er, the past is dead. This one farewell may be our last, The word is spoken, the die is cast, And still my heart throbs wild with pain, For fear we ne'er shall meet again.

Beautiful Isle

Somewhere the sun is shining, Somewhere the songbirds dwell; Hush, then. thy sad repining; God lives, and all is well.

Somewhere, somewhere, Beautiful Isle of Somewhere! Laud of the true, where we live anew— Beautiful Isle of Somewhere!

Somewhere the day is longer, Somewhere the task is done; Somewhere the heart is stronger, Somewhere the guerdon won.

CHORUS.

Somewhere the load is lifted, Close by an open gate; Somewhere the clouds are rifted. Somewhere the angels wait no money. Ev. 30 Days' Approval I est warker Plan Just send a postal for particulars. We want to tell you about the Walker Plan and how we furnish you this set of Dishes for only $1.00 in cash in connection with the purchase of a small order of household supplies at factory prices—supplies you use every day in your home. Write us a postal. We will send you our large general catalogue of 1400 other bargains equal to this dish offer, also photographic reproduction of these dishes, and tell you about the Walker Plan. Local Walker Club Secretaries wanted everywhere. We will pay you handsomely for a few hours of your lime ew mouth. Address. 600 Second-Hand BICYCLES $3 to $8. Bargain list free. Dept. C3, Mead Cycle Co., Chlcago.

Front on 30 Days' Approval Test walker Plan

This 84-Piece Only DINNER SET ON THE

$2.00 A DAY earned at home writing; send stamp.
ART COLLEGE, Laporte, Ind. Visiting Cards Name on 25 neat cards 10c. 18 Fun Cards 16c. Matteson, 296 Sta. L., Brooklyn.N.X. Ocolored Postals, 20c. Frosted Love Scenes, Illuminated & Satin Xmas. Souvenir Art Co., West Haven, Conn.

$8 Paid Per 100 for Distributing Samples of Washing Samples of Washing PLAYS Large List. Dialogues, Speakers, Hand Books, Drills, Catalogue free, T. U. DENISON, Pub. Dept. S. Chicago.

$10 DAY Seiling Spectacles. Agents wanted, Catalog free. Bates Optical Co., Boston, Mass.

WANTED Boys and Girls" To work a few min-utes for nice present. Two stamps for package. C. STURTZ, Mfgr., 4658 State St.. Chicago.

"WONDERFUL!" Bubble Gattling Gun.
Shoots 12 Big Bubbles from one dip. Sample 10c. NATIONAL NEWS Co., Chicago.

AVERS CATARRH JELLY cures Catarrh and Deafness. Write today for 25c tube on approval. If benefited send the money. Ayers Chemical Co., Sidney, O.

CANGER Cured at home; No pain, knife, plas-ter or oils. Send for Free Treatise. Add. A. J. Miller, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

AGENTS CREDIT. Perfumes, Flavors, etc., Big Profits. Expr. Pd. Terms free, Herbene Agency Co., Box254, Station L. New York.

"SKIDOO", Post Cards, Buttinsky, Liars License and 3 others sent with our catalogue for 10c. S. S. SIKSAY & CO., Bridgeport, Conn.

Strainer Spoon, Rapid seller, Large catalog free. $4 to $5a day RICHARDSON MFG. CO. Dept. C. BATH, N. Y.

16 COMIC POST CARDS 109 every one a corker. 16 cards, 10c; 48 cards, 25c. Big novelty catalog free.
DRAKE CARD CO., DEPT. 21, 530 VAN BUREN ST., CHICAGO.

$85 Per Month MEN to travel, collect names of music lovers, advertise and give away samples. Expenses advanced. Permanent. Write for particulars samples. Expenses advanced. Permanent. Write for particular W. R. Rider Music Company, CHICAGO

$65 PER MONTH Straight Salary and expenses, to men with rig, to introduce our Poultry Remedies. Bank ref's given. Don't ans'r unless you mean business. Eureka Poultry Food Mfg. Co., Dept. 40, East St. Leuis, M.

I Can Sell Your Farm

Home or business! No matter where located, for cash in less than 90 days. Don't wait. Write today, giving description and cash price. A. EDGAR DAVIS, Real Estate Broker, 430 Dept., Lincoln, Neb.

SONGS Publ'd ROYALTY
On ROYALTY
By New York's Big MUSIC FIRM. No CHARGE FOR WRITING MUSIC.
N.A. MUSIC CO., Dept. L. 59 W. 28th St., New York.

COMIC POST CARDS FREE

A set of 3 funniest comic post cards you ever saw, if you send 2c-stamp for postage. Full set of 12, all different, for its; 3 full sets 25 cs. Everyone answering this ad immediately will also receive our splendid family magazine and story paper 3 months on trial free. Address at once The Household, 117 Crawford Bik., Topeka, Kan.

FREE GOLD WATCH AND FREE Gnaranteed American Watch with gold-laid case beautifully en-graved. The manufacturers will repair any breaks for one year. Perfect time-keeper; very thin. With t comes a handsome gold band King which will wear for we will at once send you the Gold Watch and any size Ring you select

BLUINE MFG. CO., 666 Mill St., Concord Junc., Mass Sideboard and Bureau Scarf

Also two nine-inch dollies to match. This scarf design is stamped on fine quality material.

60 inches in length, 18 inches wide, over ONE THOUSAND SQUARE INCHES; the largest pattern outfit we ever offered. In addition are two large doily designs making a complete bureau or sideboard set that will please our lady readers. The edge of the scraf is to be worked in buttonhole stitch, the design in the center to be embroidered in long and short outline, stitch or solid. The two doiles may be worked the same; this makes a complete set that will be very useful and gain the envy and admiration of your friends. We send a circular describing many other patterns; all are free to you.

Special Offer: For a club of 3 yearly subscribers to this magazine at 15 cents.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

"Virtue itself offends when coupled with for bidding manners."-Bishop Middleton.

In order to meet the demand for information made by COMFORT readers on the kindred subjects of Miquette and Personal Appearance, this column will be devoted to them, and all questions will be ensurered, but no inquirer shall ask more than two questions each month. We would suggest to readers to cut this column out and paste it in a scrap book. Address letters to Etiquette Editor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Blue Eyes, Amazonia, Mo.—You may ask the young man to call wherever you see him, if the epportunity is favorable. He should respond to your fondness for him by asking you if he might Undecided, Malmo, Minn.—A girl at a party or dance without an escort, or a chaperon, is apt to be neglected and become a wallflower. Better stay at home than be that. Small parties where all are friends don't call for escorts, but dances do. (2) Mighteen, as a rule, is too young to marry, but there are exceptions to the rule. As you are supporting yourself, and have an opportunity to marry a good man who wants to give you his home to preside over, it would be quite proper for you to marry.

Julia, Arago, Minn.—Wear your hair in the most becoming fashion, no matter what the prevailing mode may be. (2) Long kimonas are not worn all day except by women who do not like to exert themselves to look spick and span. (3) White sateen will make a very becoming dress for a state occasion, but lighter material is better for simple affairs.

Speaking Potalers Col.

Sunshine, Petaluma, Cal.—You must eat simple food and no grease, to remove one cause of pimples. Take plenty of exercise in the open air, and let the sun shine on you. Take as long breaths as you can, and plenty of them. Keep the skin clean with hot water and pure soap. At night apply this cleansing cream: Lanoline, one and a quarter ounces; almond oil, same; sulphur precipitate, same; oxide of zine, five drams; violet extract, one dram; orangeflower water, four ounces; almond oil, four ounces; white wax, two ounces. Melt the wax in a double boiler, then add the oil, and before it cools put in the elderflower water, and beat until cold. Wipe off the cream thoroughly, bathe with hot water, and apply this lotton; precipitate of sulphur, one dram; spirits of camphor, one dram; glycerine, one dram; rose water, four ounces.

Brown Eyes, Bellair, Fla.—Yes, it makes her com-

Brown Eyes, Bellair, Fla.—Yes, it makes her common. (2) Don't mention love to a man until he mentions it to you, and tells you he loves you.
(3) It is quite proper.

(3) It is quite proper.

Rosebud, Buckhead, Okla.—It is difficult to reduce flesh, except by the most careful diet, eating no fats, no sweets, and only lean meat. Take vigorous exercise to convert the fat into muscle.

Red Top, Rockland, Pa.—See answer to Rosebud, above. (2) Unless your red hair is not red, you had better not try to doctor it. Red hair is really beautiful, and should make any woman proud to have it.

Skidoo, Greenup, Ill.—It is proper to give the man a Christmas present even though he does not give you one. But don't give it to him unless you know it will be acceptable from you.

J. McC., Jeffersonville, Ind.—You had better get such a formula from a druggist with advice how to use it as it is dangerous, and may result in per-manent injury, unless you know exactly how to apply it.

Black-eyed Beauty, Jamestown, N. Dak.—See answer above to "Rosebud."

Gray Eyes, Peck, Idaho.—The following astringent is recommended by those who have tried it: Aristol, two grams; white vaseline, thirty grams; essence of peppermint, ten drops. Rub with this very gently each night, and cover with a compress wet with the following: Alum, two grains; acetate of lead, thirty grains; distilled water, four hundred grains. Cover the compresses with olled-sitk, and keep on for twelve hours. It will require several months of treatment.

several months of treatment.

Gray Eyes, Sheridan, Ind.—This eyebrow tonic is said to be good to make the eyebrows heavy: Tincture of rosemary, five grams; tincture of cantharides, one gram; eau decologne, lifty grams; spirits of camphor, fifty grams. An eyelash ointment is made as follows: Sulphate of quinine five grains; sweet almond oil, one ounce. This is to be applied with a sable brush. We question very much whether it will make your lashes long and curly.

Curly.

Blue Eyes, Shelby, Ohio.—You are too young to be accepting the attention of young men, unless you are out of school, and have nothing else to do. Twin Sister, Claud, Ala.—As far as years are concerned a man nineteen years older than the woman he marries is quite young enough, but the man should be at least fifty years old. A man of thirty-three should not marry a girl of fourteen. If you and the man are thoroughly congenial and he is young for his age, you might take the risk.

Rosa, Lone Grove, Kans.—The lady may do as she pleases about removing coat and hat when she is married at a judge's office, or a parsonage. Rules of etiquette do not apply under such circumstances.

Ethel, Charlevoi, Mich.—At seventeen you can easily wait for three or four years to see how the young man will turn out. Don't be in such a hurry to get into trouble.

Black Eyes, Ramona, Kans.—You might make yourself a blonde by using peroxide of hydrogen, but you would be much more sensible and true to leave your hair as the Lord gave it to you.

L. R., Butte, Mont.—We think that you at twenty and he at thirty-seven are not too far apart in age to be as happy as most married people, if you are congenial.

Congenial.

Trouble, Gordon, Pa.—Yours is only a lovers' quarrel, and you will have to work your own way out of it. We hardly think either of your hearts will break if you never become good friends as you used to be. You didn't treat him fairly, though being a woman you may have some privileges that men don't always like.

men don't always like.

M. J., Livingstone, Mont.—Curly hair being natural you cannot make it straight. (2) It is not proper to whisper in company unless you can do so when you are not observed. (3) Lemon juice will remove berry stains. They will yield somewhat to hot water and soap, and time will remove them in a few days.

Rocky Mountain Girl, Pinecreek, Mont.—It is not good form for a man to call a girl by her first name until they become well acquainted and she gives him permission. (2) Try this on falling hair: Distilled witch-hazel, five ounces; corrosive sublimate, ten grains. (3) You can get a better tooth powder at the drug store than you can possibly compound yourself.

Blue Eyes, San Luis, Cal.—Under the circumstances you may go to him to be married, though he might come to you, and you could get married quietly and return to his home. If you go to him, you should take a chaperon with you.

DON'T NECLECT

CATARRH SPECIALIST SPROULE Who Will Give Free Advice on Curing Catarrh to All Who Ask For It.

Take it in hand at once! Drive it out of your system before it ruins your health—your happiness-your very life itself.

Don't be blind to its dangers, because it works so quietly. Catarrh wrecks more lives than all the other diseases put together—it leads on every year to thousands upon thousands of deaths.

Are you making that common, dangerous mistake of thinking Catarrh a trifling allment? Are you fooling yourself with the idea it's only a stubborn, obstinate head-cold that in time will "cure itself"?

Don't deceive yourself any longer! Catarrh can't cure itself. While you heedlessly neglect it, you're fast becoming a hawking, spitting, foul-breathed nuisance—an object of disgust to everyone you meet. Worse still—you're allowing Catarrh to get down to your lungs.

Once Catarrh settles on the lungs it's no longer

Once Catarrh settles on the lungs it's no longer Catarrh—it's Consumption. Consumption often results from neglected Catarrh, and great numbers of people die every year just because they've neglected Cafarrh.

CURE YOUR CATARRH NOW—don't let it run on another day. Write to me at once and let me give you really helpful and valuable on just how to cure Catarrh. It shall not cost you a on just how to cure Catarrh. It shall not cost you a cent, and it's bound to be of wonderful aid to you. Let me show you what I'll do for you entirely without charge. For twenty-one years I've been studying and curing Catarrh. Now I offer you, without any expense whatever, free consultation and advice on curing your trouble—the benefit of my wide knowledge and beneficial discoveries.

MEDICAL ADVICE FREE

Don't let this chance go by—accept my assistance today! It's promised in genuine sincerity and friendliness. People all over North America, who've already received my advice, gladly testify to what it has done for them. I'll cheerfully send you names and addresses of those who have sought my aid. Now they are cured of Catarrh as they willingly bear witness.

Learn at once how Catarrh can be cured—

Learn at once how Catarrh can be cured-

Learn at once how Catarrh can be cured—thoroughly and successfully.

Simply answer my questions yes or no, write your name and address plainly on the dotted lines, cut out the free medical advice coupon and mail it to me without delay. Address Catarrh Specialist Sproule, (Graduate in medicine and Surgery, Dublin University, Ireland, formerly Surgeon British Royal Mail Naval Service), 233. Trade Building, Boston. Don't waste any time—delays are dangerous. Do it NOW.

CUT OUT THIS COUPON

It entitles readers of this paper to free medical advice on curing Catarrh. Is your throat raw? Do you sneeze often? Is your breath foul? Are your eyes watery? Do you take cold easily? Do you take cold easily?
Is your nose stopped up?
Do you have to spit often?
Do crusts form in the nose?
Are you worse in damp weather?
Do you blow your nose a good deal?
Does your mouth taste bad mornings?
Do you have a dull feeling in your head?
Do you have to clear your throat on rising?
Is there a tickling sensation in your throat?
Do you have a discharge from your nose?
Does the mucus drop in back of throat?

ADDRESS.

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

MRS. MARIA VAN ALSTINE.

102 Pioneer St. Cooperatown, N. Y.

Mrs. Van Alstine writes "I have steadily improved since using your remedies, and can say there is no more trouble with Catarrh, no more noises in my head to trouble me at night and my hearing is entirely cured. I have a new lease of life at the good old age of seventy-two. Your treatment is wonderful."

MRS. CARRIE B. RICE,
Box 156, R. No. 2, Huntington, Ind.
Mrs. Rice writes: "I had catarrh so bad my head never where the state of the s

MARRY RICH Big List of Descriptions and Photos FREE (Sealed).
Standard Cor. Club, 108 Avers Ave., Chicago.

X-PAY WONDER Everyholy wants With it you can apparently see the bones through your fiest, the lead in a pencit, or, transparent; lets of fun. Postpald 10s, 3 for 25s. FREE with each order the rise light & Kissing Soons moving pictures. C. Armstrong, Sta. 6, 66, Chingson HARRY Photos and addresses of rich and handsome people who want to marry, sent free, sealed. Write to day. THE PILOT, Dopt. 19 168 N. Hamiin Ave., Chicago, iii. MARRY WEALTH - BEAUTY. Marriage Directory FREE TO ALL. Pay when money for particulars, Soloct Glub, Bept. 15, Tekonsha, Mich.

MRS. LUCILE AINSLEE

Send me your name and date of birth with a 2 cent stamp, and I will send you a horoscope of your life from the cradle to the grave, absolutely free of cost. I can tell you just what to do to become happy, and can so lay the future before you, that you will bless the day you first wrote to me.

When you look around among your acquaintances and can see those who are successful both in family matters and in business and money affairs, who you know are no smarter than you are yourself, don't you often think well "That's their luck," but I have had bad luck you say to yourself, now let me tell you something and there is no question about it, they are successial because they have been advised by some competent astrologer. This you can put down as certain.

HIRAM GUNTHER

Read what a few of my Patrons say:

I followed the advice you gave me, and everything has turned out grandly. Charley and I are now married, and in our happiness we pray that you may live long to continue in your grand and noble calling.

NELLIE ARMSTRONG.

Your wonderful power is beyond my understanding. You not only told me about affairs that thought no one new anything about, but all you predicted has come true. MRS. LUCILE AINSLEE.

I bless the day when I wrote to you—it was the turning point in my life—both in family and money HIRAM GUNTHER. matters.

Following your advice about becoming an actress, I am now on the road to fame and fortune. My last season was a complete success, and I now have many flattering offers from several managers, and just to think when I first wrote to you, I was only a poor country girl with no future. I owe it all to you, dear Professor, how can I ever pay you?

GRACE KARINTH.

STATE OF CONNECTICUT, $ 85.
COUNTY OF FAIRFIELD, $ BRIDGEPORT, July 15, 1905. I do hereby certify that I have compared the foregoing copies of photographs and testimonials with the original photographs and testimonials and that the same are correct transcripts therefrom.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my official seal.

J. D. TOOMEY, JR.,

Notary Public
Remember I send you this

Remember I send you this horoscope absolutely FREE. Don't hesitate a moment, but write at once and I will prove to you just what I say, I have made thousands happy and prosperous and can do the same for you.

GRACE KARINTH.

NELLIE ARMSTRONG. Simply send me your name and birth date with a 2-cent postage stamp, and I will do the rest. Shakespeare said: The stars above us govern our conditions. Why should you doubt?

PROF. LEO AMZI, Dept. A. 6, Bridgeport, Conn.

Comfort's Information Bureau

Under this heading all questions by COMFORT readers on subjects not related to the special departments elsewhere in the paper will be answered, as far as may be. COMFORT readers are advised to read carefully the advertisement in this paper, as they will often find in them what they seek through their questions in this column. They will thus save time, labor and postage. Letters reaching this office after the 26th of the month cannot be answered in the issue of the following month.

G. R., Bluffton, Ind.—We do not recognize the magazine by your description and cannot give you its name. (2) The fate of the spy depends upon what the officer in command thinks about it. The law is not so well defined that a court martial must be very particular.

If A. D. Y. of Lloydsville, O., will write to Elizabeth Osborne, Calla, O., he may hear of something to his advantage in the matter of photo-engraving.

R. Hekeler, Peterson, N. H., would like to hear from parties having goats for sale.

Mrs. A. J. T., Idaho Falls, Idaho.—We do not know how responsible they are. (2) Don't have a song published unless you can have it done on royalty, no matter what the firm is, from the highest to the lowest.

J. T., Carden Bottom, Ark.—We think you will not find tax assessors' duties set forth in the constitution of your State. However, you are on the ground and might read up on the Arkansas constitution. Otherwise, ask the sheriff of your

O. B., Beardstown, Ill.—Museums do not buy old relics unless they can see them. They are usually in the market to buy what they want, if some philanthropic person will not donate it. Write to Field Museum, Chicago.

B. S., Endersby, Oregon.—The best publisher is the one who will buy your stories. The publisher determines the price which runs from $2 a thousand words to $200. There are hundreds of publishers looking for good stories, but they must be very good stories, better than you can write, we

R. A. H., Rosie, Ark.—Write to Brentano, New York City.

Reader, Gulfport, Miss.—There have been various reports of premiums for bottles that cannot be used again, but we think they cannot be materialized. Indeed, we do not think they were ever very substantial. If you have such a bottle, you will have no trouble getting all the money for it you want. We do not know about the constituents of the beverage you ask about. It is a trade secret.

E. M. G., Jacksonville Mo.—De Lesseps was the engineer-in-chief of the Panama Canal under French authority. For detailed information write to Panama Canal Commission, Washington, D. C.—P. G. L. Dixon, Mo.—Write to the Simmons Birge.

P. G. L., Dixon, Mo.—Write to the Simmons Birge Hardware Co., St. Louis, Mo.

Hardware Co., St. Louis, Mo.

M. M., Durango, Col.—William Penn, the son of Admiral Penn, was born in England, and, though an aristocrat by birth, became converted to Quakerism at college and was an extremist. His father, angered at him, sent him to travel in order to free him from the influence. In the course of his travels he was in Ireland, where he met again, the Quaker who had converted him, and he took it up again, more vigorously than ever. He was imprisoned in Ireland for his opinions. He made friends, however, even among his enemies, by his honesty and firmness, with great amiability of temper, and at last received concessions of land in America, called Pennsylvania, in honor of his father, a friend of the Duke of York and King George. Haven't you an encyclopædia in Durango, where yon could find detailed history of Penn?

Mrs. T. H. B., Central Lake, Mich.—Why do you

Mrs. T. H. B., Central Lake, Mich.—Why do you wish to waste time and postage writing to rich people? We will not give you the address.

Thelma, Covert, Kans.—Send to the editors of any or all of the magazines. They buy short stories, if they are good.

T. M., Winchester, Wash.—Apply to Commissioner of Patents, Washington, D. C., for instructions how to proceed to secure a patent.

C. H. B., Bangor, Me.—Write to Brentano, New York City. They will tell you the best on the subject, and will give you the price. Be sure to ask what the price will be.

A. L. G., Dunnegan, Mo.—Unless the flint is of some peculiar and useful quality, there is nothing in it. Write to your State Geologist at Jefferson

D. L. G., Ethel, Mo.—You could get it from any bookseller in St. Louis, and cheaper at a second-hand place than elsewhere. We have no idea what the price would be, but nothing extravagant, as it is not rare.

Bookworm, Waldo, O.—We' believe the publishers are Street & Smith, New York City. The number of books will depend upon how many stories are in a volume. Inquire of the same firm as to the other book you ask about.

Mrs. Charles Adams, 1950 State St., Salt Lake City, Utah, would like to have enough balsam pine, or sweet grass, to fill a sofa pillow. Can any Com-roker reader accommodate her?

or sweet grass, to fin a sola phrow. Can any conroat reader accommodate her?

P. H. S., Beasley, Texas.—We have no means of knowing, or getting such information. The Mayor of Boston might give you some hints.

C. J. H., Morrisville, Vt.—You can get the book from any bookseller in Boston, or from your own town bookstore, if you have one. It ranges in price from about ten cents, up, according to binding.

Basket, Fruithurst, Ala.—Whether it would pay or not could only be determined by your making inquiry as to what sale might be expected. Baskets are made so cheaply by machinery in large quantities, that unless you could turn out something unique and original, or beautiful, there would not be much money in it. You might build up a small local trade. Ask your storekeepers if they will handle your goods.

M. M., Ayenel, N. J.—We do not know the address

they will handle your goods.

M. M., Avenel, N. J.—We do not know the address of the S-W P. A., but we fancy it would be a good thing for a lot of people who pay money to find out what they should have known without cost. (2) Write to G. B. Calman, 42 East 23rd St., N. Y. City. Also inquire of him about extracting color from stamps. (3) There is a time limit, we suppose, but it varies in different states. Ask at your nearest bank. (4) Bad circulation is the cause. See a physician.

Oni Vive Santa Poss Call Vive

Qui Vive, Santa Rosa, Cal.—You can get copyright on music by applying to Copyright Division, Congressional Library, Washington, D. C. Ask for instructions and you will receive all that you require. (2) A drawing enlarged from another canot be honestly sold. Drawings must be in ink, and they must be original.

BED-WETTING WIE PAYS SAMPLE FREE. Dr. B. W. Tonkin, Box 01 2 Kd wardsburg, Bieh.

PILES Absolutely cured. Never to return.
A Boon to Sufferers. Acts like Magic.
Trial box MAILED FREE. Address,
Dr.E.M.Botot, Box 978, Augusta, Ma.

One Way of Wooing

By Stanhope Guardian

ITH trembling fingers Mazie opened the letter, glanced at its begin-ning, then ran her eyes down the two closely written pages, her face growing whiter and whiter each minute.
"Darling Mazie," the letter began,

"Darling Mazie," the letter began,
"By this time you have heard of Fred Charleton's marriage, and I expect you are rejoicing to get rid of so constant an adorer, Although I confess I was surprised to hear of his marriage. I thought he was your private property, but then men will do such strange things at times, and the girl is awfully rich, and in these days men care more for money than anything else.
"If I were you I'd cultivate the new lady.

"If I were you, I'd cultivate the new lady, for if she is rich, she might help you along in society. Dear Mazie, I do hope that this is not news to you, for I wouldn't hurt you for anything, but I thought you ought to know. I believe it is all a secret. What is not the word of the you think?

ido you think?
"If I can do anything, let me know. If he has thrown you down, he and his wife ought to be blacklisted.

to be blacklisted.
"As ever, your devoted friend,
"Gertie Wingfield." "It is terrible," poor little Mazie sobbed, the tears running down her face and upon the letter.

"Gertie knows that I knew nothing about it, and I'd like to kill her," with a burst of anger. "Fred was mine, mine, until that awful woman caught him, but who is she?" and her eager eyes searched the letter.

"She didn't tell me, but I'll find out," and the red lips closed tightly.

No wonder she was angry. For over a year Fred Charleton had been her shadow, devoted to her, and while there was no regular engagement between them, she had certainly expected to be his wife. To be sure she had the letter.

pagement between them, she had certainly expected to be his wife. To be sure she had been a little coquettish, that she knew, drawing back whenever Fred had been serious, and now she supposed she could not complain when he had chosen a wife.

"Still he knew I loved him," she sobbed, then stopped:

then stopped:

"Did he know? I never really let him know for certain," she thought, and then sobbed again as she thought of the bright, intelliyoung face she had grown to love so

'Why, I never thought of Fred leaving me,' che told herself, as she sat, alternately sob-bing, and reading the letter.
"Oh, if I only had my chance again," she eried at last, springing to her feet, and con-fronting Fred.

"Why are you here?" she stammered, realizing that her face was tearstained, and that he had no right to seek her now that he was married man.

married man. Evidently the young man did not notice any signs of discomfiture, for he said cheerily: "Well, going to the picnic?"

All the anger which had been welling up the heart burst out, and she said angrily: "What business is it of yours?"

The young man smiled easily as he returned with the laugh she knew and loved so well: "None, except that I intend to take you, that's all, my dear Mazie."

Her face blazing with indignation, she tamped her little foot, saying: "And do you think I will go with your wife?"

You have mixed your prepositions slightly, dearest. I do not expect you to go with, but I would love to have you as my wife."

Mazie paused to look at him. There was mazie paused to look at him. There was no expression of indignation, of confusion on his face, only of a great hope.

"I don't understand," she said slowly, two more tears rolling down her face. How dear he was now when she believed him lost for-

"Neither do I. Oh, I say, Mazle, dear, don't ry," and he sprang forward, his arms outstretched.

"Keep away," she cried, shrinking back, for she was terribly afraid that she would yield to the temptation, she did love him so. "Mazie, dear, tell me, what makes you cry and act so strange?' he asked gently. "You have no right to be here."
"I suppose I haven't any real right, but it to me, dear, tor you know I love you very dearly," he said quite simply.

Mazie's face took on a horrified expression, and she said abruptly:
"I thought you were a man of honor!"

"I thought you were a man of honor!"

"You are not, to come here and talk this way to me."

"And why is that dishonorable? I love you 'Hush, Fred, hush!"

"I tell you I love you, and I want to marry you above everything else in the world," and the earnest young face was flushed.
"Fred. Fred, how can you?" wailed the young girl, her face now buried in her hands. "Mazie, explain. I love you, you know that. I want to marry you, you ought to have known that long ago. Now what is there wrong about that? Why do you cry and call me names?" and his voice was earnest enough to convince anyone, and no wonder Mazie thrust Gertie's letter into his hand. The young man read it through from one end to the other, then asked slowly:

"Could you believe it?"
"It isn't true then, Fred, oh, tell me?"
"Mazie!" was all he said, but it was enough, for with a perfect storm of sobs, the threw herself into the waiting arms and the threw herself into the waiting arms, and some of the agony left her. As soon as she was able to speak, she said brokenly:
"It nearly killed me. Fred."

"And you could believe such a thing of me?"

he asked again.
"But it was so plausible, Fred."
"I know," he said, frowning as he glanced ht the cruel letter, then he started, and said

Mazie, it was a cruel jest. My cousin, Fred Charleton, was married last week, you remember I went to the wedding in Chicago, a thousand miles from here. Gertie has played on that in writing you this way."

"I see," she said slowly, then she asked in slightly changed tone:

"Why should she want to injure you to me in that way?"

The young man's face flushed slightly, besere he said quite honestly:

"I'll tell you, dear, although it sounds a little caddish to say anything, once I paid her some attention, and she wanted to marry me, this is her revenge."

Mazie studied a moment, then asked slowly:

"You didn't give her any reason to think you were in earnest?"

'I give you my word of honor," was the straight reply.
"And you are free in every way to ask me to be your wife?"

"Absolutely."
"Well," she said slowly.
"What is your reply, darling?" he asked, bending over her.
"You haven't asked me anything," she said,
dimpling and blushing.

dimpling and blushing.
"You little tease, then will you marry me, sweetheart, and make me happy ever afterwards?" and there could be no doubt as to his sincerity.

Without any hesitation, having learned her own heart, Mazie lifted her great blue eyes to his, replying:

"Yes, dear," and she has never learned that Fred had Gertle write the letter she did, so as to force the little coquette to decide.

The Family Doctor

So many inquiries are received by COMFORT concerning the health of the family that a column will be devoted to answering them. The remedies and advice here given are intended only for simple cases; serious cases should be referred to physicians, not to us. COMFORT readers are advised to read carefully the advertisements in this paper, as they will often find in them what they will though their questions in this column. They will thus save time, labor and postage. Address The Family Doctor, Comfort, Augusta, Maine.

N. B. M., Covington, Ky.—Better see a doctor about your being sleepy all the time. You give no symptoms, and we do not know what might be the cause. In any event, unless you wake uppretty soon, you will be so the doctors will have to come to see you.

A. A., Independence, Ia.—We do not think you will get much benefit for your rheumatism from sassafras tea. Wintergreen tea might be of advantage.

Comfort Reader, Florence, Neb.—Ordinary depilatories will not kill superfluous hair. Their effect is only temporary. As far as we know there is nothing to remove superfluous hair permanently except treatment by specialists, which is very expensive. So expensive, in fact, that unless you are rich you could not afford it.

Brown Eyes, Rockwood, Tenn.—Epileptic fits are sometimes curable by specialists, but as a rule, epilepsy is considered to be incurable. You can only receive proper treatment from a physician who can see you and study your condition.

M. F. H., Negley, O.—How do you know your heart trouble is not from indigestion? Has any physician told you so? If you have real heart dis-ease you can get no help from newspaper treatment.

ease you can get no help from newspaper treatment. E. R., Ward, S. D.—There is no way to remove the hair from your face except by the use of depilatories which are not permanent in their effects. A depilatory may be made as follows: Orpiment, one part; starch and quicklime, each, ten parts. Powder the orpiment thoroughly, mix with the starch and lime. Make a portion into paste with water, when you wish to use it. Apply it on the hairy parts and let it remain a few minutes, four to six, then remove with a dull knife, wash in hot water and apply cold cream.

Blue Bell, Arkdale, Wis.—Lavender water is a preparation made from leaves and flowers of lavender, with water and spirits. Distilled water is water boiled and the vapor condensed. You can get muriate of ammonia at any drug store. A dram is sixty grains, and a grain is one-seventhousandth of a pound avoirdupois.

of a pound avoirdupois.

D. A. A., Richfield, N. Y.—You can reduce your size by vigorous exercise, and by eating only lean meats, no sweets or fat, and drinking very little water. Some obesity medicines are good and some are not, and you can only find out which are good by risking your health trying. (2) A so-called liquid powder for the face is made of zinc oxide, half ounce; glycerine, two ounces; rose water, two ounces. Shake the bottle, and apply with a sponge. We think, however, that some simple powder is preferable. preferable.

If "Distressed, Mozark, Mo.," making inquiry in this column some time ago, will write to Mrs. Lydia Roberts, 4301 Gass St., Denver, Col., he may find the remedy he is looking for.

M. A. Y., Oak Park, Ill.—We recommend that you go into Chicago, and subject your case to the physicians at any of the large hospitals. There you will get the very best advice and treatment, and at no cost if you are unable to pay.

Distressed Patty, Tracy, Minn.—The red face seems to be natural, and to remedy it will require treatment by a specialist in skin diseases, although it may be that a course of dieting and proper exercise might be of some avail. Have you ever consulted a physician? If not, why not?

unity relieves the most violent attack and insures com-bible sleep. NO WAITING for RESULTS. Being used by lation, its action is unmediate, direct and Cortaina and the state of the state of the state of the state ricca the most separate for the state of the state of the ricca the most separate for the state of the s or, or by mail. Samples Free for stamp.

DR. R. SCHIFFMANN, St. Paul, Minn.

IF YOU WANT TO RECEIVE

I CURE CANCER

My Mild Combination Treatment is not a NEW Remedy. It has the Experience of Years Back of it.

I have spent my entire professional life in the treatment of Cancer. I have so perfected my Mild Combination Treatment that it is free from pain. It quickly destroys the deadly Cancerous growth and at the same time eliminates it from the system, thus preventing a return of the disease.

My Mild Combination Treatment has removed

Cancer from the list of deadly fatal diseases and placed it among the curable. This is especially gratifying when it is known that cancer is increasing at an alarming rate, the disease having quadrupled itse'f in the last 40 years, statistics showing that it alone causes 100,000 deaths yearly in the United States

THE KNIFE DOES NOT CURE.

Anydoctor who uses a surgeon's knife in an attempt to cure Cancer is performing an act little short of criminal. The patient suffers untold agony, and after a short time finds himself in worse condition than before the knife was used.

Operations are not only unnecessary in giving relief for Cancer, but they produce most serious after-results. It is utterly impossible to know when all the diseased cells have been removed for the reason that the blood flowing from the fresh wound prevents the surgeon from determining the result of the operation. If you value your life, avoid the knife.

PAINFUL TREATMENT UNNECESSARY

There is no necessity for the patient, already weak from suffering, enduring the intense pain caused by the application of causties, burning plasters, fiery poultices, etc. I have cured many hundreds of the most advanced cases of Cancer by my Mild Combination Treatment without giving the patient pain or inconvenience.

CURED CANCER ON NOSE AND HEAD I had a very bad Cancer on my nose, and nothing seemed to help me. X - Bay treatment only made me worse. Three weeks of your treatment cured me. My only regret is lack of words to express my heart-felt thanks. Skin is now soft and smooth. I hope all cancer sufferers will read this and apply to you. Mrs. Blenhoff, of my town, whom you treated, is well.

H. W. W. BELL, Crete, Neb.

CANCER OF STOMACH CURED

After four doctors had given up my wire, who had cancer of the atomach, I immediately sent for your treatment. You cured her, and now, after nine months, she is as well as a fish in water. I would advise all sufferers from cancer to write you. You can certainly cure this dreaded disease. O. K. KIND AND WIFE, Holstein, Iowa.

CANCER OF BREAST, FOUR YEARS
STANDING, CURED IN A FEW WEEKS
I inform you, with great pleasure, that I am now cured of a very bad Cancer in the Breast of four years standing. Four doctors, two of them specialists, gave me no relief and I was badly disheartened. I tried your Mild Combination Treatment and it did what you claim.
I know you can cure Cancer for you cured my mother also. MRS.C.W. SMITH, Yates Center, Kan.

CANCER OF THE LOWER LIP CURED IN A FEW DAYS
I suffered two years from cancer of lower lip. Tried everything. You cured me. I was discouraged for a long time, but when you cured Mr. Donnell, our postmaster, I decided you could cure me. You undoubtedly know your pusiness. My advice to sufferers is to not wait, but commence your treatment at once.

commence your treatment at once.

J. M. RATHMEL, Waverly, Kans

YOU CAN BE CURED AT HOME

I have so perfected my Mild Combination Treatment that patients may use it at their home with as good results as though it were applied at my offices. I will gladly furnish to every sufferer positive and indisputable proofs that my treatment does cure Cancer. I will furnish ample evidence of my integrity, honesty and financial and professional ability. No matter how serious your case may be—no matter how many operations you have had—no matter what treatments you have tried—write for my book. "Cancer and Its Cure." It will cost you nothing and will tell you how you can be cured at home. Address.

DR. O. A. JOHNSON, 1233 Grand 333 Kansas City, Mo. Have you a friend suffering from Cancer? Do him a favor he'll never forget by sending him this ad-

PILES Instant relief, final cure in a few days and never returns; no purge, no salve, no suppository. Remedy mailed so. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 695, New York, N.Y.

GALL STONES ARY LIVER DISEASE.
Write me all about it. Will tell of a cure FREE. Address
R. COVEY, 388 E. Chicago Ave., Chicago, III.

Diseases Cured by My New System. Examination, Opinien and Book Free, DR. J. F. SHAFER, Kidney Specialist, 51 Penn Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

MAGIC NEEDLES & RODS

THE Worlds A Song and we will write the music and present to BIG N.Y. Publishers And we will write the music and present to BIG N.Y. Publishers A HIT will make you RICH. Send now for Free Booklet. Metropolitan Music Co., 730 St. James Bidg., New York

YOUR FORTUNE TOLD

Can Be Cured My mild, soothing, it and FREE SAMPLE proves it. Stops the Itching and cures to stay. WRITE NOW—TODAY, DR. J. CANNADAY, Sedalia, Mo.

50 MAGIC TRICKS 109

A BEAU tiful neck, face and arms. Don't pay 50c. but send 10c. for sealed package to make your skin soft and white and cure pimples, freckles, moth, black head, wrinkles, &c. A perfect skin and food powder combined Warranted absolutely pure. TOILET COMPOUND CO. Box 1927, Boston

FREE! FREE! Beauties 🗑 A Pair of Lace Curtains.

Adjustable Reclining Chair. It is made of the finest Oak and so arranged by a simple device in the back that the same of the finest of the range of th pages i, nonest and straightforward offer ever pet out. We are paying our agents over two dellars for selling only one dollar's worth of goods in order to get them advertised. We want to prove there is a sure prevention and our for Lame Back, Rheumatism, La Grippe, Coughs, Colds, Freumsonia, Malarin, etc., etc. Senforthesix Platers

The Giant Plaster Co., Bez C. Asgusia, Haise. COMPLETE HOLY BIBLE.

After repeated requests from our thousands of readers and club workers, we are prepared to furnish a COM-PLETE HOLY BIBLE, in a smaller size than our regular Family Bible. The new offering is indeed a perfect charm: a thoroughly complete Bible, consisting of over 850 pages, with mine colored maps, soil binding, half padded, round corners, finished with red edges, is five and a half inches long, three and a half inches wide and nearly an inch thick, weighing half a pound. It is a thorough Bible with full and complete books of the old and new testaments. For Sunday School workers, teachers and students, or for a convenient pew Bible, this is an unequalted opportunity to secure a big little Bible that will please. Bypco-operating with a Bible maker and a Bindery, we were enabled to dictate terms and agreed to purchase an enormous quantity during the next year if a low price would be made, in order that we might give our hosts of friends and readers at least one grand opportunity to procure one or more Bibles for their own use or as gifts, knowing well enough that we shall receive many second orders from our first purchasers. Modern machinery and skilled workmen produce these Bibles in quantities made in the highest order of workmanship. Each and every Bible is sent with a guarantee that it is perfect in each and every detail; and what will please you most is the thorough manner in which they are bound and finished. The soft padded covers are the same as in FULL MOROCCO BIBLES costing $10.00 each.

Please do not send for this Bible expecting to receive a great, big book by express; we offer the FAMILY BIBLE elsewhere. This small Bible is for the same purposes, but its more convenient to carry about. Knowing we shall receive second orders from those who send for one of these to the magazine at 15 cents each, delivered postpaid to your convenient to carry about. Knowing we shall receive second orders from those who send for one of these to the magazine at 15 cents each, delivered postpaid to your convenient to carry

OXIEN REMEDIES

Help Old and Young. You Can Get a Lot FREE.

Now look into the strong-well-kindly face of 73 year old Mrs. Cooper, shown below, and you can fully EE this dear old lady, worn and bent, with colorless lips, sunken in the chest, a victim probably of consumption; her joints stiff and crooked, because her system is charged with rheumatism. OXIEN, if taken in time, could have with rheumatism. OXIEN, if taken in time, could have with rheumatism. OXIEN, if taken in time, could have with rheumatism. OXIEN, if taken in time, could have with rheumatism. OXIEN, if taken in time, could have with rheumatism. OXIEN, if taken in time, could have with rheumatism. OXIEN, if taken in time, could have with rheumatism. OXIEN, if taken in time, could have with rheumatism. OXIEN, if taken in time, could have with rheumatism. OXIEN, if taken in time, could have with rheumatism. OXIEN, if taken in time, could have with rheumatism. OXIEN, if taken in time, could have with rheumatism. OXIEN, if taken in time, could have working of her mind. She had to prid liver and kidney trouble and was so nervous she could hardly talk. After taking four boxes of OXIEN and two bottles of OXIEN pills and Salve, she was so wonderfully improved that she is now as be to taken. OXIEN, she was so wonderfully improved that she is now as be to taken to the color back to her cheeks and be freed from the aches and pains that are making life almost unbearable, patient even as she is. OXIEN and pains the OLD FOLKS' REMEDY.

Undreds, yes, thousands of cases, eople have started on OXIEN remekiled the germs of consumption, are dolod and new life and vitality, but her nerves and stomach trouble of two years og of the best of her. She could find no remedies to do any good until she used OXIEN. Today she writes that she is as strong as ever, and could on new life and vitality, and the proposed of the pain of the proposed of the pr sunken in the chest, a victim probably of consumption; her joints stiff and crooked, because her system is charged with rheumatism. OXIEN, if taken in time, could have saved her from all this and made her a strong, well woman. Even now, with the aid of OXIEN, she could bring the color back to her cheeks and be freed from the aches and pains that are making life almost unbearable, patient even as she is. OXIEN and two bottles of OXIEN Pills and Sal as the OLD FOLK'S REMEDY.

We know of hundreds, yes, thousands of cases, where elderly people have started on OXIEN remedies and have killed the germs of consumption, driven out every particle of rheumatism from their system, cured indigestion and lung complaints and been given rich, red blood and new life and vitality. It is never too late. (See Mrs. Cooper's Photo below).

OXIEN helps many old people the same as it has Mr. Philip Knee of Shaw, Pa., who writes that he was 75 years old last December, and cured himself of Lame Back and other serious troubles by the use of OXIEN Remedies. OXIEN is also good for the young, as the same Mr. Knee writes that his grandson, a young man 20 years of age, was also cured of serious troubles by the use of OXIEN Remedies. OXIEN is also good for the young, as the same Mr. Knee writes that his grandson, a young man 20 years of age, was also cured of serious troubles by the use of OXIEN Remedies. OXIEN his lad Johnson, King, N. C., says lade to run a large hotel, doing all her own works as aported to run a large hotel, doing all her own works as aported to run a large hotel, doing all her own works as aported to run a large hotel, doing all her own works as aported to run a large hotel, doing all her own works as aported to run a large hotel, doing all her own works as aported to run a large hotel, doing all her own works as aported to run a large hotel, doing all her own works as aported to run a large hotel, doing all her own works as aported to run a large hotel, doing the color to run a large hotel, doing the color to run a large OXIEN is wholly original and unlike anything ever offered to the public. Its effects are original, the nightmare of existence; constipation, to which and unlike the effects of anything else. It those of sedentary habits are predisposed; will give new strength, new life and new hope after everything else has failed. It is the only real food for the Nerves were discovered, and one trails were discovered, and one trails in the original enters. OXIEN different from every other discovered, and other of this in the original enters. OXIEN different from every other discovered, and other offerent effects of other so-called foods and medicines as aday differs from gray, lustreless lead, and its effects differ from the effects of other so-called "tonic," which merely excites the nerves. It nourishes and feeds the nerves, blood, brain and heart. It infuses new vigor and vitality into the broken-down system, and its effects are reading her tetter here given in predictions of the world and the praise of the thousands whom it has been submitted to vapor, but all the science of the world cannot make a diamond. Just so with the boiling-pot, the microscope, the spectroscope, the X-ray, by those who would imitate it. Alchemy can reduce a diamond to vapor, but all the science of the world cannot make a diamond. Just so with the boiling-pot, the microscope, the spectroscope, the X-ray, by those who would imitate it. Alchemy can reduce a diamond to vapor, but all the science of the world cannot make a diamond. Just so with the science of the world cannot make a diamond. Just so with the science of the world cannot make a diamond. Just so with the science of the world cannot make a diamond. Just so with the science of the world cannot make a diamond. Just so with the science of the world cannot make a diamond. Just so with the science of the world cannot make a diamond. Just so with the science of the world cannot make a diamond. Just so with the science of the world cannot make a diamond. Just so with the science of the world canno THE ABOVE IS THE PORTRAIT OF MRS. A. F. COOPER, 73 YEARS OLD.

THE GIANT OXIE CO., Augusta, Maine.

Gentlemen:—I am sending you my photograph, and, although 73 years old, thanks to OXIEN I feel like a young woman.

Nearly 15 years ago, in 1891 or '92, my attention was called to an advertisement of OXIEN in one of the papers. As I had just been attacked by a severe case of La Grippe, I sent for a sample, and it helped me, and also my husband and daughter almost like magic. I have not had attendance from a physician for all these years; and when I feel lill, I send for a supply of the GIANT OXIEN, which is all the doctor I need. Racine has a cold, wet, changeable climate, and people always have had colds here, and I cannot speak too highly of your great medicine. OXIEN, which not only keeps me well and free from all lills, but my husband, too, who is also 73 years old. His friends in the shop all say they have been greatly helped by the OXIEN Remedies.

Wishing you great prosperity, I remain, your friend.

MRS. A. F. GOOPER. 1530 Packard Ave.

OXIEN Remedies. Wishing you great prosperity. I remain, your triend.

That OXIEN is as good for the young as it is for the old, there can be no possible doubt. Thousands of letters are received giving testimonies about people of all ages, from two months to ninety years old.

Martha L. Kayses of Cottage Grove, Oregon, writes that she gave OXIEN to one child that had been affected from birth with muscle and nervous troubles. It was never able to walk a step until he used OXIEN. Mollic Marsh of Clifton, Ark, says her baby is only two months old and she gives her OXIEN, and she is getting to be a fine, strong girl. Mrs. Barney Philpott, Guston, Ky, says her boy was ruptured when three years old. Doctors aid he would always have to wear a truss, but by using OXIEN and OXIEN plants are here of the wonderful OXIEN, it cured her id-year-old boy any good, but a box of OXIEN, and she is getting to be ritory, says dector's medicine did not do her sick laby any good, but a box of OXIEN entirely cured it. Mrs. Mrs. Laura O'Quinn, Jumbo Mines, Ista trus, Mrs. Laura O'Quinn, Jumbo Mines, Ista trus, Mrs. Laura O'Quinn, Jumbo Mines, Ista trus, Mrs. Banders, Griffin, Mo., who has used a great deal of the OXIEN Remedies, says she has given the tablets to young babies as well as old people, and finds them good to quiet both old and young. Iras Graves, Boligee, Ala, writes that he has used OXIEN Remedies in his family for many years, and sold them to others. They all derive great benefit from their use. His wife gave birth to twins, one of whom was very lit. Although being afraid of girls wonderful productions. The original production of the writes that he has used OXIEN Remedies in his family for many years, and sold them to others. They all derive great benefit from their use. His wife gave birth to wins, one of whom was very lit. Although being afraid to girls the production of the control of the oxient production of the control of the cot

Heed the warning Nature is giving you in the form of pain and suffering. Don't become a physical wreck. Write for OXIENwhile there is yet time for you to take advantage of our great free trial offer, and reap the benefits of this great discovery.

Name

Address

FREE TRIAL OFFER

To those who will agree to test the powers of your Wonderful Discoveries, either personally or in their own homes, or in the who will cut out and mail tous the following coupon, we will send all charges paid, a sample box of Samples of our Wonderful New Oxien Tablet Pills. As this offer is made exclusively to those who will make a PERSONAL TEST as here stipulated.

PERSONAL COUPON.

All communications in reply to this special offer must be addressed
THE GIANT OXIE CO., 14 Willow Street, Augusta, Maine.

4137-TEDDY BEAR & RAG DOLL; 2 sizes, 14

4072-MISSES' DOUBLE-BREASTED BOX COAT; 6 sizes, 6 to 16 years.

4005-ANIMAL SET,

ELEPHANT & DOG.

4112-CHILD'S SET of Sock, Cap, Bib and Moc-

APRON AND COLLAR; sizes, ladies' and misses'.

6737

6737-LADIES' SHIRT-WAIST; 6 sizes, 32 to 42 in. bust.

6727—LADIES' TUCKED Waist with Removable Tucker; 6 sizes, 32 to 42 in. bust.

6760-LADIES' WAIST; 6 6748-LADIES' COAT; 6 sizes, 32 to 42 in. bust.

6717—Housewife Set, being Circular Apron, Cap & Sleeve Protectors.

THESE ARE ALL NEW WINTER STYLES.

Bear in mind our perfect fitting patterns are seam-allowing so that no material is wasted and with the instructions as to the quantity of material required, and the plan of cutting, you cannot fail to understand. All contribute to the pleasure and economy of home dressmaking. Every pattern we give is warranted perfect. Orders filled promptly as per our offers below.

We publish this month twenty-four designs, A pattern of any of these designs may be obtained by sending to the pattern department with 20c. for a year's subscription to this paper, or you may have two patterns and a full year's subscription for 30c. An easier way is to send a club of two yearly 15c, subscribers for two patterns. If you are already a paid-up subscriber to this paper, and cannot get up a club today, we will send any of these patterns for 10c. each.

Address COMFORT, Pattern Department, Augusta, Maine.

"Com'n' Home for Christmas"

BY F. M. VAN PELT.

Yes, guess they'll come home for Christmas, Least that's what our daughter writes, And we're awful glad they're com'n' Cause we'lle awake o'nights Almost count'n' every minute, And a wonder'n' if the train Will be late, or something happen

Now we're noth'n' but the common Now we're noth'n' but the common Folks, you meet with every day, And most every gray-haired couple Has a child that's gone away, And I'm sure what I'm relat'n' Bout, will touch some tender spot, With most everyone, don't matter Whether they've got kids or not.

That would spoil our plans again

When you think about the old times
With the circle all complete,
One can almost hear their prattle
And the patter of their feet As they slipped around and wondered What Old Santa Claus would bring, And each cup of joy gush over, Though he'd bring the same old thing.

Do you wonder why we're happy
Then, when they all get back home?
Though they laugh and whoop and holler,
Like a circus what had come.
It repays for all the worry
That we've had while they were gone,
And we sometimes can't help think'n'
It's the break'n' of the dawn.

Of the ever-last'n' Christmas Of the ever-last'n' Christmas
In the good sweet by and by,
Where each can act as Santa Claus
To some poor one if they'll try;
By dispelling all the darkness,
Making each day bright and fair,
For you know the poet tells us
That "It's always Christmas there."

So to those who can't be look'n' For their children to return, For their children to return,
There is surely one great lesson
That will do them good to learn.
Let them scatter rays of sunshine,
Give a welcome and good cheer,
Doing what they can in helping
Make it, always Christmas here.

ST. ELMO

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 18.)

At last the locomotive signaled that all was ready; and as the train moved on, Edna caught a glimpse of a form standing under a lamp, leaning with folded arms against the post—a form strangely like Mr. Murray's. She leaned out and watched it till the cars swept round a curve, and lamp and figure and village vanished. How could he possibly be in Chattanooga? The conjecture was absurd; she was the victim of some optical illusion. With a long, heavily-drawn sigh, she leaned against the window-frame and looked at the dark mountain mass looming behind her; and after a time, when the storm drew nearer, she saw it only now and then, as A vivid, vindictive and serpentine flash Gored the darkness, and shore it across with a gash.

CHAPTER XXV.

WHAT HAVE YOU WRITTEN?

CHAPTER XXV.

WHAT HAVE YOU WRITTEN?

In one of those brown-stone, palatial houses on Fifth Avenue, sat Mrs. Andrews's "new governess," a week after her arrival in New York. A few days sufficed to give the stranger an accurate insight into the characters and customs of the family with whom she was now domesticated.

Though good-natured, intelligent, and charitable, Mrs. Andrews was devoted to society, and gave to the demands of fashion much of the time which had been better expended at home in training her children, and making her hearthstone rival the attractions of the club, where Mr. Andrews generally spent his leisure hours. She was much younger than her husband, was handsome, gay, and ambitious, and the polished hauteur of her bearing often reminded Edna of Mrs. Murray; while Mr. Andrews seemed immersed in business during the day, and was rarely at home except at his meals.

Felix, the elder of the two children, was a peevish, spoiled, exacting boy of twelve years of age, endowed with a remarkably active intellect, but pitiably dwarfed in body and hopelessly lame in consequence of a deformed foot. His sister Hattle was only eight years old, a bright, pretty, affectionate girl, over whom Felix tyrannized unmercifully, and who from earliest recollection had been accustomed to yield both her rights and privileges to the fretful invalid.

The room occupied by the governess was small but beautifully furnished, and the windows commanded a view of the trees in a neighboring park, and the waving outline of Long Island.

On the day of her arrival Mrs. Andrews entered into a minute analysis of the characters of the children, indicated the course which she wished pursued toward them, and, impressing upon Edna the grave responsibility of her position, the mother gave her children to the stranger's guardianship and seemed to consider her maternal duties fully discharged.

Edna soon ascertained that her predecessors had found the path intolerably thorny, and abandoned it in consequence of Felix's uncontrollable fits of resolved to humor his caprice in the choice of a teacher.

Fortunately the boy was exceedingly fond of his books, and as the physicians forbade the constant use of his eyes, the governess was called on to read aloud at least one half of the day. From eight o'clock in the morning till eight at night the whole care of these children devolved on Edna; who ate, talked, drove with them, accompanied them wherever their inclination led, and had not one quiet moment from breakfast until her pupils went to sleep. Sometimes Felix was restless and wakeful, and on such occasions he insisted that his governess should come and read him to sleep.
Notwithstanding the boy's imperious nature, he possessed some redeeming traits, and Edna soon became much attached to him; while his affection for his new keeper astonished and delighted his mother.

mother.

For a week after Edua's arrival, inclement weather prevented the customary daily drive which contributed largely to the happiness of the little cripple; but one afternoon as the three sat in the schoolroom, Felix threw his Latin grammar against the wall and exclaimed:

"I want to see the swans in Central Park, and I mean to go, even if it does rain! Hattie, ring for Patrick to bring the carriage round to the door. Miss Earl, don't you want to go?"

"Yes, for there is no longer any danger of rain, the sun is shining beautifully; and besides, I hope you will be more amiable when you get into the open air."

She gave him his hat and crutches and they want open air."

She gave him his hat and crutches, and they went down to the neat carriage drawn by a handsome and set apart for the use of the chestnut horse, and set apart for the use of the children.

As they entered the park, Edna noticed that the boy's eyes brightened, and that he looked eagerly at every passing face.

"Now, Hattie, you must watch on your side, and I will keep a good lookout on mine. I wonder if she will come this evening?"

"For whom are you both looking?" asked the teacher.

"Oh! for little Lila, Bro' Felix's sweetheart!" laughed Hattie, glancing at him with a mischlevous twinkle in her bright eyes.

"No such thing! Never had a sweetheart in my life! Don't be silly, Hattie! mind your window, or I guess we sha'n't see her."

"Well, anyhow, I heard Uncle Grey tell mamma that he kissed his sweetheart's hand at the party, and I saw Bro' Felix kiss Lila's last week." "I didn't, Miss Earl!" cried the cripple, redden-

"I didn't, Miss Earl!" cried the crippie, reaching as he spoke.
"Oh! he did, Miss Earl! Stop pinching me, Bro' Felix. My arm is all black and blue, now. There she is! Look, here on my side! Here is 'Red Ridinghood!"

Edna saw a little girl clad in scarlet, and led by a grave, middle-aged nurse, who was walking leisurely toward one of the lakes.
Felix put his head out of the window and called to the woman.

grave, middle-aged nurse, who was walking leisurely toward one of the lakes.

Felix put his head out of the window and called to the woman.

"Hannah, are you going to feed the swans?"

"Good evening. Yes, we are going there now."

"Well, we will meet you there."

"What is the child's name?" asked Edna.

"Lila Manning, and she is deaf and dumb. We talk to her on our fingers."

They left the carriage, and approached the groups of children gathered on the edge of the water, and at sight of Felix, the little girl in scarlet sprang to meet him, moving her slender fingers rapidly as she conversed with him. She was an exceedingly lovely but fragile child, apparently about Hattle's age; and as Edna watched the changing expression of her delicate features, she turned to the nurse and asked:

"Is she an orphan?"

"Yes, miss; but she will never find it out as long as her uncle lives. He makes a great pet of her."

"What is his name, and where does he live?"

"Mr. Douglass G. Manning. He boards at No.—
Twenty-third street, but he spends most of his time at the office. No matter what time of night he comes home, he never goes to his own room till he has looked at Lila, and kissed her goodnight."

For some time the children were much amused in watching the swans, and when they expressed themselves willing to resume their drive, an arrangement was made with Hannah to meet at the same place the ensuing day. They returned to the carriage, and Felix said:

"Don't you think Lila is a little beauty?"

"Yes, I quite agree with you. Do you know her uncle?"

"No, and don't want to know him; he is too cross and sour. I have seen him walking sometimes with Lila and her parties and

"Yes, I quite agree with you. Do you know her uncle?"

"No, and don't want to know him; he is too cross and sour. I have seen him walking sometimes with Lila, and mamma has him at her parties and dinners; but Hattie and I never see the company unless we peep, and above all things, I hate peeping! Mr. Manning is an old bachelor, and very crabbed, so my Uncle Grey says. He is the editor of the — Magazine, that mamma declares she can't live without. Look! look, Hattie! There goes mamma this minute! Stop, Patrick! Uncle Grey! Uncle Grey! Hold up, won't you, and let me see the new horses!"

An elegant phaeton, drawn by a pair of superb black horses, drew up close to the carriage, and Mrs. Andrews and her only brother, Mr. Grey Chilton, leaned forward and spoke to the children; while Mr. Chilton, who was driving teased Hattie by touching her head and shoulders with his whip.

"Uncle Grey, I think the bays are the handsomest."

"Which proves you utterly incapable of judging horseflesh; for these are the finest horses in the city. I presume this is Miss Earl, though nobody seems polite enough to introduce us."

He raised his hat slightly, bowed, and drove on. "Is this the first time you have met my uncle?" asked Felix.

"Yes. Does he live in the city?"

"Is this the first time you have met my uncle?" asked Felix.

"Yes. Does he live in the city?"

"Why! he lives with us! Haven't you seen him about the house? You must have heard him romping around with Hattie; for they make noise enough to call in the police. I think my Uncle Grey is the handsomest man I ever saw, except Edwin Booth, when he plays 'Hamlet.' What do you say?" you say?'

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

This serial, weaving a romance of unusual interest around Edna Earl, a young girl, whose faith in God's eternal goodness remains firm, though her heart bleeds, when she loses all dear to her, her meeting with St. Elmo, his surprise at her expressed disapproval of his bitterness and hate, the trust he imposes, the promise he exacts, all this fascinatingly told, will interest our readers, and be continued with marked strength in the January number of COMFORT. If you are not a regular subscriber, or your subscription expires soon, do not fail to send in your renewal, and also one or more new subscribers at the present 15c. yearly rate, as all old subscriptions are promptly removed on expiration. Read notice on another page. The price will soon be advanced. Back numbers of COMFORT cannot be furnished. Read our offer below.

"ST. ELMO" IN BOOK FORM

So many have expressed a wish to possess a copy of the famous story 'ST. ELMO,' in book form to preserve, or for the library, that we bought a large quantity to give away as premiums, of an excellent edition, printed on extra quality book paper from new, clear type, bound in cloth, with a very attractive halftone cover portrait of both St. Elmo and Edna, with embossed title. This is a suitable presentation or library edition worthy of any home.

For a club of only 7 yearly subscribers to COMFORT at 15 cents each, we will send you a copy of this beautiful book at our expense.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Orange Lily cures Leucorrhoea, Ulceration, Displacement. Painful Periods. For a free trial address, Mrs. H. L. Fretter, Detroit, Mich.

Our Country's Scourge-Catarra

Our Country's Scourge—Catarrh
This great country of ours would be ideal to live in, were it not for the sudden changes of temperature, which produce many and complicated diseases—the commonest of all is Catarrh, which very frequently leads on to that scourge of our climate, consumption. There are many great and noble men devoting their lives to the bettering of humanity, by curing this disease. One man stands out from all others—Catarrh Specialist Sproule; a true and genuine benefactor, who has perhaps cured more cases of Catarrh than any man living. We publish his announcement on page 24 of this issue. It will be well for all Catarrh sufferers to avail themselves of his generous offer.

VISITING CARDS Good quality, latest styles, with name neatly printed on the post paid, 60 for 20c, lite for 20c, dampin free. W. P. HOWIE, PRINTER, BEEBE PLAIN, VT.

Free Catalogallkinds Ladies' and Children's wearing appar-TAPE-WORM EXPELLED ALIVE, WITH HEAD GUAR ANTEED, BOOKLET PERE BYRON FIELD & CO., 128 STATE ST., CHICAGO.

C. S. A. MONEY Agents wanted. Circulars free.

$10 Cash Paid PER 1000 FOR CANCELLED PAID OF PRINCE LIE PAID.

LADIES: Make Sanitary Belts $1.20 Dozen. Stamped en-velope particulars. Lenox Co., Dept. H 2, Chicago.

Marriage PAPER FREE, many very rich Agency 54, Bridgeport, Ct.

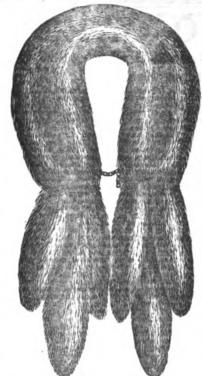

PICTURE AGENTS Portraits and Frames—lowes
Our "SEPIOLE" a great seller. Write for catalog and ferme of free samples.
MODEL FORTRAIT CO., 188-2 S. Western Avenue, Chicago.

SONG WRITERS, send us your poems. We compose the music. Simple songs often make great hits. Established 35 years. GROOM MUSIC CO., 8 Steinway Hall, Chicago.

MUSIC LESSONS FREE SEND FOR OUR it tells how to learn to play any instrument, Plano, Organ. Violin, Guitar, Mandolin, etc. Write American School of Music, 211 Manhattan Building, Chicago, Ill.

By the World's Greatest Astrologer. Send me your name, date of birth, sex, if married or single and a 2ct. stamp for return postage and I will mail you, sealed and confidential, a document of great value to you in the pursuits of your future happiness in love, business, and other fields of life's activities. Thousands are this day blessing the hour they first wrote me.

PROF. EDISON, 1 E Street, BINGHAMTON, N.Y.

FREE

Handsome Fur Scarf

Send us your name and address and we will send you free and post-paid 24 pieces of our lewelry novelties to sell at 10 cents each. Everybody you show them to will buy them of you. When sold send us the $2.40 and we will at once send you this

Handsome Fur Scarf

It is nearly 48 inches long, made from black Lynx fur, has six full, bushy tabs, very latest style, and we know you will be more than pleased with it. When you receive it we know you will say it is the most elegant and thoroughly good fur you have ever seen. Nothing similar to this searf has ever before been offered as a premium; it will give years of satisfactory wear. It gives a stylish, dressy effect to the wearer's appearance. The only reason we can offer them is we had a large number of them made up for us by one of the large furriers during the summer when trade was quiet; this is the only reason we are able to offer such an expensive premium. We hope you will take advantage of our offer without delay. This is an extraordinary offer and cannot be duplicated by any other reliable concern. We trust you with our jewelry until sold. It costs you nothing to get this fur. Address,

COLUMBIA NOVELTY CO., Dept.440, East Boston, Mass.

LEARN VETERINARY DENTISTRY

ond $2000 a year. We teach you at home in make by illustrated lectures and grant diploma with degree. Particulars Free. Detroit Veterinary Dental College, Detroit, Mich.

ANTED 10 men in each state to travel distribute samples of our goods and tack advertising signs. Salary $80 per month, $3 per day for expenses SAUNDERS Co., Dept. D, Jackson Blvd., Chicago

PER MONTH Salary and expenses, to men with rig, to sell our Poultry Remedies. Bank ref's. Don't answer unless ACME MFG. CO., A 40, East St. Louis, III.

HUSTLERS everywhere to tack signs, distrib-ute circulars, samples, etc.; no canvassing; good pay. We give bank references. SUN ADVERTISING BUREAU, Inc., 783 Baltimore Bldg., Chicago.

CASH SALARY and all expenses to introduce our Guaranteed Poultry and Stock Remedies. Send for contract; we men business and furnish best references. 6. R. BidLER 60., X 312, Springfield, III.

Distributers wanted for Circulars and Samples. Tack signs. Nothing to sell.

Universal Advertising Co., C36 Drexel Bank Bldg., Chicago WANTED Good Man in each county to represent and advertise Hardware Department, put out samples, etc. Salary $21.00 weekly. Expense money advanced. Dept. D, The COLUMBIA HOUSE, CHICAGO.

WANTED AGENTS in each county to sell "Fam-steady work. Ad. Campbell & Co., 10 "A" St., Elgin III.

PILES CURED OR MONEY
Trial FREE, PILE-EASE CO., Box P819, Blogmington, III,

YOU want a gold finished watch with your initial engraved

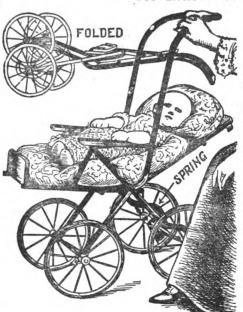

OU want a gold finished watch with your initial engraved on the case; also a handsome chain and charm. If you will send us your name you can get this watch with chain and charm for doing a little work. This watch is the finest we ever have seen, for the money. Stem wind and stem set, bevelled edges, very thin. Two sizes: One for Boys and one for Girls. Another point: We will engrave your initial on the case as shown in illustration. We guarantee to send you at once ten of our beautiful many-colored art pictures to sell for us at 25 cents each. The pictures are handsome productions and are picked from a large assortment of beautiful subjects and any lady will be glad to buy one at her door. We will also send, if you write us, our premium list showing how you can get, without cost, Dolls, Air Guns, Rings, Cameras, etc., premiums dear to the heart of every Boy and Girl. Send us your name at once, sell ten pictures, return the $2.50 you have collected, and your premium goes forward same day. If you want any of our other premiums instead of the watch, you may have your choice as per premium list. P. J. Allen COMPANY. Dept. 5312, 22 N. William Street, New York City.

SLEEPER GO-CART

Folding Carriage, Cradle or Crib, Rubber-Tired Bicycle Wheels for Indoor or Outdoor Use.

FOLDED

This new style patent Sleeper Adjustable and Folding Go-Cart is perfection in Baby Carriages. A steel frame of Go-Cart is perfection in Baby Carriages. A steel frame durability. An all steel frame, seat and back upholstered in leather, ten-inch rubber-tired wheels, both front and back fitted to noiseless axles, with excellent quality rubber tires. Pollshed wood experiment of the wood handle for controlling the cart. The balance of the family, and all the form of the part of the family, and the wood of the family, and the wood of the family, and the wood of the family, and the family and t

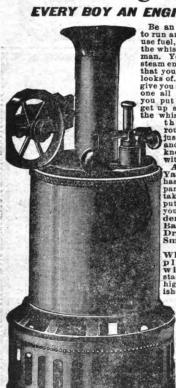

OUR GIANT MAGIC LANTERN. FREE! Show Bills and All Sent With This Outfit FREE!

The views show up on the screen in a magnified manner, and young people can work the machine without experience. To entertain company at home of an evening or to display the views to an audience, they have no superior; there has never been such an offer made as we are now enabled to present. These Lanterns have always furnished a world of fascination to old and young, and any Boy or Girl who has been able to buy one of the old style common Magic Lanterns, has derived an endless amount of enjoyment, instruction and profit from its use. We show in our engraving a full view of a New Invention. It is called the STEREO-MAGIC LANTERN, and possesses great power and variety of adjustment and views. These lanterns are fully represented here just as they come packed in the cabinet. It stands one foot high and when open SPREADS NEARLY ONE AND ONE-HALF FEET WIDE. The cabinet. It stands one foot high and when open SPREADS NEARLY ONE AND ONE-HALF FEET WIDE. The cabinet. It stands one foot high and when open SPREADS nearly of an arrow style packed as shown on right and left sides, in fact the WHOLE OUTFIT WOULD cost $5.00 a few years ago. You can probably easily sell it for a good sum. We only being able to dispose of them in this manner on account of the remarkable combination of circumstances which gave us the chance of buying in the spring instead of last fall when we should have had to pay a great price. We will send you one of these Giant Magic Lanterns complete as described for a club of only 17 yearly subscribers at 15 cents each, or a club of only 17 two-year subscriptions at 25 cents each. We pay express charges, delivering all free.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Real Steam Engine FREE. EVERY BOY AN ENGINEER.

Be an engineer, learn to run an engine, how to use fuel, oil up and blow the whistle, just like the man. You never saw a steam engine in your life that you didn't like the looks of. Now here we give you a chance to have one all your own that you put on a table and get up steam and blow the whistle and watch the wheels go round fast or slow in the wheels go will be green with envy.

A Genuine Yankee Engine has the following parts and can be taken down and put up as often as you wish: Cylinder with Spring,
Balance Wheel,
Drive Wheel,
Smoke Stack,

Whistle Complete, Boiler with Heater, stands 8 inches stands 8 inches high, highly finished in enamel and nickel, a jim-dandy engine and guaranteed way up. With this engine you can run all kinds of toy machines you can buy or make for yourself with spools, etc.

make for yourself with spools, etc. Great fun to make toy machinery using string for belting. We want of life is well demonstrated to any youth that interests himself; so we give for the balance of the season and to get new subscriptions one engine as a reward for sending us a club of only 8 yearly subscribers to this paper at the special subscription rate of 15 cents a year. This small club of eight, amounting to $1.20, pays for the full subscription for the 12 addresses and obtains a prize Engine delivered prepaid by mail or express carefully packed and fully warranted.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

IMPORTANT

The few items here offered as free premiums are but random selections from our big catalogue of gifts. As you are interested in first-class premium articles we introduce the first one to display their judgment in copying pleasing. Observe the odd border on this design. This pattern has a very deep border it can be worked solid or outlined with exc. llent find many attractive offers, and we feel sure you will send find many attractive offers, and we feel sure you will send easily worked with some simple stitch.

Comport during the winter.

Address your request for catalogue to Comport during the winter.

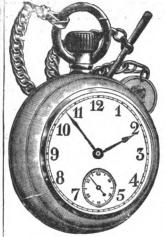

Comport, Augusta, Maine.

WILD ROSE PATTERN.

in soft tan shades, with green for a border, is very pleasing. Observe the odd border on this design. From nature. This pattern has a very deep border it can be worked solid or outlined with exc. llent that may be easily worked with some simple stitch.

For only 2 yearly subscriptions to this paper, at 15 cents each, we will send either one of the above 24-inch Centerpieces. For 2 yearly subscriptions at 15 cents each, we will send any 3 of above Centerpieces FREE, and the set of 4 for only 5 yearly subscribers.

Comport, Augusta, Maine.

WE GIVE THIS WATCH FOR A CLUB OF 10.

Thirty Minutes is a short time, but many have earned one of these watches in less time than that. It is one of the very best watches for time ever offered to our readers at no matter what the price asked for it. We know, of course, there are watches that cost more money, because they are in gold or silver cases, but they will not keep any better time, we never saw the watch that did, but it keeps as near perfect time as watches usually do. We have such faith in this watch as a timekeeper that we send with every one a guarantee just as binding as that given with any watch, no matter what make. We are willing to give you this watch if you will do us a slight service, which you can easily do in an hour. We wish to increase our subscription list, and we want the assistance of every reader of this paper to that end. We do not want you to do it for nothing, we will reward you for it. You can easily secure this valuable watch if you get a club of 10 subscribers to this paper, at our special subscription price of 15 cents a year each. Do this, sending us $1.50, with the names of 10 subscribers to this paper, and we will send our paper to each subscriber for one year, and we will send our paper to each subscriber for one year, and we will send our paper to each subscriber for one year, and we will send our paper to each subscriber for one year, and we will send our paper to each subscribers we guarantee every watch. If you get 12 subscribers and send us NOW $1.80 for the same, we will also send you a nice chain. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Mainet 24-inch centerpieces.

Beautiful hand-embroidered table covers can now be had by every reader without cost and little labor is required. Ladies familiar with fancy work find our patterns always new and original, those anxious to do hand embroidery readily understand our simple needlework instructions furnished free. We furnish the stamped patterns here illustrated, as well as all materials, thus naking it convenient and within the reach of every woman, young or old, to make with her own needle one of more for her home, alse they are the most useful and delightful wedding or Christmas gifts. These centerpieces are each twenty-four inches in diameter, are therefore unusually large and suitable for any table. The designs are CLEARLY AND DISTINCTLY STAMPED on a high grade of semilinen material that washes and wears well, and absolute satisfaction is guaranteed.

Runch of Cranes Pattern.

Bunch of Grapes Pattern.

We predict great popularity for this grape pattern. It is to be the rage for embroidery shirt pink ever produced can be copied with this pattern

Wild Rose Pattern.

This very handsome centerpiece pattern will be one of the most popular in the whole collection. Can be worked out in soft, delicate colors and per-

Carnation Pink Pattern.

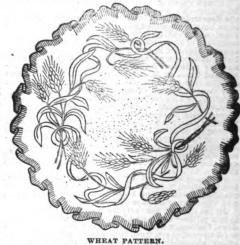

waists, therefore popular for centerpiece design.
We recommend this one to your consideration.

to aid you. To be done in soft pink shades with green and a border to suit. This design will make one of the swellest and most stylish table centers one of the swellest and most stylish table centers. pieces ever conceived.

Wheat Pattern.

This centerpiece haps erhaps the least amount of detail work of any kind, yet the effect when dene

WOOD'S FAMOUS NATURAL HISTORY FREE.

A Genuine Revelation of the Animal Kingdom.

A Complete Encyclopædia of Zoology. Thrilling Adventures. A Panorama of Pictures. A Monster Menagerie.

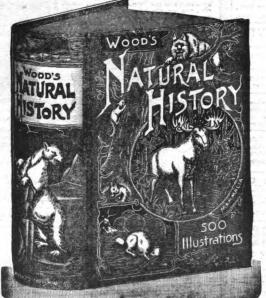

Great Book Free to All Club Workers.

A Revolution in Book Making, Dumps Thousands of Volumes on the Market at One Tenth their Former Price, Creates a Panic, Demoralizes the Book Trade, and Gives Our Subscribers the Benefit of a Most Wonderful Bargain. Read About this Great and Wonderful Work, WOOD'S NATURAL HISTORY—the Standard Work for All and Wonderful Work, WOOD'S NATURAL HISTORY—the Standard Work for All Homes.

It is impossible to give in this announcement more than a slight idea of the magnitude of this great History, with its myriad pictures and accurate descriptions. It virtually goes into the haunts of all animals and shows them as they live.

Wood's Natural History is the recognized authority all over the world for accurate information regarding the habits, haunts, peculiarities and diseases of the Animal Kingdom. The work is a veritable treasure-house of valuable information, interestingly told, and replete with hundreds of accurate and artistic illustrations. This mammoth Cyclopædia of the Animal World consists of over eight hundred pages and is substantially bound in stiff paper covers. Size of open book, 8x11 inches, and nearly 2 inches thick. It is in clear print on good paper, with five hundred illustrations by special artists. The countless anecdotes which it contains will make merry many a long winter evening, and the hundreds of pages of thrilling adventures which those daring people, who traverse mountain and morass, jungle and desert, to learn the habits of the animal kingdom undergo, will furnish true, heartfelt enjoyment to every member of the family—young and old. As the book contains full descriptions of all domestic animals, also, with treatment and cures for their diseases, no farmer should be without it, and as the list embraces everything, from the guat to the giraffe, the bat to the bear, the mouse to the mastodon, the coyote to the cuscus, no boy, no hunter, no student—in fact, nobody should neglect this grandest of all offers. So thrilling and exciting are many of these adventures as to equal the wildest tales of the tropics, or the most blood-curdling ghost story; and yet they are all true, being the transcripts of personal experiences of noted travelers. Not only are they of sufficient importance to amuse and instruct the young, but they will absorb the attention and pass away many a dull hour for the old and worl

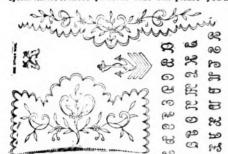

ENGLISH EDITION.

4 New Idea Transfer Designs FREE Over 2000 Square Inches of Patterns

Fancy Work Patterns, Readily Transferable

By the use of this new method which has proven superior to old style perforated paper patterns, one may have an extensive variety of patterns on hand embracing an alimited quantity of designs for every kind of work. One special feature of these patterns that will please yours

ROWING ONE OF THE 16 PATTERN SHEETS REDUCED.

the case and simplicity of transferring the design. By the case and simplicity of transferring the design. By simply dampening the material you are to stamp, laying the design on perfectly smooth and flat and slightly rubbing with a handkerchief or cloth the trick is done and the pattern can be laid aside for future use. The designs are furnished on large sheets of extra strong paper by a patented process and can be transferred to linen, lawn, or any material you may desire to use, with the aid of a cloth (full directions with each).

Our assortment of sixteen sheets, each sheet 10 x 14 inches or 140. quare inches of pattern, comprises a great variety of useful and practical articles for personal wear or home adornment, such as Shirt-waists, Doilles and Baby's Cap. Our illustrations give you an idea of some of the patterns we selected while the others are equally as attractive. We have arranged to distribute an immense quantity of these transfer pattern sheets, 10 x 14 inches cach, in Sets of sixteen, the equivalent of over twenty-two hundred square inches of standard patterns of the old or perforated style.

The following is a list of the chief patterns on each sheet: Shirt-waist Pattern; Cuffs and Collar: Baby's Cap; Maif Centerpiace; Doily Pattern; Picture Frame and Baby's Shees; Sofa Pillow: Bureau or Table Scarf; Back of Belt; Wail Pocket; Tumbler Doily; Oval Centerpiace; Baby's Maif Centerpiace; Shirt-waist Front; Cuff and Collar Set; Children's Small or Fancy Handkerchiefs; Chemisette.

In addition to these mentioned, others are put on to fill all the space so that in all, we actually give you 49 designs and five alphabets (all different).

Special Offer. These paper patterns are put up well send you one full Set by mail for a club of only 2 yearly subscribers to this magazine at 15 cents each.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

riose supporters. Silk Elastic Web Hose Supporters for Ladles and Misses. far superior to the band hose supporter made of flat elastic and worn about the limb. These

A CHILD'S GOLD-LINES

200 and it is estrong and durable baby or child cannot run it while playing with it. Handsome embossed decoration, leaves, buds, flowers, etc., hand cut and very attractive. Fancy handle just large enough for baby's hands.

FOUNTAIN PEN. Until recently an all rubber Foun-tain Pen cost $2.50 or $3.00 owing to the high cost of raw material, but the recent discovery of rubber in large quantities has reduced the price and new matchinery has done the rest. We are now able to offer to our subscribers a good qual-

A PAIR OF SHEARS, Made of steel, cirki inches in the steel, cirki inches in the steel of steel, cirki inches in the steel of steel, cirki inches in the steel of stee

YOU CAN'T LOSE THIS POCKET KNIFE. The two-blade Chain Pocket Knives are made of the Finest English Steel with Cocobolo handles of the best selection with long steel chain. The two blades are full guage. This is an American made knife, hand forged and tempered in the most careful manner, is three and three quarters inches long, fully warranted, and we will replace if not found perfect in every way. We make this offer because we know the knives are free from flaws and will last a lifetime. these wonder-ful Gold-lined Dishes war-ranted quadruple plated sil-ver; flated top and beautiful RINGS The delight of THE MAGIC HARMAPHONE.

Anyone can play on it. It is a complete Orchestra and Full Brass Band all in one. It is a delightful instrument to young lady is in having handsom finger rings of the lates style and finish set with three handsome stones. A large center stone with smaller ones or each side. We have three each side. We have three styles of settings and will allow you to make your own selec-tions, Opal. Emerald and Ruby, with the finest imitation ohlp diamonds which add great brilliancy and set off the whole rine.

THIRTY MINUTES is a short

The above few articles are selected as representing our most popular premiums, also a club of five is a very popular quantity. Many send five subscriptions rather than work up larger clubs. For a club of only five yearly subscribers to our magic monthly. COM-FORT, we will send your choice of any one of these Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. nine articles.

AIR RIFLE. Pneumatic ac-

You may have your choice of any one of the above excellent premium articles for a elub of only ten yearly subscribers to COM-FORT at 15c. each. Address

COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

THE LAST CHANCE AT 15 CENTS A YEAR

This is the last month of the year that the FIFTEEN CENT yearly subscription rate is in force, and it means a great deal to you, whether you are a subscriber or not. Not only are we to maintain the variety of excellent features that have made COMFORT the peerless magazine with the greatest number of warm admirers, but we have arrangements in hand to perfect, as time will permit, that will make COMFORT so much more the leading magazine than it has been, that you will be amazed at our accomplishment. We have something new to tell you each month; this

"THE SHADOW OF A CROSS"

the sweetest and most interesting piece of American fiction ever written, which is to be for the first time, offered to the readers of a monthly publication in serial form.

In giving our readers the great story, "St. Elmo," COMFORT expended a tremendous sum and surmounted, what to others would have been insurmountable, obstacles to secure this great privi-Mrs. Augusta J. Evans Wilson has received more royalty from the tremendous sale of Elmo" than any living author. It is a story, while written a number of years ago, which enjoys the unique distinction of being one of the few most valuable copyrights in existence. Volume after volume has been prepared in six dollar editions, and less pretentious editions at two dollars and fifty cents have been sold in great quantities, while a popular edition at one dollar and fifty cents per copy has been sold in hundreds of thousands.

Our subscribers all say this successful work of Mrs. Wilson is the Greatest "Humane Interest" Story Ever Printed

in COMFORT, or any other similar publication for that matter, and our readers will now well understand "St. ELMO" is the most fascinating and pleasing story they ever read.

The splendid character of the heroine, who transforms a wild, wicked and worldly man to one of the sweetest of gentle and manly men, is told in charming words by Mrs. Wilson and the phenomenal success of "St. Elmo," which has been increasing for the past twenty-five years, will be as enduring as time, and the story of the greatness of Mrs. Wilson and "St. Elmo" will always be told to generations to come.

There are several books that every reader of COMFORT should be familiar with, and they are the Bible, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and "St. Elmo," and we now have the greatest pleasure we have had for years, which is to present you with the privilege of reading the whole of the story of "St. Elmo" in book form, if you but get up a club of seven subscribers to your favorite magazine, COMFORT at 15 cents a year,

IF YOU DO IT NOW,

as the rate is to be advanced and it will cost even more to receive COMFORT than at present. See special offer on page 27. "ST. ELMO" is but one of the good features; there are other attractive stories, features and departments sufficient for the whole family or of general interest to each reader. It is hard to conceive a magazine edited and arranged with the care and thought that is exercised in arranging the pages of COMFORT to please each person who reads it, and thoroughly appeal to their better senses, furnishing amusement or instruction that is elevating in and if you decide to subscribe, renew your present subscription or send us a club of seven or more new subscriptions; do it now while the favorable rate is in force; you will be satisfied with your expenditure, many times over.

THINK IT OVER

This Is The Day to Extend Your Subscription Now Only FIFTEEN CENTS NOW EXTENDS Now Only YOUR SUBSCRIPTION ONE YEAR 15c.

Dear Reader:

Whether you have been a regular reader of COMFORT the entire twelve months of 1906, or received but few of the more recent issues, we feel certain that you are satisfied with the bargain that FIFTEEN CENTS procured for you, and are willing to advise your friends to subscribe.

All the good things are kept, and each month sees something added to enhance the value of the magazine from any standpoint. It is our constant endeavor to give our subscribers a magazine so entirely satisfactory and pleasing that each subscriber voluntarily encourages others to become regular patrons. There are yet a few days left in which to subscribe for a year or more at the favorable rate of Fifteen Cents, but this price is to be increased the first of the new year to TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, and we shall expect to make COMFORT worth the new price.

COMFORT has so many desirable features all cannot be gone over here; we will mention, however, the new and large perfecting press, which will enable us to print a greater number of pages, with half-tone illustrations, and we plan to use higher cost paper and ink. So that it is reasonable to expect that COMFORT will always give full value for its subscription price.

A large number of COMFORT sub-scriptions expire before the first of DON'T WAIT January, and we must call your special attention to the notice to expiring subscribers that appears on this page. Certainly there are none among our subscribers who can offord not to send the small sum of fifteen cents for a prompt renewal. DON'T WAIT until YOUR PAPER IS STOPPED or the price is advanced to 25 cents before sending in your FIFTEEN CENTS for a renewal, but send today AT ONCE and thus give us time to extend your subscription to January, 1908, then you can be sure to read all of "St. Elmo," and the other interesting stories, all of which run for some months yet, besides all of the other good things. Look over the fine premiums in this issue and get up a club, then send for the regular Premium List and get up one more club before the price of COMFORT goes up to 25 cents per year.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE WRAPPER IN WHICH THIS PAPER COMES

Every month a certain number of subscriptions expire. The expiring number this month is 218, and the Nov. number was 217, while for January it will be 219. If any of these numbers appear on the address seal in which we send your copy of COMFORT, please attend to the renewal of your subscription without futher notification from us; we do not carry delinquent subscription accounts nor send COMFORT to any whose subscription has expired.

Now we have appreciated your patronage during 1906, and wish to here thank you for every favor or courtesy extended. If you will continue to share with us in the up-building of COMFORT by repeated courtesies of similar character, we shall be enabled to make COMFORT the greatest home publication in the civilized world. Begin today by subscribing for a friend or neighbor using coupon below. Or better still, get up a club of subscribers as per premium offer here printed.

For inclosed 15 cents please enter this subscription to COMFORT for one full year from this date. Town State Dec. '06. You can copy the coupon if you do not care to cut the paper.

Publisher COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Christmas

The Christmas tree loaded with presents takes cheer to the heart of young and old. To assist in triming the tree, the various rooms of the home, for Churches, Halls, and Schools we now furnish the daintiest

Paperet Christmas Bells

with loop for hang-ing from the tree, or from the window fastening; hung un-or from the window fasteining; hung under a hanging lamp, or in any suitable place where decorations are usually placed they add cheer and brilliancy to the room and particularly in the sick room, as they are made o, rich red papert ingeniously folded into the pretty bell eighteen inches in circumference and six inches high, shown in our illustration, and being nearly sun proof may be kept hanging for months after the passing of evergreen which dries and falls. We have a special importation of a very large quantity of these Christmas Bells, n ade to fold compactly for sending away by mail, so that all may have one just as the people do who live in the larger cities where one sees them hanging in nearly every home postage and we will send you one Bell with our large premium catalogue, just to interest you in our immense line of usefui premiums all free. Address

COMFORT, Box R, Augusta, Maine.

THE MAGIC FORTUNE
TELLER, is a Marvelous invention, 1ts answers to your questions answers to your questions are quickly given. Its replies to Love, Business and Troubles are immeranged that the will recast your you want to know if you but ask it. Being constructed on strictly scientific principles the adjustable horn acts as a medium of speech. You talk to it as though it was alive and its answers are revealed to you as though of the same breath. It is a money maker, You can now tell fortunes for money or you can act as our agent and

A GREAT BIG BOX FULL of

APORTABLE MIRROR

DOLLS AS BIG AS A BABY.

Please read carefully our descriptive matter bove, also note our illustrations. In all cases will our premiums be found as represented; a large assortment, newest goods and liberal offers. Send us only two yearly subscribers to our peerless monthly, COMFORT, at 15c. each for any one of the above articles. State choice clearly and article will go forward same day at our expense. Address COMFORT, Auguste, Maine.

CHILD'S FUR SET. FREE! AS BIG AS BABY, FREE!

Designs on Linen

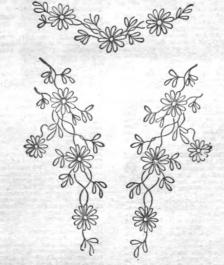

This outfit consists of 324 square inches of embroidery designs. A set of two collars, one Centerpiece, one Bookmark, one Pen-wiper, one Match-safe, one Dolley, two dress or naments, plainly stamped ready to embroider. An outfit of smaller designs, this suggests itself for those who are learning or do not have much time for fancy work.

Special Offer. As a special inducement we will give you one of these Outfits if you will send but one yearly subscriber at 15c. with 5c. additional, in all 20c. We send postpaid.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Perforated Shirt-Waist Pattern.

Perforated Shirt-waist and Collar design. We call your particular attention to this very dainty Shirt-waist and Collar design, perforated upon fine Linen Bond Parchment Paper, furnished with complete directions that any lady can stamp her own shirt-waist, worth in any art store at least 75 cents. We can furnish each in the following designs, if the one illustrated does not please you: Violet, daisy, forget-me-not wild rose or chrysanthemum.

Special Offer. We will send you one of these Shirt-but one yearly subscriber to this magazine at 15c., and include 5c. additional, making 20c. in all.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Ladies' Three Piece Lingerie Marguerite, Corset Cover and Drawers.

This outfit furnishes the actual material for the three underwear garments, over 5 1-2 yards of imported linen lawn.
For the Marguerite or chemise, there are 2 2-3 yards of lawn 38 inches wide, for the Corset Cover there is one yard of material 27 inches wide, and for the Drawers there are two yards of material 38 inches wide. Each article has a stamped design for embroidery, buttonhole edge and French em-broidery, with eyelets in the Marguerite and Corset Cover for ribbons.

The Drawers can be finished with lace insertion, for which we include four yards of suitable lace.

The soft linen lawn makes the most delightful underwear and is in general demand being much superior to muslin, and lends itself readily to embroidery, lace and ribbon trimming making the daintiest and loveliest ladies' under-garments imaginable.

The conventional pattern stamped on these three pieces alike, is readily worked with mercerized cotton, then ribbon and lace should be used to finish or adorn the garments and any lady has a three piece suit of her own handwork, that any lady has a three piece suit of her own handwork, that she can be very proud of, and a set of garments that it would cost five or eight dollars to purchase at retail. After embroidering the design, lay your own pattern onto the material and cut out, fit and make up to suit your own figure and tastes. You will be delighted with the result. We are very proud of this Underwear Set and are absolutely certain our lady readers will fully appreciate the opportunity to secure the set free in accordance with the liberal club premium offer below.

Club Offer For a club of only 12 yearly subscribers to this magazine at 15 cents each we will send you this three piece Lingerie Underwear Set, including four yards lace for insertion, postage paid by us, guaranteeing perfect satisfaction or refund money. If you desire us to supply the paper patterns, add 30 cents and give sizes required. Mercerized cotton for the embroidery 25 cents per dozen. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Indestructible Stuffed Bolls that Stand Up or Sit Bown. Their Heads Will Not Come Off.
These unbreakable dolls are nearly two feet high and so arranged they can either stand up or sit down. Their Beautifus attractive for either stand stockings and black shoes make the lattractive for either or older children. You the nose can't be broken off nor can baby punch in the eyes; the bright colored checks and ruby lips retain their color and shape for all time. Every child delights to have from one to twenty different kinds of dolls in their family. Bright inventors, dressed. The doll shown in just patiented, is a most wonand successful result of long, trials. They are beautifully d, and can be placed in any 1 position. Will last for Are more lifelike than anyever gotten out before. For arr and hours every child will ways to suit the taste. They can be filled with more or less cotton just as the weight is preferred, as the material they are made of enables you to sew them together easily, so as to have a good, fat, plump dollie or 1 of lighter weight. We Send You 2 Dolls

Now Instead of 1. A new arrangement enables us to send you a 10 inch doll free, in connection with the 20 inch doll we have already described. So you get 2 dolls for the price of 1. We have arranged to give these dolls for chraising and will send 1, all charges for the preparation of the work of the Remember. We send this maga-remember. I year to

COMFORT. Augusta. Maine,

SHIRT-WAIST PATTERNS.

Two and One Half Yards Goods.

Chrysanthemum design stamped front, collar and cuffs, ready to be hand embroidered. Just think of it, you can now have an embroidered shirt-waist without the immense expense heretofore necessary to purchase one. Anyone familiar with needlework can embroider this simple design and make up the complete waist from any patterns you are familiar with. We place before you the opportunity to get the stamped goods, two and one half yards, so that all you have to do is to embroider the design with the Utopia Luster we furnish, then cut out the material according to your pattern and make it up. You will then have one of the most fashionable and dainty shirt-waists imaginable, all your own handwork. Embroidered garments are all the rage and we can supply not only this waist, but a Linen Hat to match, Corset Covers, Chemisette, Belts, etc., etc.

Club Offer. For a club of only 9 yearly subscribers to this magazine at only 15c. each, we will send you one of these 2½ yard stamped Chrysanthemum Shirt-waists, including sufficient skeins of mercerized embroidery cotton to work out the design.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Chrysanthemum design stamped front, collar and cuffs,

FOR A CLUB OF SEVEN. LADIES' GOLD FINGER RINGS.

The delight of every young lady is in having handsome finger rings of the latest style and finish-set with three handsome stones. A large center stone with smaller ones on either side same as shown in the illustration. These are Gold Rings you may be proud of and they will wear forever and not turn; they look like gold, wear like gold and will stand gold acid tests. These settings are very rich and look refined and just as attractive as rings costing $25.00 or more. We have three styles of settings and will allow you to make your own selections, Opal, Emerald and Ruby, with the finest imitation chip diamonds which add great brilliancy and set off the whole ring. We guarantee the sparkle of these stones to be equal to Genuine Diamonds costing hundreds of dollars and are always behind this guarantee. Each stone is set separately in Tiffany style and are sent in A Bronze Ring Box, plush lined, just the ornament for your room and keeps the ring clean and from getting lost when not in use.

These Rings are Free. We bought these rings to give Opal. These Rings are Free. We bought these rings to give away and the following offers are liberal enough to enable every reader to own one at once. Mothers should have one.

The boys should get one for their sweethearts. They make a swell present. We will give one ring Free for a cool of 7 subscribers at 15 cents each.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

We have lately taken a large amount of triple plate silverware on a debt and will send you this Elegant, Gold Lined Silver Cake Basket free, all charges paid, for a club of 12 subscribers at 15 cents each. This Cake Basket is of the latest pattern and will wear a lifetime. It is the finest silver plate, highly decorated with beautiful patent rolled edge. We only have a few of them left so get up your club of 18 subscribers at 10 cents each, today, and you will always enjoy it.

These pieces of silverware are useful in your own home or they are acceptable gifts so that this is, a good opportunity to procure wedding presents, as we have an assortment including a fine five-bottle Silver Castor and a Superb Silver Butter Dish at the same price if you prefer either one to the Basket. Remember you are to send only 12 yearly subscribers at 15 cents each, or 8 two-year subscriptions at 25 cents each, and get your choice. Address

COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

OUR BOYS' PRINTING OUT

Make Money Printing Cards.

About all boys have an ambition to learn a trade that will give honest employment and mental improvement. With our handy Printing Outfit a boy or girl can accomplish the art of type setting as well as printing, thus conquering two subjects at one time. These complete outfits consist of a six-font set of rubber type; that is, there are six of each of most all the letters in the alphabet except some important letters have eight, and others only four, such as "Q." A double set of numerals, commas, periods, and four handsome ornaments; also slugs or spaces to separate words—in all about 200 separate pieces of type. A two-line type holder for printing cards, etc. It works like a miniature Franklin printing press, so you can print cards for your friends and thus make money. A pair of nickeled pincers to handle type and a metal case ink pad. This ink pad is everlasting and can be renewed if constant use removes the ink. With each set we send a wooden type case so that type can be arranged and kept in perfect order, also full and complete instructions how to set type, etc. A wonderful outfit for printing cards or small amount of text. Will afford amusement and instruction unbounded. Every child will appreciate one and grown folks can make use of these sets for marking linen by procuring an indelible ink pad. It is probable such an outfit as we offer can not be found everywhere and we expect to give away a great many for the slight work done in getting subscriptions for us.

CLUB OFFER. For a club of only 3 yearly subscribers at 15 cents each, 45 cents in all, we will send you postpaid one of these Printing Outfits all complete as described.

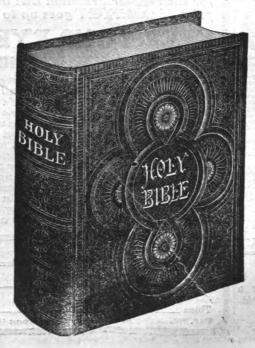

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

In getting up clubs, only actual subscribers count; those who agree to take the paper and pay you their money for it

FAMILY BI

THE WORDS OF CHRIST PRINTED IN RED

Marriage Certificate, Family Record and Colored Maps.

Printed from new plates cast from new type set this year. New Self-Pronouncing Family Bible containing: The Authorized Version of the Old and New Testaments; The words of Christ are all printed in red in this new 1906 edition and although much more expensive to produce is an added feature free of any cost to you. The Standard Concordance; A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names; Maps in Colors; Over 100 Full-Page and other Illustrations; Index to Old and New Testaments; Marriage Certificate; Family Temperance Pledge; Family Record, etc., etc.

The largest and best illustrated Bible ever produced for the money. Size 12½x10½. This edition excels all others in the excellence of paper and exquisite typography, being printed from an entirely new set of plates costing many thousands of dollars. The size of the pages is 12½x50½ inches the print large and clear and over 100 full-page and other illustrations. The colored maps of the points of Biblical interest and a feature not found with the ordinary Bible and are of great help to Bible students and teachers. These and the other features mentioned above make this edition an invaluable one and it should appeal to those who are in need of a thorough and complete Bible. These Bibles are bound in Morocco Buckram Paneled Sides, with the words, "Holy Bible," on the side and back, stamped in gold, combed edges. Contains over 1,000 pages and weighs over 5 pounds. Specimen page showing size of sheet and type free upon application. Remember the Red Letter feature.

Club Offer. Press at our expense one of these 1000-page Bibles avectly avectly a second to the content of the second to the second to the second the second to the seco

Club Offer. We will send by mail or ex-these 1,000-page Bibles exactly as we have de-scribed it for a club of only 17 yearly subscribers at the regular rate of 15 cents per year, or a club of only 10 two-year subscriptions at 25 cents each. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

The few items on this page represent some of our latest selections, all new goods, each having the qualifications to make themselves attractive and at once especially desired by each reader. Now is the best time of all the year to get new subscriptions and renewal orders..

Accurate Weighing Scales 49 New Idea Transfer Designs

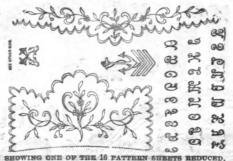

quantity by pounds and ounces up to 24 p o u n d s. Can be used without the without the scoop, as lever which can be urned back to take up the tare or weight of scoop. A pair of scales in the kitchen are of great assistance to the lady of the house. When preserving she can weigh her sugar or her berries; when purchasing of the grecer she can verify the weight of a package of sugar, meat or fish, and oftentimes detect an error. A

Weigh any

she can verify be weight of a package of sugar, meat or fish, and oftentimes detect an error. A few errors sare detect an error. A few errors sare the ease and simplicity of transferring the design. By simply dampening the material you are to stamp, laying the design of the design of the stamply dampening the material you are to stamp, laying the material you are to stamp, laying the design of the design of the stamply dampening the material you are to stamp, laying determined the sare are full fail in the stample of the stample of

Over 2000 Square Inches of Patterns FREE

Fancy Work Patterns, Readily Transferable
to any Material
By the use of this new method which has proven superior to old style perforated paper patterns, one may have an extensive variety of patterns on hand embracing an unlimited quantity of designs for every kind of work. One special feature of these patterns that will please you is

A practical set of table articles, seven pieces, including a sub stantial Nut Cracker with Six Picks. These articles are solid steel highly plated, impossible to wear off the finish, and they are so strong you cannot bend or break them. The Cracker is so made it can be inverted, use one side for large nuts, such as walnuts, and the other or narrower opening for small nuts. The leverage is so nearly perfect, that a slight pressure does the trick. The handles of the Cracker and Picks are perfectly round, a bit fancy, as shown in our illustration. The entire set is thoroughly good, and as solid gold or silver is naturally soft, there is no more suitable article than nickeled steel for a nut set. We guarantee these sets to be perfect, to be just as described, full family or adult size, and practically indestructable, or money refunded.

> Club Offer. For a club of only 5 yearly sub-each, we will send you one of these Seven-Piece Nut Sets, Six Picks and a Cracker, postpaid.

> Another Offer. If you already have a Nut Cracker, we will send you a set of six of these Nut Picks for a club of only 3 yearly subscribers to this magazine at 15c. each, postpaid. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

> > I Pho. Frame, Pansies,

PRINCESS STAMPING

Over 60 Designs on Eight Sheets 17X22 Inches. Presenting a large assortment of perforated paper patterns for all new and staple fancy work, familiar to woman's idle. These patterns are stamped on a strong bond paper especially imported for the manufacture of this outfile.

In quantity and quality we give more in value than will be found in many dollar outfits, as we have always made a specialty of Stamping Outfits for our lady readers, and have had this outfit made up just as we wished, and with only new and pleasing patterns. You will not find these patterns in any other stamping outfit, offered else where. The following is a complete list of the various patterns included in the Outfit, and we ask that you read it over as there are innumerable designs and patterns new and not included in the assortment of any other outfit.

Two Complete Shirt

Waist Sets.

Two Complete Alphabets, 26
lefters in each alphabets, 26 lefters in each alphabet, 26
l

Two Complete Alphabets, 26
letters in each alphabet, also many designs on 8
sheets of bond paper, a box of Modern Stamping
Material, with full directions to stamp.

Large Tab Collar. Lace Collar. Lace Collar.
Turnover Collar.
Turnover Collar & Cuffs,
Fagoted Collar & Cuffs.
Sofa Pillow, Daisies Never Tell.

10 in. Cut Work Doily. 8 in. Strawborn Doily.

18 in. Strawberry Dolly.
18 in. Forget-me-not Dolly.
18 in. Lace Boily.
14 in. Strawberry Dolly.
15 in. Whist Dolly.
Words and Letters, etc.
Photographs. Cleyte.

Photographs, Gloves, Handkerchiefs,

I Pho. Frame, Pansies,
3 1-2 in., Heart.
1 Pho. Frame, Pansies,
Double, 13 in.
2 Scallop Borders.
1 Border Design for Braiding.
1 Pin Cushion Design, 6 in.
1 Border Snow Drops.
1 Lace Butterfly, 5 in.
1 Lace Tie End.
1 Corner Design for Table
Cover, 11 in.
1 Anchor, 3x4 in.
1 Large Spray Chrysanthemums, 11 in.
Also many small sprays.
Sweet Peas, Daisles,
Batch Buttons, Wild Rose,
Wild Rose Buds,
Garden Rose, Poppies,
Lilies, Violets, Buttercups,
Lily of Valley, Cherries,
Bowknofs, Holly, Chicken,
Butterflies, other outline and floral designs.
dies wear hand-ambroidered neckwear, shirt leent for all sorts of embroidered fancy work, 1 Suspender Design, EMBROIDERED

Style and custom now require that ladies wear hand-embroidered neckwear, shirt waists and underwear, also the fad is prevalent for all sorts of embroidered fancy work, such as doilies, table covers, cushion covers and many other articles of use and ornament. The most lastidious person will find this assortment so varied and yet complete; hardly a want can be imagined that will not be satisfied with this outfit. Our monthly home magazines are of interest to each and every member of the household, and today represent the efforts of the best writers and illustrators, contains clean, fascinating stories in great number, and have also many interesting and instructive departments. In order to enlarge their field of usefulness, we offer you, as an inducement to extend the circulation among your acquaintances, one of these Outfits free of cost.

Our Princess Outfit Offer.

For a club of 3 yearly subscribers to this magazine, at 15 cents each, we will send you one of these outfits at our expense.

Address COMFORT, August

SATIN GILT BRONZE MANTEL CLOCK

This beautiful new premium Clock really has to be seen to be fully appreciated. When we say it is an elegant present, we only half carry out the impression you get after seeing it. The style is the latest pattern, finished in Satin Gilt Bronze, that soft, rich, gold lustre that is used on all high-grade clocks. The width is six inches, with a good wide base to stand on, and the height of clock is nearly a foot. It is extremely ornamental, as well as useful. Movement guaranteed, a perfect time-keeper, and will last for years. We know of nothing better for a wedding gift than this clock, as the relief ornamentation has two cupids disporting themselves over the dial. cupids disporting themselves over the dial. Also as a holiday or birthday presentation gift this clock is bound to be fully appreciated by the receiver. Before you think of others, secure one for yourself under the terms of this liberal Club Offer. For a club of only 14 yearly subscribers to COMFORT at 15c. each, we will forward to you one of these clocks by express or mail at our express. Address Address

COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Beautiful Silver Jewel Casket

String of Pearl Beads, Broach Pin and Scarf or Stick Pin.

For a lady's dresser or bureau, here is a new and very beautiful Silver novelty. Made of solid metal with a raised decoration on sides and cover, four standards, a hinged cover, the inside tastily lined with pink or blue silk, finished with silk cord to match, completes a useful and attractive ornament which serves as a holder for a watch, necklaces, rings, pins, or knick-knacks. There are hundreds of similar articles to be had, but this particular selection has merits superior to any. Being made of heavy metal which permits a bold decoration, the artist has made use of the surfaces for flowers, etc. The whole is finished in oxidized silver (black and gray), which cannot tarnish or or rub off, so that it is very durable for constant use.

In addition to the Casket we have arranged in each a very pretty Broach Pin, a Stick Pin and each a very pretty Broach Pin, a Stick Pin and a long Pearl Necklace, with a swivel for watch or Fan, thus providing a few useful articles and a convenient Jewel Casket in which to put such things when not in use.

We are very proud of the Casket; it is new and stylish, not anything like similar articles made of Aluminum or cheaply gold plated. On the contrary this is very desirable, so much so we willingly agree to refund the premium price to any not delighted.

As a holiday, birthday or wedding gift, nothing can excel this for a young lady or a young old lady.

Club Offer. For a club of only to yearly subscribers to this magazine at 15 cents each, we will send one of these Caskets including a long Pearl Necklace, a Broach Pin and a Stick Pin FREE.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

BEST BOOKS

26. Miss McDonald.
27. The Rector of St. Mark's.
28. Rosamond.
29. Rose Mather.

Charles M. Sheldon.

Ralph Conn or

T. S. Arthur. 32. Ten Nights in a Bar Room.

Elizabeth Wetherell.

31. Black Rock.

M

G. A. Henty.

34. Among Malay Pirates. 35. Bonnie Prince Charlie

Sheldon, Charlotte M. Braeme, Mrs. Southworth.

The works of the popular authors above mentioned, also a large number of other popular authors! best efforts, are included in our new list of gift books. From an assortment of over 400 titles we have selected the most popular and desirable works of these famous American and European Authors.

Each book is printed on good quality paper, from large, clear type, is 7½ inches long, 5 wide and vary in thickness, all one inch or more, and weigh about one pound each. Cloth Bindings are genuine Linen Cloth of several attractive and striking colors, especially made for this series. Each cover has an ornamental design, as shown in the illustration, and the titles are all done in genuine gold and two-colored inks. Each cover design is by some well-known artist, and the high quality of this alone makes the outer appearance of each book at once attractive, as it gives the book a rich appearance for shelving or when lying on the table. Taken all in all this series of books is an excellent edition and we are pleased to have the opportunity to place them before you at this particular season of the year and at such liberal terms.

USE NUMBERS NOT NAMES. When ordering kindly use numbers to aid in promptly handling orders at this end.

Marie Oorelli.

8. Macaria.

Marie Corelli. ce of Two Worlds.

Augusta J. Evans.

Beulahe Inez. Daniel Defoe. 55. Robinson Cruso The author of favorite juvenile books.

Harriet Beecher Stowe 56. Uncle Tom's Cabin. Charles Garvice. 57. Elaine. 58. Farmer Hoit's Daughter. 59. Her Heart's Desire. 60. A Wilful Maid. 61. Woven on Fate's Loom.

34. Among Malay Pirates.
35. Bomie Prince Charile.
36. By Pike and Dyke.
37. By Right of Conquest.
38. By Sheer Pinck.
38. By Sheer Pinck.
49. By Sheer Pinck.
40. Pogroa and the Rayen.
40. Progroa and the Rayen.
41. Precedom's Cause.
42. In Tracedom's Cause.
43. In Times of Peril.
44. Jack Archer.
45. Orange and Green.
46. Stardy and Strong.
47. Frue to the Old Flag.
48. Unider Drake's Flag.
49. With Clive in India.
50. With Lee in Virginia.
51. With Wolfe in Canada.
52. The Young Buglers.
53. The Young Midshipman. Robert Louis Stevenson 69. Ishmael. 70. Self Raised, Sequel to No. 69. 11. Charles 92. Simple Life.

9. Alkenside,
10. Bad Hugh.
11. Cousin Maude,
12. Darkness and Daylight.
13. Dora Deane.
14. English Orphans.
15. Edith Lyle's Secret.
16. Ethelyn's Mistake. 72. Bride's Fate, Sequel to No. 71. 73. Deserted Wife. Mrs. May Agnes Flem-

Mary J. Holmes.

74. Magdalen's Vow.
75. The Queen of the Isle.
76. The Midnight Queen.
77. The Dark Secret.
78. Gypsy Queen's Vow.
79. The Heiress Castle Cliff.
80. The Rival Brothers.

Charlotte M. Braeme.

Emma D. E. N. Southworth.

82. Wife's Victory.
63. Hidden Hand, Part I.
64. Capitola, Part 2 of No. 63.
65. Allworth Abbey.
66. Phantom Wedding.
67. Cruef as the Grave,
68. Tried for Her Life.
69. Ishmael.
60. Ishmael.
61. Charlotte M. Braem

82. Theorem on the World.
83. Repen:ed at Leisure.
84. Her Martyrdom.
85. For Another's Sin,
86. Weaker Than a Woman.
89. Wife in Name Only.
90. Woman's Temptation.
90. Hearlos Waccong.
91. Charles Waccong.

Charles Wagner.

Robert Louis Stevenson 70. Self Raised, sequel to no. w. 92. Simple Life.

33. Queechy.

Subscription Offer. For a club of 3 yearly subscribers to this magazine at 15c. each, we send you any book of 8 at 15c. each, we send any four books you may select. REMEMBER. We send our magazine to the subscribers you get, and to you we send the books you may select. Remembers of the subscribers to the subscribers to the subscribers of the

DECORATE YOUR HOME

The Editor Tells You Today of an Opportunity to Beautify Your Home Free of Charge

Every lady, rich or poor, likes to have a

Of course you want nice furniture and pretty decorations in your house and as nice as any of your neighbors have.

Sometimes it is a pretty hard pull to keep up with the richer people and yet have that air of culture and refinement about the home of which every woman is proud.

But when you can get beautiful decorations and get them free—just for doing somebody a friendly turn without even any real work—then it's your loss, Madam, if you neglect this opportunity.

A Wonderful Liberal Offer

And just because I know that the readers of my paper will take advantage of this opportunity, I am particularly glad to tell my subscribers of a most honest and wonderfully liberal offer. Look on this page at the magnificent dinner set with the initials in gold. Mr. Geo. Clark, publisher of the famous "High-Art Pictures," tells me that he will give every one of my lady readers one of these magnificent dinner sets absolutely free if she only helps him with a little recommendation of his pic-with a little recommendation of his pic-tures. As you see, Mr. Clark does not want you to do any canvassing. Read on this page where it says in big black type, "Here is the Offer." I can guarantee you that Mr. Clark's offer is exactly as represented and I am proud that he has selected the readers of this paper. he has selected the readers of this paper, and shows his confidence in the honesty of my subscribers in making this offer here.

"SAVED"-Beautiful free picture

Two Pictures Free Anyway

You will also see that even if you do not succeed in carrying out the conditions of Mr. Clark's offer, he wants you to keep two of his famous pictures absolutely free just because you have made an honest

I would like to feel that every one of my subscribers will get not only the two free pictures but also the free dinner set. Imagine how your dining room will look with the elegant monogram dinner set and with the elegant monogram dinner set and the high-art pictures hanging on the wall. I have several of Mr. Clark's pictures in my home now and they are certainly very, very beautiful pictures. The way they are printed here I cannot begin to show you how beautiful they look in their many splendid colors. These pictures are real works of art, fit for the finest residence, 16 x20 inches. What is more they come ready to hang on the wall; for every picture is to hang on the wall; for every picture is

"NATURE'S GOODIES"-Also free, finished with a lithograph scroll and fac-simile lithograph gold frame, ready for wall, just as received from Mr. Clark.

And I hope that every lady reader of this paper will sign the free coupon and send for Mr. Clark's high-art pictures to-(Signed)

Editor Home Folks.

Why He Stopped Drinking

BY A. W. KOENIG. ROUGH-LOOKING red-faced man under the influence of liquor, sat in the rear room of a down-town saloon with several other men playing cards, being insensible as to what was going on around him.

On this particular evening he was losing heavily and became noisy and ugly. The proprietor had spoken to him; he was attracting a crowd, everyone expecting a quarrel at any moment; however, they were disappointed as the man became drowsy and fell asleep.

After his companions had won all of his money they departed, leaving him sitting there in a drunken stupor. The proprietor did not disturb him, allowing him to sleep where his companions had left him.

All was quiet in and around the saloon for about an hour, when suddenly a great deal of commotion was heard outside and a large crowd had collected in front of the saloon. A man was seen coming toward the door with a small boy in his arms, apparently lifeless. A handsome child with light curly hair and fair complexion; he was poorly clad and poorly nourished and without shoes or stockings. His mother had sent him out to find his father, as the baby had been taken sick quite suddenly during

This Elegant Dinner Set is a complete dinner set of 42 beautiful pieces—finest Parisien China, the kind engreat deal of money, we chose the Parisien China to give away; for we figure that by being very generous and liberal with you and giving you the best right now, we would at once win your friendship and recommendation, and the beautiful dinner set standing on your table and envied by all your neighbors—the best dinner set in town—ought to prove a fine advertisement for our proposition. As you can see from the picture every piece of the Dinner Set is decorated with the modern high art, and besides. If you write at once, every piece (except cups and saucers) with your initial in pure gold free of charge. Read what the aditor of Home Folks says in the first column of this page. This is no toy or small size dinner set, but everyone of the 42 pieces is regulation full size. The 42 pieces are: Six large size 9-inch plates, six smaller size 7-inch dessert plates, six large size cups, six saucers, six sauce or fruit dishes, two large size vegetable dishes, six individual butter dishes, one platter, one cake plate, one bread plate, one gravy bowl. We guarantee that this Parisien China Dinner Set is exactly as represented and exactly as shown in the picture, with rose design in colors, gold initial, and edges traced in gold.

is the Offer: Send no money. Just mail the coupon at the bottom of this page. You will then get 24 famous high-art pictures, richly colored, 16 x 20 inches, complete with facsimile lithographed gold scroll frames, for you to distribute, and two extra pictures for you to keep—a total of 26 pictures. The two extra pictures you hang up in your home. Invite your friends to see your pictures, and whenever a friend calls hand her one of the other 24 pictures at only 25c each. By giving away the 24 pictures at only 25c each you will take in $6.00. Send us the $6.00 and we will send you the aristocratic 42-piece monogram dinner set free.

As soon as people see the pictures decorating the walls of your room they will be eager to get a similar picture. But if for any reason you should not succeed, we will pay you for the number of pictures you distributed and besides we want you to keep the two extra pictures anyway, just for having made an honest effort. The art pictures are fully described by the editor in the first column of this page.

Mayor Grosse's wife writes us as follows:

'I received your beautiful monogram dinner set with initial in gold and it is certainly beautiful. The stores here do not carry anything like it. It is so artistic and elegant. "Our dining room with the new set of dishes looks twice as good as before.

"I want to thank you also for the two extra pictures you allowed me to keep. 'I shall always be glad to recommend you for fairness, promptness and generosity. Sincerely yours, MRS. MARTIN W. GROSSE.

Harlem, Ill., October 9, 1906.

Cultured and refined people appreciate the value of this offer. They know that this is no ordinary premium offer. We have thousands of letters like Mrs. Grosse's and when you send us the coupon we will send you our mammoth circular of testimonials and one thousand references.

Dining room of Mayor Grosse, of Harlem, 21., whose wife earned the beautiful monogram dinner set and also the free pictures. (From photograph by Orville Hart, all rights reserved.)

Coupon

HERE is the Coupon for you to sign right now. GEO. CLARK, Mgr., You need not bother with a letter-just write your name and address plainly on the coupon and mail in an 63-69 Washington Street, envelope. You will then get by return mail a magnificent colored circular picturing and fully describing Suite 1449, CHICAGO, ILL. our 42-piece Monogram Dinner Set; you will also get the mammoth testimonial sheet and a letter telling I would like to earn your Monogram you just what to do. At the same time you will also get the pictures so you can distribute them at once. Dinner Set. Please send me your art pictures at once, prepaid, as per your offer above.

REMEMBER! Everybody gets two 16x20 inch high-art pictures free anyway, just for making an honest effort. Sign this coupon and get the wonderfully liberal offer before anybody else gets it in your town. Don't delay - sign the coupon now.

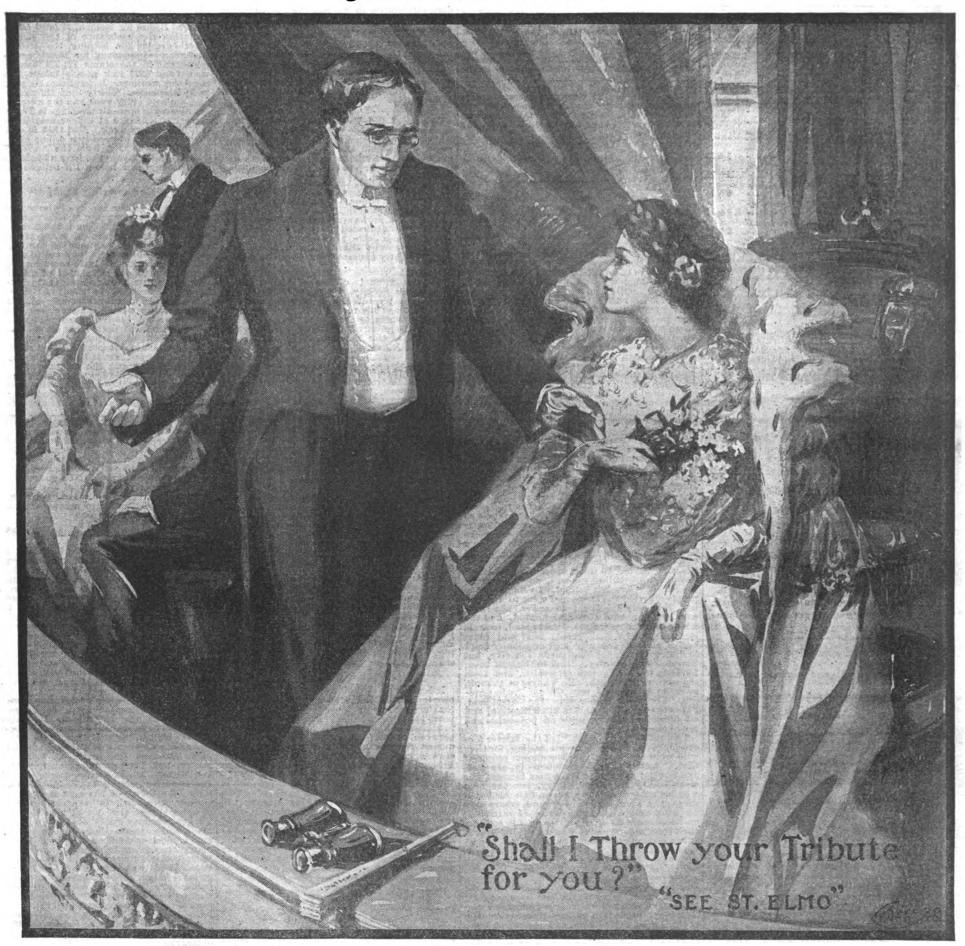

GEO. CLARK, Mgr., 63-69 Washington Street, Suite 1449, CHICAGO, ILL (Incorporated in Illinois for $60,000.00.)

Vol XIX

January 1907

No 3

Published at Augusta, Maine

A Million and a Quarter Homes.

Devoted to

Art, Literature, Science, and the Home Circle

Its Motto Is "Onward and Upward." SUBSCRIPTION.

United States and Guba. England, Canada and loreign countries.

England. Canada and foreign countries. 320.

SUSSECUTIONS are entered to our books as soon as received, and are always dated from the current issue, unless otherwise ordered. Postage to all parties of residence, in order to insure the unintermediate of the countries of COMFORT, it is essential that we be advised of the chance in address IMMEDIATELY. As Postmasters cannot forward second-class matter with stamps, your missing copies of COMFORT will not reach you and we do not supply back numbers.

To CONTENTIONS. All literary contributions should be accompanied by stamped and addressed envelopes for their return in case they are not available. Manuscripts should not be rolled.

Special Notice. We do not supply back numbers.

Entered at the Post Office at Augusta, Mai

Published Monthly by W. H. GANNETT, Incorporated, Augusta, Maine.

New York Office, Flatiron Bidg. Chicago Office, Marqu

January, 1907

CONTENTS

CRUMBS OF COMFORT
A FEW WORDS BY THE EDITOR	2
CURRENT TOPICS
TOLD AROUND THE STOVE	2
THE SHADOW OF A CROSS-A Religious
Quarrel and Separation Written in Collaboration by Mrs. Dora Nelson and F. M.
C. Henderschott	3 & 24
IN & AROUND THE HOME, Fancy Work,
Comfort Susters' Corner, etc 4, 5, 10), 13 & 23
A STOLEN PROPOSAL (continued) Mrs.
Mary J. Holmes	6 & 21
COMFORT'S LEAGUE OF COUSINS Con-	7.9 & 20
ducted by Uncle Charlie IERRY. THE BACKWOODS BOY (contin-	7, 7 C 2
ued) Horatio Alger, Jr	8 & 14
THE GREAT CHICAGO MYSTERY; a.
The Man with Many Aliases Rosser W.
Cobbe	11 & 2
THE HIDDEN WEDDING TREASURE: or.
The Mystery of the San Francisco Earthquake (continued) William T. Valentine	12
POULTRY FARMING FOR WOMEN Mrs.
Kale V. St. Maur	13
A CORNER FOR BOYS Conducted by
Uncle John	14
ST. ELMO (continued) Mrs. Augusta J. Evans Wilson - 16, 17, 19, 23	25 4 20
ANY OLD PLACE I CAN HANG MY HAT	, 2) a. 2.
IS HOME SWEET HOME TO ME Song
Wm. Jerome	12
HATS AND HOW TO MAKE THEM
Comfort's Home Milliner	- 10
COMFORT RECITATION CLUB Conducted by Harold C. Hazleton	102 2
TALKS WITH GIRLS	2
MANNERS & LOOKS	2
HOME LAWYER	20
INFORMATION BUREAU	2
FAMILY DOCTOR	21

Crumbs of Comfort

The sunrise never failed us yet. Heaven is either now or never.

Many a trial is a test before promotion.

"Death is but a covered way That opens into light, Whereiu no blinded child may stray Beyond his Father's sight."

Not being able to have a thing, we scorn it. They who ask much should also give much. Good work is a prayer, prompted by a loving

If you were born to honor show it now:
If put upon you, make the judgment good
That thought you worthy of it. -Shakespeare.

The reward for a good deed is in having The happiness reaped today depends on that sown vesterday. Woulds't shape a noble life? Then cast No backward glances toward the past, What each day needs, that shalt thou ask, Each day will set its proper task.

They hear best the angel's songs who listen for earth's sighs. No good thing is failure and no evil thing muccess.—Proverb.

Happy the man, and happy he alone, He who can call today his own; He who, secure within himself, can say: "Tomorrow do thy worst, for I have lived

-Druden Life is not so short but that there is always time enough for courtesy.—Emerson, In Thy book, O Lord, are written all that do what they can, though they cannot do what they would.—St. Bernard.

A noble effort never dies.
What though we fail? Its fire will give Desire in other hearts to rise,
And kindled there, it still will live!

Let us work with song and gladness. Let us rejoice in all the life that is ours. Then we will no longer exhaust ourselves in fighting

If there is a growing kindness in your own heart, take some spray and plant it in the heart of another and you will be surprised how quickly it will bloom.

On God's dial-plate of time
"Tis never late to him who stands
Self-centered in a trust sublime,
With mastered force and thinking hands.

The nearer the intimacy the more cuttingly do we feel the unworthiness of those we love; and because you love one, and would die for that love tomorrow, you have not forgiven, and you never will forgive, that friend's misconduct. And herein lies the magnanimous courage of love, that it endures this knowledge without change.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

A Few Words by the Editor

A Flower unblown, a Book unread;
A Tree with fruit unbarvested;
A Path untrod; A House whose rooms
Lack yet the heart's divine perfumes.
A Landscape whose wide border lies
In silent shade, 'neath slient skies;
A wondrous Fountain yet unsealed;
A Casket with its gifts concealed;
This is the Year that for you waits
Beyond Tomorrow's mystic gates.
—Horatio Nelson Pow

HAPPY NEW YEAR to you all. May it be a year of health and pros-perity. The precious months lie before us, with new duties to be done, new trials to be endured, new before us, with new duties to be done, new trials to be endured, new conflicts to be fought, and new opportunities to be used for our betterment and advancement. A Happy New Year it is bound to be, if we face the future unflinchingly, and meet every trial bravely, and do what is right by our Creator, and our fellowmen. Let us all put our shoulders to the wheel of progress, and give it a mighty push in 1907. We don't want all the good things to come after we are dead. Let us try our very best to make ideal conditions come before we pass to other spheres. We can hasten the good days, by each individual doing his or her best in that sphere of life in which it has pleased God to call them. No matter how humble our position in life may be, we each wield an influence upon the rest of the world much greater than we imagine. Our influence is either for good or bad, and makes for progress or retrogression. If the world is to grow better, the work must begin with each individual. Bury your shortcomings, your bad habits, your failings in the ashes of the old year. Put on a new mantle of righteousness for 1907, take your place in the ranks of progress, and fight the good fight, onward and upward with brave and kindly hearts throbbing in dauntless breasts, determined to fight for the right, to protect the weak, and to be a man as God intended men to be. Face 1907 thus, and it will be a year of blessing to us all.

Commissioner Kolner of the Department of Agriculture, Richmond, Va., says that fifty thousand laborers are needed in that state. He says:

"If the English, German, Irish, Scotch, Danish and Swedish laborers could be in this office for a few moments with me, and see the in-quiries being made for farm help, they would see that we have homes here for fifty thousand of them right away."

It appears that all sorts of opportunities are presenting themselves to the farm laborers, and all they have to do is to go to Virginia and go to work. Men who want farm workers will pay wages, will farm on shares, or will rent lands, in fact, they will do most anything to get the men to come to Virginia, and will take get the men to come to Virginia, and will take pleasure in giving them as good homes as those occupied by the average farmer of that state. The Commissioner says that all sorts of farm labor is needed. Laborers, farmers, dairymen, poultry-raisers and stockmen are all in demand. A new impetus has been given to farming in this state, and more people are preparing to engage in agricultural pursuits there, in the coming year, than ever before.

We should advise all those who are making but a doubtful living in our over-crowded cit-we should advise all those who are making but a doubtful living in our over-crowded cities to look into this subject, and we should also advise all those who are following dangerous and wearing occupations, such as coal mining, where a man tolls in the bowels of the earth, deprived of the blessed sunshine for the best veers of his life to investigate this mining, where a man tolls in the bowels of the earth, deprived of the blessed sunshine for the best years of his life, to investigate this appeal. In Europe the cry is "Back to the land," and soon that cry will be re-echoed on this continent from coast to coast. Mother Earth is indeed our mother. It is she who gives us everything that we possess, every fabric of value, every priceless work of art, every specimen of man's cunningest handicraft, all come from the soil, from Mother Earth. When a man comes into the city, he is practically divorcing himself from the great sustainer of life, and he has to live upon the product of those who are tilling the soil, and cultivating the land he has left behind. In England the people deserted the farms and went to the cities. Not only did the land suffer, but those who left the land also deteriorated, and the whole national physique deteriorated, too. It is the country that breeds men and gives health, and it is the city that eventually helps in destroying both. Man made the city, but God made the country. Back to the land then, for from the land comes all wealth, and from the country all health. He who owns the soil, owns up to the skies, says the old Latin proverb. The first farmer was the first man. Farmers were the founders of civilization, and all historic nobility rests on possession and use of the land. all historic nobility rests on possession and all historic nobility rests on possession and use of the land.

Thomas Jefferson says: "Let the farmer forevermore be honored in his calling, for they who labor in the earth are the chosen people of God." Agriculture is, undoubtedly, the first and noblest science. "Trade may increase the wealth and glory of a country, but the man who makes two ears of corn, or two blades of grass grow upon a spot of ground where only grass grow upon a spot of ground, where only one grew before, deserves better of mankind, and does more essential service to his country than the whole race of politicians put together."
It is a good many years ago, since Dean Swift made that remark, but it is as true today as it ever was. The man who invented the plough did more for the world happiness than the whole race of military heroes and conquerors, who have drenched it with tears, and manured it with blood. Magnificent statues are raised to the men who kill their fellowmen, and who follow the practical of legitimate randers. follow the profession of legitimate murder, a profession of destruction, and the world bows down and glorifies these heroes of war, while the true heroes and benefactors of mankind the man behind the plow, and the man behind the hoe, lie in unmarked graves. But some day, a greater monument than has ever been raised to warrior or statesman will be raised in raised to warrior or statesman will be raised in memory of that nameless and noblest of all benefactors, the man who invented the plow.

The threatened trouble with Japan has been happily averted. The San Francisco board of education, decided to provide separate schools for Japanese pupils. This act aroused an im-mense storm of indignation in Japan, a country mense storm of indignation in Japan, a country with which we have been on the most intimate, and friendly terms for many years. In our treaty with Japan, it expressly states, that the citizens of either country are not to be discriminated against, but are to be allowed to enjoy the same privileges, as though in their ton, D. C., with a note of time and place and eliver it for that purpose to the United States consul at the nearest point.

If Peary makes another attempt to reach the pole, it is to be hoped his faithful friend will enjoy the same privileges, as though in their own lands. The American Government promptly informed Japan that the action of the board of education in San Francisco, had not the approval of the national government. The matter was a purely local affair, of which it was entirely ignorant, and assured Japan that its citizens would not be discriminated against in any way, and would receive the same treatment and consideration as that given to our own people or the subjects of the most favored European nations. The Japanese are marvelous people, and the way in which they have adopted people, and the way in which they have adopted our civilization, and improved upon many of our methods in arts, in science, and in mechanical industries is astounding. The Japanese are a polite, charming and very likable people, and in this they differ from the Chinese, who always remain a race apart and neither who always remain a race apart, and neither racially nor individually win our sympathies, but usually incur our dislike.

Your friend Comfort's Editor.

Current Topics

A case in which women are involved is to be tried in Chicago before a woman jury, the most of whom are club women and wives of lawyers.

Japanese are flocking to the Rio Grande borders, attempting to get into the United States. Most of them are said to have been discharged from the Japanese army.

Among the recent reports in the scientific world is the discovery of drawing electricity from the earth currents without the aid of coal, water, and costly machinery. If this is true the discovery will affect the industrial future of the world.

Officers of the Geological Survey have lately announced that the coal deposit in America will not be exhausted for four or five thousand will not be exhausted for four or five thousand years. Since 1875 the country has produced more than five billion tons of coal, whereas its total production up to that date was only seven hundred million.

An unusual honor, to the memory of John Hay, has been paid in Philadelphia. A stained-glass window in the synagogue of Kenesath Israel has been dedicated to Mr. Hay's services on behalf of the Jews at Kichnif, Russia; his efforts to prevent discrimination against Jews in this country endeared him to the whole race.

At the annual dinner of the National Geographic Society, Commander Robert E. Peary was presented with a gold medal in recognition of his recent trip. The presentation was made by President Roceevelt, who said he was proud of the fact that an American, an officer of the American Navy had reached "Farthest North."

Mrs. Esther S. Damon, the last surviving widow of a Revolutionary soldier died recently in Plymouth Union, Vermont. She was ninety-three years old. At twenty-two shamarried Mr. Damon, who was then seventy-five, and he did not receive a pension until fourteen years later. Mrs. Damon cannot be accused that the pension was an inducement to marry.

The Eiffel Tower, which has been the most conspicuous landmark of Paris since 1889, has recently tecome one of the most important wireless telegraph stations in existence. The French government intends to use it as a center for the transmission and reception of wireless dispatches, not only for land but also for marine purposes. Dispatches can be sent for a distance of 600 miles overland from the great tower.

An American woman was one of the first five who last October received the new theological diploma for women, 8. Th., which stands for Student in Theology. It was established by the Archbishop of Canterbury, in order to py the Archishop of Canterdury, in order to provide for women teachers of religious sub-jects in the schools a training similar to that which they receive in other branches of learn-ing. The examinations are practically the same as those for candidates for the ministry.

It is a matter of pride and gratification to the people in this country that the Noebel prize for the most eminent service in the cause of for the most eminent service in the cause of peace has been awarded to President Roosevelt in recognition of services in ending the war between Russia and Japan. The amount of money represented in the prize is 138,563 crowns, or $27,127,65. The disposal of it by the President is in part as follows: "The amount of the Noebel prize will be conveyed by the President to the trustees to be by them used as the foundation of a fund the income of which the foundation of a fund the income of which shall be expended for bringing together in conference at Washington and especially during the sessions of Congress, representatives of labor and capital for the purpose of discussing industrial problems with the view of arriving at a better understanding between employers and employes and thus promoting industrial peace.

Commander Peary in his recent Arctic expedition had as companion Matthew A. Henson, a negro, who was not only with Peary on this expedition, but who has been his companion and personal servant in his previous attempts. Peary, willing to share the honor of his latest achievement, left a note in a bottle in which Henson's name was specially mentioned. note, which rests on the ice with miles of the pole reads as follows:

Arctic expedition of 1905-1906—Robert E. Peary, civil engineer, U. S. N., commanding, April 21, 1906.

Have this day with one companion, Matthew

A. Henson, and six dogs, reached this point via polar ice from Camp Hecla. We have traveled 570 miles.

Whoever finds this paper is requested to forward it to the secretary of the navy, Washington, D. C., with a note of time and place at which it was found, or, if more convenient, to deliver it for that purpose to the United States

Told around the Stove.

The Salvation Army

"There are some very good and respectable people," said the man who looked as if he might be one of them, "who think the Salvation Army is a fraud and that the religion it professes and practices is not the true religion. tion Army is a fraud and that the religion it professes and practices is not the true religion. I don't endorse everything that the Salvation Army does, maybe, but let me tell you right now that it is a great army fighting for good. Listen a minute and I'll tell you something about it. It began its work in Whitechapel, London, in 1865, under the direction of Rev. William Booth, as 'The Christian Mission,' and in 1878 it had developed into the Salvation Army. It now has 17,388 workers among children, and comprises 7,219 corps and societies, with 13,962 officers wholly in its service. It maintains 180 food depots and shelter for men, women and children, and last year it supplied 3,330,902 meals and 1,447,893 lodgings for the needy. It accommodates over 20,000 poor every night in its institutions, has 17 homes for former criminals, 45 homes for children, 116 industrial homes for women, 18 land colonies for visitation and assistance of the poor, and 24 labor bureaus for helping the unemployed. Last year, employment for 15,631 persons was found, and in the slums 127,839 families were visited and 7,933 sick people taken care of by the Army workers. It publishes 64 periodicals in 24 languages. Thirty-nine thousand meetings are held every week and the average number of weekly open-air meetings is 37,000. The average attendance at indoor meetings, only, is 1,202,885 every week. And that is only a few of the statistics of good it is doing all over the world. Maybe that isn't the right kind of religion, but I have got to have a higher authority than any man before I'll believe that it is not."

Concerning Rubber

Concerning Rubber

"The total rubber supply of the world," said the Chicago drummer taking off a pair of large-sized rubbers, "is 65,000, and 34,000 tons of it comes from Brazil. Six years ago the product amounted to 50,000 tons, but the coming of the automobile has increased the demand enormous-ly. Indeed, it looks a little sometimes as if we ly. Indeed, it looks a little sometimes as if we would have to get some kind of a substitute, though possibly the new areas that are developing may supply all we need. At present the total acreage in rubber is only 152,000 acres, but the valley of the Amazon has vast areas that have not been touched. They are between Brazil and Bolivia which will open up about 80,000 square miles of territory a greater part of which is suitable for rubber cultivation. Congo sends out about 4,500 tous annually of African rubber, and the balance comes from Ceylon and the Maylay Peninsula, and these sections lead in the intelligent cultivation of the plant. Ceylon has been producing it for sections lead in the intelligent cultivation of the plant. Ceylon has been producing it for about thirty years, and there are twenty companies working 45,000 acres. There are 50,000 acres of rubber in all the Maylay Peninsula. Rubber trees, under the impetus of the increased demand, are being cultivated in Africa, India, Samoa, Mexico, Central America, the West Indies and the Philippines. The price of rubber has doubled within the past five years, and for the men of means who go into its cultivation properly, and on a big scale, great fortunes are certain, but the man with small means had better stick to raising corn and hay on his home farm."

The Age They Marry

"In our country," said the large and portly "In our country," said the large and portly gentleman of lawyer-like manners, "young men and maidens seem to marry just about as they please as far as age is concerned, although parents do have something to say before they are of legal age, if they feel so disposed. In other countries certain age limits are recognized, but the much earlier marriages than with us are the rule, though, goodness knows, our children marry too young. In Austria, for instance, a boy and girl of fourteen are considered quite equal to the burdens of marriage, while in Greece while the man must be fourteen, the woman may marry at twelve. In Germany the system is somewhat better, and the man must be eighteen, though the age of the woman may be anything—that is left open as may be; she may be fifteen or fifty. In France and Belgium the ages are fifteen. In Spain the man must have passed his fourteenth birthday, and the woman her twelfth, and the same rule prevails in Portugal and Switzerland. In Hungary Catholics may marry at fourteen and twelve, but Protestants not before eighteen and fifteen, which is something in favor of Protestantism. Russia and Saxony show better sense, for they put the ages at eighteen and sixteen. Great Britain has about the same way sense, for they put the ages at eighteen and sixteen. Great Britain has about the same way of doing things that we do on this side. In Turkey they may marry at any age from the rurey they may marry at any age from the cradle to the grave. China is about as had, and among most uncivilized people children may marry, the custom being much more common in tropical countries than in the colder countries. Usually among these people very young girls are much more frequently married than young boys, though in some countries boys of a dozen years are heads of families—in name, at least. I think it is a compliment to the common sense of civilization that the more civilized people become the more they appreciate the fact that maturity should be the first requisite of marriage."

The Coal in the World

"We burn up a lot of coal and are not saving at all of it, except when there is a coal famine, or the prices have been put up on us," said the Professor man, "but estimates have ahown that none of us will ever live to see the time when we won't have plenty. Estimates by authority show that the coal supply of North America is 681 billion tons; Germany, 280 billions; Great Britain, 193 billions; Russia, 40 billions; Great Britain, 193 billions; Russia, 40 billions; Austria, 17 billions. By these figures Germany will have all she wants of her own coal for 2,000 years, but Great Britain will have used hers up in 400 years. America will have her own supply about as long as Germany. In the mean time Africa and Asia are to hear from." "We burn up a lot of coal and are not saving from.

THE SHADOW OF A CROSS

A Religious Quarrel and Separation

Copyright, 1906, by Mrs. Dora Nelson and F. M. C. Henderschott.

Serial rights controlled by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Inc.

CHAPTER I.

A WOMAN LOVES TO BE WON BY STORM.

OMEWHERE in the darkness a little bird awoke and began to chirp softly; there was an answering call and soon all the air was vibrant with the melody of bird notes; in the east a shaft of light appeared that grew in intensity until the sky blushed rosy red, like the cheek of a bride on her wedding morn; above this streak of brilliant color hung a cloud, black at the lower rim and shading to palest gray at the upper; the sun lifted his red disk above the horizon, rose gently till he stood fully unveiled, then slowly crept under the enveloping cloud and a gray mist settled down over the hills and valleys; when this mist cleared away the sun was revealed in all his glory riding high in a sky of cloudless blue. Such is the beginning of a June day in New Hampshire.

Nestled at the foot of a range of hills which broke into irregular masses against the sky line stood one of those typical New England.

Nestled at the foot of a range of hills which broke into irregular masses against the sky line, stood one of those typical New England villages that charm the casual visitor with their prim neatness; a river flowed through the valley, and below the town where the mill dam fretted the brown water into white foam stood the factory with its inevitable accompaniment of tenement houses whose angular ugliness of outline was the only blot on the beauty of the landscape; across the valley and up the ness of outline was the only blot on the beauty of the landscape; across the valley and up the adjacent hillsides extended rich farming lands, showing what Nature even in her most rugged moods can be made to do when driven by the tireless hand of man; three church spires, the largest of which was surmounted by a large cross, pointed skyward.

This particular church was half way up a long sloping hillside, above the town, in the midst of a little plot of ground where the dead lay calmly reposing. On the opposite side of the court house and a little further down was the jail.

the jail.

On the hilltop above the church stood a lone elm, one of those giants of the vegetable kingdom which would have delighted the heart of the genial Autocrat of the Breakfast Table, and against its rugged trunk leaned the tall, athletic figure of a young man of twenty years.

His dome-shaped head was covered with thickly clustering chestnut curls, and despite the almost womanish whiteness of complexion the face might have served as a model for the

His dome-shaped head was covered with thickly clustering chestnut curls, and despite the almost womanish whiteness of complexion the face might have served as a model for that of Cæsar at a like age, so full was it of indomitable resolution, and latent power. Just now, however, that look of power was less in evidence, for the firmly closing lips were softened by some unusual feeling and the deep gray eyes held a tender light as their gaze wandered involuntarily toward the village nestled at the foot of the hill.

"They are late," he soliloquized half aloud to the listening silence about him as was his wont when alone, "I wonder what is keeping them? She said they would be here at nine and it is now past the hour. Dear, shy little thing! I hope she will not fail to meet me, for I had hard work to induce her to say she would come, with that argus-eyed mother of hers watching so closely. Strange that a woman of Mrs. Rosslyn's Puritanic strength of character should have embraced the Catholic faith. But then it is true Mrs. Rosslyn had many griefs and for these found surcease in the bosom of Mother Church. And is it for this, forsooth, that I am to be separated from the object of my dearest desire!" He shook his clenched fist at the cross on the church below. "But have her I will in spite of it. She shall renounce it, too," he continued softly. "How often I have dreamed of the time when I could call her that name, wife! To kiss at will those lips of vivid red—I'd like no other heaven! My little love—shall I kiss her today, I wonder? Yet it seems almost like sacrilege, so wrapped about is she in that maiden modesty which seems to cling to her like a garment. But whether I dare to kiss her or not, I must have her promise to wed. She is true as death—my little Theta—and once I have her promise? What strength of resistance I have found in that frail girl! Hitherto her religion has stood between us like a wall of adamant, yet surmount it I must, else life will scarcely be worth the living. She is young—a few years' waiti waiting ears.

"Therethey come!" he exclaimed aloud. "And yonder come the Confirmation girls in their white dresses, followed by a bery of older maidens, And there—that slender maiden walkwhite dresses, followed by a bery of maidens, And there—that slender maiden walking a little apart and gowned all in sober gray—is—yes, it is my little love. How her sweet soprano rises clear above all the rest. A voice to wilethe very heart out of a man's breast! What—did her voice falter? Ah! you do not see me—you only think that I am here watching and waiting for you! Yes, little sweetheart, today I'll kiss the lips that are pouring forth that melody. I think I will. A woman loves to be won by storm. How grand it must have been in the old days when men were savages! How I would have delighted in throwing you over my back and running with you to my cave!" These loverlike transports came to an abrupt end as the procession entered the church.

When he did speak nis voice that created to break the charm of this mystic spell which held them.

"Sit down with me, love, here on this mossy tone, for I have much to tell you."

And gently, without loosing his hold of her, he drew her down beside him.

"You are going away?" she raised to his a face from which a little of the bright color fied.

"Yes, dearest. You have not heard? There is an opening for me out West—Judge Blodgett will take me into his law office. But the waiting will not be for long. I shall soon carve my way, and then, when I have wealth and fame I am coming back to make you my little wife.

When he did speak nis voice

"Sit down with me, love, here on this mossy tone, for I have much to tell you."

You are going away?" she raised to his a face from which a little of the bright color fied.

"Yes, dearest. You have not heard? There is an opening for me out West—Judge Blodgett will take me into his law office. But the waiting will not be for long. I shall soon carve my way, and then, when I have wealth and fame I am coming back to make you my little wife.

When he did speak nis voice.

"Well," he muttered as he threv: himself downward on the soft grass in the densest shade of the old elm, "as they will probably be along while at their worship, it may be as well for me not waste any more time."

Thus speaking, he pulled a law pamphlet from his pocket and propping his head on his elbow soon became so absorbed in the perusal of "Greenleaf on Evidence," that he was oblivious of the passage of time.

Meanwhile, in the church below a girl's heart. was beating almost to suffocation. Eugene had not been mistaken, for at the instant she had glanced up at the tree where she knew her lover waited, the sweet voice had quivered, then

Written in Collaboration

By Mrs. Dora Nelson and F. M. C. Henderschott

Once inside the church she sank trembling into her seat, wondering in her secret heart whether she would ever be pardoned for the tryst she had promised to keep that day, wondering whether Mary, sweet Mother Mary, would ever forgive her for loving that apostate so well.

"That thing!" he burst out impetuously, so well.

would ever forgive her for loving that apostate so well.

When the pretty service came to an end she lingered, ostensibly to place a wreath on a grave, until the procession had moved down to the village, then she turned and slowly climbed the hill.

The slanting sunbeams forming an aureole of gold about her sweet young face and shining in the depths of her serious dark eyes gave to her beauty an air of almost unearthly etherality as she stood there waiting even as Eve may have waited for the coming of Adam on that first morning in Paradise.

This Adam, however, did not keep his Eve waiting long, for at a bound he crossed the intervening space and reached her side.

"At last!" he said softly, "at last!"

He took both her trembling hands, twined his fingers with hers and so stood looking into her eyes, each reading the other's thoughts in language that only lovers know, then he stretched out his arms to their widest extent, thus lessening the distance between them until she half leaned, half lay, a vision of warm she half leaned, half lay, a vision of warm or scorn that seeing it the girl shrank affrightedly away.

"That thing!" he burst out impetuously,
"you wear it—there! It hurts me—it hurts me here—" he struck himself on the breast. "The whole story of the Atonement seems to me so improbable—it tortures me to think of that lying there on your beautiful bosom!"
With a sudden movement of his strong fingers he snapped the frail chain, and dashing the he snapped the frail chain, and dashing the crucifix to the ground stamped upon it with his

with a cry like a wounded animal the girl fell upon her knees and caught the mutilated crucifix to her breast, then she ran a little way and half turned, tense, quivering and faced him him.

"God forgive me," she cried, "if even for a little while I let your love words deceive me into forgetting the depth of the gulf which lies between us."

As she stood there flushed, excited, it seemed to him she never before had looked so beautiful, and the tenderness came back to his eyes.

"The gulf? If there be a gulf—I will bridge it over, and we will fly away together on the wings of the morning. Come back to me, with a passionate intake of her breath, "in the city there—over there where that faint blue line fades into the sky—are lives so sunken in ignorance, so burdened by the pressing mass above—the rich, the successful, the happy—so steeped in shame and squalor they have never possessed one wreath of the laurels of life, never enjoyed one triumph, never experienced one hour of real happiness—surely—surely a just God will set all this right—somewhere! See—down there where the dead are lying—"she pointed to the grave stones gleaming white in the rays of the declining sun, "how many, many broken-hearted ones would lay themselves down in the eternal sleep of death if once convinced this life ended all! Take away the hope of immortality, and the whole wide world would become one vast graveyard."

She ceased, and as he looked into her beautiful face a worshiping tenderness came into his eyes.

"It is that already, dear. The very structure ful face a worshiping tenderness came into his eyes.

"It is that already, dear. The very structure of the earth is made up of the bones of the creatures that have lived and died upon it. Only think of the countless organisms it took to form the limestones. It is these secrets wrested from the very rocks themselves which have slain the old beliefs. They are deadquite dead. Each in turn, 'abode its destined hour and went its way;' each in turn stamped its impress in blood on the nation from which it sprang. Yes—in blood—for could we summon back that spectral throng—those victims of the old beliefs—could we but once summon them back from lonely mountain heights where Persian priests offered sacrifice to the living mon back that spectral throng—those victims of the old beliefs—could we but once summon them back from lonely mountain heights where Persian priests offered sacrifice to the living flame; from the flowing hands of Moloch when the shouts of the worshipers drowned the cries of the victim; from the sands of the arena reddened with the blood of the Christians; from the Rock of the Holy Sepulcher when the victorious Christians rode in Paynim blood to their horses' knees in the days when the Red Cross and the Crescent struggled on the fields of Palestine; from the night of Saint Bartholonew when rivers of blood ran down the streets of Paris; from the rack and the stake of the terrible Inquisition; from the days of the Reformation when the heads of the noblest in England rolled upon the scaffold; from the flame of the fires of Bloody Mary; from those far dim days when man first erected altars and offered sacrifice to an awful and Unknown God—could we but summon back those pale specters a world might be peopled with the vastness of their mutitude, and the very hills be rent asunder with the cry they would send up against the tyranny of religion! Religion! What has it ever been but a clog on the wheels of Progress? Of a surety that shining goal toward which mankind is hastening will never be reached until men cast off the shackles of superstition, cease lifting dumb, beseeching eyes to the Unknown, search their own hearts for wisdom, and live and be free!" As he uttered the last words that voice to which thousands were one day to thrill in the halls of our nation's capitol, rose to a pitch of impassioned eloquence, then dropped swiftly, and for a time there was silence.

When he spoke again it was once more in a tone, low, soft, tender.

"But, dear heart, we will think no more of the bloody past," he said. "Through the thick darkness which now envelops us a new light is stealing. And the name of that light is love. It is the essence which permeates all things, animate and inanimate. It is a thing we share in common with has power to fit us to the uttermost heights of bliss. It is the same mutual attraction that holds the planets in their places, that makes the rivers run to the sea, the metals in Nature's great laboratory rush to embrace each other. It is that which makes me want to kiss you— my dearest, come back to me—let us love while we may." we may.

we may."

His voice sank into low passionate, pleading.
"Hark," he said, "to that low cooing coming from yonder wood. Over there a dove is calling to his mate—as I am calling to mine. And see—there where the honeybee is flitting—be sure the queen is humming down there in the grass to guide him to his love. Nature with all her myriad voices is calling us to peace and happiness. Love is the first law of Nature—life may exist without it, but it is incomplete—the broken arc of a circle. Dear one, by all those powers of Nature I implore you—come back to me!"

As he spoke he stretched out his arms to the back to me!"

As he spoke he stretched out his arms to the glorious sun, to the flowers and to the shadowy pines, as if to invoke their aid in making his plea. And as she listened the girl's power of resistance seemed broken, she seemed on the point of yielding to those tender entreaties. A smile played around her lips, her eyes grew tender, humid, they drooped, then suddenly a look of fear shot into them and her face blanched as she pointed dramatically to someblanched as she pointed dramatically to some-thing that lay on the ground at her feet.

The shadow of the cross on the church below had grown shorter and shorter until now it lay a black menacing shape between them.

As she gazed at the omen a great awe crept over the girl's soul, and her voice was hoarse and broken:

and broken:
"The cross! The cross! It is a miracle sent from Heaven to save me! Back! Back! You would lead my soul to perdition!"
As these words fell from her lips, for the first time a realizing sense of his own helplessness to cope with the situation came over Warfield.

For the first time he began to realize just what her loss would mean to him, and the pain this feeling engendered awoke akin to resentment within him.

With a bound he crossed the shadow and stood looking down upon her, fierce anger blazing in his eyes.

"You do not love me," he said roughly, "you never have!" A cry of anguish, so keen, so heartrending broke from her he repented the hasty words almost as soon as spoken.

"To my sorrow, my unutterable sorrow I do love you," her white lips murmured, "I do!" As he caught the forced words, as quickly as

As he caught the forced words, as quickly as it had come his anger left him and once more he broke out into passionate pleading.

"You do love me—you do! Then come back to me, my darling! I will fill your cup of earthly happiness so full—so full! Surely you breathing loveliness on his breast.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 24.)

WITH A CRY LIKE A WOUNDED ANIMAL THE GIRL FELL UPON HER KNEES.

Suddenly he started as the sound of many voices chanting the Ave Maria was borne to his waiting ears.

In the silence of the bliss that enwrapped them, he bent his head and took his first draught of love from her maiden lips. Thrilled, she said sadly. "And Gene, nothing can change the voices of the bliss that enwrapped them, he bent his head and took his first draught of love from her maiden lips. Thrilled, she said sadly. "And Gene, nothing can change the voices of the bliss that enwrapped them."

intoxicated with each other they stood there in a silence so great only the throbbing of their hearts could he heard.

When he did speak his voice was low, soft, caressing as if he feared to break the charm of this mystic spell which held them.

"Sit down with me, love, here on this mossy stone, for I have much to tell you."

love, let me kiss you again. So—on your lips? And here—on your preity neck just where this silken curl nestles—so—and here—where this snowy triangle is visible above the collar of your gown. But what is this little gold chain that goes round your neck? Why do you wear it there—on the inside of your gown? What talisman is hiding there?" As he spoke his fingers were pulling at the chain.
"No! no! do not touch it!" she cried, as a look almost of fear came into her eyes.

look almost of fear came into her eyes.
"Nay, but I must," he persisted tenderly,

"you have no secrets from me now." And even as the words left his lips he drew from its rest-ing place the hidden talisman.

It was only a tiny gold crucifix with an ivory the fact that we are hopelessly divided. You are living in a world peopled only by the phantoms of today; I live in a world peopled by the phantoms of all the yesterdays. There is no common plane upon which we can meet and be happy. Our union? It would mean one of two things. Either I should let you drag me down to your level, or you would have to come up to mine."

She hesitated. Anger was fading into love. Her eyes ceased to flash and filled with tender-

"Come back, Gene! Let your soul reach out to the Infinite and say, even as Newman's did in its hour of greatest darkness: 'Lead, kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom. That hope of immortality! How it has lightened every burden, made patient, under oppression and That hop burden, made patient, under oppression and grinding poverty, those who would have sunk otherwise. No!—wait!—" as he made a sudden gesture toward her, "I know what you would say. That you would not have men remain patient under tyranny and want—that you would have them cease praying to the Divine Saki to fill the cup of life, and reach out and take that which they need. How many times we have spent ourselves in vain argument over this question of the immortality of the soul! If. this question of the immortality of the soul! If, as you have so often affirmed, you believe the solution of the life problem will ultimately be only a matter of chemistry and mechanics, why should that spire," she pointed to the church lying below, "and the countless church spires all over the world point the way to a better life beyond the grave?" She went on

IN @ AROUND The HOME

CONDUCTED BY MRS. WHEELER WILKINSON

Terms Used in Crochet

Ch. chain; ch. st. chain stitch; s. c. single crochet; d. c. double crochet (thread over once); tr. c. treble crochet (thread over twice); dtr. double treble crochet (thread over three times); l. c. long crochet; r. st; roll stitch l. loop; p. picot; r. p. roll picot; sl. st. slip stitch; k. st. knot stitch; sts. stitches; stars mean that the directions given between them should be repeated as indicated before proceeding.

Terms Used in Knitting

k. knit plain; o. over; o. 2, over twice; n. narrow 2 stitches together; p. purl; sl. slip a stitch; tog. together; b. bind; stars and parenthesis indicate repetition.

Terms Used in Tatting

d. s. double stitch; p. picot; l. p. long picot; chain; d. k. double knot; pkt. picot and knot together. *indicates a repetition.

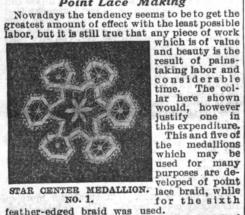

On account of many submitting work requesting us to withhold their full address we have decided to discontinue giving the name questing us to withhold their full address we have decided to discontinue giving the name and address of persons to whom we are indebted for fancy work articles, which we use on this page. Comfort's circulation is so large, many of our subscribers have been besieged with requests for samples or further particulars in regard to work which has ap peared, and to answer these letters takes time and money for postage, and it is impossible for one to send samples or directions to so many.

Whenever publishing any particular piece of work, we endeavor to give the plainest possible directions for making, besides illustrating it. So it is absolutely useless for you to write for more information, samples, or patterns of anything, unless stated that they can be supplied. Fancy work of an inexpensive nature we gladly receive at any time and if available for these columns will be used and paid for at current rates, and samples are returned, but we seldom purchase anything outright.

Knitting, crocheting, netting and tatting, to be acceptable, must be accompanied by full directions for making, written plainly on one side of the paper only, and in accordance with above abbreviations.

Novel or original ideas for utilizing ordinary material especially desired.

Point Lace Making

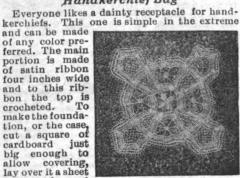

feather-edged braid was used.

The collar is made by the usual method of first fastening the lace on a heavy paper or linen pattern, and then filling in the stitches, these consist of bars of twisted thread, spiderwebs, and the usual filling-in stitches which are familiar to even amateur lace makers.

The six medallions shown vary greatly in design, but have one point in common—they are easily made and inexpensive. Handsome ouffs and collars may be made by joining these, or they make beautiful insets for shirt-waists or thin dresses of any kind. If made of black braid silk waists could also be decorated in this way.

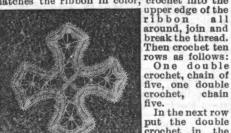

Handkerchief Bag

portion is made of satin ribbon four inches wide and to this rib-bon the top is crocheted. To make the founda-tion, or the case, cut a square of cardboard just big enough to allow covering, lay over it a sheet of perfumed wadding. When the cardboard is

MEDALLION FOR END OF

the cardboard is covered on both sides cut a strip of the ribbon long enough to extend round all four sides after the ends are joined. Seam the ends together firmly and neatly, then overcast one edge of the ribbon to the foundation. For the top of the bag use silk or silkateen which matches the ribbon in color, crochet into the

CROSS MEDALLION.

put the double crochet in the third stitch of the chain of five,

In the next row

NO. 3. way forming a series of squares until you have ten rows in all; finish the top convenience afforded by having a box especially for them.

and is padded in-side and out with cotton wadding, into which a trifle of sachet pow-der has been or sachet powder has been sprinkled. The lining could be of rose-colored
cretonne, or silesia, and the covering of rose-pat-terned cretonne—

The box is then finished off with brassheaded nails and big brass hinges. Another good combination would be dogwood on a grayish-green, with a lining of pale green. Indeed any number of pretty combinations can be made as the cretonne comes cretonne comes in exquisite pat-terns and color-ings. These boxes not only sup-ply a long-felt want, but make a pretty, com-fortable seat for the cozy corner of a bedroom. A shoe box can be made in the same manner, and pockets of different sizes for 1st round .- P. 2, throw t. o. 4 plain, k. 2 tog., repeat.

KNITTED MITTEN.

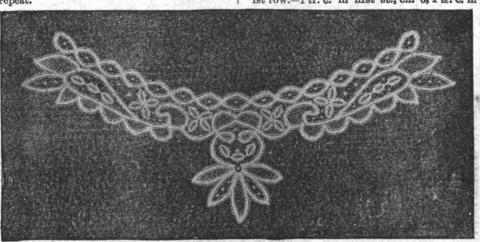

Begin by making a chain of fifty-seven stitches, fasten to first chain, turn.

1st row.—1 tr. c. in first st., ch. 3, 1 tr. c. in sl. st. over the one knitted, k. 13, k. 2 tog., p.

In every 4th round there-after make two extra sts., next to the 2 sts. following the original 5th and 6th sts., marked until the thumb is sufficiently

POINT LACE COLLAR.

2nd round.—P. 2, 1 plain, t. o. 3 plain, k. 2 first ch., and 57 tr. c. in the ring, fasten totoge, repeat.

3rd round.—P. 2, 2 plain, t. o. 2 plain, k. 2 gether.

2nd row.—Now turn, go around the ring by making 57 tr. c. on 57 tr. c., fasten, turn.

3rd row.—The same as 1st and 2nd rows, fasten, break yarn. Now one ring is complete.

4th round.—P. 2, 3 plain, t. 6. 1 plain, k. 2 tog., repeat.
5th round.—P. 2, 4 plain, t. o., k. 2 tog., repeat. Now repeat this pattern seven or more times according to the length of the wrist desired. Next work a band of ribs by knitting 1 and purling 1, so continue ribs for five or six rounds, then make the holes, in which to run the ribbon, as follows:

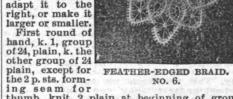

1st round.—K. 1, p. 1, o. 2, and k. 2 tog., repeat.

peat.
2nd round.—K. 1, p. 1, k. 1 loop, p. 1 loop,
k. 2, p. 1, k. 1 loop, p. 1 loop, repeat from 2nd round, k. 2, last st. of round, k. 1.
3rd round.—K. 1, p. 1, k. 2 tog., p. 1, k. 1, p. 1., k. 2 tog., repeat from 2nd p. 1. Continue to rib, k. 1, p. 1 for five or six rounds or more if you like, then finish off with one whole line of purling.

purling.

Now divide the 96 stitches in 3 groups, 48 on each of the others. The one needle, 24 on each of the others. The 48 will represent the back of the hand, for the left-hand mitten; now mark the 5th and 6th stitches from the 48, on your right-hand group of 24; for right-hand mitten mark the 5th and 6th from the 48 on the left-hand group of 24, the mark stitches constituting the base of the thumb, the stitch upon each side of the 5th and 6th is to be purled for the seam of thumb; this mitten is for the left hand, and any knitter can adapt it to the right, or make it larger or smaller. First round of ing seam for thumb, knit 2 plain at beginning of group of 48; following is the pattern of the back of the hand upon the next 28 stitches, and rethe hand upon the next 28 stitches, and remainder of round plain.

series of squares until you have ten rows in all; finish the top wit's shell border and a narrow ribbon run in just below to serve as a drawing string.

Shirt-waist Box

Those who have found bureau drawers too growded for waists will fully appreciate the

Now begin the second ring by making a ch. of 57 sts., and slip this through center of your ring, and then fasten the stitch on your needle by making 1 s. c. into the last ch. st. Now begin and make a ring just like the first one. After this is finished make 3 more; you will then have one hard then have one braid.

Make another braid out of five rings, and fasten to the first one by interlacing in the fasten to the first one by interlacing in the same way.

Now begin first row by tying in the yarnany place. Make 5 ch. to form a picot, and fasten on tr. c., make 5 ch. to form a picot, and fasten to 4th tr. c.; continue this way making the small picot and fastening by skipping 2 tr. c. until you are all around, then fasten, turn.

The 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, and 6th rows are made just the same as the first row. When complete you will have at least 170 picots, now turn.

7th row.—1 tr. c. in picot, ch. 4, 1 tr. c. in picot, ch. 4, continue this until around; you will have 134 open spaces, for running in first row of ribbon.

8th row.—Ch. 5, fasten to third ch.; this will form a small picot. Now make this row, and the 9th and 10th rows just the sameway as the 6 first rows.

11th row.—Same as the 7th row.

The 12th, 13th and 14th rows, same as the 8th, 9th, and 10th rows.

the 8th, 9th, and 10th rows.

15th row.—Same as the 17th row.

The 16th and 17th rows same as 2nd row.

Now turn.

18th row.—Make a shell by making 7 tr. c., in first picot, fasten in center of 2nd picot, continue this until you get way round the cushion, you will then have 115 shells, fasten, turn.

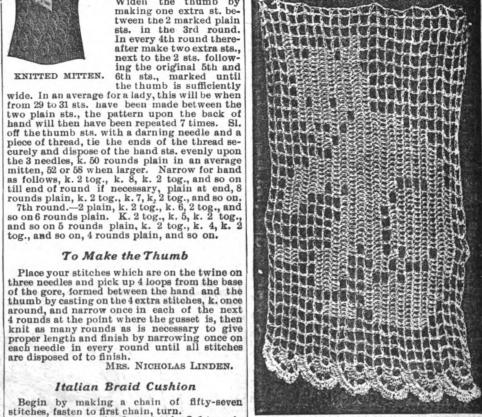

19th row.—7 tr. c., raise them and fasten by making 1s. c. stitch in the center stitch between the 2 very shells, becaught have a beginning to the 2 very shells, becaught have a beginning to the stitch between the 1, k. 2, repeat. 4th round.—K. 2, p. 1, sl. 1, k. 1, pass sl. st. over k. 11, k. 2 tog., p. 1, 5th round.—K. 2, p. 1, sl. 1, k. 1, pass sl. st. over k. 9, k. 2 tog., p. 1, k. 2, k. 3, k. 2 tog., p. 1, k. 2, repeat.
6th round.—K. 2, p. 1, sl. 1, k. 1, pass sl. st. over k. 7, k. 2 tog., p. 1, k. 2, repeat, then repeat this pattern from 1st round in every round of the hand, all stitches are to be knitted plain. except the 2 upper shells; keep on this way, by always raising 7 tr. c. and fastening to the center stitch between the upper 2 shells.

Kitty Lace

Make a chain of eighty-four stitches.

1st row.—A tr. in 4th st. of ch. from hook.
Ch. 2, sl. 2, make 28 space, ch. 4, s. c. in last st. hand, all stitches are to be knitted plain, except the 28 on the back of the hand, and the two sts. purled together, forming the seam for the thumb. Widen the thumb by making one extra st. be-tween the 2 marked plain sts. in the 3rd round. In every 4th round thereof ch.

2nd row.-Ch. 2, 7 tr. under ch. 4, 1 tr. on next tr., 32 space. 3rd row.—* ch. 2, 5 tr. under 2 ch. in next tr.,

KITTY LACE.

with s. c., * repeat from * to * 3 times, tr. in tr., 8 space, 19 tr., 14 space.
4th row.—Ch. 3, tr. on 2nd tr., 12 space, 31 tr., 6 space, ch. 4, s. c. in last st. of ch.
5th row.—Ch. 2, 7 tr. under 4 ch. 1, tr. on tr., 5 space, 13 tr., 1 space, 21 tr., 11 space.
6th row.—Ch. 3, 1 tr. on 2nd tr., 10 space, 11 tr., 1 space, 14 tr., 1 space, 13 tr., 8 space.
7th row.—* ch. 2, 5 tr. under 2 ch. with s. c. in next tr., repeat from * to * 3 times, 4 space, 13 tr., 1 space, 14 tr., 1 space, 11 tr., 10 space.
8th row.—Ch. 3, 1 tr. in 2nd tr., 10 space, 11 tr., 1 space, 14 tr., 1 space, 13 tr., 8 space.
9th row.—* Ch. 2, 5 tr. under 2 ch. with s. c. in next tr., * repeat from * to * three times, 4 space, 10 tr., 1 space, 4 tr., 1 space, 12 tr., 1 space, 14 tr., 8 space, 10 tr., 1 space, 10 tr., 4 space, 17 tr., 1 space, 12 tr., 1 space, 10 tr., 4 space, 17 tr., 1 space, 12 tr., 1 space, 10 tr., 4 space, 17 tr., 1 space, 17 tr., 1 space, 18 tr., 18 space, 19 tr., 19 space, 20 tr., 9 space.
12th row.—Ch. 3, tr. in 2nd tr., 10 space, 35 tr., 12 th row.—Ch. 3, tr. in 2nd tr., 10 space, 35 tr., 12 th row.—Ch. 3, tr. in 2nd tr., 10 space, 35 tr., 12 th row.—Ch. 3, tr. in 2nd tr., 10 space, 35 tr., 12 th row.—Ch. 3, tr. in 2nd tr., 10 space, 35 tr., 12 th row.—Ch. 3, tr. in 2nd tr., 10 space, 35 tr.

next tr., 4 space, 10 tr., 1 space, 4 tr., 4 space, 20 tr., 9 space.

12th row.—Ch. 3, tr. in 2nd tr., 10 space, 35 tr.,

1 space, 10 tr., 8 space.

13th row.—* Ch. 2, 5 tr. under 2 ch., s. c. in tr.,

* repeat from * to * 3 times, 5 space, 10 tr., 1

space, 41 tr., 6 space.

14th row.—3 ch., 3 tr. in 2nd tr., 3space, 47 tr.,

10 space, ch. 4, s. c. in last st. of ch.

15th row.—Ch. 2, 7 tr. under 4 ch., 4 space, 4

tr., 4 space, 30 tr., 1 space, 15 tr., 4 space.

16th row.—Ch. 3, tr. in 2nd tr., 5 space, 15 tr.,

1 space, 12 tr., 1 space, 19 tr., 2 space, 4 tr., 8 space.

1 space, 12 tr., 1 space, 19 tr., 2 space, 4 tr., 8 space.

17th row.—* Ch. 2, 5 tr. under 2 ch., s. c. in next tr., * repeat from * to * 3 times, 4 space, 4 tr., 1 space, 16 tr., 2 space, 12 tr., 1 space, 7 tr., 1 space, 12 tr., 4 space.

18th row.—Ch. 3, tr. in 2nd tr., 4 space, 18 tr., 1 space, 4 tr., 1 space, 6 tr., 6 space, 10 tr., 1 space, 4 tr., 4 space, 6 tr., 6 space, 10 tr., 1 space, 4 tr., 5 tr., 1 space, 9 tr., 1 space, 4 tr., 1 space, 10 tr., 5 space, 9 tr., 1 space, 12 tr., 2 space, 9 tr., 1 space, 4 tr., 1 space, 7 tr., 2 space, 9 tr., 1 space, 9 tr., 1 space, 7 tr., 2 space, 9 tr., 1 space, 9 tr., 1 space, 7 tr., 2 space, 9 tr., 1 space, 2 tr., 2 space, 9 tr., 1 space, 2 tr., 2 space, 9 tr., 1 space, 2 tr., 3 space, 9 tr., 4 space, 15 tr., 5 space, 22nd row.—* Ch. 2, 5 tr. under 2 ch., s. c. in next tr., * repeat from * to * 3 times, 13 space, 9 tr., 4 space, 15 tr., 5 space, 22nd row.—3 ch., 3 tr. in 2nd tr., 3 space, 10 tr., 8 space, 12 tr., 3 space, 4 tr., 8 space, ch. 4, s. c. in last st. of ch.

23rd row.—Ch. 2, 7 tr. under 4 ch., tr. in next

23rd row.—Ch. 2, 7 tr. under 4 ch., tr. in next 24th row.-Ch. 3, tr. in 2nd tr., 21 space, 4 tr.,

24th row.—ch. c, tr. under 2 ch., s. c. in 25th row.—* Ch. 2, 5 tr. under 2 ch., s. c. in next tr., repeat from * to * 3 times, 28 space. 26th row.—After making the row of the sixth scallop, start the second cat, repeating the directions from the 2nd row, and so continue to the length required.

MISS ETTA M. HUSKEY. Bookmark

Bookmarks can be made of perforated card-

BOOKMARK.

Work a word or board and caught on ribbon. short sentence, and then pull out the threads.

Points to Remember

Always write on one side of the paper only and leave space between the lines.

Write recipes, hints and requests on separate paper instead of including them in the letters.

Mail all letters at least THREE MONTHS before the issue for which they are intended.

Always give your correct name and address, as no letter will be published excepting over it. This enables the sisters to write directly to each other.

the sisters to write directly to each other.

Do not write us for samples or patterns of the fanny work which have appeared. When publishing any particular piece of work, we give the plainest possible directions for making and usually illustrate it. It is absolutely useless for you to write for more information, or for samples, or patterns of anything unless stated that they can be supplied.

anything unless stated that they can be supplied.

As it has come to our notice that sisters have been asking certain sums for information and patterns that should have been furnished free, we here give notice that no charge should be made or money asked for any offers of assistance or information which have or will appear in any letters here published; should there be, kindly notify us, and the offender will be denied the further use of these columns. As this department is run solely to afford an opportunity for the mutual exchange of ideas, recipes, and helpful information, we do not intend it to be used by anyone for a commercial purpose.

Do not send us exchange notices; we have no exchange

Do not send us exchange notices; we have no exchange column, and cannot publish them.

Do not ask us to publish letters referring to money in any way, such as requesting donations or offering articles for sale. Much as we sympathize with the suffering and unfortunate it is impossible to do this as we would be flooded with similar re-quests.

Do not request souvenir postals unless you have complied with the conditions which entitle you to such a notice. See offer.

All subscribers are cordially invited to write to this department and all stand an equal chance of having their letters appear, whether they are old or new members. As our space is limited, naturally the most interesting helpful letters are selected.

Write fully of your views and ideas, yourself and home-surroundings, "give as freely as ye receive," but if your first letter does not appear, do not feel ut-terly discouraged. Remember the old adage, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again."

The old year waited amid the snow Till men should bless her, and bid her go. But the children laughed. "We await the new, 'Tis fairer and gladder and brighter than you."

DEAR SISTERS:

DEAR SISTERS:

If we do speed the old year and greet the new in this spirit, it will be brighter and better than the old, for cheerful, hopeful thoughts make us happier, no matter what our surroundings, and help us successfully overcome the petty disappointments and irritating daily worries, which come to all. How lovely life would be without them, but no lot is totally devoid of blessings; and courage and a brave heart will blessings; and courage and a brave heart will accomplish wonders.

How many beautiful letters we have had in the past year from brave sisters, and the kind helpfulness and sympathy so generously ex-tended, to those who fight among the shadows, tended, to those who fight among the shadows, has made this department beloved and useful as it is. The sunny South joins hands with the North and messages come from California to Maine, some telling of pleasure, some of pain, which, I am sure it you could read as I do, your heart would feel too large for the place it occupies, and a tear would silently slide down your cheek. Sisters, perhaps you do not know, have no idea, how much good the corner has done. It is the personal contact with the readers which shows the far-reaching results, so please give us your co-operation in the future, as you have in the past.

"Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days."

Delia Brawn, Griffiths, W. Va., is a poor cripple woman, with four little ones. Sympathetic letters and anything useful, or reading matter thankfully received.

Miss Olive Winchester, Hooker, Okla., is a patient sufferer, who would appreciate letters and reading matter.

matter thankfully received.

Miss of the beautier of the control o

At Queenston Heights we see the great monument, 200 feet high, erected to the memory of the famous British general, Sir Issac Brock, who fell on these Heights in the War of 1812. The corneratone for this magnificent tribute was laid by the Prince of Wales (now King of England), in 1860. A gradual descent and we approach Queenston, with Lewiston across the river, these being the head of navigation of the lower Niagara river and the ports for steamers of the Niagara River Line to Toronto. Here we cross the Suspension bridge and proceed to Lewiston.

In the United States once more. On this side we run close to the water's edge all the way, so close that nervous passengers cry out in fear. We pass the Devil's Hole, a prominent spot in the annals of Niagara Frontier history. Now we get a close view of the whirlpool, and at a turn in the river the Whirlpool Rapids suddenly loom into view, churning, foaming and tossing—an awe-inspiring scene. A gradual ascent, and the river and its beauties sink in restful dimness, and we are again in the city. Can you imagine, sisters, that you have seen this turbulent and historic Niagara? No, never, until you stand, and with your own eyes, see it. No one else can describe it to you.

I have lived in this city a year last month—since my marriage. My husband is a motorman on this Great Gorge Route trolley line. My old home, where I was born and brought up, is about one hundred miles east of Toronto, in Ontario, so you see I am a Canadian. I would be pleased to receive letters from any of the sisters who care to write.

MRS. HIRAM A. PURDY, 442 Second Street, Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Watch the number on your wrapper. If it is 220 or less, it means that your subscrip.

in Georgia that takes Comport. I don't see how anyone can get along without it. I think it one of the finest papers for the money that ever was published. I can hardly wait for it to come.

I am a young housekeeper with two sweet little children. My oldest one, a boy of four years and my baby is a little girl. She was one year old the eighth of last May, my first child was a little girl but God had a better place for her and saw fit to take her away. It was hard to stand by the little white coffin holding our darling who was sleeping her last long sleep. It was very hard to give her up, but God knows best. Still it is hard to always realize this, especially when such accidents come as befell my boy when he was two years old. He caught fire and was badly burned. I sat by him day and night fearing he might die, but he was spared to me, but his right arm and hand is badly drawn up so it is almost useless. His grandmother is making a quilt for his bed and would like a few pieces of any size or color. I should also like to receive letters. May the love of God be with you all is the prayer of your new sister, MRS. NAOMI McMichael, Monticello, R. F. D., 6, Jasper County, Ga.

Dear Comport Sisters:

this turbulent and historic Niagara? No, never, until you stand, and with your own eyes, see it. No one else can describe it to you.

I have lived in this city a year last month—since my marriage. My husband is a motorman on this Great Gorge Route trolley line. My old home, where I was born and brought up, is about one hundred miles east of Toronto, in Ontario, so you see I am a Canadian. I would be pleased to receive letters from any of the sisters who care to write.

Mrs. Hiram A. Purdy, 442 Second Street, Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Watch the number on your wrapper. It is 1220 or less, it means that your subscription has or is about expired and you should renew at once so as to not miss any papers. The subscribers which will be continued for some months linto 1907; it only costs is cents to do it now.

Drar Sisters:

I want to have a little chat about vegetables which may benefit some who live on farms or have gardens.

In the fall take beets, carrots, parsnips, winter radishes, and put them into boxes in the cellar, cover them with dry sand, and they will keep all winter; in April they are just as nice and hard as when first taken out of the garden. If cabbage is pulled up with the roots on them and then set down into the cellar the cabbage will keep nice all winter; in April they are just as nice and hard as when first taken out of the garden. If cabbage is pulled up with the roots on them and then set down into the cellar the cabbage will keep nice all winter; in April they are just as nice and hard as when first taken out of the garden. If cabbage is pulled up with the roots on them and then set down into the cellar the cabbage will keep nice all winter if set into tubs with water enough to cover the roots, then cover with old carpeting and you will have celery grow—the did and beaching all winter. A molasses barrel, them shut out, and thus perhaps deny them their one enjoyment through which they get a glimpse of the outside world. Let me thank you, dear Mrs. Wilkinson, for making this corner so interesting and instructive.

May God's blessing rest upon you all, and especially the dear shut-ins. Respectfully, especially the dear shut-ins. Respectfully, Miss Ida B. Wars, Fullerton, Md. Dear Sisters:

Miss IDA E. WAKE, Fullerton, Md.

I am a real country woman from a farm down in Arkansas. I am writing in especially to see if anyone can help me out about my chickens. Last summer they were troubled with a strange disease, which I do not understand, and many of our neighbors lost poultry of all kinds in the same way. They would apparently be well and laying as usual, their combs pretty and rosy, and then in an hour's time they would be dead. Can any tell me what siled them and what to do.

I would also like to know what is best to do when roses do not thrive. The leaves of mine looked brown and the stalks dry and dead.

I cujoy reading all these letters and get much help. I am a young housekeeper. I was twenty-three last August, and will soon be married four years.

We have a smart baby boy who is blessed with three sets of grandparents, and was named for his great grandfather. My nearest neighbor is my mother, who is about one half mile away, but you may guess I visit her quite often. Still there are lonely days and I do not have much reading matter and appreciace it to be remembered in this way and also with letters, for I love you one and all. Hoping the new year will be a bright one for each of you, I remain,

MRS. MAUD COUCH, McRae, White Co., Ark. DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

I am a stranger to you all, but not to Comfort; it of you, I remain,

MRS. MAUD COUCH, McRae, White Co., Ark.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

I am a stranger to you all, but not to Comport; it is certainly an ideal paper. I want to tell the young mothers a few home ways to treat the baby, as it is the most precious thing in the home.

A bad cold is something every baby has sometime. I have found hen oil good; heat as warm as baby can stand it and rub inside of hands, bottom of feet, under arms, behind ears and forehead, and on nose, then mix one teaspoonful with five drops of turpentine, wet fiannel cloth and put on breast, and see how much better baby is in a short time. Now, mothers, you who have poor, little sickly babies try this, peel and slice half a pint of onions, pour in one pint of boiling water, and boil down one half pint with two teaspoonfuls of sugar and half of a cracker, and feed baby all it will eat twice a day for a month, then tell us how much baby has gained. I gave this to my baby at three days old. They do not seem to like it at first but keep trying, they will cry for it before the month is out.

Now for the bottle baby, I have one and a big, fat one, too, I gave her cows' milk the first four months. I used one half pint of milk, one half pint of water, a heaping teaspoonful of sugar. Second four months I used one pint of milk instead of one half pint. At the age of eight months I began pure milk, I justmix, never cook the milk. Wash your bottles at night and morning in strong soda water. I put a spoonful in bottle, and pour in boiling water and shake well. I have three bables; the bottle baby was two years old in November.

I am going to ask you sisters who have roses to send her a sprout of your bush. She is so fond of flowers, it is amusing to see her try to smell them. I will return all favors possible.

Mrs. LULA CLARK, Dora, Texas.

DEAR COMPORT SISTERS:

DEAR COMPORT SISTERS:

COMFORT is surely the best paper, and I have enjoyed it for years, but this is my first letter. I am sending in a quilt block; now when "Anona," "Hiawatha," and other similar songs are all the rage, why not fashion quilt from Indian signs and emblems.

This one I made using the Navajo Indian's good-luck emblem. This he uses to brand his horses, on his blankets, and waves it above his head as a talisman to frighten away evil spirits.

Two colors only should be used, although it is rather hard to get them just right, but you can if you try, so don't write me for a sample block, for if only a few did, it would be considerable work, and more than I could do.

I hope you will all like this, and if so, maybe I can work out another pattern which will be quite as attractive. With best wishes to all.

ALLIE CUMMINGHAM, 836 East Bay Ave., Olympia, Wash.

DEAR MES. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

Wash.

Dear Mrs. Wilkinson and Comfort Sisters:

Will you let one of Uncle Charlie's nieces come in for a minute? I am an old subscriber, and think Comfort gets better all the time. I enjoy reading the helpful letters in the sisters' corner. I will give a few household hints.

A bit of salt sprinkled on anything that is burning on the stove will take away the unpleasant odor.

ing on the stove will take away the unpressurodor.

A teaspoonful of brown sugar added to the prepared stove polish will make it stick better.
Old newspapers crushed well between the hands are good to polish the stove with.
I feel sorry for the poor unfortunate shut-ins, and am always ready to help them in any way I can. I think it would be a good rule if every Comroors ister would make it a rule to write to one or more shut-ins each month, always remembering them in some way, if only by sending them a few postage stamps.

What a dear little soul our little sunshine worker Nellie C. N. is, my heart goes out in sympathy to her.

her.
Mrs. B. E. Ward. How I would enjoy your island

Mrs. B. E. Ward. How I would enjoy your island home. Come again, cousin.
J. A. D. Your letters are helpful.
How many of the sisters like Mexican drawnwork? I do for one.
Here is a pen picture of myself: I am five feet five inches tall, weigh one hundred and thirty pounds, have luxuriant brown hair, and deep blue eyes, eighteen years young. I can cook and keep house, love fancy work, am fond of music, flowers, and books. I am a lover of nature, and everything that is grand and beautiful. If anyone cares to write me, I will answer all letters.
Wishing success to Compart, and its many readers, readers MARTHA ROSE, Kentuck, Jackson Co., W. Va.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

martha Rose, Kentuck, Jackson Co., W. Va.

Martha Rose, Kentuck, Jackson Co., W. Va.

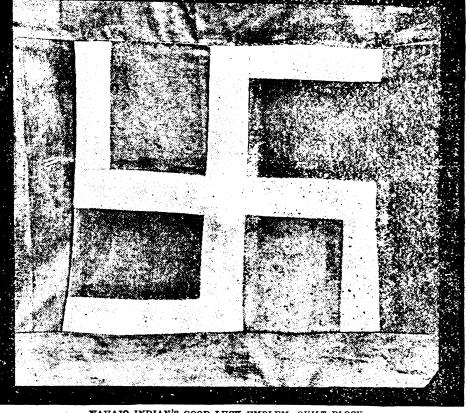

Dear Comport has been a welcome visitor at my home for almost a year, I thought I would send you a few words through its pages. I am a young housekeeper, with three durling little ones to love and care for, and I find many things of value which help to lighten cares and labor in these columns.

All the recipes printed in Comport, I cut out and paste in what I call my Comport Recipe Book, so that I can save them.

I live on a ranch fifty-three miles from Seattle, out in the timber, and as my husband is away from home during the week, I get very lonely, and if any of the sisters will kindly send me books, or story papers to help me pass those lonely hours, I would be thankful indeed. I suppose you wonder why I don't go visiting? It is because my babies are all small, the eldest four years old, and youngest ten months, then the nearest neighbor's house, is over a mile away, and I must walk a foot log to cross the river. Did any of the sisters ever cross a foot log? If you have you know how hard it is. Another thing I would like, are patterns for children's toys, birds, dogs, cats, or anything to be made. I will return the favor in any way I can. I will also write to any of the sisters who send stamp for reply.

I will tell you how I clean my chicken-house. It may benefit some of you. I take a good-sized piece of cloth, wrap it around a long stick, dip in kerosene, throughly burn all the roosts and sides. You need not be afraid of setting it afire unless you have some paper or imfammable stuff in the nests. I burn my chicken-house twice a week so as to keep it free from lice. To remove them from the chickens, dip them in one pail of lukewarm water, mixed with one pint of kerosene, and four tablespoonfuls of sulphur.

Before starching collars, soak them for twenty-four hours in water with a pinch of borax which will make them much whiter, cover top ones to prevent them from getting discolored. To iron them take a thin white cloth, sawed in two in the middle makes two good tubs for this.

NAVAJO INDIAN'S GOOD-LUCK EMBLEM, QUILT BLOCK. Sent in by Miss Allie Cunningham.

For the sister who wished to remove rust from the stove which had not been in use for two years, take an old knife and scrape off the rust as much as possible; now purchase ten cents' worth of beesawax, melt it with two tablespoonfuls of salt; when well dissolved, stir it well and spread it all over the well dissolved, stir it well and spread it all over the water solution of one gallon of washing sodar, hot water solution of one gallon of washing sodar, wash off the beeswax, rub dry with old rags; get affteen cents' worth of turpentine and rub this all over the stove with brush or rags, rubbing it in well, and leave on one day, then black thoroughly

Don't fail to promptly renew your sub-

Don't fall to promptly renew your sub-scription to COMFORT while the present low is-cent yearly rate is in force. We may be obliged to advance at any time, but if you send 25 cents now, it will pay for and ex-tend your subscription for two years from the time of its expiration. DEAR EDITOR AND SISTERS:

Can any of the sisters give me the complete words of a grand old Methodist hymn called the "Old Ship of Zion":

What big ship is that I see
Oh! glory hallelujah!
Tis the old ship of Zion,
Hallelujah!
Tis the old ship of Zion!
Hallelujah!

Also of the following poems: "Twinkle, twinkle little star," and "One Week in Heaven." It begins: I sit within thy darkened room, So strangely silent since thou art not there

And the poem, "Life's Railroad." Also of a poem printed many years ago in the National Reader, may be some of the sisters, have the old book, if so will they be kind enough to send me the words; here are some of them:

'Tis here sweet sister lies, Deep buried in the ground.

I would also like the words of Chickadeedee, which run as follows: One morning in May as two little sisters were busy at play, A snowbird came sitting close by on a tree, and merrily singing his Chickadeedee.

I am very fond of flowers, and should like to re eive seeds of all kinds for a Comfort flower bed. Here are a few suggestions: Here are a few suggestions: Equal parts of salt and vinegar will cure chilblains.

Warm water in which a teaspoonful of soda, and a tablespoonful of Epsom salts have been dissolved, will lighten moth and liver spots; after using, rub in coldcream.

Can any of the sisters give me the recipe for ribbon pudding?

I, too, sympathize with all sufferers, and consider the space allotted to the shut-ins, one of Compour's best features, I would not in any way have

A STOLEN PROPOSAL

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Arthur Leighton, rector of St Marks, is n love with Anna Ruthven. He re-reads a letter, received the day before from thornton Hastings, his college classmate and the control of the contr

the knowledge that Arthur loves her she can do anything.

Thornton Hastings seeks the answer to the question asked six weeks before. Bravely Anna tells him she respects him more than any man she ever knew, and had she met him years before— Suddenly the truth comes to Thornton Hastings, that she loves Arthur Leighton. Anna pleads with him not to interfere. Lucy is to be Arthur's wife. Mrs. Meredith, writes to Arthur Leighton, confessing the wrong, and imploring his forgiveness. Anna still loves him. Arthur spends the evening with Lucy, and he tries to think he loves her, and as he bids her good night, she feels a strange thrill of joy, for sometimes the thought comes that the love she receives is not as great as the love she gives.

CHAPTER XI. (CONTINUED.)

UT she did not think so now, and in an ecstasy of joy she stood in the deep recess of the bay window, watching him as he went away through the moonlight and the feathery cloud of snow, wondering why, when she was so happy, there could cling to her a haunting presentiment that she and Arthur would never meet again just as they had parted.

and Arthur would never meet again just as they had parted.

Arthur, on the contrary, was troubled with no such presentiment. Of Anna, he hardly thought, or, if he did, the vision was obscured by the fair picture he had seen standing in the door, with the snowflakes resting in her hair like pears in a golden coronet. And Arthur thanked his God that he was beginning at least to feel right—that the solemn vows that he was so soon to utter would be more than a mockery.

more than a mockery.

It was Arthur's work to teach to others how dark and mysterious are the ways of Providence, but he had not himself half learned that lesson in all its strange, reality; but the lesson was coming on apace; each stride of his swift-footed beast brought him nearer to the great shock waiting for him upon his study table, where Thomas, his man had put it.

brought him nearer to the great snock waiting for him upon his study table, where Thomas, his man had put it.

He saw it the first thing on entering the room, but he did not take it up until the snow was brushed from his garment and he had warmed himself by the cheerful fire blazing on the hearth. Then sitting in his easy-chair and moving the lamp nearer to him, he took Mrs. Meredith's letter and broke the seal, starting as if a serpent had stung him when, in the note inclosed, he recognized his own handwriting, the same that he had sent to Anna when his heart was so full of hope as the brown stalks now beating against his windows with a dismal sound were full of fragrant blossoms. Both had died since then—the roses and the hopes—and Arthur almost wished that he, too, were dead when he read Mrs. Meredith's letter and saw the gulf his feet were treading. Like the waves of the sea, his love for Anna came rolling back upon him, augmented and intensified by all that he had suffered, and by the terrible conviction that it could not be, although, alas, "it might have been."

He repeated the words over and over again, as, stupefied with pain, he sat gazing at vacancy, thinking how true was the couplet:—

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
"the saddest are these, it might have been."

By Mrs. Mary J. Holmes

floor, the Rector of St. Mark's prayed as he never prayed before—first for himself, whose need was greatest, and then for Lucy, that she might never know what making her happy had cost him, and then for Anna, whose name he could not speak. "That other one," he called her, and his heart kept swelling in his throat and preventing his utterance, so that the words he would say never reached his lips.

But God heard them just the same, and knew that his child was asking that Anna might forgethim, if to remember him was pain; that she might learn to love another far worthier than he had ever been. He did not think of Mrs. Meredith; he had no feeling of resentment then; he was wholly crushed to care how his ruin had been brought about, and long after the wood fire on the hearth had turned to cold, gray ashes, he knelt upon the floor, and battled with his grief, and when the morning broke it found him still in the cheerless room where he had passed the entire night, and from which he had gone forth strengthened, as he hoped, to do what he believed to be his duty. This was on Saturday, and on the Sunday following there was no service at St. Mark's. The rector was sick, the sexton said, "hard sick, too, he had heard," and the Hetherton carriage with Lucy in it, drove swiftly to the rectory, where the quiet and solitude awed Lucy as she entered the house, and asked the house-keeper how Mr. Leighton was.

"It is very sudden," she said. "He was perfectly well when he left me Friday night. Please tell him I am here."

The housekeeper shook her head. Her master's orders were that no one but the doctor was to be admitted, she said, repeating what Arthur had told her in anticipation of just such an infliction as this.

bold her in anticipation of just such an infliction as this.

But Lucy was not to be denied, Arthur was hers, his sickness was hers, his suffering was hers, and see him she would.

"He surely did not mean me when he asked that no one should be admitted. Tell him that it is I; it is Lucy," she said, with an air of authority, which, in one so small, so pretty and childlike, only amused Mrs. Brown who departed with the message, while Lucy sat down with her feet upon the stove, and looked around the sitting-room, thinking it was smaller and poorer than the one at Prospect Hill, and how she would remodel it when she was mistress there.

"He says that you can come," was the word that Mrs. Brown brought back, and with a gleam of with a magnanimity for which he thought himself entitled to a great amount of praise, he even felt that it was possible for Arthur to love this gentle, little girl who smoothed his pillows so tenderly, and whose fingers threaded so lovingly the damp, brown locks when she thought he, Thornton, was not looking on. She was very coy of him, and very distant towards him, too, for she had not forgiven his sin, and she treated him at first with a reserve for which he could not account. But as the days went on, and Arthur grew so sick that his parishoners began to tremble for their young minister's life, and to think it perfectly right for Lucy to stay with him, even if she were assisted in her labor of love by the stranger from New York, the reserve disappeared, and on the most perfect terms of amity she and Thornton Hastings watched together by Arthur's side. Thornton Hastings learned more lessons than one in that sick room where Arthur's faith in God triumphed over the terrors of the grave, which, at one time seemed so near, while the timid Lucy, whom he had only known as a gay butterfly of fashion, dared before him to pray that God would spare her promised husband, or give her grace to say, "Thy will be done."

Thornton could hardly say that he was skeptical before, but any doubts that he might have had touching the great fundamental truths on which a true religion rests were gone forever, and he left Hanover a changed man in more respects than one.

Arthur did not die, and on the Sunday preceding the west when the usual Christians decorations.

was a pretty specimen for a sober clergyman's wife.

For all this gossip, the villagers were indebted to Miss Valencia Le Barre, who, ever since her arrival at Prospect Hill, had been growing somewhat disenchanted with the young mistress she had expected to rule even more completely than she had ruled Mrs Meredith. But in this she was mistaken, and it did not improve her never very amiable temper, to find that she could not with safety appropriate more than half her mistress' handker-chiefs, collars, cuffs, and gloves, and, as this was a new state of things with Valencia, she chafed at the administration under which she had so willingly put herself, and told things of her mistress, which no sensible servant would ever have reported. And Lucy gave her plenty to tell.

Frank and outspoken as a child, she acted as she felt, and did try on the bridal dress, screaming with pleased delight when Valencia fastened the veil and let its fleecy folds fall gracefully around her.

"I know what Arthur will think I do so wish"

Atthur did not die, and on the Sunday preceding the week when the usual Christmas decorations were to commence, he came again before his people his face very pale and woru, and wearing upon it a look that told of a new baptism, an added amount of faith, which had helped tolift him above the fleeting cares of this present life. And yet there was much of earth clinging to him still, and it made itself felt in the rapid beating of his heart when he glanced to the square pew where Lucy knelt, and knew that she was giving thanks for him restored again.

Once, in the earlier stages of his convalescence, he had almost betrayed his secret by asking her what she would rather do—bury him from her sight, feeling that he loved her to the last, or give him to another, now that she knew that he would recover. There was a frightened look in Lucy's eyes as she replied: "I would ten thousand times rather see you dead, and know that even in death, you were my own, than to lose you that other way. "I know what Arthur will think, I do so wish that he was here," she had said.

She was very beautiful in her bridal robes, and she kept them on until Fanny began to chide her

She was very beautiful in her bridal robes, and she kept them on until Fanny began to chide her for her vanity.

"I don't believe in presentiments," she said to Fauny; "but do you know, it seems just as if I would never wear this again," and she smoothed thoughtfully the folds of the heavy silk. "I don't know what could happen to prevent it, unless Arthur should die. He was so pale last Sunday and seemed so weak that I shuddered every time that I looked at him. I mean to drive around there this afternoon," she continued. "I suppose it is too cold for him to venture as far as here, and he has no carriage, either."

She went to the parsonage that afternoon, and the women in the church saw her as she drove by, the gorgeous colors of her carriage blanket fiashing in the wintry sunshine.

There was a little too much of the lady patroness about her quite to suit the plain Hanoverians, especially those who were neither high enough or low enough to be honored by her notice, and they returned to their wreath-making and gossip, wondering under their breath if it would not, on the whole, have been just as well if their clergyman had married Anna Ruthven instead of this fine city girl with her Parisian mannera.

A gleam of intelligence shot from the gray eyes of Valencia, who was in a most unreasonable mood. "She did not like to stain her hands with the nasty hemlock any more than some other folks," she had said, when, after the trying on of the bridal dress, Lucy had remonstrated with her for some duty neglected, and then bidden her to go to the church, and help if she was needed.

"I must certainly dismiss you," Lucy had said, wondering how Mrs. Meredith had borne so long with the insolent girl, who went unwillingly to the clurch; where she was at work when the carriage went by.

She had thought many times of the letter that she had read, and, more than once, when partien-

York the very week before Christmas, thus affording a most fruitful theme for conversation, for the women and girls engaged in trimming the church. There were dresses of every conceivable fabric, they said, but none were quite so grand as the wedding dress itself—the heavy white silk which could "stand alone," and trailed "a full half yard behind."

It was also whispered ground that behind."

It was also whispered around that, not content with seeing the effect of her bridal robes as they lay upon the bed, Miss Lucy Harcourt had actually tried them on—wreath, veil, and all—and stood before the glass until Miss Fanny had laughed at her for being so vain and foolish, and said that she was a pretty specimen for a sober clergyman's wife.

church, whereshe was at work when the carriage went by.

She had thought many times of the letter that she had read, and, more than once, when particularly angry, it had been on her lips to tell her mistress that she was not the first whom Mr. Leighton had asked to be his wire, it indeed, she was his choice at all; but there was something in Lucy's manner which held her back; besides, which, she was, perhaps, unwilling to confess to her own meanness in reading the stolen letter.

"I could tell them something if I would," she thought, as she listened to the remarks; but, for that time she kept her secret and worked on moddify, while the unsuspecting Lucy went her way and was soon at the rectory gate.

Arthur saw her as she came up the walk and went to meet her.

way and was soon at the rectory gate.

Arthur saw her as she came up the walk and went to meet her.

He was looking very pale and miserable; but he welcomed her kindly, trying to believe that he was glad to see her.

She went all over the house, as she usually did, suggesting alterations and improvements, and greatly confusing good Mrs. Brown, who trudged obediently after her, wondering what she and her master were ever to do with that gay-plumaged bird, whose ways were so unlike her own.

"You must drive with me to the church," she said at last to Arthur. "Fresh air will do you good, and you stay moped up too long. I wanted you today at Prospect Hill, for this morning's express from New York brought—"

His pulses did not quicken in the least, even when she told him how charming was the bridal dress. He was standing before the mirror, and, glancing at himself, he said, half laughing, half sadly:
"I am a pitiful-looking bridegroom to go with all that finery; I should think that you would not want me, Lucy."
"But I do," she answered, holding his hand and leading him to the carriage, which took him to the church.

He had not intended going there as long as there church.

He had not intended going there as long as there was an excuse for staying away, and he felt himself grow sick and faint when he stood still amid the Christmas decorations, and remembered the last year when he and Anna had fastened the wreaths year when he and Anna had hastened the wreaths upon the wall.

They were trimming the church very elaborately in bonor of him and his bride. The effect was very fine, and Arthur tried to praise it, but his face belied his words; and after he was gone, the disappointed girls declared that he acted more like a man about to be hung than one so soon to be married. married.

married.

It was very late that night when Lucy summoned Valencia to comb out her long, thick curls, and Valencia was tired, and cross, and sleepy, handling Valencia was tired, and cross, and sleepy, handling the brush so awkwardly, and snarling her mistress's hair so often that Lucy expostulated with her sharply, and this awoke the slumbering demon, which, bursting into full life, could no longer be restrained; and, in amazement, which kept her silent, Lucy listened while Valencia taunted her "with standing in Anna Ruthven's shoes," and told all that she knew about the letter stolen by Mrs. Meredith, and the one she carried to Arthur. But Valencia's anger quickly cooled, and she trembled with fear when she saw how deathly white her mistress grew at first, and heard the loud beating of her heart, which seemed trying to burst from its prison and fall bleeding at the feet of the poor, wretched girl, around whose lips the white foam gathered as she motioned Valencia to stop and whispered: stop and whispered:
"I am dying!"

stop and whispered:
"I am dying!"
She was not dying, but the fainting fit which ensued was longer far and more like death than that which had come upon Anna when she heard that Arthur was lost. Twice they thought that her heart had stopped beating, and in an agony of remorse, Valencia hung over her, accusing herself as her murderer, but giving no other explanation to those around her than: "I was combing, her hair when the white froth spurted all over her wrapper, and she said that she was dying."
And that was all the family knew of the strange attack, which lasted until the dawn of the day, and left upon Lucy's face a look as if years of anguish had passed over her young head, and left its footprints behind.

prints behind.
Early in the morning she asked to see Valencia alone, and the repentant girl went to her, prepared to take back all she had said and declare the whole a lie. But Lucy wrung the truth from her, and she repeated the story again so clearly that Lucy had no longer a doubt that Anna was preferred to her—
(CONTINUED ON PAGE 21.)

APPEALING TO HIM SHE REPEATED THE STORY RAPIDLY.

him.

"She was a famous nurse," the physician said when he came, constituting her his coadjutor, and making her tread wild with joy and importance when he gave his patient's medicine into her hands.

"It was hardly proper for her niece to stay." Mrs.

with a dismal sound were full of fragrant blossoms.
Both had died since then—the roses and the hopes—and Arthur almost wished that he, too, were dead when he read Mrs. Meredith's letter and saw the gulf his feet were treading. Like the waves of the sea, his love for Anua came rolling back upon him, augmented and intensified by all that he had suffered, and by the terrible conviction that it could not be, although, alas, "it might have been."

He repeated the words over and over again, as, stupefied with pain, he sat gazing at vacancy, thinking how true was the couplet:—
"Of all sad words of tongue or pen,"
The saddest are these, it might have been."
He could not even pray at once, his brain was so confused, but when, at last, the white, quivering lips could move, and the poor, aching heart could pray, he only whispered, "God help me to do right," and by that prayer he knew that for a single instant there had crept across his mind the possibility of sacrificing Lucy, who loved and trusted him so much. But only for any instant. He could not east her from him, though to take her now, knowing what he did, was almost death itself.

"But God can help me to bear it," he cried, then falling upon his knees, with his face bowed to the triumph in her eye, and a toss of her head, which said, "I told you so," Lucy went softly into the darkened room, and shut the door behind her. Arthur half expected this, and had nerved himself up to meet it, but the cold sweat stood on his face, and his heart throbbed painfully as Lucy bent over him, and Lucy's tears fell on his face while she took his feverish hands in her, and murmured softly, "poor, dear Arthur, I am so sorry for you, and if I could I'd bear the pain so willingly." He knew that she would; she was just as loving and unselfish as that, and he wound his arm around her, and drew her down close to him while he whispered, "My poor, little Lucy; I don't deserve this from you."

She did not know what he meant, and she only answered him with kisses, while her little hands moved caressingly across his forehead just as they had done years ago in Rome, when she soothed the pain away. There certainly was a mesmeric intuence emanating from those hands, and Arthur felt its power, growing very quiet, and at last falling away to sleep, while the soft passes went on, and Lucy held her breath lest she should waken him.

"She was a famous nurse," the physician said

Oh, Arthur, you have no thought of leaving me now?"

"No. darling, I have not. I am yours always," he said, feeling that the compact was sealed forever and that God blessed the sealing.

He had written to Mrs. Meredith, granting her his forgiveness and asking that if Anna did not know and that God blessed the sealing.

He had written to Mrs. Meredith, granting her his forgiveness and asking that if Anna did not know and that God blessed the sealing.

He had written to Mrs. Meredith, granting her his forgiveness and asking that if Anna did not know and the written to Mrs. Meredith, granting her his does leading.

He had written to Mrs. Meredith, granting her his dong the written to Mrs. Meredith, granting her his dorgiveness and asking that if Anna did not know and that God blessed the sealing.

He had written to Mrs. Meredith, and written to Mrs. M Oh, Arthur, you have no thought of leaving me now?"

"No, darling, I have not. I am yours always," he said, feeling that the compact was sealed forever and that God blessed the sealing.

He had written to Mrs. Meredith, granting her his forgiveness and asking that if Anna did not know already of the deception that she might never be enlightened. And Mrs. Meredith had answered that Anna had only heard a rumor that an offer had been made her, but that she regarded it as a mistake and was fast recovering both her health and spirits. Mrs. Meredith did not add her surprise at Arthur's generosity in adhering to his engagement, nor hint that, now her attack of conscience was safely over, she was glad that he did so, having hope yet of that house on Madison Square; but Arthur guessed at it and dismissed her from his mind just as he tried to dismiss every unpleasant thought, waiting with a trusting heart for whatever the future might bring in.

VALENCIA.

Very extensive preparations were being made at Prospect Hill for the double wedding to occur on the 15th. After much debate and consultation Fanny had decided to take the doctor then; and thus, she too, shared largely in the general interest and excitement which pervaded everything.

Both brides-elect seemed very happy, but in a different way; for, while Fanny was quiet and undemonstrative, Lucy seemed wild with joy, and danced gayly around the house, now in the kitchen, now in the chamber, and then flitting to her own room in quest of Valencia, who was sent on divers errands, the little lady thinking that now the time was so near, it would be proper for her to remain at home and not show herself in public quite as freely as she had been in the habit of doing.

So she remained at home, while they missed her in the back streets, and by-lanes, the Widow Hobbs, who was still an invalid, pining for a sight of her bright face, and only half compensated for its absence by the charities that Valencia brought; the smart waiting maid putting on innumerable the smart waiting maid putting on innumerable airs, and making Mrs. Hobbs feel keenly how greatly she thought herself demeaned by coming to such a heathenish place as that.

The Hanoverians too, missed her in the street, but for this they made ample amends by discussing the doings at Prospect Hill and commenting upon the bridal trousseau, which was sent up from New

To be a comfort to one's parents. To protect the weak and aged.

To be kind to dumb animals.
To love our country and protect its flag.
20 cents. Join at once. Everybody welco

CONDUCTED BY UNCLE CHARLIE

HAPPY NEW YEAR to every one of you, both little and small. Here's 1907, pregnant with great possibilities for us all. I want 50,000 members in this League ere 1907 skiddoos down the pike of time. Here are a few of the resolutions I want you to keep during 1907:

Resolved

(1) That Compar's League of Cousins is the greatest organization on earth.
(2) Resolved: That thirty thousand new members must come into this League during 1907.
(3) Resolved: That the each member brings in a new member every three months at least, and every month if possible.
(4) Resolved: That we try, not only to keep the rules of this organization, but daily endeavor, by acts of kindness and thoughtfulness to make this world a better place to live in, and especially be it resolved that we try to lighten the burdens of, and protect the weak, aged and orphaned, and to minister by every means in our power to the needs of the sick and suffering.
(5) Resolved: That those who do not live up to, and keep these resolutions be publicly spanked by Uncle Charlie, and afterwards eaten by Billy the Goat.

There, I think that ought to help things along

There, I think that ought to help things along for 1907.

Remember, I shall give an autographed copy of Uncle Charlie's Poems every month to the one who brings to consine are kicking because they did not get the Christmas turkey I promised them. Well, I'll have to explain. Toby, Maria, Mr. Turk, Billy and I day selled by a lend, I'll have to explain. Troby, Maria, Mr. Turk, Billy and I day selled by a lend, I'll have to explain. The construction of the selled by a lend, I'll have to explain. The construction of the selled by a lend, I'll have to explain. The construction of the search, and there would have a selled to the crater, and in about the search, and there would man be seen and there would man be seen and there would be selled to the selled us a lemon, and we got it where the boy got the collar stud, right in the neck.

A young lady writes: "Dear Uncle Charlie, I am six feet eleven inches tall, and very thin, I only weigh thirty-seven pounds. Can you tell me how to get fat? Lena Lean."

Yes, my dear, I can help you. Go up on the top of a high building, and jump off, and you will come down plump.

Now, let me tell you something. Don't start sending in complaints that you haven't received your card and button a few days button a few days after you send in your after you send in your able discovery of the complain for five weeks at least after sending your money, and wait another week after your complaint is written, for the odds are directly your letter is mailed, your card and button will arrive. After having twenty complaints looked up, a task that took one person an entire day, the letters of complaint are hansed me marked,

"Impatient." That means that the writers have not allowed us time to enter their subs. up, and get their cards made out and mailed. You

OUSIN HATTIE TRIBOU, not much escaped your notice on your remarkable discovery of the
to him with a club accompaniment, an iron one
for preference.
You ask me what would happen if I were not
have not allowed us time to enter their subs. up, and get their cards made out and mailed. You

not much escaped your notice on your remarkable discovery of the
to him with a club accompaniment, an iron one
for preference.
You ask me what would happen if I were not have to cheer you. Well some other man would do the job, and you'd forget me in a month.
That's the world's way, dearie.

Here is a letter from Cousin John C. Busby,
and get their cards made out and mailed. You of water surrounded by land on the top of Waterloo, lowa.

folks who get one letter a month ought to get a thousand a day for a week, then you'd begin to realize what my life is. Don't send me your weird song poems and ask me to criticise them, I positively decline to do it, for I don't believe in encouraging foolishness; and trying to foist ill-rhymed 'pottery' on the market, that no one will ever buy is the most foolish act an otherwise sane person can be guilty of.

I deeply regret to tell you that poor Alice Bee of Goffs, W. Va., the brave little woman who suffered so long and so patiently, has passed on to a better and brighter world, where there is no pain, sorrow, or suffering, and care and worry are unknown. Her brother's letter is before me, and I choke up every time I read it, for that patient little sufferer was very dear to me. She is better off than the rest of us, who must carry our crosses, and patiently tread the road she has trod, until God calls us to the place where we can lay down our burdens forever. We extend our warmest sympathy to the place where we can lay down our bur-dens forever. We extend our warmest sympathy and love to those who mourn her loss.

dens forever. We extend our warmest sympathy and love to those who mourn her loss.

I want to pat you all gratefully on the back for the noble way you answered Tom Lockhart's letter. Tom got a thousand letters, and nearly 400 orders for books. (Tom, you've beaten me all to sticks,) and he begs me to thank you all; for he is profoundly grateful. Hundreds wrote without even sending stamps for replies, but insisted on answers. To the stampless, thoughtless folks, Tom mailed a circular of thanks—and these thoughtless ones, now have the pleasure of knowing that it cost him exactly $10 to do this. That act took the profit on nearly one hundred books, and spoilt the gifts of nearly one hundred thoughtful people. The thoughtless brigade spoil nearly everything in this world—more's the pity.

William T. Harrah, not Harris, was the name of our afflicted friend, whose picture appeared in November issue. The address is Backus, W. Va., and Laura Hastings lives at South Bend, Ind., while Jack Evans resides in Chicago, Ill.—the states were omitted by accident when their pictures appeared recently in our corner.

Now for the letters.

and curious-shaped shells, and also got a starfish which is in the shape of a star, but not very large. It was dead. I have never seen a live one. The breeze rises about half past seven, and blows all day. Tide begins to rise at nine o'clock, and keeps rising until two, then it begins to fall, and during that timethe waves come up high and ripple high upon land. My letter is getting too long. Pardon me, please, for staying so long. I will tell the rest of my trip next time. of my trip next time.

LILLIE V. KEEN
(No. 20,033).

Lillie, yours is a bright chatty letter, the kind I like. You're a keen observer, and not much escaped your and bottom sides." That's where I got mine and I'll carry it to another world. It is the scar that won't come off. I was also asked to describe a cape, and I said "Something Grandma wears round her shoulders in winter, to keep her teeth warm," and that's where an express train hit me. It was my business at school to dust and keep the big maps that hung on the school walls nice and clean. One morning I fell asleep, and the master caught hold of my ear and lifted me off the floor. "What makes you sleep, eh?" he said, giving my ear an extra twist. "Oh, I'm tired!" was my reply. "Tired eh, what have you been doing?" "I've been dusting all over Europe," was my innocent reply, and so I had, and that ought to make anyone tired.

Lillie says that Indians were the first to discover that oyster beds were fit to eat. Lillie, I think you've got your dates wrong on this. I can't believe anyone or anything living could eat an oyster bed, except Billy the Goat. I know Billy is a good hand at eating beds, as he ate a thirty dollar hair mattress that the folks next door left on the line to air last week, and he said it tasted awful good, and feels very soft and warm across the chest. When Billy gets tired, he swallows himself, and sleeps on the mattress. That yarn about schools of mullets jumping up in the water strikes me as being a fish story. I've no doubt Lillie wants us to beand bottom sides." That's where I got mine what makes you sleep, eh?" he said, giving my ear an extra twist. "Oh, I'm tired!" was my reply. "Tired eh, what have you been doing?" "I've been dusting all over Europe," was my innocent reply, and so I had, and that ought to make anyone tired.

Lillie says that Indians were the first to discover that oyster beds were fit to eat. Lillie, I think you've got your dates wrong on this. I can't believe anyone or anything living could eat an oyster bed, except Billy the Goat. I know Billy is a good hand at eating beds, as he ate a thirty dollar hair mattress that the folks next door left on the line to air last week, and he said it tasted awful good, and feels very soft and warm across the chest. When Billy gets tired, he swallows himself, and sleeps on the mattress. That yarn about schools of mullets jumping up in the water strikes me as being a fish story. I've no doubt Lillie wants us to believe the little mullets had a spelling-book in one hand and a Webster's Dictionary or Bullock a nd Ward catologue in the other, but I don't believe it. I worked in a fish store once, it drove me off lieve the little mullets hone hand and a Webster's Dictionary or Bullock and Ward catologue in the other, but I don't believe it. I worked in a fish store once, it drove me off my nut, I was codded by the codfish, and fell in the hali-butt. I used to flounder round the plaice, and one day I got outside of so much bass, I got on a skate, and that knocked me off my perch, and I off my perch, and I smelt trouble and skidsmelt trouble and skid-dooed down the pike; and everybody said I was a lobster, but I didn't give a clam. People are too offishus anyhow. Well, never mind, education is spreading, and even the mullets are swimming round in schools.

eating dog, I want to know what kind of dog I am eating. I want honest dog, and not putrid Packingtown poodles. If I do have to eat dog, and Heaven forbid that I should have putrid Packingtown poodles. If I do have to eat dog, and Heaven forbid that I should have to, I'll eat Toby, "Not on your tintype you cannabalistic old stiff, you don't eat me if I know it, Toby.") Fortunately, at Christmas, Emil Rappold, the League Chef sent me a magnificent cake, all smothered in icing, and I've lived on that for two weeks, and I've had to sit on that cake day and night, as Billy has had his eye on it. The icing made it pretty chilly sitting, round the equatorial regions, but I hung on until I downed the last bite. I'm not selfish usually, but Emil told me to wolf it all, and I always do as I am told.

No, I won't come to hear you play that piano. A lady asked me the other day to hear her play the scales on the piano—I didn't stay long, for while she was scaling the piano I was scaling a wall. If you were to invite me to play a duet with you on a porterhouse steak I'd go in a jiff, but I'm dead leary of that piano. A lady wrote me the other day, and asked me if I knew of some song she could sing to her husband, as music always helped to sober him up. I told her the most appropriate song for a man to sing when he was getting over a souse was "Comin' Thro' the Rye." I told her to sing it to him with a club accompaniment, an iron one for preference. selfish usually, but Emil told me to wolf it all, and I always do as I am told.

No, I won't come to hear you play that piano. A lady asked me the other day to hear her play the scales on the piano—I didn't stay long, for while she was scaling the piano I was scaling a wall. If you were to invite me to play a duet with you on a porterhouse steak I'd go in a jiff, but I'm dead leary of that piano. A lady wrote me the other day, and asked me if I knew of some song she could sing to her husband, as music always helped to sober him up. I told her the most appropriate song for a man to sing when he was getting over a souse was "Comin' Thro' the Rye." I told her to sing it to him with a club accompaniment, an iron one for preference.

You ask me what would happen if I were nothere to cheer you. Well some other man would do the job, and you'd forget me in a month. That's the world's way, dearie.

Here is a letter from Cousin John C. Busby, John sends me his card and a very swell card it is. On it is printed this: "John C. Busby, noted athlete and writer, Independence, lows."

There is a letter from cousin John C. Busby, noted athlete and writer, Independence, lows."

John's envelope is also similarly stamped, thus John's accomplishments are made known to the world. What John has done in the athletic line I do not know, as John does not tell us, but what John can do as a litterateur I will now give you the privilege of judging for yourselves, and as one noted writer has no right to alter the work of another noted writer, I give you John's letter exactly as he wrote it to me, without dotting a "t" or crossing an "i."

Sept Iowa 9

Sept Iowa 9 Independence.

the leg, and ship it to me, so I can have it photographed for the cousins to see. As regards the railroads regards the railroads running through your town, that is no advantage to a city unless the railroads stop long enough for you to get on and off the trains. I'd like to see those rocky mountorns, John, guess they are something new since I was out there. They only had ordinary mountains in my time. You say there are only Jedin't give a clam. People are too offshus anyhow. Well, never mind, education is spreading, and even the mulicla are swim. The tide begins to rise at nine, and keeps rising until two. It takes that old tide five hours to get up out of must be very untidy, and all tied in knots to take as long a time as that. Five hours to rise and get up—my, that's final times to rise and get up—my, that's final times as that. Five hours to rise and get up—my, that's final fourteen reasons, for if we had lat kinds of homes tall, weigh one hundred pounds, have light completed and brown hair.

A little Sunflower wants to say a piece. Draw Urcle, I wish you would can see three final fourteen reasons, for if we had let him remain to eat any, for what would all the cousins of this country do without an Uncle, that I langh till I almost cry at some of your funny remarks. Uncle, with the swap back to eat any, for what would all the cousins of this country do without an Uncle Charlle to cheer them and if Uncle, I will try and coax you to let me join your happy League of Cousins, I will send you the dot if Uncle, I will try and coax you to let me join you have so many domestic accomplishments. I like all my nices to be able to cook dust, make beds scruly domestic accomplishments. I like all my nices to be able to cook dust, make beds scruly and the subscription to the best magazine in the United water of the country do without an Uncle Charlle to cheer them ynices to be able to cook dust, make beds scruly domestic accomplishments. I like all my nices to be able to cook dust, make beds scruly and the double quick. That's where you are wrong, I would not march back to Maine.

Gracia, I'm ever so glad you have so many domestic accomplishments. I like all my nices to be able to cook dust, make beds scruly and the proposed for me. You say, Gracie, I kit all my nices to be able to cook dust, make beds scruly and the proposed for me. You say, Gracie, I kit all my nices to be able to cook dust, make beds scruly and the proposed for me. You sa more or less rabid, and only fit to live in Yoming. Toby says maybe C. P. M. means Cockroaches Privately Murdered. Cousins, help me to guess this, and John will tell us if you're right.

A little Arkansawyer, looked out of the Ark, and saw yer all sitting on my lap, and now she wants to lap up a little and join in the chin music.

PINE BLUFF, ARK., Oct. 14, 1906.

DEAR UNCLE CHARLIE:
I received my membership card and button and think they are beautiful. I thank you very much

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 9.)

JERRY, THE BACKWOODS BOY

Copyright, 1904, by The Mershon Company.

All rights reserved.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Jerry Blue, a boy fourteen years old, lives with Squire Parkhurst. Going in search of a lost cow he finds hoof prints. He hears an odd sound, and "Stop, Nero! Stop, I tell you!" Suddenly a horse bursts into view. From one stirrup drags the form of a horseman. Jerry stops the horse, saving the man from death. Henry Maxwell questions Jerry as to his parents and his home. He is Squire Parkhurst's bound boy and was taken by him out of the poorhouse in New York City. Jerry does not know how long he was there. A man named Cass takes him away for two years; he is killed and Jerry goes back. Henry Maxwell gives him gold for his bravery. When Jerry is his own master he will try to clear up the mystery of his identity. When Mr. Maxwell goes back to New York he will look into the matter for him. Jerry offers the money back; the man refuses to take it and rides off. Jerry finds the cow, and he wonders about himself. He will find out some day, but he does not dream of the odd things to happen before the secret of his identity is revealed.

A few miles to the south of where Jerry meets Henry Maxwell, night and darkness overtake Dick Clarke, who meets Indian John, and asks him to guide him to a place of shelter. He tempts the man with money, and the Indian, reticent by nature, and Dick Clarke, occupied with thoughts of his own, travel in silence. They arrive at Hill's Cavern. The landlord is about to close for the night, and sees only the Indian, Dick Clarke, as to his stay he will be guided by circumstances, and he inquires about the chief settlers. There is Isaac Davenport, an officer in the war, Henry, the Major's only son, a graduate of Harvard, Squire Parkhurst, and his daughter Mabel. The landlord often sees Henry Davenport and Mabel Parkhurst riding together. After this talk Dick Clarke retires for the night.

Squire Parkhurst's home is well chosen—two stories high, with a rustic piazza. Mehitable Higgins lives at Squire Parkhurst's nod at hitty-seven is unmarried, and unwilling to admi

CHAPTER VI.

JERRY'S HUNTING ADVENTURE.

HE morning succeeding the stormy night was singularly beautiful. The sun was shining brightly. The valleys and meadows were green with waving grass, sprinkled plentifully with cowslips and dandelions—a morning on which life itself becomes a luxury and an intoxication.

which dife itself becomes a luxury and an intoxication.

Upon this day, Jerry had pitched for carrying out a plan he had long been contemplating. It was briefly this: so recent had been the settlement of this part of the country that the shy denizens of the forest—the deer of the Indian hunting grounds—had not yet disappeared. Occasionally a hunter would bring one into the village, though, as the deer thinned out, such occasions became more and more rare, and became invested with increased importance. It was this circumstance, perhaps, that shaped Jerry's youthful ambition. He had read unmoved the lives of distinguished writers and judges, but the thought of slaying a deer without assistance from anybody powerfully excited his emulation. He had now and then caught a glimpse of a deer dashing rapidly through the forest walks, and felt no doubt that, if provided with a weapon, he could bring one down.

There was a gun kept in an outbuilding, belonging to a man whom Squire Parkhurst employed during the busy season. When Jerry

There was a gun kept in an outbuilding, belonging to a man whom Squire Parkhurst employed during the busy season. When Jerry had made up his mind to try his luck as a hunter, it was this weapon he proposed to use.

On this particular morning, after his duties were over, he took an opportunity when Mehitable was on the other side of the house, hanging out clothes, to steal into the place where the gun was kept, hastily seize it, and darting forth make for the woods.

gun was kept, hastily seize it, and darting forth make for the woods.

"Now I'm all ready to pepper 'em!" cried Jerry sultingly. "I wonder what they'll all say at the house if I come home with a fine fat deer? It'll keep us in dinners for a week." Leaving Jerry to trudge along in the direction of the forest, we return to our acquaintance at the tavern.

Dick Clarke did not arise early; the fatigue of the previous day had been so great that exhausted nature required a longer time than usual to recuperate. When he did arouse himself the sun was already high in the heavens.

After two or three preliminary yawns he made his morning toilet.

"After all 'tisn't so bad a country," he soliloquized, taking a leisurely survey from the window of the varied scenery that lay stretched out beneath, in all the glory of morning sunshine.

"It thought last night that I should be hearti-out beneath, in all the glory of morning sunshine.

"I thought last night that I should be heartily glad to get away from it—that is when my object is accomplished—but this morning puts quite a different face on the matter. The climate or something else has had a wonderful effect in promoting my appetite. I don't remember when I have been so sharp set. I think I'll go down and see what sort of a breakfast. I'll go down and see what sort of a breakfast I descending to the lower part of the house Mr. Clarke found the table already spread and the breakfast awaiting his attack.

"I heard you stirring 'round upstairs," saidthe landlord, "and thought I'd have breakfast put on the table. We took ours about two hours ago, but calculated you might be tired and wouldn't disturb you. Hope you had a "Capital, capital, my good host; it has given me a famous appetite. I have no doubt I shall do ample justice to your breakfast."

The fare provided might well tempt an epicure. However much the cities of the seaboard wight have the advantage in other recreets their cure. However much the cities of the seaboard might have the advantage in other respects, they could not have furnished a more delicious meal than this rude tavern. The woods contributed wild honey and maple syrup, and these, with milk, eggs, hominy, corn bread, and the flesh of the wild pheasant, furnished forth a meal upon the dispatch of which the newcomer entered with the greatest zest.

After half an hour busily spent he rose from the table with a sigh of relief, and in that comfortable state which accompanies a full stomach fortable state which accompanies a full stomach sauntered out to the barroom, where he decided to complete his meal with a glass of brandy.

"What do you propose to do with yourself today?" asked the complaisant landlord. "I hope you'll find enough to amuse you, so that we can keep you here a good while."

By Horatio Alger, Jr.

"Perhaps you may, landlord. I certainly like your country very much better this morning than I did last night, and your breakfast has added to the favorable impression. I think I shall go out and reconnoiter a little. I think you mentioned a Mr. Parkhurst last evening." "Squire Parkhurst." Whereabouts does he live? In the neighborhood? "Some distance off, sir. It must be three or four miles." "And in what direction?"

"And in what direction?"
"You see those woods there? Well it's on the other side of them that the squire lives,"
"Then it would be a saving of distance for one that wanted to go there to go through the timber?"

imber?"
"Yes, it would shorten your way a good deal.
Are you going to see the squire?"
"I don't know as to that," said the other evasively. "As the country is all new to me, I might as well go there as anywhere to look about. Besides I can't help feeling interested in the daughter, after all that you have told me."

in the daughter, after all that you have me."

"Mabel Parkhurst is a bansum gal, thet's a a fact, and will make a fine wife for young Davenport," said the landlord.

"Not if I can help it?" muttered Clarke.

"What did you say, sir?" queried his host.

"Nothing of consequence," said the other hurriedly. "I think I'll try the woods, then, landlord, and perhaps I may seek out this man that you speak of."

"Wouldn't you like to take a gun with you, when a boy coolly makes a mark of any stranger he happens to meet. And there the young ras-cal is, staring at me, in disappointment, I sup-pose to think his shot has not taken effect." He shook his fist. "What fiend possessed you to shoot me, boy?" he demanded sternly. "What have I done that you should seek my life?"

"Seek your life, sir?" repeated Jerry vacantly.
"Certainly. Don't you see that bullet hole?
An inch or two lower, and it would have pierced my skull."
"I—I thought you was a deer," faltered the boy, beginning to be terrified for the consequences of his precipitation.

"Thought I was a deer! Do I look like a deer?" demanded the exasperated traveler.

"N—no, sir."
"Then what made you take me for one?"

"I heard you moving, and thought you was a deer."

"You did, eh! Why didn't you wait till you found out before you thought proper to shoot at me?"
"Because I was afraid if I waited I should

"Because I was afraid, if I waited, I should OH, YOU AIN'T GOING TO SHOOT ME, ARE YOU!" EXCLAIMED THE BOY.

sir! There's a deal of game that, maybe, you might like a shot at."

"Not this morning," said Dick Clarke. "I think I won't trouble you. Some other time, perhaps."

"Jest as you say, squire. The musket's at your service any time."

Thanking the landlord for his offer, our acquaintance took his way to the forest. It was well grown, some of the trees having reached an age almost patriarchal. Perhaps, if our friend had been a poet or a sentimentalist, he might have experienced something of that pleasure which Byron found in the "pathless woods," but he was not troubled in that way. woods," but he was not troubled in that way His mind was a practical one, and its pa His mind was a practical one, and its particular training—for he had been educated as a law-yer—had a tendency to make it more so. He had always lived in a city or a large town, and had little taste for, or appreciation of, natural

As he was making his way through the woods he was startled by the cry of a strange bird that suggested to him the possibility of encountering some ill-disposed Indians, who, he had heard, were wont to be in ambush behind

"It would be very disagreeable," he thought "It would be very disagreeable," he thought,
"if some of the prowling savages, provided there are any, and this wood certainly seems lorely enough for their lurking place, should take it into their heads to make a mark of me."
Scarcely had this thought shaped itself in his mind when it was followed by the discharge of a gun, the bullet from which lodged in his nat.

Though perhaps not more timid than the majority of people, it is scarcely a matter of surprise that our hero should be struck with consternation at this sudden attack, and, con-scious that he was wholly unarmed, should have put in force his first instinctive impulse

But it so happened that the bullet, instead of having been sent from in front, had actually took for a man-I mean the first man I ever took for a deer," said Jerry, getting more and more mixed up in his speech.

"What should you have done in case you had killed me?

"I don't know," answered Jerry helplessly.
"Give me that gun," said Clarke imperative-1y.

"Oh, you ain't going to shoot me, are you!"
exclaimed the boy, terror overspreading his face, and his ruddy color giving place to pale-ness.

"Isn't it fair," asked Clarke, maliciously enjoying the boy's terror, "that I should have a shot at you in return for the one with which you favored me?"
"Oh, don't, sir, don't! I'll never shoot at a deer again in my life."

"How is that going to benefit me? Perhaps you will shoot at me instead."

Jerry vehemently protested that he cherished no such sanguinary intention, and Clarke, to his great relief, did not insist upon the retalia-"Where do you live?" asked Clarke, after a

"With Squire Parkhurst, over there."
"Ha! you are not his son? I never heard that he had any."

"No, I only live with him to do chores such like."

"Then you can direct me to his house?"
"You ain't going to tell him about my shooting you?" asked Jerry apprehensively.

"I don't know. I haven't made up my mind."
"Then what are you going to see him for?"
asked the boy anxiously.
"My boy, I advise you not to be too inquisitive. I may have other matters to confer with him about, beside this affair of yours. Conduct me as quickly as possible to his house, and I will take into consideration the expediency of informing him of your assault upon me."

"I hope Mehitable won't hear of it," thought Jerry, as he silently proceeded to obey Clarke's request. "She wouldn't let me rest night or day. I must say it's not such fun deer-hunting as I thought."

"This is certainly a promising commencement of my adventure," reflected Clarke.
"Mabel Parkhurst little dreams how near chance has come to cutting short the career of one who proposes to do her the honor of becoming her husband."

CHAPTER VII. A CONFERENCE.

When Jerry and his companion came within sight of the house, the boy began to exhibit symptoms of uneasiness, and he slackened his symptoms of uneasiness, and he slackened his pace.

"What's the matter?" inquired Dick Clarke.
"I'm afraid they'll see me with this gun," said Jerry. "I hadn't ought to have it, and Mehitable's got sharp eyes. If you'd just as lieve wait a minute 1'll dodge along and put it away."
"Very well," said Clarke. "But who's Mehitable?"
"She's an old maid that does the kitchen

"She's an old maid that does the kitchen work. She's as homely as a board fence, but she thinks she's handsome, and that somebody she thinks she's handsome, and that somebody will come along and marry her some day."

"Humph!" said Clarke. "On the whole, my boy, you needn't trouble yourself to come back. I can just as well go up and announce."
Feeling relieved by this assurance, Jerry proceeded to make his way stealthily to the building from which he had taken the gun. But fate was against him. Mehitable had gone out a moment before to get some chips with which to replenish the fire, and met Jerry face to face as he was entering.

to replenish the fire, and met Jerry face to face as he was entering.

"Oh, you wicked, wicked boy," she commenced in a shrill voice. "Who gave you leave, I'd like to know, to carry off that gun?"

"Hush, Hitty," said Jerry in a mysterious manner. "I met a stranger in the woods who came up to the house with me. I reckon he's in search of a wife, and if you run right in you'll get a chance to open the front door and let him in. And who knows what may happen if he likes your looks?"

"What sort of looking man is he?" asked Mehitable, her curiosity and interest aroused. "How old is he?"

"About your age, I guess. It would make a

"How old is he?"

"About your age, I guess. It would make a capital match."

"I ain't certain as it would be right for me to marry after disapp'inting poor Joshua," said Mehitable pensively. "Is he—does he look as if he was pretty well off?"

"There he is, knocking at the door. Run, or you won't see him."

Forgetful of her dignity Mehitable paid heed to the recommendation, and a moment after-to the recommendation, and a moment afterwards presented herself at the door to admit the stranger.

"This is Mehitable," thought Clarke. "It's just as well to get into her good graces. I may hereafter have need of her assistance. "Mrs. Parkhurst, I presume?" he said with a

"No, sir," said Mehitable, fluttering with pleasure at being mistaken for the mistress of the household. "Squire Parkhurst is a widerrer."

of the household. "Squire Parkhurst is a widerrer."

"Ah, indeed! A lady friend, then, I presume. May I inquire if the squire is in at this time?"

"What a polite gentleman he is!" thought Mehitable. "I was always told that I was very ladylike, and he seems to be a good judge.—Won't you walk in, sir, while I go and see?" she said aloud, in her most gracious manner. "I think I will remain at the door. I am sorry to give you so much trouble."

"Oh, no trouble at all, sir," and Mehitable tripped away with as much grace and lightness as could be expected of a maiden of forty-seven. Joseph Parkhurst was in the east room, so called, an apartment which was devoted principally to his use. The room was furnished more after the fashion of a city residence than a log cabin. A carpet covered the floor. The chairs were of mahogany curiously carved. One or two family portraits hung on the wall, and arranged on shelves was a collection of some forty or fifty volumes. Mr. Parkhurst—let us call him Mr., for as we know, he was not a real squire—was sitting at a window, out of which he gazed with a look that plainly took in a little of the beauty that was spread out so lavishly before him. There was a listless look upon his face which betokened a spirit not at rest. Something he craved which the wilderness could not give.

"There's a gentleman at the door that wants give.

"There's a gentleman at the door that wants to see you" said Mehitable, abruptly opening the door.

"A gentleman to see me!" repeated Mr. Park-hurst with some surprise. "Very well, you may show him in."

rke entered the room with an affable smile, and bowed deferentially.
"Good morning, sir," said Mr. Parkhurst hesitatingly.

"I see you don't remember me, sir. It is not "I see you don't remember me, sir. It is not strange, as, though your person has long been familiar to me, I have never had the pleasure of exchanging a word with you. By way of introduction let me announce myself as Richard Clarke, of New York, an humble disciple of that profession which counts so many master minds among its devotors. I mean the law?

minds among its devotees—I mean the law."
"You are a lawyer, then, Mr. Clarke?" said
Mr. Parkhurst. "Have you come here with an

Mr. Parkhurst. "Have you come here with an invention of establishing yourself?"
"No, sir, I conless to a preference for the more thickly settled part of the country. You will perhaps be surprised when I tell you that my sole motive in making this somewhat arduous journey is connected with yourself."
"With me!" exclaimed Mr. Parkhurst, lifting his eyes in profound astonishment.

"It is even as I say," said the lawyer. "I may add that my visit may redound to your advantage. This, however, depends in great measure on the manner in which you receive what I have to say."

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 14.)

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 7.)

I'm glad to hear from you, Myrtle, as the letter takes me back to my school days, and pretty strenuous school days they were. You say your school teacher scarcely allows you to breathe; that's nothing. In the school I went to we were never allowed to breathe at all. Anybody caught breathing during school hours was fanned with a rawhide until his back teeth dropped out. We went into school at 9 A. M. and got out at 12, and before we went in we had to take a long breath, to last the three hours in school, or there was something doing with the paddie. If any boy couldn't stay the three hours, and started to turn black in the face, he had to ask permission to go outside and breathe. One boy was fired because he was discovered carrying a because he was discovered carrying a fired handful of breath into school in his shoes. After that we had to leave our shoes outside. After that we had to leave our shoes outside. It was pretty tough in the summer to be without foot gear, as we couldn't "shoo" the flies. We used to sing a hymn every morning, and it began thus: "While I draw this fleeting breath," but we were never allowed to draw it, except on paper. If we wanted to draw our breath we had to draw it in chalk on the blackboard. I remember I'd been eating onions for breakfast one morning, and the master said: "I hear onions, on your breath." "That's impossible," said I, "as I left my breath outside before I came in."

There was a master in the school that always

There was a master in the school that always made a dead set for me. Cold mornings when he wanted to get his blood circulating and hands warm, he used to hammer my head with his open fist. But I got even with him. That school was an old-fashioned one, and had a caller undernest about nine feet deep. Right school was an old-fashioned one, and had a cellar underneath about nine feet deep. Right in the center of the school was a big trapdoor that was lifted up bodily by two metal rings when anything wanted lowering into the cellar below. Now I'm not spinning any yarn, this is just as it happened. When you lifted up that trapdoor there was an old pair of steps that led into the cellar. Well, the morning that school broke up (this was a boarding school), another boy and I were up at 4A. M. and we went from the head master's house up to the old school. With a hammer and chisel we had borrowed from one of the day scholars, we removed the cleats, or whatever you ars, we removed the cleats, or whatever you call the things that held the trapdoor in place. It was hard work, but we did it. Then we unhooked the step ladder, removed it, then replaced the trap, leaving two thin, frail bits of wood to prevent it from dropping into the cellar. At 7 A. M. we had to be at our desks in school for prayers, and sit there in silence until the breakfast bell rang at 7.15. The master arrived a few minutes after we were seated. As the boys trooped up from the house, about two hundred varies way we let them into the two hundred yards away, we let them into the secret, and the excitement was intense. I shall never forget the way my heart wobbled, as the boy nearest the door gave the signal that old Billy Higgins was coming.

Into the school Billy strode, but he didn't stride far—about six feet was enough for Billy, and then he got his. There was a crest a vell and then he got his. There was a crash, a yell, two arms shot in the air, a thud, and one tri-umphant scream of delight from seventy hearty, umphant scream of delight from seventy hearty, hilarious boys pulsating with the joy of vacation-time. The breakfast bell rang, and I locked the school door on the outside, and threw the key over a wall. Billy was in the cellar for two hours, as we' took good care to leave him nothing to stand on or build a platform with, and there was no way out excepting by the trapdoor, and you can't reach nine feet unless you have something to stand on. By the time that Billy Higgins was fisbed out of that dungeon, we were all in the train, thirty miles from school, and moving all the time. I never went back to that school, for if I had, I should not only have been compelled to thirty miles from school, and moving all the time. I never went back to that school, for if I had, I should not only have been compelled to quit breathing during school hours, but forever. Billy Higgins would have attended to that. Often in my dreams I am running for dear life with Billy after me, and gee whitaker, but I do some record sprinting, you bet. Myrtis, I have given you a peep at my school days, and you see it is the same old story, poor kids are always getting it, where the girl got the pearl necklace—in the neck.

A ittle annur-haired Californian beauty will

A little sunny-haired Californian beauty will now hop up on my lap, and say a little piece.

A sittle sunny-haired Californian beauty will now hop up on my lap, and say a little piece.

Santa Barbara, Cal., Nov. 25, 1996.

Dear Uncle Charles and Courses:
This is my sixth or seventh letter to you!
I have written to you of this historic and pieturesque "city-by-the-sea," many times.
Santa Barbara, my much loved home, is a growing city of more than 15,000 inhabitants, and is a famous tourist resort, owing to the mild, sunny climate—unequaled anywhere, and to the many places of interest to be seen here, the old Mission (built by the Indians under the supervision of the ancient "Fathers," or priests, more than 118 years ago). General Fremont's head quarters, etc., etc. Then, the largest grapevine in the world is only a few miles from here, in the Carpinteria valley. I think even Billy the Goat, would gasp with wonder and astonishment at the hugeness and grandeur of this remarkable grapevine.

Well, I could tell you a great deal in regard to this particular part of the "Golden State."

From the window I can see the wide, blue Pacific. Here and there a small sailboat "rocks gently with the tide;" and I wonder if that dim wreath of smoke in the distance "heralds the approach" of one of the beautiful, white passenger steamers, the California, or Santa Ross.

I am a Southern California girl of seventeen, and I am five feet and three inches in height, weigh about one hundred and twenty-three pounds, have dark golden-brown hair, medium, or fair complexion, and dark blue eyes.

All League members, who would care to hear from a Southern California, write to

A Golden State Cousin,

BIRDIR Snow (No. 228).

P. S. Uncle, do you know if there's other League cousins in this city, or anywhere along the Pacific coast! If I'm the only cousin in the "Channel city," I ought to feel either very conceited or—very lonesome!

Yes, Birdie, I'm fully aware of the fact that

Yes, Birdie, I'm fully aware of the fact that Yes, Birdie, I'm fully aware of the fact that this is your seventh epistle, and you've left out I notice, all the interesting things you put in the other letters, more's the pity. Guess you thought I knew them by heart, guess I did, too. Well, dearie, your persistence has won. You were fourteen when you commenced to write, and now you are seventeen. That's a good many years in the life of young girls like us. Do you know, Birdie, I never could understand what you were doing in Southern California. People told me they never had snow in Santa Barbara, and yet it is very evident that while you are there, they have Snow all the year round. The reason I never printed your letters was because I felt sure, living in the hot place you do, that you would melt before I got your letter in type. I was engaged to marry a girl named Snow once, and I went to the church, and stood at the altar waiting. And then in People told me they never had snow in Santa the words of the song that is all the rage just now, slightly altered to fit the occasion:

And there was I waiting at the church,
Waiting at the church, waiting at the church,
There was I waiting at the church,
With rice and old shoes pelted.
Just then they sent me round a note
Such a funny note, this is what they wrote,
Regret to say, she can't marry you today,
Miss Snow has melted.

I was also engaged to a Miss Glass, but I soon saw through her. Then I was engaged to Miss Gunn—she went off. Next came Miss Lariat—she roped me in, then Miss Henn came on the scene, but Miss Henn laid for me—with an scene, but Miss Henn laid for me—with an axe, and that settled me.
General Fremont's head quarters. Why does

General Fremont have his head in quarters? Will you explain, Birdie? Are the quarters in silver, or are they just odd change. That dim wreath of smoke you see rising on the distant borizon from the eternal blue of the mighty Pacific is not the smoke of a coastwise steamer Pacific is not the smoke of a coastwise steamer as you innocently suspect, but on the contrary it is Toby sitting on a hard wave smoking a cigarette. If you'll walk out into the vasty deep, and soak him a souse in the bone tank, I'll be obliged. There are about 3,000 cousins in California, Birdie, and quite a few in your city as you'll know when this strikes the coast.

Here is a letter I want you to read carefully, and study and think over. I have been waiting for one of the girl cousins to broach this sub-ject as it is one of vast import.

ject as it is one of vast import.

DEAR UNCLE CHARLIE:

Here comes a little (?) Washingtonian niece to have a squint at your lonely hair.

Sixteen summers and winters have flown over my beautiful auburn head, which unlike yours is covered with an abundance of curly hair.

Uncle, my only beauty is my eyes, which are dark brown. I am five feet seven inches tall, and weigh one hundred and twenty pounds.

Well, Uncle and cousins, altho a school, girl, I am very much interested in Woman's Suffrage, and I feel it in my bones that you are, too, Uncle. I am surre, that as patriotic a man as you, would have helped in the war with England, if you hadn't been too old, and anyone who believes that England had no right to tax Americans without letting them be represented in Parliament would not believe in taxing the "widow and the fatherless" (this includes "old maids" whose forces I intend to join some day) without them being represented in Congress.

A friend of mine once remarked, that widows

Congress.

A friend of mine once remarked, that widows and old maids ought to marry, if they wanted to be represented at the polls. Has it really come to the place that men have to keep women from their rights in order to get women to marry them? And then, Uncle Charlie, you know it may not be the fault of all of the old maids that such is their lot, but remember that I don't speak from experience, and so may not be right. You might try asking some of them if it was their fault that they are living in "single blessedness." I don't believe that you dare to.

and so may not be right. You might try asking some of them if it was their fault that they are living in "single blessedness." I don't believe that you dare to.

Some women say that they don't want to vote. I must say then that they don't care what becomes of our country. Some men say that if women are allowed to vote, they ought to be made to serve in the army. Women do not claim to have physical powers equal to men, but if their mental powers are not equal to those of the men they are not up to much. I think when they talk that way they forget the heroic deeds of some of the women nurses on the battlefield, or rather they would like to forget them. Then as for making them serve, men are not made to serve, and I don't think that half of the lecturers against Woman Suffrage ever served or expect to serve in the army.

Women are peace—makers; but if 'occasion demanded, they would rise to meet the necessity. Some say that a woman's place is in the home, and so it is, but I don't think that going off a few minutes to vote would in any way detractfrom any woman's usefulness. While the husband drinks and bets to help along the cause (the election of the Democratic or Republican ticket), the wife could quietly go to the polls, and vote the Prohibition ticket and do as much good for the home, and her boys, as ten such men as the one I have described. Then again, some say that it would bring about the same result, for the women would vote as their husbands do, the first time, I shall come to the conclusion that American women have got so crasy from their long subjection that they cannot rise above it all at once. Besides that, in the United States all of the women are not married, thank goodness, and as they have no rulers, nine tenths of them, I venture to say, will vote the Prohibition ticket.

Now, Uncle, I don't intend to scold you, or any of your woman's suffrage-believing menhews.

Now, Uncle, I don't intend to scold you, or any of your woman's-suffrage-believing nephews, who think that a white woman knows as much as a block man.

your woman white woman knows as much as a black man.

My lecture is meant for the unbelievers, and, Uncle, I hope that you will make believers out of them, for it would be too bad for such a dear, good man as you are to have nephews opposed to letting your nieces vote.

Now, Uncle, if my letter is too long, you may perform an operation on it and amputate some of it; but if I don't see at least some of it in print, my lovely bloom will fade and ere the first snows fall, your dearly loved niece will occupy a tiny (?) grave on a sunny slope where spring flowers earliest bloom and fall asters blow.

Inclosing twenty cents for Compour League button and card I remain your loving niece, OLEA BLANK, Bow, Wash.

Bravel Olea. I am glad to find one sturdy Inclosing twenty cents for Compost League button and card I remain your loving siece, OLEA BLANK, Bow, Wash.

Bravol Olea, I am glad to find one sturdy champion of the rights of her sex. You ask me if women should vote? You bet they should. You ask me if I am in favor of woman suffrage? You bet I am every time. I advocate it every chance I get both by speech and in print. I remember once upon a time I was jackass enough to think that women had no rights and did not need to vote, but indeed I don't think so now. There are a good many reasons why women should vote, and I will mention a few of them. Just as Olea says, we have no right to tax women, unless we give them representation. A great many women are taxed but have no voice in the government. We went to war with England on this very point, taxation without representation. What right have we to force a condition on our women that we would not tolerate ourselves? I st hat manly? Is that fair? Women are not only as intelligent as men, but in the majority of cases vastly more intellectual. You will always find that the girls are the smarter at school. Who is it that teaches and instructs our youth in our public schools? Women. The male pupils of these women may be dunces, and never have sense enough to vote, though they will exercise the power because they are men. The women who taught these men and gave them such education as they have (women who are immensely their superiors in intellect) are unable to vote, just because they are women. Unable to vote, mind you, because who are immensely their superiors in intellect) are unable to vote, just because they are women. Unable to vote, mind you, because they wear skirts and not pants.

If you ask those in charge of our big libraries all over this vast country, about the class of literature read by the two sexes, you will find that the women read the good books, books that are worth while, books that are ennobling and instructive, books that make for progress and betterment, while the men read the trash. If you meet a girl and a boy both reading books.

it is ten to one the girl will be reading "In His Steps," and it is a hundred to one the boy will be reading "Bottle-nosed Ben; or, The Bad Man of the Border," or "Badie, the Queen of the Opium Den," or some other yellow fifth of that —ler. You would entrust the nation's future to the dime novel boy, with his pockets full of cigarettes, and his mouth full of blasphemy, while to the girl with a heart of gold, and a pure white soul and intellectual brain, you'd give no voice in guiding the ship of state, no hand in shaping the destiny of the nation. Go to church, what do you find there?

Ninety women to every ten men. I have sat in a Western church Sunday after Sunday, for four years, and seen that church crowded with a Western church Sunday after Sunday, for four years, and seen that church crowded with women, two hundred women to three men. The saloon, the gambling rooms, and the dives held more attraction for the men than the church, and this in a Christian country, which this is supposed to be. Women like the late Susan B. Anthony, the late Harriet Beecher Stowe, Julia Ward Howe, Helen Gould, Ida M. Tarbell, etc., have not been allowed to vote, but barroom loafers, ward heelers, and grafters who are not worthy to touch the hems of the garments of these noble women are allowed to exercise the rights of suffrage. Helen Gould cannot vote, but Helen Gould's coachman can. To whose hands do you think the destinies of this nation could be the better entrusted, to Miss Gould or to one of her hired men? Thousands of the male voters are too befuddled with alcohol, too pickled in liquor, too soused with rum, to be able to form an intelligent idea of public questions, and matters of public betterment, let alone solving economic problems. You have only got to look at conditions in this country today, and see how deeply we need the women voters, and how badly the men make use of the votes they have. Men have been voting in this country for over one hundred years, and yet I get thousands of letters from all over the country, disclosing conditions so absolutely deplorable and heartrending, that it tears my very soul case to read them. Women left with four or five half-naked children, compelled to do the work of a man, plowing in the fields, tilling the soil, hewing timber, and then sending the children supperless to bed. Men have been voting for one hundred years, yet they have not begun to learn how to take care of the sick, the widows and the orphans. For my part I would like to stop the men voting entirely for ten years, and give the ballot to the women. I would like to elect women presidents, women governors, and women indees. stop the men voting entirely for ten years, and give the ballot to the women. I would like to elect women presidents, women governors, and women senators, and women judges. I would particularly like to have women mayors of cities, and I would like to have alderwomen not aldermen for the municipal government of our cities. When some of our cities have become so filthy, and the streets so disgraceful, that even a pig would have declined to walk across them, women have banded together and cleaned the cities themselves, thus putting the men to shame. This has been done time and again in some of our cities when corrupt poliagain in some of our cities when corrupt politicians did not do their duty. Women would pass more helpful laws in ten months than men pass more helpful laws in ten months than men would in a thousand years. Women would never disagree upon certain cardinal points. They would regulate the liquor traffic in this country in such a way that drunkenness would be abolished, and the curse of alcohol forever removed from the land. If women voted there could be no children toiling in our factories, wearing out their young lives, and ruining their frail bodies on the altar of greed. There would be no women working sixteen boars a would be no women working sixteen hours a day in our sweat shops. There would be no ruthless slaughter of citizens on our railroads. Five hundred bables would not be killed weekly in New York City during the summer for the want of wholesome milk and ice. Women the want of wholesome milk and ice. Women are more humane, broader minded, more sympathetic, more democratic in their views than men. Wherever their influence is felt it is felt for good. Wherever women are organized they are organized on the side of justice, right, and decency as against wrong, crime, and corruption. All women are not angels, there are bad women as well as good ones, but if a woman is bad, you usually find she became so through the evil influence of one of the so-called stronger (?) sex. Women should have a vote, women will have a vote, women must have a vote, if ever this country is to be what God Almighty intended it to be. Men have been running things for thousands of years, and a mighty poor job they made of it. It is time women took a hand now, and as soon as they do this land will be one of which we can all be proud of, a country to which Christ all be proud of, a country to which Christ could come without a blush. God bless the women and God speed the day when everyone of them may be given the power to cast a vote of them may be given the power to cast a vote.

This is a letter that will touch many a heart.

This is a letter that will touch many a heart.

CIRCLEVILLE, OHIO, October 11, 1908.

DEAR UNCLE CHARLIE:

I am writing you this letter in the interest of a little friend of mine, Elton Andrews.

Elton is fourteen, and last April he was looking for some old iron to sell, near the canning factory (he needed the money, as he is poor), and when he came home went to cross the raliroad tracks, and a freight car came backward unexpectedly and struck him. It cut his right leg off about the ankle, the poor boy said his foot itched, and he reached down to it and it was gone. They took him to the hospital and while they were waiting for the doctors to come, one of the men said to him, just to cheer him, "Oh, you will be all right when the doctors come!" but the poor boy said, "No, I won't, my foot is gone." There the poor child was worrying about his foot being gone, and he did not know when the doctors came they would have to take his arm off also. His right arm was so badly mangled they had to take it off three inches below the shoulder, and his right leg three inches below the knee; he also had other injuries, and every one thought he could not live, and it was reported over town that he was dead. Our paper spoke of him as being a bright and fine-looking boy, but said he had never had any advantages. He is now well as ever, but has not walked any since the 14th of last April. He is now at the Children's Home. He can write just lovely with his left hand. His school teacher, Miss Emily Yates, gave him his box of school crayons, and he can draw real nice flowers and different things. His grandmother gave him a heavy weight to hold his paper down while drawing or writing. He sold these drawings at the hospital while there, for ten cents each. He is saving his money for a cork leg. His school teacher said she would get the school children to contribute for the artificial limb, but I think she is so busy with her school she forgets him, but I don't. I send him Comfort every mo

I regret that this letter was too late for De-(CONTINUED ON PAGE 20.)

CASH BUYS BED

balance payable 50c per month. This BRARN RAIL IRON IEED, fitted with a cotton top mattreen and fine woven wire apring, all complete for $6.95 Shipped to your address on appreval up. $6.95 on receipt of $1.00 cash. After inspecting same, if satisfactory, you pay the balance 50c per month.

WE WILL People all ever the United States
IT RUST Ings on Credithy Mail from the Largest TRUST House-Furnishing Concern on Earth
YOU WE TRUST EVERYBOOV. NO INTEREST
YOU WE TRUST EVERYBOOV. NO INTEREST
YOU TO PAY. NO SECURITY ASKED. Whether you purchased a single article or an entire outil, we quarantee to sell it to you for less than if you paid
ALL. CA'H claewhere, and at the same time ALL EOW YOU THE TIME OF THE GOODS WHILE PAYING FOR THEM.
OUR BOUBLE SHIDHING QUARANTEE OF SATISFAC

PAYING FOR THEM.

OUR DOUBLE BINDING GUARANTEE OF SATISFAGTIOM goes with every purchase made from us. We ship every srticle ordered with the distinct agreement that if it does not prove entirely satisfactory in every respect, or if it is not the greatest value to be had for the price, your money wil be refunded, including freight charges both ways. runson, including freight charges both ways.

FREE WOOKAI CAIAGONF FREE
Mail us a postal card with your name and address and we will send you our casy payment credit entolegues absolutely Free of Charge. Catalogue A. a beautfully illustrated book in colors, of Fursiture, Carpeta, Raga, Lace Cartaina, etc., Catalogue B., shewing the best in our great line of Steel Hanges.
Base Burners and Heaters.

PEOPLE'S OUTFITTING CO.

We start you, furnishing complete small capital. Outside and aspired instructions as a surprising the regular theater and lecture circuit, size local fields in Churches, Public Schools, Lodges and General Public Gatherings. Our Entertainment Bunnity Catalogue relip explains special offer. Sent Free. Supply Catalogue vally explains special best 166, Chicago

GURED AT HOME.

FREE PREE My new illustrated book tells how you can quickly cure yourself of Palling Signi, Cataracts, if you wan in the representation of the rey of diseases at your own home. Book explains this remarkacter, if you wan in the present of the rey of diseases at your own home. Book explains this remarkacter, if you wan in the present of the remarkacter, if you wan in the present of the present

I Teach Sign Painting

SHOW-CARD Writing or Lettering by mail and guarantee success. Only field not over-crowded. My instruction is unequaled because practical, personal and thorough. Easy terms. Write for large Catalogue.

Write for large Catalogue.
CRAS. J STRONG, Pres.
DETROIT SCHOOL OF LETTERING,
Dept. 47, Detroit, Mich.
"Oldest and Largest School of Be Eind."

LEARN TELEGRAPHY BOOKKEEPING OR SHORTHAND

Anyone can learn it easily in a few works. We are unable to supply the demand for telegraph operators, bookkeepers and steongraphers. No charge for tuition until position is sourced. Write today for particulars. MIOMIGAN BUSINESS INSTITUTE, 540 Institute Building. Kalamasco, Mich.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 5.)

Now, dears, wishing you all the happiness you deserve, and hoping I have helped you in a small way, I remain your sister.

MRS. LOLA CHASE, North Bend, Wash.

DEAR COMPORT SISTERS:

I certainly enjoy reading Comport, and derive much benefit from the many recipes given in our corner. I am saving every one for future use. I have tried several of them and find them grand. I am a young housekeeper you understand, since I have only been married six months. My maiden name was Zuber, and you who read my letter bewill perhaps remember me when you scan these lines.

I have received several post cards from Comport readers and appreciate them. I have a kind unseen friend whom I have formed acquaintance with through the sisters corner, who lives in West Plains, Missouri. She is Miss Brimhall, perhaps Plains, Missouri. She is Miss Brimhall, perhaps some of you are personally acquainted with her. Mrs. J. N. Doremus. I hope you have recovered from your illness, and will be pleased to hear from you again. Thank you very much for your good wishes for my happiness in my new home. Sisters, do you all ever think you would like to visit the Home City of our grand paper? I do for one, and perhaps we might get a glimpse of "Uncle Charlie," who writes so many funny things.

Mrs. Bertha Echols, Box 305, Hot Springs, Ark.

Charlie," who writes so many funny things.

MES. BERTHA ECHOLS, BOX 305. Hot Springs, Ark.

DEAR SISTERS:

I am one of the younger ones, but as I am trying to do my part, maybe you'll make a place for me.

My mamma left me just about a year ago, and then my sisters married, so now I am here alone, keeping house for papa, and a seven-year-old sister. I can preserve fruit, and put up pickles. When I get time I enjoy fancy work, especially making paper flowers. As some of the sisters have mentioned this work, I will gladly help them out with directions, if they write inclosing stamp for reply.

I make wax flowers, and sometimes put them in gold dust, so every one will not be the same. I also crystalize grasses and make salt and starch work. Do any of you ever make things that others in your community don't have? I think it is so much nicer than to have everything alike.

I would like to hear from some of the young people, and would appreciate little souvenirs from all parts of the country. I will try to answer all letters.

Tena Wedell, Box 9, Pawnee Rock, R. F. D., 1, Kans.

Dear Mes. Wilkinson and Comport Sisters:

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

I am an old maid. I am five feet six inches tall, have dark hair and gray eyes. Now I wonder how many of the Comfort sisters will agree with what I have done. I am all alone in this world, so four years ago I took a little girl two years old to give a home. I have to work for our living, but I find the little one lots of company. She is bright, winsome, and full of mischief. I euloy her, and now would not give her up for anything in this world. I shall do my best by her, and try to teach her what is right, what do you think about it, sisters? I should like to hear from any of you, and would be very glad to receive a sample pattern of the maple leaf crocheted lace. I would also like white muslin blocks, ten by ten inches square, with a bird or animal stamped on each. I will return all favors in some way. DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMPORT SISTERS: Some way.

Miss Emma J. Cadwell, Sandstone, Pine Co.,

God bless you in your work. May the little one you have given a home make a splendid woman from your loving influence.—Editor.

DEAR SISTERS:

I have often thought of adding a line to this dear I have often thought of adding a line to this deauer.
If a hought of receive so much pleasure.
Many of the recipes I have tried and found perfect.
I should like to hear from persons living near La Veta, Colo, and hear all about that part of the country. I am alone on a farm with my two boys, but, of course, they are out most of the time, so I but, of course, they are out most of the time, so I get very lonesome.

I wish all would remember me on St. Valentine's day, and fill up my mail box. It would give me new thoughts and make a pleasant change for me.

Our farm is just one mile from the Kansas state line in Oklahoma. If any one wishes to know anything about this country, I will gladly answer all letters. Mrs. Minnie Dayron, Hardtner, Kans.

letters. Mrs. Minnis Dayron, Hardtner, Kans.

Dear Mrs. Wilkinson:

Like many others, I, too, have been a silent leoker-on and reaping the many benefits from the sisters' corner.

I am five feet five inches, and weigh about one hundred and thirty-five pounds. My home is in Kentucky, but I have recently moved here to Columbia, which is a little village, mostly a German settlement of about two thousand inhabitants.

Do any of the sisters know that linseed oil and lime water is excellent for burns and scalds? I also send in an economical recipe for making butter ples, which we all are very fond of. I would like a letter party on my birthday, March 12th, and would like drawnwork designs. My heart yearns for the dear shut-ins. I am writing to several. I will try and be as cheerful as I can, for who can tell what we each have to bear.

we each have to bear.

Dear Mrs. E. L. Culverswell. How frightened you must have been, and now how thankful you are that your dear ones were spared you, and I hope ere this you are on your feet once more.

MRS. TULL WINSCOTT, Columbia, R. F. D., 2, Ill.

DEAR COMPORT SISTERS:

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

When you hear my name you will think I am a boy, but I must tell you that I am not, but a girl of twenty-eight summers, five feet, eight inches high; have dark brown hair and eyes and weigh one hundred and seventeen pounds. My mother, my fitteen-year-old brother and I live on a farm. My father died last February and so we are very lonely. I can do all kinds of housework and fancy work. I will tell the sisters how I do cross-stitch: Lay any picture or leaf from a tree that you want for a pattern, mark all around with a pencil, and fill in inside the mark with cross-stitch. I work rose leaves this way on aprons and they are real pretty.

If anyone will bathe behind the ear with turpentine it will relieve earache and one will not have

It anyone will bathe behind the ear with turpentine it will relieve earache and one will not have to put anything in the ear. I hope all who read this will kindly remember me as soon as convenient with some little souvenir to pass away the lonely hours, and hope some few who live on the coast will send some little token of the sea. Wishing Comfort and its readers success, I will wait patiently to hear from you all.

ARTHUR WYATT, Ravenden Springs, Ark.

DEAR COMPORT SISTERS:

DEAR COMPORT SISTERS:

I come to bring a remedy for consumption to Ada Hudgens and other victims of this dread disease. In many cases if taken soon enough it has effected a cure.

Take a quart bottle and fill with a pint each of salt and whiskey. Shake thoroughly and take a tablespoonful three times a day.

My mother, Mrs. N. A. Jones, of this place, who is in poor health, would appreciate patterns or pieces in poor health, would appreciate patterns or pieces in any kind of faucy work. I would like to receive any kind of fower seeds and letters, and will try to return all favors.

return all favors EULA FLINN, Mount Pleasant, Texas.

EULA FLINN, Mount Pleasant, Texas.

DEAR SISTERS:
I have been a subscriber to Comport for several months, and like the paper very much. I am a Virginian by birth. I have been married nearly eleven years. The first five years of my married life were spent in Virginia and the rest in Atlanta, Gs. I am now on a visit to Virginia.

How many Comport sisters have ever visited Atlanta? I guess all that have been there will agree with me, that it is a beautiful place. It is a great valifored center. Atlanta has some nice buildings, have Piedmont Hotel is considered one of the finest intels in the South, the Kimball House is also quite nice. Atlanta has many tall buildings, I will name some of the tallest we have: The Empire, Century, Prudential, Equitable, Candler, Austell, Fourth National Bank and many others. We have some heautiful parks and places of amusement. If would be glad to hear from some eister in Atlanta, while I am in Virginia, will some sister please writer

I have one child, a little girl nine years old.
My husband is in Florida; he is Superintendent of Construction, his work takes him from home a will now give a description of myself. I am twenty-nine years old, have brown hair, gray eyes, fair complexion and weigh one hundred and eighty-four pounds, am above average height. I would be glad to hear from any of the sisters. My present address is Meridian, Va.

MRS. R. R. CRITTENDEN, Atlanta, Ga.

would be glad to hear from any of the sisters. My present address is Meridian, Va.

MRS. R. R. CRITTENDEN, Atlanta, Ga.

DEAR SISTERS:

Greetings to you all, another Christmas and New Year has come and gone since I last wrote. It seems a short time since I wrote you my Christmas and New Year letter, now it is 1907.

What a good time the housekeepers can have now that the holiday season is over, instead of planning fancy work, and Christmas gifts, we are arranging for the spring clothing, quilt making, and a general overhauling of the household supply of theets, tablecloths, etc., now is the time to do all that, good warm puffs can be made, pieced up out of garments that have been relegated to the rag bag, and attic; it is astonishing what can be done with a lot of old trumpery—even if pretty well worn, some goods will last quite awhile if made up into puffs, the lining of which can be of the same material; put in a couple of rolls of cotton batting (or more if desired), sew up the edges, put on frame, and tie with different colored yarns. If one has not a regular quilting frame make one. Take strips of any thin boards about two or three inches wide, the length of the quilt desired, say two yards for the width, and two and a half yards for the length of the quilt desired, say two yards for the width, and two and a half yards for the length of the active and the appropriate of these cold nights. Fasten the strips at the corners after winding them with strips of muslin, and baste the quilt on to them, tie all round the edges as far in as one can reach comfortably, then unfasten the corners and roll up, fasten again, and tie the center. The frame can be placed on the top of four chairs; it is easy enough after one gets started. Made out of cheesecloth they are lovely, or covered with pretty, bright calico, pink and white, then the part of the quiltin', serve doughnuts, pumpkin jee, and any old-fashioned dishes one likes.

Mrs. Eckle, Mrs. Miller, and others that have sent in patterns of handsome quilts, are probabl pining.

The blackest cloud offtimes has the brightest

The blackest cloud offtimes has the brightest silver lining."

Miss J. A. Morris, Diggs, Mathews Co., Va., writes me: "My home is fifty miles above Norfolk, Va., we have good fishing and oysters, and fine climate. I would like an elderly couple to board for the winter (an abundance of nice milk and butter), would board them cheap. I live alone, and would like a boy about sixteen years of age, would pay him wages, and we could work my fart_together, I have a uice pleasant home."

I have given Miss Morris's address, so anyone wishing, can write directly to her, her offer is certainly a fine one for a boy needing a home, and a chance to make something on the farm.

Mrs. W. S. Moore. The seed I sent you were tainly a fine one for a boy needing a home, and a chance to make something on the farm.

Mrs. W. S. Moore. The seed I sent you were Velvet Marigold; they were not worth your return gift, but please accept my thanks for same. I have been through Sanford.

Mrs. Lydia Eckle, Lincoln, Nebraska, writes me: "I have written minety-six letters inclosing shadow embroidery patterns, and have thirty letters to answer and patterns to make. I have bought yards and yards of Persian lawn, and skein after skein of silk and worked these patterns for the sisters. I have never received five cents that I did not send back full value. I cut and mailed over one hundred tulip-quilt patterns; there are still more to answer and patterns to cut and send. Anyone that has sent me stamps and a request for patterns will all receive them, but it takes time. Of course some of the letters may have miscarried, but do tail the sisters if there is a single one of them that has written me and inclosed stamps (that have not heard from me), to write me again." Mrs. Eckle certainly is and has been kind to many of us. It is lots of work to make samples and patterns; it not only uses up time but money. I surely think we all owe Mrs. Eckle a strong vote of thanks in our behalf.

Mrs. Moulton. Your workbasket in the November number took my eye and fingers; that wall poccket with our dear Comport in it also appealed mrs. Mouton. Your workbasket in the November number took my eye and fingers; that wall pocket with our dear Comfort in it also appealed to me; you certainly are a genius if you designed that apron bag, that is fine. Some of my friends shall have one in the near future.

Mrs. Cunningham. Do come again.

Mrs. Heath. I certainly trust you may hear from your friend. What a comfort Compour is in bring-ing old friends together; what times you and "Ida" will have raking up old ties. Do let us know if you near from her.

Mrs. Ingraham. You echo my sentiment.

"Angry words, Oh! let them never from the tongue unguarded slip, Let the heart's best impulse ever check them ere they soil our lips," is one of the good old songs.

Hilda Sunshine. What a sweet, pretty name, given you, no doubt, for your Christian acts. Your idea of the umbrella for the Christmas tree was Mrs. Eason. There is always room for one more and you have found "the way." But was it rough and uneven? Your answer will be "yes, but the reward?" Oh! it is worth striving for. It is beaureward?" Oh! it is worth striving for. It is beau-tiful to see a young couple starting out with those divine principles; you will surely succeed. I cer-tainly hope that your wedded life just begun, may tainly hope that your wedded life just begun, may be a long and happy one.

Mrs. Myrtle Rickard. If you will write Mrs. W. A. Partridge, 36 South St., Troy, New York, she will give you the address of a Rickard. I do not know the address, or first name, or would give it here. Inclose stamped, directed envelope to Mrs. Partridge.

Mrs. Adam Mackensie. Why not write to Mrs. Lydia Eckle. Address above.

Mrs. Mattie Ray. Find requested recipes in another column.

other column.

mrs. matter key. Find requested recipes in another column.

Mrs. Pease. I have a bulb with two horns as you describe, that I procured in Florida (Jacksonville, I think).

"Cordalia Malone" is all right from start to finish. I also have her sister, "Bedelia." Thanks to the Compour people for the music they have sent us the past year, I would not have had such a fine collection but for them, and so much nice reading for these winter evenings.

The book "St. Elmo" is a beauty, bound in cloth, with portraits of St. Elmo and Edna on the cover, for only seven subscribers. It is just the thing for a birthday or holiday gift, besides sending the best magazine printed for the money, to seven people.

a birthday or holiday gift, besides sending the best magazine printed for the money, to seven people, thereby making them happy every month for a year. I am much interested in "The Hidden Wedding Treasure," as it pertains to the late terrible earthquake. I save the papers until the stories are completed, then read them aloud to an admiring audience in the evening. The audience usually smokes during the performance, but that does not annoy. "J. A. D." was well cured long ago, and she confesses that she enjoys the pipe or cigar almost as much as the smoker; then the said audience does look so comfortable and happy, you know."

know.
"J. A. D." (Mrs. VAN DYKE,) Orange, Mass.

Comforting Hints from the Sisters

To CLEAN GLASS AND MIRRORS. After washing wipe off with a cloth wet in alcohol.

STOVE POLISH when mixed with turpentine and applied in the usual manner is blacker, more glossy and more durable than when mixed with any other liquid. The turpentine prevents rust, and when put on an old rusty stove will make it look as well as rew.

To BRIGHTEN GILT FRAMES. Take sufficient flour of sulphur to give a golden tinge, to about one and one half pints of water, and in this boil four or five bruised onions, or garlic, which will answer the same purpose. Strain off the liquid and with it, when cold, wash with a soft brush, any gliding which requires restoring, and when dry it will come out as bright as new work.

Out as oright as new work.

To cure astema. Secure a muskrat skin and wear it over the lungs, placing the fur side next to the body. This will bring speedy relief and if worn long enough a cure.

To prevent unused stoves prom rusting. Apply a thin coating of three parts of lard and one par rosin melted together.

Mrs. Jennie Arnold, Petersburg, Ind.

To give a NICE gloss. Add one half teaspoonful of Epsom salts to starch and the clothes will also iron easier.

FOR A BURN OR SCALD. Use a little wet baking soda Mrs. J. A. Lash, Auburn, Ind.

FOR A SORE THEOAT. Dissolve a tablespoonful of salt in a half cup of vinegar and use as a gargle.
IVA J. MORRIS, BOX 50, Dexter City, R. F. D., 2, Ohio.

FOR A BEE STING, or bite of a poisonous reptile make a poultice of red clay and coal oil and bind on the affected parts. A good remedy for chicken cholera is white oak bark kept in their drinking water. Mrs. A. T. Cable, Essex, Ark.

To CUBE FELONS. Take slippery elm bark, pound up and soak in cold water, dip a cloth in the water and apply to felon. Apply fresh cloths every half hour. Cook a piece of bread crust, cool and use as a poultice. This is excellent. To cure hiccoughs. Take a few drops of vinegar

To REMOVE PRESH PAINT FROM THE FLOOR. Cover with vinegar and wipe up with a cloth, repeat if necessary, using a clean cloth.

To whites clothes. Put one tablespoonful of turpentine in each boiler of water.

To make starch clothes iron easy, add a pinch of sait to your starch. TO HELP KEEP PRESERVES. Wrap each glass jes in newspapers. ALICE E. MASON, Berryman, Mo. To prevent a Lamp's snoking. Soak the wick in vinegar and dry it well before using.

To TEST NUTMEGS. Prick them with a pin and if cood the oil will instantly apread around the punc-

To CLEANSE MATTING. Wipe off with a cloth wrong from salt water. This prevents from turning yellow.

To REMOVE GREASE from broth for the sick, pass a clean white wrapping paper over quickly, using several pieces until all is removed. BESTHA LARE, Pleasantville, Vanango Co., Pa.

Tested Recipes from Comfort Sisters The writer's name or initials will appear at the end of eac or more of the recipes.—Editor.

Sweet Potato Pie

Boil four large-sized, sound sweet potatoes, then peel, and mash them very fine with a fork. Beat three eggs, and the yolks of two eggs very light, add this to three fourths cup of milk, one teaspoonful of salt, and one half cup of sugar (if you like the pie sweeter use more sugar,) add eggs and milk. have a shallow-lined pie plate ready, with a good pie paste. Have the above ingredients well mixed, and bake; when finished, beat the whites of two eggs very light, add confectioners' sugar, spread on pie, return to oven to slightly brown.

Squash Pie

Steam the squash until very soft, and strain through your sieve. To one heaping cup of squash take one pint of milk, three eggs, one cup of squash Mix together ground ginger and grated nutmeg, so you have of the two together two thirds of a teaspoonful, and one half teaspoonful of salt. Bake without a top crust. Mrs. Josephine Linden.

Butter Ple

One tablespoonful of butter creamed with one half cup sugar, one egg thoroughly beaten, and flour or corn starch to thicken, with just enough water or milk to line a pie pan.

MRS. TULL WINSCOTT.

Cream Cake

Whites of five eggs, one and one half cups of sugar, one half cup of butter, one half cup of sweet milk, three and one half cups of flour, one large leaspoonful of baking powder.

The Cream

Yolks of the five eggs, scant cup of sugar, one pint of sweet milk, boil till thick, cool, flavor, and spread between layers.

Queen of Puddings

One pint of biscuit crumbs, one quart sweet milk, butter size of an egg, one teacupful of sugar, yolks of four eggs, one teacupful of boiling water on biscuit crumbs to make soft. When done spread top with preserves, make an icing of the whites of the eggs, flavor to taste, spread over the top and brown. MRS. J. H. WAGGONER, Huntland, Tenn.

For the Invalid's Breakfast

For the Invalid's Breakfast

Try a steamed egg. Fill a cup half full of hot water, break in the egg, carefully, so as not to disturb the yolk, set over a boiling kettle or in a pan of boiling water, cook until the white sets; in the mean time cut a round piece of bread, toast crisp, dip into hot salted water, put on a warm, pretty plate, dot with bits of butter and place on it the steamed egg, or the egg can be right from the cup, first pouring off the water.

Bake an apple, remove skin and core, place on a little fancy dish and serve with a tiny pitcher of cream and sugar in a diminutive sugar bowl. Baked potato is nice, remove from the skin and serve with butter, salt and pepper, some like sweet or sour cream on baked potatoes.

Salt codish makes a nice change occasionally for an invalid, soak in water, when soft pick to pieces, and boil up in milk thickened with a little flour, adding butter, and seasoning, as desired, serve on toast or with baked potato. Always give an invalid tea, coffee or whatever they have to drink in the prettiest cup and saucer you have, a clean napkin on the tray, and the food served in a dainty way will often tempt their capricious appetites; do not consider anything too much trouble, that gives them a moment's pleasure. A Butler's tray with folding legs, is a fine and convenient article to have in any family, if a meal has to be carried to a sick room. I know of one that has been used by several invalids at different times, and is still in existence. It was bought one May morning, together with the first strawberries of the season, and what a surprise for the poor sufferer; that was way back in 1885, and is still bearing its load of daintly prepared food to the different members of the family when required. New for something for those with good appetites.

Liver Hask

Liver Hash

Boil the liver, chop finely, allow a cup of the chopped liver to a quart of milk, put milk on stove, when boiling add flour wet up in cold milk to thicken, season, butter (a good, generous piece), add the liver and serve with toast, pouring the hash over it, or baked or mashed potato.

Old-fashioned Fried Salt Pork

Slice the pork thin, freshen in cold water, then fry crisp, remove pork, add flour to thicken, to the fat left in the frying-pan (it will melt and dissolve readily in the hot fat), then add milk and eook to the consistency of thick cream. Pork is nice also freshened, dipped in beaten egg, then corn meal, and fried in hot fat. All meat gravies can be made the same as above, adding water if desired instead of milk, pork, lamb, mutton and even sausage gravy is good; if browned gravies are desired, put some flour on a tin and brown in a hot oven, and mae the same as the waterword flour.

Good old-fashiened corn meal mush is good for supper these cold nights. Have the water in the kettle boiling, sit up the meal in cold water and add to the boiling water (to which has been added salt to taste), boil until it is a smooth batter, then keep stirring and cook slowly one hour, it can be set on the back part of the steve, but stir occasionally to keep from burning, eat with milk; what is left turn into a shallow dish, slice and fry in hot fat for breakfast.

Sweet Crackers

Two and one half cups sugar, one pint sweet milk, three tablespoonfuls animonia powder (in milk), one teaspoonful lemon oil, one egg or whites of two eggs, one cup lard.

Mrs. E. LAWRENCE, Hunter, Okla.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 18.)

Need Secretaries!

How a Woman in Every Neighborhood may Furnish her Home Beautifully, FREE OF COST.

NEW Furniture for your home from top to bottom! It would cost a lot of money to get all that furniture—and especially the kind you'd like to have—hundreds of dollars.

Pretty big pay for a few hours of pleasant work that you could do without any prepara-

Both the handsome pieces of furniture here shown, are sam-ples of what you can get for act-ing as Secretary of a Walker Club-or you can select from 1,400 other articles fully de-scribed in our catalogue. tion.
But that's just what

But that's just what we're offering you.

We need a Secretary in your neighborhood—among your most intimate women friends. We don't ask you to do any work whatever among strangers.

All we ask you to do is to tell ten women you know how much they can save by buying their Household Supplies—Food Products, Soaps, Toilet Articles etc.—things they pay out a big share ot the family income for, every week—how much they can save by buying these things from the Walker factories at Pittsburg.

They'll get the idea. They'll thank you for the favor. Because we can grove to you and you can prove to them that we furnish you better Household Necessities than they are now buying at half the price they are now paying.

the price they are now paying.

And you and they get beautiful household furnishings—Chairs, Tables, Desks, an select from icles fully deatalogue.

And you and they get beautiful household furnishings—Chairs, Tables, Desks, Rugs, Chinaware, Silverware, Stoves—all of the finest quality and best workmanship, as presents.

We can afford to do this because we sell direct to the constance.

We can afford to do this because we sell direct to the constance its, etc. We give you the saving. Our customers get twice as much from us as from storekeepers for the same money. We have millions of customers. Our factories cover fifteen acres of ground. We can afford to take the minimum of profit. Investigate us! We've been in business 70 years. We'd be glad to have you know all about us. Now don't let some other woman get ahead of you. Drop us a postal card asking for our Secretaryship plan and our Big, Free, Illustrated Catalogue before you put this magazine away. De It New.

W. & H. WALKER, Club Department 94, PITTSBURG, PA.

The Great Chicago Mystery or,

The Man With Many Aliases

Copyright, 1906, by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Inc.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Crit Truman and his assistant, Ralph Dayton are called from New York to Chicago, by the Chief of Police to assist in suppressing crime. The leader is variously described, and one asserts he has a harelip. For a moment the men are silent, then the well-trained minds recall the recepture of "The Man with Many Aliases." Jim Holmes, Chris Dougherty, and the blow which splits him from the nostril to his mouth, and which, when healed, might pass for a harelip. "How is our work?" asks Crit. "Are the officials satisfied with the return of the money?" The Manking of a confirmed criminal. There are several cases in their line. There's a missing girl and a jewelry robbery on Fifth Ave., but they can be left for a few days. Truman makes up his they can be left for a few days. Truman makes up his they can be left for a few days. Truman makes up his hundred to catch this man who twice escapes, and be tells Ralph to wire the Police, get Peter, and we'll outline a general plan, will each to see Salvis Lyster, and solve the value of the seasons and several plan, will each to see Salvis Lyster was utterly prospected.

Author of "The Mark of the Beast"

Author of "The Mark of the Beast"

Author of "The Mark of the Beast"

Ferris' face had changed slightly, but he rode about.

Ferris' face had changed slightly, but he rode about.

Ferris' face had changed slightly, but he rode about.

Ferris' face had changed slightly, but he rode about.

Ferris' face had changed slightly, but he rode about.

Ferris' face had changed slightly, but he rode about.

Ferris' face had changed slightly, but he rode about.

Ferris' face had changed slightly, but he rode about.

Ferris' face had changed slightly, but he rode about.

Ferris' face had changed slightly, but he rode about.

Ferris' face had changed slightly, but he rode about.

Ferris' face had changed slightly, but he rode about.

Ferris' face had changed slightly, but he rode about.

Ferris' face had changed slightly, but he rode about.

Ferris' face had changed slightly, but he rode about.

mind to catch this man who twice escapes, and he tells Rulph to wire the Police, get Peter, and we'll outline a general plan.

Percy Mandeville calls to see Sylvia Lyster; she tells him the call must be final. He insists she encourages him. She calls a servant to show him out. Sylvia, befriending Kathie Mandeville, confides to her that her husband makes a proposal of marriage to her. Sylvia still loves her husband. Custer Quex is engaged to Sylvia; he will go to her at night. It's the last happy afternoon he has for many a long day. While Crit and Ralph are on the way to Chicago, the former has a telegram. "Percy Mandeville disappeared. Think he went to Chicago. Took Sylvia Lyster with him," signed by the President of the bank. It's the girl, whose people wants Crit to look up. The Chief of Police tells Crit of a hold-up in a saloon, a month previous. Four guys, all masked, line the customers up—nothing is overlooked—even a pair of diamond cuff buttons is taken. As they emerge from City Hall they are joined by Peter, who is waiting. He tells Truman, Jim Hollis swears if he gets free he'll never let you take him alive. The chief tells Truman of a crook, Christie Ferris, who has three or four names, although only twenty, who is in for "dipping." Truman "sweate" him and asks him, "Do you want to know who it was got you in here this last time?"

CHAPTER IV.

A KEEN BIT OF WORK.

O I want to know what? Do I? Say, just put me in a bare thirty-foot room with de guy dat did me for ten minutes, and there won't be 'nough left for a decent funeral." Crit smiled at the lad's vehemence, as he re-

Crit smiled at the lad's vehemence, as he replied:

"Well Christie, it's Jim Hollis."

"Jim Hollis! 'Four time' Jim. Oh, dat dog!
Dat dirty, lyin' dog! I'll get even wit him if it takes me a t'ousand years."

"You can do it in a little less than a thousand years, Christie," Crit said pleasantly, "and what's more, you can do something else if you like, get out of here into the bargain."

The prisoner's eyes brightened.

"How kin dis happen?"

"This way, Christie, I want you to locate Jim Hollis for me. Promise to take me to him, and give me the first chance, and I'll see that you're released immediately."

The prisoner jumped to his feet.

that you're released immediately."

The prisoner jumped to his feet.
"In a minute," the crook cried, "oh, wot a glorious time they is goin' to be!"

The young fellow was all of a tremble and could scarcely contain himself, as Crit stepping into the outer room, readily obtained his release, then bidding the chief good by, and promising to let him hear good news before long, he and his associates took the grateful Ferris with them.

long, he and his associates took the grace.
Ferris with them.
"Good news, Truman?" the chief asked, wondering with all his might what methods Crit had used upon the prisoner. The crook, although somewhat excited, had not gone through any agony of mind, and yet the chief knew that Crit had gained an important point of some kind.

"No news, unless good news," Crit laughed, as the four left and boarded a State street car, as the four left and boarded a State street car, going south.

Once seated, the prisoner asked curiously:
"I say, Mister, did 'Four-time' Jim give you de double cross?"

Crit exchanged glances with his associates, then he replied slowly:

"Yes, Ferris, he once gave me the double cross, too, but it's the last," and knowing him as they did, Ralph and Peter could aimost have pitied Jim Hollis, The Man with Many Aliases.

CHAPTER V,

...When the little party boarded a State street car, Crit sat by Ferris, on the front seat of the grip, with Ralph and Peter on the other front seat, which, strange to say, were vacant, the morning being a little cold. Ferris had been the first to board, so he at on the outside of the seat on the inside of the car, so that constantly his face was fanned by passing cars.
Ralph as he sat, by leaning back, could get a good view of the face of the young tough, and mentally he shook his head.

"A bad lot," he sized him up.

A bad lot he was, with his heavy features, sullen manner, eyes distorted from constant use of morphine, and his hunched shoulders, a man already for crime, although but a boy in years. There was not one redeeming feature about him; degenerate was written all over him, and yet Christie Ferris had no really repulsive features, and was well-built and veloped:

Ralph eyed him closely, for the young detective had very serious doubts of this crook, whom he readily recognized was "cheap" as the chief had stated, but who might prove dangerous nevertheless.

Acar, northbound passed. For some reason A car, northbound passed. For some reason or other, both cars slowed up a little, and Ralph saw a young fellow, about the age of Ferris, in one of the single seats of the grip, start, look intently at Crit, and then make a slight gesture. All he did was to make a motion toward his face with his outstretched fingers, as though to signify bars, and Ralph, intently saw a change come over intently watching, saw a change come over

It was a very slight change, but Ralph saw it, and appreciated the fact that in some way Crit bad been recognized, and that the lad who had done so, had passed the news to Ferris. Probably the gesture meant that they were de tective, Ralph did not know

By Rosser W. Cobbe

"I ain't goin' to take all dese guys, dat's sure."

"All right," Crit returned pleasantly.

"Send dem off," he persisted.

"Sure. Boys skiddoo!" Crit commanded, and Ralph and Peter obediently swung off as the car stopped at seventeenth street, and crossed the street, as though to wait for the next northbound car. However, they did nothing of the kind. As soon as the car bearing Crit and the young crook pulled away, they hastened back, and jumped on a car which was closely following the one in front.

Drawing his hat over his eyes. Ralph, atanding on the step running along the side of the grip car, could easily watch the actions of those on the other car.

At twenty-second street, he saw Crit and Ferris jump off, and walk west on twenty-second street, and it is needless to say that just before the car reached the crossing at that street, he and Peter did likewise, but when they turned the corner they could see nothing of the two.

Barely half a minute had elapsed, for the cars of the two.

Barely half a minute had elapsed, for the cars were very close together, but Crit and his companion had vanished.

"Looks bad," Peter said dismally.

"Come on in," Ralph said, drawing Peter into the saloon on the corner. A glance showed that the room did not contain the two for which the roung detailing were looking, and also the young detectives were looking, and although they made a pretty careful canvass of the saloons in the district, which are many, they were equally unsuccessful.

"Crit was recognized!" Ralph exclaimed at last, and then he told Peter of what he had observed.

"Gosh, I didn't know we were national char-

"Gosh, I didn't know we were national characters!" Peter exclaimed.
"Oh, Crit's known everywhere, but I did think he could take a ride on State street, Chicago, without every bum crook marking him," Ralph grumbled.
"Well, what's next?" Peter asked.
The two were pretending to drink in one of the worst saloons in the district, as they talked, and both felt discouraged. They were sure that the boy had been playing Crit.
"Still, it's a hundred to one shot, that Crit tumbled, too," Peter said and Ralph agreed that this was possible.

Just then their attention was attracted by a

Just then their attention was attracted by a

Although it was not yet noon, he was much the worse for liquor, and seemed to be giving his companions all they wanted to hold him down.

-- He seemed well supplied with money, for he newcomer.

was constantly pulling out a roll as big as his arm, and flourishing it, would invite the whole room to "have one on him." As often as he did this, one of the men with him, a burly fellow, with a red face, and flaxen hair, would take it from him, stuff it back in his pocket, and say:
"Aw, shut up!"

This was repeated at least a dozen times, intil Ralph and Peter were becoming tired of the disgusting exhibition and were just leaving, when Ralph clutched Peter by the arm.

"Mandeville," Peter whispered under his breath breath.

The two detectives resumed their seats, and called for another round.

To find the employe of the bank which had been robbed by him, in a low dive, flourishing such a roll, was surprising even to Ralphand Peter Peter.
The other man with Mandeville and the red-

The other man with Mandeville and the red-faced fellow was wiry, an undersized ill-ponditioned individual with crook written all over him. His companions called him "Fake." He was known to the police as "Fake" Pete. The red-faced man was "Snowflake" Mike, evidently so called on account of his extremely florid face, which was not the result of drinking, but of exposure to all kinds of weather. In earlier days, "Snowflake" Mike had evidently been a sailor.

"Crit was right," Ralph thought. "The

The two men were talking, and seemed wor-

"Aw, shut up!" "Snowfiake" said wearily once more, returning the money he grabbed from the drunken man, and thrusting it into his pocket. "See here, you gazabo, if the 'old man' sees you this way, you'll go out of business for

"Go on, I ain't afraid of your 'old man' or Jim Hollis either," replied the drunken man. Ralph and Peter exchanged quick glances. They had struck a cine at last.

CHAPTER VI.

A MYSTERIOUS LETTER.

"You cannot make me believe anything of the kind, Wilkins, and you might as well stop it right here," and the speaker, Custer Quex, glared at one of the Central Office men.

glared at one of the Central Office men.

"All right, if you say so, but then there are the proofs."

"But I saw Mandeville last night, and Miss Lyster disappeared a week ago. I tell you, none of you men at Headquarters is worth his salt. If Crit Truman were here we'd get some light."

"Where is he?" Wilkins asked.

"Can't cetch him believe he's more to

"Can't catch him, believe he's gone to hicago. Mr. Lyster telegraphed him care of Chicago. the Pennsylvania, but I don't think he'll come back," and the lover sighed. One short week before he was talking joyously over the telephone to Sylvia Lyster, now he was consulting

"I do not know exactly, some girl Miss Lyster was befriending."
"Send for her, I want to ask her a few questions," Wilkins said abruptly, and the young man obeyed. Mr. Lyster was utterly prostrated, and so Custer Quex, by virtue of his engagement, was in charge at the Lyster mansion.
When Kathie Mandeville came into the room, her face was pale, and she was trembling.
At first the detective was inclined to be rough, but Quex soon stopped that, and she was treated with more consideration.

The girl Sylvia had befriended was very quiet utterly denying that she knew anything about her disappearance, until suddenly the detective said:

"I have seen you before now I remember it

"I have seen you before, now I remember, it was at a show with Mandeville."

The poor woman flushed painfully, but before she could say anything, the detective continued.

tinued:
"You see you didn't stand much show against her, for she eloped with your beau."
"What do you mean?" demanded the angry

'Sylvia Lyster has run away with Mandeville."

"That is an infamous lie!" was the quiet

"That is an infamous lie!" was the quiet reply.

"Pretty harsh words to use to me young woman!" thundered the detective.

"Not in this case, for you are telling a lie. Sylvis was incapable of eloping with anyone, and especially with him."

"And why particularly with him?" There was a decided sneer in the detective's voice.

"Because he is my husband, and she knew it," was the astounding reply.

The detective looked at her for a moment, then said quite gently for him:

"Poor girl! I guess you have your troubles like the rest of us. Now tell me, did she receive any letters that upset her? Don't be afraid to reply."

Kathie hesitated, but Custer Quex said gently:

gently:
"Tell us if you know anything," and she then said in a low tone:

said in a low tone:

"She did get a registered letter. She came back upstairs from signing her name for it, and stopped in my sitting-room, excusing herself for opening it. At first she looked astonished, then her face grew very pale, and at last she looked as though she were going to faint, and then she was gone and that's the last I ever saw of the poor, dear thing," and the girl Sylvia had so befriended burst into tears.

CHAPTER VII.

"HANG-EYE" JOHN.

Ralph and Peter were listening to the conversation very intently, although to have looked at them, slouching at the dirty table, none would have thought them other than the others in the room.

"Guess he's about all in," suggested "Fake"

"Been hitting the booze hard for some time. the other man replied nodding at Mandeville.

The defectives remembered the young man, now huddled at a table in one of the lowest dives in Chicago, as a clean, honest-faced young fellow, who enjoyed the full confidence of his employers, and who had a bright future before him.

In their investigations while on the case of

In their investigations while on the case of the bank robbery, they had discovered many shings about this Percy Mandeville. His an instant's notice, suddenly dashed fordownward road had been steep, his pace rapid. The beginning seemed to be an unfortunate winning of a hundred to one shot less than a year before. After that he had played the ponies regularly; stimulated his jaded and overstrained nerves with whiskey, and when his own money gave out, had robbed those who trusted him.

"Crit was right," Ralph thought. "The bank ought to have prosecuted. It's putting a premium on crime to overlook such degen one black eye behind.

premium on crime to overlook such degen-

Mandeville had sunk down in his chair, dead to the world, and his two companions were evidently growing impatient. They had ordered drinks several times, but the detectives noticed that they sid not swallow them, but tossed the liquor in the cuspidor, as did they themselves. After this action had been repeated, the two detectives felt they had hit upon a clue, which was a very valuable one. Jim Hollis never drank himself while on a job, nor did he permit his associates to do so. mit his associates to do so.

"I wonder if they can be a part of the gang," Peter said, and Ralph replied: "May be.

At last "Fake" Peterose and sauntered toward the door. At the bar, he stopped and ex-changed a word or two with the man behind the bar, then passed into the street.

A moment later, he returned, and hastened back to the table at which Mandeville and "Snowflake" Mike were seated.

"Here, wake up!" he said, roughly, shaking the drunken man. "You can't reach him," his companion sheered.

"'Four-time,' is coming," the man whispered, still shaking the sleeping fool.

Ralph and Peter had almost forgotten Crit.

for they felt that luck was on their side in directing them to this hole.

"It's time," growled "Sno "It's time," growled "Snowflake" Mike, who joined his companion in his effects to rouse "What's he want him for?" asked "Fake"

Pete.
The other shook his head. "Noo Yorker, maybe's the reason," "Fake"
Pete sneered.

A laugh, low and cunning was the only reply, and the detectives realized that these Chicago crooks were jealous of Eastern criminals.

Suddenly a figure came into the room, and hurrying up to the group of three, caused the two who were working on the sleeping man to relax their exertions. It was with difficulty that Ralph and Peter

It was with difficulty that Ralph and Peter refrained from an exclamation, for the newcomer was Ferris.

They could hear all he said, and they saw he was laboring under considerable excitement.

"Hurry up and come on, dis is no place for youse," were his first words.

"Four-time' said bring him here," the other men muttered.

"He's sent me here to tall youse dat dere's a

"He's sent me here to tell youse dat dere's a new one on de case."
"Who?"

"Crit Truman."

The effect of this name was magical.

The crooks looked frightened out of their lives. They actually trembled, and then "Fake" Pete burst into a perfect torrent of abuse and profanity, which lasted until he was stopped by Ferris, who told in a few words of his libera-tion by Crit.
"And you bit?" sneered "Snowflake."

Ferris nodded. Then he told of his warning received from the crook on the passing car. The men applauded, and then "Fake" Pete asked:

"You took him-

plauded, and then "Fake" Pete asked:

"You took him—?"

"Yep."

How the listening detectives wished they knew what that significent pause stood for.

"And Four-time?" asked "Fake."

"Wants youse at de 'odder place," was the quick response, and the two unquestioningly started to obey.

By this time Mandeville was sufficiently aroused to be pulled up and started for the door, although he still exhibited a tendency to treat the crowd, and an instant later, the strange group would have left the saloon, had not Ferris's eyes fallen upon Ralph and Peter.

In their extreme anxiety to search for Crit, the young detectives had not assumed any disguise, and save for the change in their appearance produced by their slouching attitude, and the sullen, sodden expressions on their faces, they were much as they had been when on the grip with Ferris.

This crook might be "cheap," but circumstances had made him keen as a knife, and he instantly recognized them.

He wasted no time in words. Like a flash he made the same gesture Ralph had seen the

He wasted no time in words. Like a flash he made the same gesture Ralph had seen the crook on the passing car give, and the place was in an uproar.

The situation was a dangerous one. The detectives were cornered in a low and unknown dive among the most desperts of criminals.

dive, among the most desperate of criminals. They knew nothing of the place, nor how many secrets its walls might contain. They were hampered by not being acquainted with the territory in which the saloon was located, but all this did not daunt them. When the row broke out, they simply looked up, and seemed to be trying to rouse themselves sufficiently to join in the fum.

This did not impose upon the creeks how.

join in the fun.

This did not impose upon the crooks, however, for they made a rush, and Ralph and Peter seeing that the game was up, abandoned any attempt to pass for other than they were.

Like a flash they were on their feet, facing a dozen as ugly crooks as anyone could find within the city's confines.

"Fly Muge" was heard on every side.

Guns were drawn, several knives flashed, but

Guns were drawn, several knives flashed, but neither Ralph nor Peter felt alarmed. They had been through so many scenes like this that they knew no fear.

"Shall we rush them?" Peter asked.

Ralph nodded.
While still looking perfectly indifferent, and one black eye behind.

Among those who received a tap from the hard fist of the New York detectives, was Ferris, whose cheek bone on the right side of his face, was laid have ace, was laid bare. His curses were loud and flerce, and he swore by all that a crook holds dear to revenge him-by all that a crook holds dear to revenge him-self upon those whom he considered his enemies, "Dey'll wish dey never run across dis bunch," he said again and again.

"Fake" Pete and "Snowflake" Mike were more interested in what would be the verdict of their leader for allowing the detectives to escape.

"'Four-time' will eat us," "Fake" Pete said dismally.

dismally.

"If you put him wise to their being here, he ought to be satisfied," said a strange voice, and turning the crowd saw a man of heavy build, with a drooping left eye, a bad scar across his forehead, and long, black, dark hair, which fell over a greasy velvet coat collar.

For a moment they were dazed, then a cry went up from every throat:

"'Hang-eve' John."

"Hang-eye' John."

The crooks were almost wild with delight.
"Hang-eye" John was known to everyone of them, as one of the most desperate and skillful leaders the criminals of Chicago had ever known. Six months before he had been sentenced to tan were at Joiet and wet here he tenced to ten years at Joliet, and yet here he was among them, well, smiling, and himself.
"Catch on to de hair," cried one of the crowd in admiration. (CONTINUED ON PAGE 22.)

The Hidden Wedding Treasure

The Mystery of the San Francisco Earthquake

Copyright, 1906; by W H. Gannett, Publisher, Inc.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Rosalie Bronson, one of the belies of San Francisco, is to marry Ireton Kensington, who whispers, "Tomorrow evening, my darling, you will be my bride, and all the world will envy me my wife," and me my husband," she answers. As she utters these words, John Bronson, her father, who has worked his way from a penniless boy to a wealthy man tells how he made his first fifty dollars, and that with all that has come from it in bright twenty dollar gold pleece is to be her wedding gift. Judge Kensington asks, "Is it wise to put any great amount of money where it may be stolen?" Bronson tells the Judge not to worry. More than a million from fifty dollars! Bronson says every cent is made honesely. "Men of the Western coast have chances such as come to few. It is the Garden Spot of the World. San Francisco will be the metropolis of America." Lawrence Felton, a New Yorker, thinks no city can equal New York. The lovers part for the night. Ireton Kensington and his father start for the Palace Hotel. They meet Gerald Phayeton and Lawrence Felton, who tell Ireton his punishment is to stay with them all night. Violet Hilton is to be maid of honor and later will marry Gerald Phayeton. Lawrence Felton is attracted to a beautiful widow. Once they had been nearer and dearer. Suddenly the three are thrown on their faces and before they can rise a tall building falls, burying Gerald beneath its ruins. Ireton rushes to the Palace Hotel and bears his father out, while Lawrence Felton goes o Mrs. Roton's rescue. They hear, "This way, quick!" and looking up see Rosalie in a motor. Both men turn, and Rosalie hears her lover say "My father," while Lawrence Felton cries "My Wife," and Rosalie knows his secret. They start for Noh Hill, when the auto is seized by order of the police to convey the sick and injure. Lawrence Felton cries "My Wife," and Rosalie knows his secret. They start for Noh Hill, when the auto is seized by order of the police to convey the sick and injure. Lawrence Felton cries "My Wife," SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

CHAPTER X.

THE WEDDING OF ROSALIE.

ARELY had Ireton recovered sufficiently to recognize his other friends, he knew Rosalie instantly, when the eager questionings were broken upon by a silvery voice asking:

"Why, my dear children, I am so glad to see you," and they saw the benignant face of the clergyman who was to have married Rosalie and Ireton. Having been returning from the bed of a dying man that morning, during the first shock, he wore his cassock.

"Oh. Bishop," Rosalie cried. "We want you so much. Will you marry us, Ireton and me tonight, just as we intended? If there are more shocks, we want to die together."

"Of course I will marry you immediately, you are right," was his dignified reply.

"And we too," Gerald said quietly, and the Bishop gravely inclined his head.

"May I speak to you a few moments?" Felton nsked, and while he was explaining to the clergyman his and Katherine's case, a very pitiful thing occurred, which was always to be recalled with moist eyes by the three husbands. A girl, who unfortunately bore upon her face traces of the life she led, and a man, whose face had been scared by the horrors of the day, came up, and the girl threw herself at Rosalie's feet sobbing:

"Can't we be married, too? If you'll let us in, we'll live straight honest we will, won't we, Jim?" and the man with eyes too drawn for tears, hoarsely whispered:

"So help me, God."

The Bishop immediately assented when asked by Rosalie; and the three men, Ireton, Gerald and Lawrence made no objection, but not so the old Judge.

His objections were stilled for the moment by the reverent voice of the Bishop, saying, "Let us pray."

Everyone felt better after that fervent prayer, even the quarrelsome old Judge, and his "amen"

the reverent voice of the Bishop, saying, "Let us pray."

Everyone felt better after that fervent prayer, even the quarrelsome old Judge, and his "amen" was very loud. Suddenly he asked eagerly:

"When will the ceremony be performed?"

"As soon as the parties in question are ready," and the Bishop was obliged to laugh at the consternation upon the eminent jurist's face, when he saw that others were to stand before the Bishop, along with Ireton and Rosalie.

"I forbid it," he said sternly:

"But I do not, Judge," Rosalie said softly.

"What have you to say about it?" answered the angry old man.

"But I am one of the brides," came from the soft, sweet lips.

"But I am one of the brides, "came sweet lips.
"She is an angel," Ireton said quickly.
"Then you are actually willing?" sneered the selfish old man, "to have such creatures married with you two?"
"Not only willing, but glad."
"I never thought it of my son."
Here the Bishop decided to break in, by saying stornly:

"I never thought it of my son."
Here the Bishop decided to break in, by saying sternly:
"You ought to be proud of these two young people."
Judge Kensington laughed coldly:
"That they marry with any scrap from the gutter?"
"That they recognize the equality of Christianity and the sacredness of the Church and her sacraments," was the reply.

As the Bishop and the Judge were talking, the four young people ranged themselves before the priest of the church of God, their garments strangely out of keeping with the ceremony.

Rosalie still wore her silk motoring robe over her nightrobe, while Ireton had the remains of his evening suit.

Slightly concealed by Felton's coat was the beautiful Katherine, while the man she was going to re-marry had what was left of his evening suit.

Gerald's suit had been seriously damaged when he had been buried under a pile of debris, he had given away his coat, but he had never felt so well dressed, for Violet in her cravenette cloak was by his side; the other couple appeared like hastily pure together rag lags. his side; the other couple appeared like hastily his side; the other couple appeared like hastily put together rag bags.

Again the Judge remonstrated, but the Bishop stepping in front of them began his solemn ceremony, all the more impressive on account of the strange surroundings.

Each husband made his response, with a "God help me" after it, while the brides shed hot tears, none knowing if an hour would keep them together.

It was a terrible thought, that even though the twas a terrible thought, that even though the promises were made until death did part them, their married life might only last a few moments.

"Promise that we may never part," sobbed Violet, who had gone through such an agony searching for Gerald.

ing for Gerald.

"My children, your lives, your happiness, lie in the Hands of the Lord," said the Bishop solemnly, passing along to bear comfort to others.

"I never thought you would have been married this way," Judge Kensington said reproachfully.

"Neither did any of us," Gerald, his face bound with crimson-stained rags, yet happy, replied very cently.

with crimson-stained rags, yet happy, replied very gently.

"You two were to go up flower-strewn aisles, along which were stretched satin ribbons, and to the music of the finest organ in San Francisco. Your dress was the finest a bride has ever worn, lie, while your garments were as excellent in detail as I could select for you, my son," and the Judge fairly wept in his rage.
"Father," Mrs. Rosalie said softly, stealing up to By William T. Valentine him, and laying a gentle hand on his shoulder, "do you think that all this will make any difference to Ireton or me, or the others? We were in love, and have been married by our own clergyman, so what difference does a flower or two more or less, "It makes the difference between rig between right and "It makes the difference between right and wrong," was the snappish reply.

"Don't, father!" Ireton remoistrated.
"Then your father, Rosalie, is not here," he continued grumbling.
The bride laughed lightly, as she replied:
"Have no fear from that source, for my father is sate, I know it."
"But we are not. Any moment your newly-placed wedding ring may be torn from your finger. We have no money, food or clothing. People are looting everywhere."
Rosalie's fair face flushed, and she replied a little sharply.

Rosalie's fair face flushed, and she replied a little sharply.

"Surely he is not to blame for that?"

"Perhaps not now, but he will be later on. If that wedding present of his was where we could lay our hands upon it, we would be wealthy."

"Father!" Ireton cried sharply.

"It's true enough, for our fortune is lost utterly in reality and the failure of two banks. If we had that over a million and a half, we could commence at once, and turn it into a thousand of millions, in the wondrous state of prosperity which is going to come," and the crafty old Judge smacked his lips.

lips.
"Ireton, darling, you won't let my present be such a source of misery to others, will you?"
"Indeed, I will not!" he cried, but Judge Kensington only smiled grimly, as he reminded them:
"You have to find that treasure first."

CHAPTER XI.

AND GENERATIONS WILL CALL THEM BLESSED.

AND GENERATIONS WILL CALL THEM BLESSED.

The following two days were terrible. On every side stared the Mayor's proclamation, regarding the fate of those who looted, and yet the ladies in their scanty clothing were robbed, and at last Rosalie said decidedly:

"There is no reason of our leaving my father's home to the mercy of such men. Go, Ireton, and get permission from General Funston, and my white motor if you can, and we will carry out some food and clothing."

"Good, but do keep your eye open for that gold," cried the Judge, and had he not been Ireton's father. Rosalie's lips would have curled with scorn, but as it was she just smiled and promised.

"The brute!" Katherine whispered to Violet, "when everyone ought to know she has worries enough as it is."

"What a little difference it makes to us, when our dear ones are with us," Violet said, yet one of their crowd they were willing to spare, the impossible old Judge.

"If wonderful John Bronson had been with us, we would have known just what to do, but my dear, I feel like Rosie that he is not dead," Violet continued.

"So do I, he will turn up at the right time, and tinued.

"So do I, he will turn up at the right time, and with a good reason for the absence," and then the two ladies kissed again, turning flushed faces toward Rosalie, as she came in dressed in a queershaped pair of trousers, and a military blue shirt. When they laughed, she returned merrily:

"There weren't enough women's clothes to go round, so I put these on, for I will have to ride astride up home. If I am allowed to get in, my clothes will go a good way," and she smiled hopefully.

round, so put these on, for twin have to fine astride up home. If I am allowed to get in, my clothes will go a good way," and she smiled hopefully.

"You don't mean to say that you will give your elegant clothing, that which was made for your wedding outfit?" stormed the Judge, but she nodded, vaulted lightly into her seat, and rode off beside her husband and an army officer, and within an hour a very strange sight was to be seen in the magnificent home on Nob's Hill, where so short a time before wedding bells were to ring out. Up the broad walk, from the hedgerow to the wide-open doors came a stream of women, some almost naked, all burned and many bruised, and none were sent away. Standing by great piles of clothing, such as girls hold most dear, stood Rosalie, Katherine and Violet, and their white hands, stained with grime and street fires, tenderly fitted the lovely gowns to backs never intended for them. In the upstairs room where they had been placed the evening of the reception, were the costly presents, and it was the intention of the young couple to return to each donor the present he had sent. A few days ago, even a two hundred bit of plate was as nothing, now it was enough to set the poverished person up once more.
"It is a beautiful idea, darling," Ireton had whispered, kissing the soft curve of her cheek.
"I call it nonsense," thundered the old Judge, but later, when he realized that the necklace of diamonds would come back to him, he was much relieved, although he wanted to go over everything, but deciding that his father was not himself, under all these distressing circumstances, Ireton utterly refused to put him in charge, and thus relieved his bride of an unhappy task, for she was sure of the same thing.

As the day drew to an end, and the house was almost bare, just enough having been kept for the bride of an unhappy task, for she was sure of the same thing.

As the day drew to an end, and the house was almost bare, just enough having been kept for the three couples, with the one who had been added to their number and begged to be retained as servants, to commence as frugally as the thousands of others in the city, Rosalie said slowly:

"I am beginning to be a little uneasy."

"What about?" Gerald asked.

"Listen," she whispered, holding up her hand.
Unmistakably there were footsteps on the floor above.

above.

"Men stealing what is all to so many?" Ireton cried, beside himself with indignation.

Violet and Katherine tried to hide what they had seen at once, that the Judge was not there.

Whether Rosalie suspected will never be known, for the Judge plunged into the room, his face bleeding, his eyes flashing and his hands waving wildly above his head, crying:

"They are in there, stealing. You would not let me guard my own son's possessions and now you me guard my own son's possessions, and now you see what has happened. Satisfied are you, ungrateful daughter-in-law!" he screamed, raising a skinny finger towards Rosalie's white face.

"There is something more," cried Felton, "lishere is something more," cried Felton, "lis" and they all held their breaths.

CHAPTER XII. A TRACE OF THE TREASURE

"Hush," Rosalie said quietly, then slipped from the room.

"Why, what?" Ireton began, but Felton laid his hand upon his shoulder.
"She evidently knows what she's doing," he ad-

"To our ruination," answered the old Judge, who, day by day, was growing so disagreeable, that no one could bear him, but his gentle daughter-in-law. "Ireton," came the bride's sweet voice, winding down the steps.

"Yes," he returned, springing up the stairs by leaps.
"Keep the rest back," Rosalie sobbed. The young man turned, waved his hand back, then flew ahead, to catch his fainting wife in his arms.

Gazing about him, he pulled her inside the large bedroom which had been the storage room of the presents, and as he did so, the tender eyes opened,

and she whispered:
"Pretend I know nothing. Read this, and allow no one else to see it," and his brain still in a whirl, Ireton caught a bit of dirty paper, and read:

"I'm all right.
"The presents will disappear for but a few days.
"I will see that their values will go to the donors.
"My love to my darling girl."
The penmanship was that of his father-in-law.
"What is it?" screamed the Judge, whom the other had not been able to keep below.
Hiding the bit of paper, Ireton stepped out, holding up his hand:
"Rosalie has been frightened. Here, Gerald, help me get her out. I want to put her in her room, for even if we have to cook in the streets tonight, she can rest quietly."
"Where are those presents?" shouted the Judge.
"She fainted. Never mind, we'll have them," cried the son, so angry he could scarcely speak, and then the two, Ireton and Gerald, bore the slender figure to the room in which she had spent the last night of her maidenhood, and laid her upon the dainty bed.
"Select rooms to suit you," Ireton said courteously, "and have the servants bring you food. My wife will need some, but I can come for mine," but before he was able to leave the stricken woman, strengthening food was at their door, and he found that its warmth revived her better than anything else.

that its warmth revived her better than anything else.

After he had the pleasure of gazing into her lovely eyes, and seeing the expression of perfect sanity come back into them, he said in a low voice:

"Rosalie, I parted from you so long ago that I cannot remember when it was, to come the next day and make you my wife. Darling, we are married, but I have scarcely had time to say a word of affection to you, I am a stranger by your side."

A soft, white hand crept into his, and drew his own, broken hand to the rosy lips, which muttered:
"My hero!"

The young man bent his head, and his tender kisses covered her face, while he half sobbed:
"Is there anything, my wife, that I can do? Can I bear a portion of your burden?"
"You have the paper?"
"Yes."
"Keen that for me."

"Yes."
"Keep that for me."
"Is that all?"
"For the moment, Ireton. Before long I can tell you everything, just try now, if you can, to keep your father from misjudging mine."
"My father has been cruelty itself," was the quick reply reply.

"Such a terrible event effects men various ways, and his has brought out what he had always kept subdued before," and Rosalie's voice was very subdued before," and Rosalle's voice was very sweet.

"My blessing to keep this to yourself and not to complain," he whispered, kissing her hands and red lips, and woudering if throughout that city there was another bride like his, but before he could say anything more, there was a loud cry from the yard, and Ireton was mortified at seeing his father dancing about, holding in his skinny hand the velvet box containing the necklace he had presented Rosalie.

"Father!" he said, sharply.

"I'm not cheated!" yelled the old man, flourishing the box.

"Father!" he said, sharply.

"I'm not cheated!" yelled the old man, flourishing the box.

"As though you ever would have been, in any case. You forget that all those presents belonged to my wife Rosalie, and that if you take anything, you rob a bride of the Church," cried Ireton, hoping to awe the old man, but he only shook his head, and clasping it to his bosom, danced away, singing and shouting.

The unhappy son was not surprised to be called up before midnight to identify the old man, and his trinket, but in his hideous shame, he asked that commanding officer to take it away, and hold it in trust, and then going back into the house he told his wife.

"My dear," she said gently.

"I believe you would forgive him anything," gasped Ireton.

"He is your father, my love," was her gentle reply, "a state of affairs which makes him sacred, you ought to know," and it is no wonder that Ireton drew her into his arms and kissed her, whispering love and devotion, and forgetting to ask about the other father.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE INFLUENCE OF A GOOD WOMAN'S LOVE.

The influence of A good woman's Love.

That first evening when Mr. and Mrs. Kensington and their guests were permitted to remain indoors, although their cooking had to be done on the pavement outside, three bridal couples discussed in their own ways the influence Rosalie's wonderful love had upon them.

As Gerald suggested that Violet use the room that she had often occupied when visiting Rosalie, he took the one adjoining, and after he and his wife had helped the two servants of the establishment, now left to them, Jim and Annie, the newly married inmates of the slums, he said to Violet, slowly:

slowly:

"Next to you, dear, and in some way above you, I think Rosalie Kensington is one of the best women, the lottiest I ever knew."

"I do, too, and Gerald, you can't think how much good she has done me, always, but most in these last days. She has done more than any other in our crowd, and really seems to think nothing of it. Here we are with her and Ireton, paupers, yet treated as honored guests."

"She regards us as honored guests," Gerald broke in.

"She regards us as nonored guess, broke in.
"Exactly. Now when she is nearly crazed with worry, for whatever she may say in public, I know she is worried about her father, she keeps up our courage, and bears with that hateful old Judge," and Violet's eyes blazed.
"Oh, him!" Gerald cried in a disgusted manner, then added:

"Sweetheart, darling, I cannot believe how we have been spared. While hundreds are dead, thousands wandering homeless, hungry and despairing, here we are together, happy and rich, for we have each other."

each other."

"And does it make you so happy, husband dear, to have me your wife, when even the clothing on my back comes from Rosalie?"

Gerald kissed his wife's lips almost reverently,

Gerald kissed his wife's lips almost revereivly, saying soberly:
"My dear, what comes from her, seems as though it comes from Heaven."

Lawrence and Katherine, the reunited husband and wife, said little. In the days to come they would explain and then understand each other better, but this Katherine did say with a solemn better, but this Katherine did say with a solemn expression upon her lovely face:

"We can never separate again, Lawrence, because I have learned so much from Rosalie."
"And I, too, from both of them."
"They are almost too good," Katherine said, impulsively, leaning her cheek against her husband's.

His laugh was a merry one, as he smoothed her

His laugh was a merry one, as he smoothed her hair, asking teasingly:
"Afraid your faults will appear too vivid?"
For a moment the old, angry reply was upon her lips, for Lawrence's teasing remarks had been one of his worse faults to her, but she stiffed her indignation, and said gently:
"I am going to ask Rosalie to teach me how to get rid of them," and he, regretting his unkind, although really heedless remark, kissed his wife's trembling lips, saying as he did so:
"And I'll learn from you, dearest, how to curb my ugly tongue," and when she heard that from a man who never confessed he was wrong, Katherine knew that a long life of happiness stretched before her.

her.
While these two couples, were extolling the virtues of the hostess, poor Annie, who had been one of life's outcasts, and Jim, long ago considered too low for any trust, renewed their simple oaths of fealty to the one, who in her bridal happiness had not hesitated a moment, but held out her pure hand, and raised them to a level so far above the one they had once occupied, that they knew that they never would go back to it.

Not only had she tried to help them in that way, but she had taken them into her employ, and they knew that a home was theirs as long as they lived the kind of lives she wished.

"If I'd known such a one as her," Annie said with a big sob.

"Don't cry, old gir!," Jim said gently, awkwardly drawing her head to his shoulder. "If we'd gone straigh: from the first they'd be not nearly so much credit for us to pull all right now."

"She told you that," Annie said, admiringly.

"You just bet she did, and a lot more, I can't remember enough to tell over to you, but it's sunk in."

"So has what she said to me. Jim, I love her more than anyone in all the world."

"I know, girl, so do I, just like she is a kind of religion," Jim replied, and the sweet, tender woman, who had been developed so rapidly into a model, slept very peacefully, knowing that she had done the best she could, and that her loved ones were safe.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Read the next chapter, "Gold is but Dross Unless it be Shared," and realize the unselfish giving, when all hearts were turned toward the stricken city of San Francisco. 15 cents sent now, and you will receive COMFORT, the best paper published for the money. The price will soon be advanced.

High Grade Door 2000 CREST CONTROLLY CONTROLLY CONTROLLY CREEKE STATE OF THE PRICE OF THE PRICE

CORDON VAN TINE & CO. Station Bi, Davenport, Iowa

CANCER OF THE BREAST CURED

How Mrs. Rodman's Life was Saved -

DR. L. T. LEACH,
Dear Doctor:—I write to testify to the curative powers of CANCEROL for the treatment of maignant disease. I was afflicted with two cancers of the right breast, and after a persistent and stubborn fight, can truthfully say that both cancers are cured. My breast is entirely bealed up and my general health is good. Let me thank you for the interest you have taken in me. Though I cannot express my feelings in words, my inmost sentiment is more than kind towards you. I thank the Good Lord for giving you the knowledge to make such a wonderful remedy.

Shanie & arden CANCEROL has proved its merits in the treatment of cancer. It is not in an experimental stage. Records of undisputed cures of cancer in nearly every part of the body are contained in Dr. Leach's new 100 page book. This book also tells the cause of cancer and instructs in the care of the patient; tells what to do in case of bleeding, pain, odor, etc. A valuable guide in the treatment of any case. A copy of this valuable

BOOK FREE TO THOSE INTERESTED Address, Dr. L. T. LEACH, DEPT. S. INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

I WILL MAKE YOU PROSPEROUS If you are honest and ambitious write me oday. No matter where you live or what our occupation. I will teach you the Real today. No matter where you live or what your occupation. I will teach you the Real Estate business by mall; appoint you Special Representative of my Company in your town; start you in a profitable business of your own, and help you make big money at once. Unusual opportunity for men without capital to become independent for life. Valuable book and full particulars free. Write today. Address nearest office.

EDWIN R. MARDEN, Pres't National Co-operative Resity Co., 518 Athenacum Building, CHICAGO.

518 Maryland Building, Washington, D. C.

SOLO _ ACCORDION

mings. Best v. ue instrument ever given away. us your name and address for 24 pieces of our J to seil at 10 cents each, return $2.40 when as we will send you the accordion. C 01. U M NOVELTY CO., Dept. 248, East Boston,

BY KATE V. SAINT MAUR.

Copyright, 1906 by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Inc.

HE most important step in raising thoroughbred poultry is correct mating. Few beginners realize this until they discover that their chicks, when they discover that their chicks, when matured, are far from what they expected. Correct mating will give good results and make the year's business prosperous and satisfactory, while improper mating will result in total failure. The great advance and improvement in the different breeds is due entirely to the greater knowledge breeders are gaining every year as to mating. Only a few years ago nearly all results were obtained from what was known as haphazard mating, or in other words, selecting a fairly good specimen for a male and mating him to good-looking females. Little regard was paid to pedigree; in fact, it was hardly considered. Today the results from haphazard matings are far from satisfactory, although occasionally a good chick is raised. Correct mating has become a science, in fact it is the scientific part of poultry breeding. It is therefore the result of careful study and of years of experiment. So when we say correct mating we mean scientific mating.

ing. It is the scendine part of poultry breeding. It is therefore the result of careful study and of years of experiment. So when we say correct mating, we mean scientific mating.

The old habit of allowing males to run with females the year around has been discontinued for some time by first-class breeders. All now recognize the necessity of the mating season. This is usually in the months of January or February. The common practice is to select a male bird, for he is considered half the pen, and mate females to him. In the solid color varieties the task is not so difficult as in those of variegated plumage. As an example of the former, we may take any of the white varieties, and of the latter breeds Barred Plymouth Rocks and Brown Leghorns. As the Barred Plymouth Rocks are considered one of the most difficult breeds to mate correctly, they will serve best to illustrate scientific mating.

they will serve best to illustrate scientific mating.

At first the best results were obtained from ordinary or single matings. This means selecting standard bred males and females. The result of such a mating was a fair percentage of good-colored cockerels and good pullets, and but few really poor specimens. This single mating idea was popular for many years, and even today some prominent breeders are still using it with satisfactory results. Still, the single system did not seem to improve the breed as rapidly as was desired, and too few really fine specimens were the result. Progressive breeders aimed at something better—something more to be relied on. After a few experiments, double mating began to be talked of, and better results were obtained, and the exhibition birds reached a higher degree of excellence. excellence.

excellence.

Totay the double mating system is practiced by the best Plymouth Rock breeders; the results decidedly satisfactory, and the breed has improved wonderfully. Whether this system will eventually injure the useful qualities of the breed, remains to be seen. Its opponents say yes, but its advocates cry no in chorus. In my opinion it is impossible to produce any such specimens as won the first prizes at Boston and New York by any single mating system. In males, the shape, color and general show and standard qualities can be obtained only from double mating. In females, double mating is even more necessary if the standard color is sought for. Correct double mating in Barred Plymouth Rocks is recognized as follows:

lows:

For Cockerels.—Select a standard, prize winning, if you have one, cockerel. He should be the son of a prize winning or exhibition male bird, and his father before him. The stronger bird, and his father before him. The stronger the blood and better the pedigree the more valuable he will be as a breeder. To him mate females a few shades darker than standard color, but evenly barred and deep as possible—well-shaped bodies, small, well-balanced tails and small, firm combs. Eyes, legs and beaks should be as near perfect as can be obtained. In fact, the better the females, the better the chicks. As to the male, I have said, prize winners, if possible: therefore, his qualities need chicks. As to the male, I have said, prize winners, if possible; therefore, his qualities need no explanation.

For Pullets.—Select prize exhibition females and mate to them a male too light for exhibition, but not a washed out, or faded-looking color. Although he may be light, his plumage should be well barred, and a trace of gray or slate color near the skin, and not white or cottony, in other words. Where the barring stops there should be a distinct trace of graystops there should be a distinct trace of gray-ish blue color. He should have a full body and good breast. Legs and beak a deep yellow; a small, good comb, and his plumage bright and even throughout.

In these matings the specimens ought to have

In these matings the specimens ought to have been bred in line; for example: For cockerel matings, to produce cockerels, both the male and females should come from previous cockerel-mated pens. This is not so difficult as it appears, because from a cockerel mating you obtain exhibition cockerels; but the female will be darker than standard color, and hence, too dark for exhibition purposes, but just fit for cockerel breeders next year.

For pullet matings, to produce pullets the male and the female should come from former pullet matings. This happens in inverse ratio to the cockerel pens. For example, the females will be standard exhibition color, and the males a little too light for show purposes, but good for next year's pullet matings. If, therefore, your pullets and cockerels are bred thus good for next year's pullet matings. If, there-fore, your pullets and cockerels are bred thus in line year after year, the very best results can be obtained.

True color in Barred Plymouth Rocks is more difficult to produce than the barring it-more difficult to produce than the barring itself. Bluish barring is rare, but brown of different shades is quite common. Of late years the tendency is toward the narrow close barring and the bluest of blue shades.

In choosing birds of good plumage, shape must not be lost sight of. Too often color is preferred to shape, and this it is which will eventually ruin the type of any breed. Many glaring examples of this were seen in the large exhibitions at New York and Boston. Every breed has its type, and when the color is changed the type should remain the same. All Plymouth Rocks should be typical in shape, no matter whether they are Barred, White or Buff. The same is true of all breeds which are divided into different varieties. There are White, Brown, Buff and Black Leghorns. The colors are distinct and decidedly different, but the Leghorn type should prevail. Too much stress, therefore, cannot be laid on shape when selecting the specimens in mating your pens.

stress, therefore, cannot be laid on snape when selecting the specimens in mating your pens. Early mating is an advantage, but early mating does not necessarily mean early hatching. This is a matter which remains with the breeder. Early hatched chicks find a ready sale for early fall shows; middle-spring hatches meet the demand for next spring's breeders, while late hatched chicks fit in well for late winter shows. winter shows.

Correspondence

Mrs. J.—Which is best, cooked or raw meat for thickens?
A.—Raw, lean meat.

chickens?
A.—Raw, lean meat.
H. H. writes asking for my address.
A.—All latters must be addressed care of Comfort, Augusta, Me.
L. F.—My hens are sick, droppings yellow and smelling badly, after a few days they die. I feed corn, oats, bran, they have grit, water, and green feed in plenty, and a large farm to run over.
A.—Your birds are suffering from cholera, which is a contagious disease. Shut up all the affected birds in a dry, warm, though well-ventilated house away from the other birds. Feed them on stale bread which has been soaked in boiled milk and well squeezed. Mix three drops of laudanum in a teaspoonful of milk which has been scalded and give while warm. Give them only scalded milk cold to drink. Remove all droppings three or four times a day. When a bird dies burn the carcass, thoroughly clean the chicken-house and add one teaspoonful of carbolic acid to one quart of drinking water for the next ten days as a precaution against the disease spreading.

J. S.—Will you tell me how to erect an incubator, as I am going to try one?
A.—I shall devote next month's space to the incubator as many of my correspondents are interested in the subject at this time of the year

H. O. B.—Will you tell me if it is true that ducks can be successfully kept on a farm where there is cubator as many of my correspondents are interested in the subject at this time of the year

H. O. B.—Will you tell me if it is true that ducks can be successfully kept on a farm where there is no stream or pond? I want to keep them in quantities as there is a good market for them here.

A.—Yes, ducks do as well and even better without water to swim in when they are being raised for market as the action of swimming hardens the sinews of the legs and makes them tough. Care must be observed, however, to provide an unlimited supply of fresh drinking water in vessels so arranged that the birds cannot get into them with their feet, but deep enough to permit them submerging their heads. A large pan should also be kept constantly filled with 'sharp grit which the birds will relish much better if kept perpetually moist. The breeders at this season of the year should have some animal food, green stuff, cut clover hay well steamed if you have not a good supply of cabbage, bran and ground feed (corn and oats ground together in equal parts.) Eggs should not be over five days old for setting and it is better to use them as much fresher as possible.

F. G. G.—What is meant by animal meal, and where can I get it? Can I mix stale bread in the

F. G. G.—What is meant by animal meal, and where can I get it? Can I mix stale bread in the mash? My husband works in a bakery and can get all the bread he wants, but when I put it into the warm water it gets sloppy and the birds don't like it. Please advise me how to feed. Do you feed your chickens all the year round? Do you think the Rhode Island Reds are better layers than the Wyandottes?

Wyandottes?

A.—Animal meal is ground meat scraps, specially prepared for poultry, and can be bought at all large feed houses. But if you have plenty of scraps from the table, or can get lean meat scraps from your butcher, they are better than the prepared meal. I think the bread would be better food dry than mixed with a mash. It makes a good midday meal in the winter, but it is not heating enough for night or morning in a cold climate. We do not feed mash between May and September when the birds are on free range.

Note Correspondents

Note Correspondents

The blue ducks are scarce in this country, as I think I saw three or four exhibits at the last New York poultry show. I do not know of anyone having stock or eggs for same at a reasonable price. At the next show, which is early in the new year, I will endeavor to get a list of breeders for the convenience of my correspondents, until then I am afraid I cannot help you, as I have none for sale myself.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

Tested Recipes from Comfort Sisters

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 10.) Rich Fruit Cake

Four eggs, one cup sugar, two cups molasses, one and one half cups butter, one half cup milk, one teaspoonful baking soda, one pound raisins, one pound currants, one half pound citron, sliced fine, one heaping teaspoonful cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves, five cups sifted flour. Bake two and one half hours in a slow oven.

MRS. R. J. Borsacg, 708 Bosworth Ave., Chicago, Ill.

rence Improvements that cost you nething We have been constantly improv-ing wire fence at an expense of thousands of dollars every year. But because we make and sell 50000 miles of AMERICAN FENCE every month, the cost of these im-provements has been spread over many million rods of fence. So you get American Fence today at the same price per rod, though it costs you less per rod per year's Pocket reminder. Great convenience. Write today.

FRANK BAACKES

Vice-President & General Sales Agent
American Steel & Wire Co., Chicago, U. S. A. SENT TO YOU FREE

Lemon Cream Pie

Take a deep dish, grate into it the outside of the rind of two lemons, add to that one and one half cups of sugar, two heaping tablespoonfuls of flour unsifted, stir it well together, then add the yolks of three well-beaten eggs; beat this thoroughly, then add the juice of the lemons, two cups of water and a piece of butter the size of a walnut. Set this on the fire in another dish containing boiling water and cook until it thickens and will drip from the spoon like thick honey. Remove from the fire and when cooled, pour into a deep pie tin, lined with pastry, bake, and when done, have ready the whites, beaten stiff, with three tablespoonfuls of sugar, spread this over the top and return to oven to brown slightly.

Chocolate Icing

Chocolate Icing
Put into a shallow pan four tablespoonfuls of grated chocolate and place it where it will melt gradually but not scorch; when melted, stir in three tablespoonfuls of milk or cream and one of water, mix all well together, then add one scant teacupful of sugar, boil about five minutes, and while cakes are nearly cold spread some evenly over the surface of one of them, put a second one on top, alternating mixture and cakes, then cover top and sides and set in a warm oven to harden.

Ginger Snaps

Two cups molasses, one cup lard, one tablespoontul of soda, one tablespoonful ginger, flour enough to make very stiff; roll thin.

Correspondents Wanted

Correspondents Wanted

Alice E. Mason. Berryman, Mo., young people. Bertha Lake, Pleasantville, Venango Co., Pa., March 1, 1907. Andrew Gunderson, Terrace, R. F. D., 1, Minn. Miss Grace Cummins, Wentworth, N. H., girls of twelve or thirteen. Andrew G. Flynn. 20 Crosby Place, Pittsfield, Mass. Miss G. A. Hinton, Jasper, Fla., young people. Blanche Steele, Catalline, Texas, young people. Wesley Osborn, Box 13. Cottageville, Ky. George E. McIntyre, Almira, N. Dak. Miss Clementyne Avery, 504 Russell St., Nashville, Tenn. Mr. E. Haynes, Work Point Barracks, Esquimalt, B. C. Mrs. Pearl Sanford, Jewett, R. F. D., 1, Ill., especially those having surname of Keeman or Keyman. John Pennington, Skylight, Ky., young people. Fannie Ellerd, Colquett, R. F. D., 2; Ga. Marjorie Elliott, Ceres, Cal., young people. Miss Ethel Knicely, Box 41, Holgate, Ohio, young people. Miss Harriet E. Smith, McArthur, Ohio, Feb. 24, 1907. Charles G. Cosgrove, Four Pines Place, West Walworth, N. Y., young people. Miss Orna Wardage, Crom City, R. F. D., 2, Ohio. Miss Nona Robeus, Mechanicville, R. F. D., 1, Saratoga Co., N. Y. Wilma Dick, Gainsville, Texas, young people. Buel Orne, North Craftsburg, R. F. D., 1, Vt. Edward A. Jackson, Hollydale, Lunenburg Co., Va. Miss Sallie Baker, 891 Broadway, South Boston, Mass. Miss Mary O'Connell, Webster, Ill. Foster Plaister, Rossville, R. F. D., 1, Ga. Mrs. P. McReynolds, Lewisburg, Ky. Mrs. Annie Parker, Bowles, Ala. Mrs. Gustave A. Wahl, 503 Homer St., Algiers, La. Miss Mary L. Austin, Fort Kent, Maine. Miss Clarice Russell, Meiburn, Ohio. Ezra Green, McNoel, Ill.

Letters of Thanks

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:
I want to thank the sisters who have been so kind as to send me magazines. I have received a good many, and have enjoyed them. I have received several nice encouraging letters, too, and am very thankful to all who have remembered me. Please do not send stamps for reply, as writing is so hard for me on account of a heart trouble. Will you please send magazines and small gifts to a little friend of mine, Miss Floy Walton, Holt, Missourif She is a cripple from rheumatism, hasn't walked for nearly seven long years. I made her acquaintance at the Sanitarium two years ago where I spent nearly six weeks. I think she was there about three months. I know she will appreciate any little gift. She is about sixteen years old. Mrs. Mattie Kessler, Eldorado, Kans.

DEAR EDITOR AND COMPORT SISTERS:

DEAR EDITOR AND COMPORT SISTERS:

While I, like many others am lying on my bed, I would enjoy reading a personal letter from each one of you. The days sometimes seem long to me, being confined to the house is so different from roaming over the beautiful earth. But we should try to look on the bright side in spite of a thorny (CONTINUED ON PAGE 23.)

Darken Your Gray Hair

beauty and softness. Prevents the barries beauty and softness. Prevents the barries beauty and softness. Prevents the barries and prevents dandruf, and gives the hair a so prevents dandruf, and gives the barries are dandruf, and gives the bair a so prevents the barries are dandruf, and gives the bair a so prevents the barries are dandruf, and gives the bair a so prevents the barries are dandruf, and gives the bair a so prevents the barries are dandruf, and gives the barries PACKAGE MAKES ONE PINT.

OZARK HERB CO., Block 3, St. Louis, Mo.

Work at Home

NO EXPERIENCE MEEDED $4 a Day

Easily Made We start men and women in a profitable business on a small investment. Write quick for prices and Loom Book. REED MFG. CO. Box 5. Springfield, Ohlo

This ELEGANT Watch $3.75 This ELEUM'RE.

Before you huy a watch tend your name, porszpress office address, and we will send you by szpress for examinacion a handsome WATCH AND CHAIN C. O. D. $3.75. Double hunting case beautifully engraved, stein wind and hunting case beautifully engraved, stein wind and hunting case beautifully engraved, stein wind and hunting case beautifully engraved.

and nearly 1000 other nice things for the home with orders for groceries—tea, coffee, axtracts, perfumes, etc. Send for our 2free books. How the Housewife Can Furnish Health Home Without Cost, Panish Health Housewife Cost, Panish H Home Without Cost,"and "How the Housewife Can Bave $10."

Orofts & Reed, 162 Kinzie St., Chicago, III.

MEN WANTED Reliable Men in every locality throughout United States and Canada to advertise our goods, tacking up show cards on trees, fences, bridges, and all conspicuous places; distributing small advertising matter. Commission or salary $90 a month and expenses $3.50 a day. Steady employment to good reliable men. We lay out your work for you. No experience needed. Write for full particulars. SALUS MEDICINAL CO., London, Ontario, Canada,

Big Money In Poultry

cubators and brooders. Mailed for 4 cts.

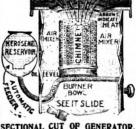

F. FOY, Box 2 Des Moines, Iowa

Farmers' Sons Wanted with knowledge of farm stock and fair education to work in an office, $800 a month advancement, steady employment, must be honest and relia Branch offices of the association are being established in c state. Apply at once, giving full particulars. The Veterion Selence Association, Dopt. 128, London, Canada

40 BREEDS fine pure bred chickens, ducks, geese and turkeys. Northern raised, hardy and very beautiful Largest poultry farm in the Northwest. Fowls, eggs and incubators at low prices. Send de for fine 76-page poultry book and catalog. R. F. Neubert, Box 793. Mankato, Minn.

$65 PER MONTH Straight Salary and expenses, to men with rig, to introduce our Poultry Remedies. Bank ref's given. Don't ans'r unless you mean business. Eureka Poultry Food Mfg. Co., Dept. 40, East St. Louis, III.

NS BAI

HEATER AND COOKER OR HEATER EXCLUSIVELY.

MOST WONDERFUL COMBINATION STOVE EVER INVENT iel drawn principally from atmosphere. 95 barrels of air, while consuming one gallon of oil. Wood, coal and oil cost money. ONLY FREE FUEL IS AIR. Supply unlimited. No trust in control. Air belongs to rich and poor alik Automatically generates gas from kerosene oil, mixing it with air. Burns like gas. Intense hot fire. Combustion perfect. To operate—Turn knob—oil runs into burner—touch a match, it generates gas which passes through air mixer, drawing in about a barrel of air, to every large spoonful of oil consumed. That's all. It is selfair mixer, drawing in about a barrel of air, to every large spoonful of oil consumed. That's all. It is selfregulating, no more attention Same heat all day, or all night. For more or less heat, simply turn knob. There it remains until you come again. To put fire out, turn knob, raising burner, oil runs back into can, fire's out. As SECTIONAL CUT OF GENERATOR. near perfection as anything in the world. No dirt, soot or ashes. No leaks—nothing to clog or close up. No wick-not even a valve, yet heat is under perfect control. valve, yet heat is under perfect control.

D. CARN, IND., writes: "It costs me only 4½ cents a day for fuel." L. NORRIS, VT., writes: "The Harrison Oil-Gas Generators are wonderful savers of fuel, at least 50 per cent. to 75 per cent. over wood and coal." E. ARNOLD., NEB., writes: "Saved $4.25 a month for fuel by using the Harrison Oil-Gas Stove. My range cost me $5.50 per month, and the Harrison only $1.25 per month."

M. KING., VA., writes: "Using one Burner and Radiator I kept a 16x18 foot room at and degrees.

Radiator, I kept a 16x18 foot room at 70 degrees, when out doors 13 to 20 degrees were registered." REV. WM. TEARN, ME., writes: "This morning 16 below zero, and my library far below freezing point. Soon after lighting the Harrison Oil-Gas Stove temperature rose to summer heat." WM. BAERING, IND., writes: "We warmed a room 13x14 feet, when it was about 10 below zero with one Radiator." Objection-

EXCITING BUSINESS FOR AGENTS

SALESMEN-MANAGERS-MEN OR WOMEN at home or raveling, all or part time—showing—taking orders—appointing agents. MESSRS. HEAD & FRAZER, TEX., writes: "Enclose order for $81.00. RUSH. Sell like hot cakes. Sold 50 steves in our own town." B. L. HUESTED, MICH., writes: "Been out one day and sold 11 stoves." This patent new. Nothing like it. Demand enormous. Agents reaping great harvest. Where operated people stop in street, leave their homes, place of business, miss trains to watch this generator—excites curiosity -watch it as though a thing of life. Show a dozensell ten. Write today for special agents new plan. Send no money. World unsupplied. Get in early for territory. Write today.

To below zero with one Radiator.

Get in early for territory. Write today.

To below zero with one Radiator.

To below zero with one, write today.

To below zero with one Radiator.

To below zero with one Radia

A Corner for Boys

By Uncle John

Two Boys

There are two boys in Cambridge school, A wise one and a little fool. One knows his lessons every day, Can dance, speak pieces, sing and play, Has milk-white skin and hazel curls, That makes him liked by all the girls; But going home so prim and neat, He'll speak to no one on the street.

The other lad can swim and skate,
Play pranks, ride horseback, leap a gate,
Vault posts, jump fences, run and climb—
His clothes are soiled most all the time,
But he ain't proud or prim or neat,
He'll yell "hello," clean 'cross the street.
He loves to pull, toss, drag and pitch.
Now there's the two boys, "Which is which?"

Removing Glass

A safe and easy way to remove a pane of glass is to apply soft soap to the putty, and in a few hours it will become soft no matter how hard it has previously been. You can then scrape it away with a knife without fear of breaking the glass or marring the wood. A cut made by a small splinter of glass should be immediately attended to for it may cause blood poison.

A Stencil

The boy with artistic talent, or the common lad, if he takes pains can make a serviceable stencil out of an old tin can. Put it on the stove until the heat melts the joints and causes it to fall apart, then hammer it flat and tack it firmly to a block of hard wood. If you are not able to draw neat and uniform letters, cut some out of a calendar or newspaper, and paste them on the tin to get your outlines. With a small, sharp chisel cut away the parts described by the outside lines, leaving intact small retaining strips wherever necessary. The pictures show the different steps of the work. This stencil is used by placing against the object you wish to mark, and then applying paint with a common brush.

A Game

Here is a simple game which requires very little preparation. Write down ten questions on a slip of paper, and on ten different slips write the correct answers, that is one on each slip. Now place the ten slips with the answers on face downward on the table. The captain asks the person to his left a question and he draws from the pile of answers. If he gets a correct one he has another chance, but if not the next player to the left takes his turn. Whoever draws five right answers first wins the game. The questions may be very simple such as "Who discovered America?" "Who was the first president?" etc. The number of questions first president?" etc. The number of questions may be increased according to the number of players, five for each one, and any number may play, the more the merrier.

Frost-bites

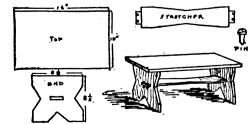

Boys who live in the cold regions, and are in danger of frost-bites will do well to study these simple directions. Stay away from the fire, and rub the affected part with snow or the coldest water obtainable. When the circulation has been in some degree restored take a hot drink, and continue the rubbing with a piece of flannel or a rough towel. If the ears have been slightly nipped hold a fistful of snow around them and they will soon be all right. If the frozen spot remains sore and turns black cover it with common salt and keep it covered for a few days at least. Otherwise you will be troubled all your life, and the injured part will remain very sensitive to the coid.

Etiquette

Here are a few points of etiquette which a boy must observe if he wishes to be considered well bred. In walking with a lady give her the side nearest to the wall. If you meet a lady in a public place never speak her name loud enough to attract attention. In walking take charge of any parcel with which the lady may be encumbered. In saluting a lady tip your hat with the hand which is farthest away, thus if you pass her on the left side take your hat off if you pass her on the left side take your hat off

Mission Bench

This mission bench, simple enough to be made by any boy, will add a touch of refinement to almost any room. The top is 16 inches by 10 inches, and 1 inch thick. It must be smoothed very carefully with plane and sandpaper on the upper side. The ends are 81-4 inches by 81-2 inches by 1 inch, and must be dressed on both sides, for both sides will be dressed on both sides, for both sides will be visible when the bench is in use. The under piece or stretcher should be 15 by 4 by 1 inches, upper side only dressed. The shape and plan of cutting those pieces is shown by the drawings. Screws, glue if handy, and four wooden wedges are used to fasten them together. Finishing is done by first rubbing in wood filler, then varnishing, sandpapering and revarnishing until a satisfactory polish is produced.

Snowshoes

It is great fun walking on snowshoes after you get the knack of it. 1 have spent much time in trying to devise a pair that every Comport and you will be about right. Tack on straps or ropes for feet fastenings and you are ready to glide away like an oldtime pioneer.

The Number Three

The number 3 figures largely in arithmetical tricks. Select any two numbers you please and you will find that either one of the two, or their sum when added together or their difference is always 3 or a number divisible by three. Thus if you select 3 and 8, the first number is 3, if you say 1 and 2 their sum is 3, if your numbers are 4 and 7 their difference is 3, again 15 and 22 the first can be divided by 3, 17 and 26 their difference is divisible by 3. Number 3 is the only one that you cannot get

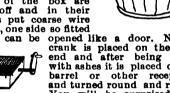

Rabbit Skins

The proper way to prepare a rabbit skin is to lay it on a smooth board with the fur side under and tack it securely down. Dissolve two ounces of alum in a pint of water and with a sponge dipped in this solution moisten the surface all over. Repeat this every now and then for three days and when the skin has dried take out the tacks, roll it up the long way, hair inside, and draw it rapidly back and forth through a smooth ring or anything that will answer the same purpose. Then roll it up the other way and repeat the operation.

Ash Sifter

Those who burn coal in the winter will welcome this ash sifter for by its use many half burned pieces can be saved. Get an ordinary box and cut two corsaved. Get an ordinary box and cut two corresponding holes in the narrow sides, through which put a tightly fitting stick which extends four inches over one side and ten or twelve over the other. The shortend is whittled round, for it is to turn like an axle. The top and bottom boards of the box are taken off and in their place is put coarse wire netting, one side so fitted that it can be opened like a door. Next a crank is placed on the long end and after being filled with ashes it is placed over a barrel or other receptacle and turned round and round. You will be surprised how much coal this simple device will save in one season.

Jerry, the Backwoods Boy

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 8.)

"Proceed, sir," said Mr. Parkhurst. "You have aroused my interest."
"Before doing so," said Clarke, "I will recapitulate gone events in your past history, that you may perceive how far I comprehend your present position. We shall then be better prepared to understand each other."

The lawyer for henceforth this will be the

The lawyer, for henceforth this will be the easiest name by which to distinguish our acquaintance, at once commenced his narrative.

quaintance, at once commenced his narrative.

"I am perfectly well aware that, though at present an occupant of a house in the wilderness, you were born to wealth and social distinction which, but for untoward circumstances, would still be in your possession. Your father held a high colonial office previous to the struggle that eventuated in sundering the present States from the mother country. Although in that struggle he aimed to preserve stances, would still be in your possession. Your father held a high colonial office previous to the struggle that eventuated in sundering the present States from the mother country. Although in that struggle he aimed to preserve neutrality, I believe I am correct in saying that his sympathies were rather with England than the colonies.' "I believe such to have been the case," said

Mr. Parkhurst.
"This point, however, is immaterial. One of "This point, however, is immaterial. One of the acts to which it led, though, is of the highest importance. But before speaking of this, let me go on with my brief narrative. I believe your father's death was sudden."

"It was. He was struck with apoplexy which, though not immediately fatal, deprived him of speech, so that during the short time he had to live he was utterly unable to communicate with me." me.

"He appeared to have something on his mind that he wished to communicate?" queried the lawyer with a certain degree of eagerness in his manner "He did, and seemed to be quite distressed to

"He did, and seemed to be quite distressed to think that it was out of his power to do so. But, sir—improbable as it appears, your manner leads me to ask the question—have you any conjecture as to the nature of this communication, which my father was prevented from making?"
"As to that, Squire Parkhurst, I may have or

I may not. You will excuse me for being non-committal just at present. Remember that I am a lawyer, and that this is a part of our trade.

I have a question or two more to ask."
"Your manner is somewhat mysterious," said
Mr. Parkhurst with some hauteur. "How-"Your manner is somewhat mysterious," said Mr. Parkhurst with some hauteur. "How- ever, I will take it for granted that you have a sufficient motive for it, and will answer any questions of a proper nature you have to ask." "It is only what I expected from a man of your intelligence," said the lawyer affably. "I will endeavor not to trouble you with any unnecessary questions."

"Go on, Mr. Clarke," said Joseph Parkhurst, exhibiting a degree of impatience in his tone. "Did your father leave as much property as you anticipated?"
Mr. Parkhurst looked at the lawyer in some surprise, the question not being of such a character as he anticipated.

much time in trying to devise a pair that every Comfort took oould get with out expense or trouble and this is the result of my efforts. Round off the tops of two light, wide barre I staves, gracefully tapering the back ends to a point. Exact dimensions are not given because we do not know the size of the pieces you will use. Follow the proportions of those in the cut. Tack on straps dyou are ready ploneer.

Three

Three

I have formed many conjectures on the subject, said mr. Parkhurst, exanning the lawyer's face with interest, "Unit I confess that this never occurred to me. Have you any reason to suppose—your look seems to indicate it—that such is the case?"

"I have," said the lawyer briefly. "As I had leavy any reason to suppose—your look seems to indicate it—that such is the case?"

"I have no hesitation in saying that it is." "I was led to here of the two, or her or their difference is 3, edivided by 3, 17 divisible by 3.5 you cannot get a rabbit skin is to ith the fur side wn. Dissolve two water and with a leaver was the sufficient reply to your question." "It company that it is," "if await your further disclosures with impatience, Mr. Clarke."

"I will be a sufficient reply to your question." "Said Mr. Parkhurst, scanning the lawying said the lawyer briefly. "And of what nature is this evidence?" asked Mr. Parkhurst, scanning the lawyer said the lawyer briefly. "And of what nature is this evidence?" asked Mr. Parkhurst, scanning the lawyer said with a large part. Is this the case?"

"I have no hesitation in saying that it is." "I was no hesitation in saying that it is." "I was no hesitation in saying that it is." "I was no hesitation in saying that it is." "I was no hesitation in saying that it is." "I was no hesitation in saying that it is." "I was no hesitation in saying that it is." "I we no hesitation in saying that it is." "I was no hesitation in saying that it is." "I was no hesitation in saying that it is." "I we for it is in the case?" "I will be a sufficient reply to your question." "I do not k ness, "will be a sufficient reply to your question."

"I did not know but that your retirement to this romantic spot was dictated by a preference for country life."

"No, sir, far from it. I am not a sentimentalist. I have no taste for the country or country life. I was born in a city—at all events a considerable town, which is now a city—and should never have left it if I could have continued to live there in the style to which I had been accustomed from my birth. But that could not be—the money which I inherited from my father, amounting to fifty thousand dollars, I was unwise enough to invest in speculations that promised large returns, although I ought to have been contented with the safer but apparently less productive investments which my father had employed. Well, sir, I need not go into details. Enough that I found myself reduced two years since to a comparative pittance through the fallure of the schemes in which I had trusted. I could no longer live in New York save in the most humble way, and that the family pride which came to me with my inheritance would not brook. I had no mind to see myself looked down upon by those with whom I had associated as my equals, perhaps as my inferiors, and hard as the sacrifice was, I determined to cut loose the ties which bound me to my native place, and seek an humble asylum in this frontier district. I did not expect to find happiness here, nor have I been disappointed. I find myself cut off from all the associations to which I had been accustomed, and forced to take up a life which has but a single redeeming trait. This is that I have removed myself far beyond the pity, indifference, or neglect of those whom I before knew. I have also the satisfaction of seeing that my daughter takes the change more kindly than myself. I am not sure even but she prefers the present life to that of the city. I cannot comprehend it. I think she must differ essentially in tastes and temperament from myself."

"I think I could explain it," thought the lawyer. "I have you much afraid s temperament from myself."

think she must differ essentially in tastes and temperament from myself."

"I think I could explain it," thought the lawyer. "I am very much afraid she is in love with this young Davenport. Lovers at her age are very apt to overlook all else."

"Well, sir," resumed Mr. Parkhurst, "I have now expressed myself at greater length than I intended in relation to my position here and how I look upon it. I am now ready and anxious to hear anything which you may be able to communicate upon this subject, which, as you must have discovered, is so near to me."

"I will come to the point at once, sir," said the lawyer, "by stating that I have the power of replacing you in your old position, and enabling you to reappear among your former friends and associates with the same advantages of wealth the loss of which has driven you to seek a home in the wilderness."

"Surely you will not mock me with delusive

"Surely not, Mr. Parkhurst," said the lawyer, scanning him narrowly. "I promise nothing which I am not able to perform."

"But this seems so mysterious! How can you, a stranger, possess this power?"

"Chance, sir, has thrown it into my way.
But as you will naturally enough desire a confirmation of my words, I will so far task your patience as to relate briefly the manner whereby certain facts, having a weighty bearing upby certain facts, having a weighty bearing up-on your interests, became known to me." "Do so, sir. I am all attention."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

This story full of exciting incidents of a boy, young in years, yet mature in judgment, will hold the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of more mature years. If not a subscriber send 15 cents. Read the next chapter, "The Hidden Treasure," thereby keeping the thread of the story without a break.

ST. VITUS' DANCE. Sure Cure. Get Circular. Dr. Fenner, Fredonia, N. Y.

YOUNG MEN

How to Exercise the Bowels

OUR Intestines are lined inside with millions of suckers, that draw the Nutrition from food as It passes them. But, if the food passes too slowly, it decays before it gets through. Then the little suckers draw Poison from it instead of Nutrition. This Poison makes a Gas that injures your system more than the food should have nourished it.

The usual remedy for this delayed passage (called Constipation) is to take a big dose of Castor Oil.

This merely make slippery the passage for unloading the current cargo.

It does not help the Cause of delay a trifle. It does slacken the Bowel-Muscles, and weakens them for their next task.

Another remedy is to take a strong "Physic," like Salts, Calomel, Jalap, Phosphate of Sodium, Aperient Water, or any of these mixed.

What does the "Physic" do? It merely flushes-out the Bowels with a waste of Digestive Juice, set flowing into the Intestines through the tiny suckers.

Cascarets are the only safe medicine for the bowels.

They do not waste any precious fluid of the Bowels, as "Physics" do.

They do not relax the Intestines by greasing them inside like Castor Oil or Glycerine.

They simply stimulate the Bowel-Muscles to do their work naturally, comfortably, and nutritiously.

They are put up in thin, flat, round-cornered Enamel boxes, so they can be carried in a man's vest pocket, or in a woman's purse, all the time, without bulk or trouble.

The time to take a Cascaret is not only when you are Sick, but when you first suspect you need one. Price, 10c abox.

Be very careful to get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Company and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC." All druggists. .

Music Lessons Free

IN YOUR OWN HOME.

A wonderful offer to every lover of music, whether a beginner or an advanced player.

Ninety-six lessons (or a less number if you desire) for either Piano, Organ, Violin, Guitar, Banjo, Cornet or Mandolin will be given free to make our home study courses for these instruments known in your locality. You will get one lesson weekly, and your ouly expense during the time you take the lessons will be the cost of postage and the music you use, which is small. Write at once. It will mean much to you to get our free booklet. It will place you under no obligation whatever to us if you never write again. You and your friends should know of this work. Hundreds of our pupils write: "Wish I had known of your school before." "Have learned more in one term in my home with your weekly lessons than in three terms with private teachers and at a great deal less expense." "Everything is so thorough and complete." "The lessons are marvels of simplicity, and my 11-year-old boy has not had the least trouble to learn." One minister writes: "As each succeeding lesson comes I am more and more fully persuaded I made no mistake in becoming your pupil."

We have been established seven years—have hundreds of pupils from eight years of age to sevent. Don't say you cannot learn music till you pupil."

We have been established seven years—have hundreds of pupils from eight years of age to seventy. Don't say you cannot learn music till you send for our free booklet and tuition offer. It will be sent by return mailfree. Address U. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Box 12, 19 Union Square, New York City.

BY MAIL Law, Bookkeeping, Shorthand, Me-LEARN chanical Drawing, Illustrating, English, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Business Forms, etc. MONEY BACK if not satisfied. 28 Colleges in 16 States; 17 years' success. 70,000 students. Indorsed by business men. For "Catalog H S." on Home Study, or "Catalog C" on attending College, write Deraughon's Bus. College Co., Nashville, Tenn.; St. Louis, Mo.; Raleigh, N. C.; Dallas, Tex.; Atlanta, Ga., or Evansville, Ind.—U. S. A.

Wanted for our Forged Steel Com-bination Hatchet, Wire Cutter, Staple Paller, etc., 5 tools is ene. Remarkable seller. You can sell more than you have any idea. If is simply a wonder. Agents sell as high as fifty a day. Get a sam-ple quick. Why work for small wages when you can make big money? Sample case also contains Hand Sewing Machine and Riveter combined for repairing harness, one Sticktight Buttoner Machine, I box Lice Killing Nest Eggs. Write today for catalog of novelties, spe-cial prices, plans to agents. FOR CATALOGUE cial prices, plans to agenta.

B. Foots Foundry Co., Dept. 611, Fredericktown, Ohio.

I Pay $25 for the rare half dollars of 1853 $40 for the Stellas of 1879, $200 for 1880, $30 for the gold dollars of 1875 and $60 for the three dollars 1875, $25

CERTAIN COINS

Beautiful, reliable, accurate clocks given free with $5.00 orders; several other striking and artistic styles.

designs, given fre given free with $10.00 orders.

ELMO ST.

By Mrs. Augusta J. Evans Wilson

Copyright, 1886, by G. W. Carlton
Copyright, 1894, by Mrs. Augustus J. Evans Wilson.
Copyright, 1896, by G. W. Dillingham Co.
[All Rights Reserved.]

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS

Bedna Earl slags "ille atood and measured the earth and thills.—" There is the report of two pixtols and Edna witnesses a dout where "boots whe satisfaction" is obtained, and flarry Dentfalls dead. The bright of the satisfaction is obtained, and flarry Dentfalls dead. The bright of the satisfaction is obtained, and flarry Dentfalls dead. The bright of the satisfaction is the satisfaction of the satisfaction, and when she arrives there are also a satisfaction, and when she arrives there are also satisfaction, and when she arrives there are also satisfaction, and when she arrives there are also satisfaction, and satisfaction of the satisfaction, and satisfaction is satisfaction. The work finished, the man tosses a gold coin, which Agron Hunt will not accept. Edna may have it. In the factor, She boards the train a Vagor remembrance of keen anguish. She is carried for by Mrs. Wood, who belie her her grandmouther died during her off the satisfaction of the she felt that henceforth the boy's evil spirit could be exorcised.

"Miss Earl, we never had a governess at all like you. They were old, and cross, and ugly, and didn't love to play chess, and could not sing, and I hated them! But I do like you, and I will try and be good."

He rested his head against her arm, and she turned and kissed his pale, broad forehead.

He noticed the incredulous smile that flitted across her face, and, after a moment's pause

CHAPTER XXV. (CONTINUED.)

S I had barely a glimpse of your uncle, I formed no opinion. Fellx, button your coat; it is getting cold."

When they reached home the children begged for some music, and Edna sat down before the piano, and played and sang, while Felix stood leaning on his crutches, gazing earnestly into the face of his teacher.

The song was Longfellow's "Rainy Day," and when she concluded it, the cripple laid his thin hand on hers and said:
"Sing the last verse again. I feel as if I should always be a good boy, if you would only sing that for me every day. Into each life some rain must fall?" Yes, lameness fell into mine."

While she compiled with his request, Edna saw tears gather in the large, sad eyes, and

She did not complete the parallel, but compressed her lips, took up her pen, and began owrite. On the following morning Mrs. Andrews came into the schoolroom, and, after kissing her children, turned blandly to the governess. "Miss Earl, I believe Mr. Manning called upon you last evening. Where did you know him?"

I never saw him until yesterday, but we

Andrews was summoned from the room.

Scarcely waiting till the door closed after himself the property of the country of the co remarks and extense and extense and extense and extense and supply, and diffive two to play cheen, and extense and supply, and diffive two to play cheen, and extense and supply, and diffive two plays cheen, and extense and will be the extense and the control of the plays broad for the plays and the turned and kined this plate, broad for the plays and the control of the plays and the plays and the control of the plays and the control of the plays a and—"

"Oh! yes, and of my handsome body! and my pretty feet!"
"My dear little boy, it is sinful for you to speak in that way, and God will punish you if you do not struggle against such feelings."
"I don't see how I can be punished any more than I have been already. To be a lame dwarf is the worst that can happen."
"Suppose you were poor and friendless—an orphan with no one to care for you? Suppose you had no dear, good, little sister like Hattle to love you? Now, Fellx, I know that the very fact that you are not as strong and well-grown as most boys of your age, only makes your mother and all of us love you more tenderly; and it is very ungrateful in you to talk so bitterly when we are trying to make you happy and good and useful. Look at little Lila, shut up in silence, unable to speak one word, or to hear a bird sing or a baby laugh, and yet see how merry and good-natured she is. How much more afflicted she is than you are! Suppose she was always fretting and complaining, looking miserable and sour, and out of humor do you think you would love her half as well as you do now?"

He made no reply, but his thin hands covered his sallow face.

Hattle came close to him, fat down on the carpet, and put her head on his knee. Her Uncle Grey had given her a pretty ring the day before, and now she silently and softly took it from her own finger, and slipped it on her brother's.

"Felix, you and Hattle were so delighted with that little poem which I read to you, that the late of the work of the work.

"Now, I want you both to learn to sing it, and I will teach Hattle the accompaniment. On Felix's birthday, which is not very distant, you can surprise your father and mother by singing it for them. In gratitude to the author I think every little child should sing it and call it 'Eugenie's Angel Song.' hattle, it is eleven o'clock, and time for you to practice your music-lesson."

The little girl climbed upon the piano-stool and began to count aloud, and after a while Edna bent down and put her hand on Felix's shoulder.

"You grieved your mother this morning and spoke very disrespectfully to her. I know you regret it and you ought to teil her so and ask her to forgive you. You would feel happier all day if you would only acknowledge your fault. I hear your mother in her own room; will you not go and kiss her?"

He averted his head and muttered:
"I don't want to kiss her."
"But you ought to be a dutiful son, and you are not. If you should ever be so unfortunate as to lose her, and stand as I do, motherless, in the world, you will regret the pain you gave her this morning. Oh! if I had the privilege of kissing my mother, I could bear almost any sorrow patiently. Felix, sometimes I think it requires more nobility of soul to ask pardon for our faults than to resist the temptation to commit them."

She turned away and busied herself in correcting his Latin exercise, and for some time the boy sat sullen and silent.

At length he sighed heavily, and, taking his crutches, came up to the table where she sat. "Suppose you tell my mother I am sorry I was disrespectful."

"Yes."
"Yes."
"Yes."
"Yes."

I was disrespectful."
"Felix, are you really sorry?"

"Yes."
"Well, then, go and tell her so, and she will love you a thousand times more than ever before. The confession should come from your line." own lips own lips."

He stood irresolute and sighed again:
"I will go if you will go with me."

She rose and they went to Mrs. Andrew's room. "Mrs. Andrew's room son wishes to say something which I think you will be glad say something which I think you will be glad to hear."

"Indeed! Well, Felix, what is it?"

"Mamma—I believe—I know I was very cross—and disrespectful to you— and Oh, mamma! I hope you will forgive me!"

He dropped his crutches and stretched out his arms, and Mrs. Andrews caught the boy to her bosom.

"My precious child! my darling! Of course I forgive you gladly. My dear son, if you only knew half how well I love you, you would not grieve me so often by your passionate temper. My darling!—"

She stooped to kiss him, and when she turned to look for the girlish form of the governess, it was no longer visible; mother and son were alone.

CHAPTER XXVI.

A KNOWLEDGE GREATER THAN GRIEF CAN DIM.

During the first few months after her removal to New York, Edna received frequent letters from Mrs. Murray and Mr. Hammond; but as winter advanced they wrote more rarely and hurriedly, and finally, many weeks elapsed without bringing any tidings from Le Bocage. St. Elmo's name was never mentioned, and while the girl's heart ached, she crushed it more ruthlessly day by day, and in retaliation imposed additional and unremitting toil upon her brain.

Mr. Manning had called twice to escort her to the libraries and art galleries, and occasionally he sent her new books, and English and French periodicals; but his chill, imperturbable calmness oppressed and embarrassed Edna, and formed a barrier to all friendly warmth in their intercourse. He so completely overawed her that in his august presence she was unable to do herself justice, and felt that she was not gaining ground in his good opinion. She was conscious of a vague disquiet, a painful restlessness, when in his company and under his cold, changeless eyes.

less eyes.

One morning in January, as she sat listening to Felix's recitations, Mrs. Andrews came into the schoolroom with an open note in one hand, and an exquisite bouquet in the other. "Miss Earl, here is an invitation for you to accompany Mr. Manning to the opera, tonight; and here, too, is a bouquet from the same considerate gentleman. As he does me the honor to request my company also, I came to confer with you before sending a reply. Of course, you will go?"

"Yes, Mrs. Andrews, if you will go with me."

"Miss Earl, is this you."
"No, sir; I was here once before with Mr.
Andrews and his children."
"I judge from your writings that you are particularly fond of music."
"Yes, sir; I think few persons love it better than I do."
"What style do you prefer?"

than I do."
"What style do you prefer?"
"Sacred music—oratorios rather than eperas."

is than you are! Suppose she was always fretting and complaining, looking miserable and sour, and out of humor, do you think you would love her half as well as you do now?" He made no reply, but his thin hands covered his sallow face.

Hattle came close to him, fat down on the carpet, and put her head on his knee. Her Uncle Grey had given her a pretty ring the day before, and now she silently and softly took it from her own finger, and slipped it on her brother's.

"Felix, you and Hattle were so delighted with that little poem which I read to you, that I have tried to set it to music for you. The tune does not suit it exactly, but we can use it until I find a better one."

She went to the plano and sang that pretty nursery ballad, "JOUJOU, THE ANGEL OF THE PLAYTHINGS," and Felix partly-formal strength of the plano and grievances.

"Sacred music—oratorios rather than operas."

"I cok, Miss Earl! In the box directly opposite is the celebrated Sir Roger Percival, the including the posite, is the celebrated Sir Roger Percival, the including the posite, is the celebrated Sir Roger Percival, the send the passe and sill bear and it is the celebrated sir Roger Percival, the send the posite is the celebrated Sir Roger Percival, the send the posite is the celebrated Sir Roger Percival, the send the has beat with made and the has not more then about whom all Gotham is running mad. If he has not more sense than mort men of his age, his head will be completely turned by the flattery heaped upon him. However, he really is very agreeable; I have met him several times. He has been watching us for some minutes. Ah! there is a bow for me; and one I presume for you, Mr. Manning."

"Yes, I knew him abroad. His brain is strong enough to bear all the adulation New Yorkers offer his title."

Edna looked into the opposite box, and saw then as the curtain rose on the first act of

uary

"Any Old Place I Can Hang My Hat Is Home Sweet Home to Me."

Copyright, 1901. by Shafiro, Bernstein & Von Tilzer, 45 W. 28th St., New York. 53 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. English copyright secured. All rights reserved.

SPECIAL OFFER This month we publish "Any Old Place I Can Hang My Hat Is Home Sweet Home to Me," one of our usual and famous successes, and you will thoroughly enjoy it. Knowing that many of our readers desire to secure Full Sheet Music Size Copies of this Song, we have arranged with the publishers to offer you one copy free as a club premium for lier," "Nilver Heels," "Cheyenne," "Happy Heine," and "Moonlight," all favorites. The music is printed on the regular size, heavy-weight, sheet-music paper with a beautiful Illuminated Colored Cover, exactly the style you would buy at any music store, Get up your club at once and send to C. MFORT, Augusta, Maine.

The publishers of the above music are Messrs. Whitney, Warner Co., Detroit, Mich. They have just issued a fine 50-page music catalogue containing extracts, same as we print here above, of some of the most popular late Marches, Waitzes, Songs, and Dances; they will send this catalogue free to all who mention COMFORT.

FREE CATALOGUE therein. Write them today and please say you saw this announcement in COMFORT.

"Ernani." she turned to the stage, and gave her entire attention to the music.

At the close of the second act Mrs. Andrews seems and the seems are seen and the second act Mrs. Andrews seems and the seems are seen and the seems and the seems are seems and the seems and the seems and the seems are seems and the seems and the seems and the seems and the seems are seems and the seems and th "I mean how are all my friends?"
"I mean how are all my friends?"
"Mrs. Murray is very well. Miss. Estelle. ditto. Mr. Hammond has been sick, but was better and able to preach before I left. I brought a letter for you from him, but unfortunately left it in the pocket of my traveling coat. Edna, you have changed very much since I saw you last."
"In what respect, Mr. Leigh?"
"The crash of the orchestra filled the house, and people turned once more to the stage.
Standing with his arms folded, Mr. Manning saw the earnest look on Gordon's face as, with his arm resting on the back of Edna."

chair, he talked in a low, eager tone; and a pitying smile partly curved his mouth as he noticed the expression of pain on the girl's face, and heard her say coldly:
"No, Mr. Leigh; what I told you then I repeat now. Time has made no change."
The opera ended, the curtain fell, and an enthusiastic audience called out the popular prima donna.
While bouquets were showered upon her, Mr. Manning stooped and put his hand on Edna's:

prima donna.

While bouquets were showered upon her, Mr. Manning stooped and put his hand on Edna's:

"Shall I throw your tribute for you."

She hastily caught the bouquet from his fingers, and replied:

"Oh! no, thank you! I am so selfish, I cannot spare it."

"I shall call at ten o'clock tomorrow to deliver your letter," said Gordon, as he stood hat in hand.

"I shall be glad to see you, Mr. Leigh."

He shook hands with her and with Mr. Manning, to whom she had introduced him, and left the box.

Sir Roger Percival gave his arm to Mrs. Andrews, and the editor drew Edna's cloak over her shoulders, took her hand and led her down the steps.

As her little gloved fingers rested in his, the feeling of awe and restraint melted away, and looking into his face she said:

"Mr. Manning, I do not think you will ever (CONTINUED ON FACE 18.)

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 19.)

Hats, and How to Make Them

By Comfort's Home Milliner

EDITOR'S NOTE:—This is the third article on Hat Making. We invite you to read the first installment appearing in COMFORT'S November number. Any questions you desire answered relating to this department should be addressed to Comfort's Home Milliner. Augusta, Maine.

Gauze wings and butterflies are made of chiffon, or tulle, or veiling—almost anything that is thin and delicate. The ends of worn-out veils are often perfectly fresh and may be used. Beads and spangles are put on as desired. They may be made of any color.

To make a wing, take a piece of ordinary hat wire, white if a light-colored covering is to be used, and black if a black or dark wing is to be made. Bend the wire into the shape of a wing, as long as desired; eight or nine inches is none too long. Then cover smoothly with gauze or whatever material is to be used, drawing closely over edge and sewing close to wire. Cut all edges off as closely as possible, so the back side will look neat. Then sew beads or spangles close together around edge, close to wire so the wire will be covered, on both sides of wing. Sew spangles or beads all over surface of wing, in circles or groups, or in any attractive way, that occurs to you. Little pieces of bead trimming may be ripped up and the beads used. If you have no beads or spangles, embroider solid.

GAUZE WING.

dots in bright-colored silks, or paint with water-colors. Many odd and beautiful things can be made of odds and ends of chiffon, ribbon, silk, spangled trim ming, beads, veiling, etc., and we will ate and describe of these, showing size it is to save all raps of material off colored silks, or paint with water-colors. Many odd and beautiful things can be made in this way by an ingenious person, with almost nothing for material.

Butterflies are made in the same way; simply shape the wire as best you can to simulate a butterfly, twisting several strands together for the body; wind the body with some of the material, but do not put spangles on it; put on rows of small beads, aroses, and the turllustration, Fig. 2, the use to which a roses, and the turllustration, Fig. 2, the use to which a roses, and the turllustration, Fig. 2, the use to which aroses, and the turllustration, Fig. 2, the use to which aroses, and the turllustration, Fig. 2, the use to which aroses, and the turllustration, Fig. 2, the use to which aroses, and the turllustration, Fig. 2, the use to which aroses, and the turllustration, Fig. 2, the use to which aroses, and the turllustration, Fig. 2, the use to which aroses, and the turllustration, Fig. 2, the use to which aroses, and the turllustration, Fig. 2, the use to which aroses, and the turllustration, Fig. 2, the use to which aroses, and the turllustration, Fig. 2, the use to which aroses, and the turllustration, Fig. 2, the use to which aroses, and the turllustration, Fig. 2, the use to which aroses, and the turllustration, Fig. 2, the use to which aroses, and the turllustration, Fig. 2, the use to which aroses, and the turllustration, Fig. 2, the content of the hair for dead of the wings arose arose arose arose arose arose arose arose arose of the material, this so allow the best way arose arose arose arose arose arose arose of the risting to the same way; simply and the wire as best you can to simulate a butterfle, twisting several strands together for the body; the twist of the material, wings and butterflies, used on either black or white gauze.

Ribbon roses are made of any color, regardless of nature, just as we are now using so many artificial roses in impossible blue, green and brown shades. To make a rose, take a double piece of hat wire, six inches long; at the doubled end cover with a fold of satin ribbon; this is the center of flower. Use six-inch ribbon doubled, if possible; if not, use ribbon three or four inches wide single. If you do not wish to cut the ribbon, gather one edge and draw up as needed—start at center and fasten end of ribbon to end already put on wire. Draw ribbon around this center free enough to ruffle; then draw ribbon down and fasten, leaving a large scallop, which resembles a rose petal, when several rows have been made; let the ribbon run out fuller as you get toward the outer leaves of flower. It is easier to make a natural looking rose by cutting the ribbon into certain lengths, say six inches and laying each length into plaits (on one edge), and turning the top of both ends down, thus forming a fairly good-looking rose leaf. When as many leaves as are necessary to make a good full rose have been formed, attach each to the stem and shape as nearly as possible like a natural rose. It is difficult to describe just how to do it, but it can easily be acquired when trying, always keeping in mind the appearance of a rose.

If possible, wind stem with something green—gauze ribbon, or paper. Sprays of green leaves can be bought for a small sum, if you don't happen to have any old sprays in the house, and after two or three roses and buds are made and the stems wired naturally to a long stem, to form a spray, between the roses. If you are trimming a hat similar to the one in our initial, do not fasten the roses together, for you can trim the hat better by putting in each rose and bud separately, among the folds of silk or velvet of which the hat is made. This particular model is brown felt, with folds of three shades of brown relvet, and roses made of shaded brown ribb Ribbon roses are made of any color, regardless of

Our next article will take up the sewing of straw and the making of flower and foliage hats.

SOLO GUITARS INSTRUCTION BOOK This is a full size solo instrument of American manufacture, well and carefully made with a cherry finish and richly ornamented. It is all strung with six strings, gives a clear rich tone, easy to hold, as durable and satisfactory as a $10.00 Guitar. With every instrument we give Free a SelfInstruction Book; by its aid anyone can easily learn to play by note. We guarantee satisfaction. Send us your name and address for 2i packages of Bluine to sell at 10 cents each. Every housewife can make good use of Bluine on washdays. Return our $2.40 and we will immediately send you the guitar and instruction book. Write today.

BLUINE MFG. CO. (The Old Reliable Firm.) Concord Jungi., Mass.

Exquisite tokens of Love, 25c., 50c. and 81 each.

MADISON VALENTINE CO., Madison, Conn.

FEDS THAT DO NOT DISAPPOINT Sold on The Ford Plan, which guarantees satisfaction and saves you FORD SEED CO., Dept. 62 Ravenna, Ohio.

Send us your address and we will show you be furnish the work and teach by our fee, you work in the locality where you live. Send us your address and we will show the plant the business fully, remember we guarantee a clear profit of $16 revery day's work absolutely sure. Write at once, to late that MANUFACTURING CO., Box 1700 Detroit, Mich.

Easy Money for You. OUICK SELLER.

Absolutely new. Every woman that sews has need of it. Sells for $.50. Write immediately for liberal proposition to agents, stating experience. CHASBERT CO., Dept. E., Stoughton, Mass.

FREE Beginners and advanced pupils can obtain full course of home instruction on Piano-Organ, Violin, Guitar, Mandollu, Banjo, or Cornet, without cost. Send for our Free Book which tells you how to learn to play any one of these instruments, and

An American Movement Watch with Solid Gold-Plated case, warranted to keep correct time; equal in appearance to a Solid Gold Watch warranted for 22 years; also a Gold-Filled Ring, set with a Sparkling Gem, are given free to any one for selling only 3 Jewelry Noveltles at 10 cents each. Bend name and address for Jewelry, When sold, send us the 22 and we send you the Gold Watch and Ring, Write today. Address

EAGLE WATCH COMPANY, Dept 67. East Boston, Mass.

TEN CENTS PAYS for this 10-in. Eyelet Centerpiece stamped on Royal Linene and two full skeins Lister Cotton for embroidering the design. This is an introduction offer. We send with it our new large 1907 Art Embroidery Catalogue. All for 10 cts. coin or stamps. Rend today. Fully guaranteed. CORONA MFG. CO., Dept. 26 291-3 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

POST CARD & 6C.

CALIFORNIA EARTHQUAKE

We have collected a large assortment of Photo Views of San Francisco and Vicin-ity, which are pub-lished in Post Card

Size.

They unfold in a long anoramic heavy paper theet and give one a perfect idea of the great description wrought by fire -

Francisco. some of the House re as follows:

A View of Burning City at Buk, taken from Bay: Looking South Front Robbert Ruins of Seven Burning City at Buk, taken from Bay: Looking South Front Ruins of Seven Built House Ruins of Ruins of Ruins of Seven Ruins of Seven Ruins on Kearney St., Chronter and Call Buildings; Marchaud's Restaurant: Baking Bread for Refugees; View down Ellis St.; Union Square showing Bird Cage; Valencia and Market St. Ruins; St. Ignatius Church and College; St. Dominic
Church; V. M. C. A. Building; St. John's Church; View of City from Ferry Tower; Lodge in Children's Playground; Golden Gate
Park; Preparing Coffee for Refugees.

We cannot give you any idea of these Viewby say amount of description, but there are Twenty Views 31-2x51-2inches sach and each Photois really worth what we now charge you for the

Something Happened! MISSING Something Kille READERS LISTEN SHARP, DON'T MISS-BEST THING

Hundred years coming, here at last, full grown—so startling will say it's impossible—miracles don't happen, but wait, don't worry. LADIES, YOUR PRAYERS ANSWERED—THERE'S NO MORE WASH DAY! GLORY HALLELUJAH! IT'S DEAD! LAID AWAY! WIPED OUT FOREVER.

without rubbing-ruining health, looks-when they could wash, get dinner, see friends, indulge in recreation without fatigue-when woman thought no more of washing clothes than to get a simple meal. That glorious day has come. The world's full wash boards, so-called washing machines, yet wash day same as ever—still, long, dreary day—no easier, no shorter, no better. Use wash board or washing machine, it's drudgery—long hours, hard work—backache—a day no woman forgets. Invention that killed wash day named EASY WAY—name tells whole story—easy on clothes—easy used—kept clean—handled—easy on women—makes washing easy—easy to buy and sell.

Not called a machine—powers inside concealed—caution the way it gets dirt—has awful appetite for dirt—increases more it gets—goes after all the dirt in all the clothes at same time—little but mighty—silent, but powerful—uses no spirits, yet works in darkness.

OPERATED ON STOVE—move knob occasionally—that's all-scarcely anything to do but wait between batches -child can do it. All iron and steel-always ready-sets away on shelf.

Entirely unlike old methods. Verily, wash day is dead—EASY WAY settled that—woman's joy, satisfaction, their God-send. Less than an hour cleans washing which before took all day—cleans all clothes, finest laces, curtains, etc., in about one-tenth time without rubbing, squeezing, packing, pressing—without chemicals to injure goods. Saves 52 days drudgery yearly—makes woman's hardest work easiest household duty saves clothes, labor, fuel, health, looks. Surprises all—sounds strange, is strange, but listen, it's no experiment, going on daily. You

The world's watched for the man to cut wash day in two. He lives—taken more than half—left only minutes—cut so much wash day's all over, changed—there's new way cleaning clothes—different from anything known—new principles, ideas, methods, NEW EVERYTHING. Wonderful, but true, family washing cleaned with no more work than getting a simple meal, less time—no rubbing, squeezing, pounding, packing, pressing, no wash day. Sayes me turning old washer for hours.

cleaned with no more work than getting a simple meal, less time—no rubbing, squeezing, pounding, packing, pressing, no injury—no drudgery—that's past. Good-by wash boards, washing machines, laundries—throw them away—the EASY WAY is here to bless humanity. Women have prayed for death of wash day—for clean clothes alth, looks—when they could wash, get recreation without fatigue—when woman clothes than to get a simple meal. That prick's full wash boards, so-called washing me as ever—still, long, dreary day—no Use wash board or washing machine, and work—backache—a day no woman ash day named EASY WAY—name tells whole by used—kept clean—handled—easy on kes washing easy—easy to buy and sell, a machine—powers inside concealed—way it gets dirt—has a wfull appetite for clean. Satisfactory in every respect."

Solwn. My Mays. Says: "Find check to cover one dozen 'Easy Ways." Easy Way greatest invention for womanhood, forever abolishing miserable cover one dozen 'Easy Ways." Easy Way greatest invention for womanhood, forever abolishing miserable cover one dozen 'Easy Ways. Says: "Find check to cover one dozen 'Easy Ways." Easy Way greatest invention for womanhood, forever abolishing miserable cover one dozen 'Easy Ways. Says: "Find check to cover one dozen 'Easy Ways." Easy Way greatest invention for womanhood, forever abolishing miserable cover one dozen 'Easy Ways. Says: "Beat of washer accompany all others to the Dump. Sells itself." 1. BECK, GA., writes: "Enclose order. Find 'Easy Way as represented. Worked 4 days and have 15 orders." J. T. PEAY, N. C., says:—"Been out 2 days—sold 1 dozen, for which enclose order. Everybody is carried away that sees it work." CHAS. BOWLES, User-wises: "Where tried have givengeneral satisfaction." J. McGEE, TENN." writes: "One young lady cleaned day's washing by old method in one hour with Easy Way. Another in 45 minutes. Everything as clean as it could be." D. W. McMILLAN, MO., writes: "Ship 12 Easy Ways. My wife had two weeks' washing. Done it all in 2 hours and 12 minutes. Also done t

BEST EVER HAPPENED FOR AGENTS, SALESMEN,

MANAGERS-MEN OR WOMEN-at home or traveling, all or part time-showing-taking orders-appointing agents. WAY" new. Nothing like it. Demand world-wide-agents reaping harvest of dollars. When operated people stop, look, listen, crowd, push, squeeze, miss engagements, get excited—watch it as though a miracle occurred. 12 see—10 buy. Write today for special Agents Plan. World unsupplied. Act quick.

Send postal card anyhow for full description, valuable informa-tion, testimonials, famous copyright "Woman's Farewell." All free, Harrison Mfg. Co., 147 Harrison Building, Cincinnati, O.

ST. ELMO

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 17.)

know half how much I thank you for all your kindness to an unknown authorling. I have enjoyed the music very much indeed. How is Lila tonight?"

A slight tremor crossed his lips; the petrified hawthorn was quivering into life. "She is quite well, thank you. Pray, what do you know about her? I was not aware that I had ever mentioned her name in your presence."

"Go to sleep at once; do not sit up to work "My pupil. Felix, is her most devoted knight, and I see her almost every afternoon when I go with the children to Central Park."

They reached the carriage where the Englishman stood talking to Mrs. Andrews, and when Mr. Manning had handed Edna in, he turned and said something to Sir Roger, who laughed lightly and walked away. During the drive Mrs. Andrews talked volubly of the foreigner's ease and elegance and fastidious musical taste, and Mr. Manning listened courteously and bowed coldly in reply. When they reached home she invited him to dinner on the following Thursday, to meet Sir Roger Percival.

As the editor bade them good night, he said to Edna:
"Go to sleep at once; do not sit up to work tonight."

"Has St. Elmo Murray written to you about his last whim?"

"I do not correspond with Mr. Murray."

"Everybody wonders what droll freak will next seize him. Reed, the blacksmith, died several months ago, and, to the astonishment of our people, Mr. Murray has taken his orphan, Huldah, to Le Bocage; has adopted her I believe; at all events, is educating her."

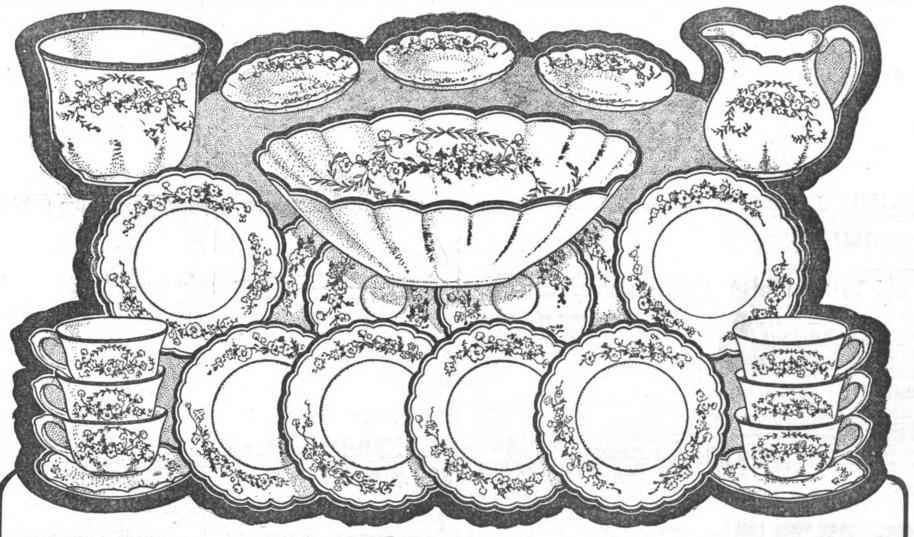

Edna's face grew radiant.

"Oh! I am glad to hear it! Poor little Huldah needed a friend, and she could not possibly have fallen into kinder hands than Mr. Murray's."

"There certainly exists some diversity of opinion on that subject. He is rather too grim a guardian, I fancy, for one so young as Huldah Reed."

"Is Mr. Hammond teaching Huldah?"
"Oh! no. Herein consists the wonder. Murray himself hears her lessons, so Estelle told my sister. Apropos! rumor announces the approaching marriage of the cousins. My sister informed me that it would take place early in the spring."
"Do you allude to Mr. Murray and Miss Harding?"
"I do. They will go to Europe immediately after their marriage."
Gordon looked searchingly at his companion, but saw only a faint, incredulous smile cross her calm face.
"My sister is Estelle's confidante, so you see I speak advisedly. I know that her trousseau has been ordered from Paris."

(continued on page 23.)

YOU CAN EARN this magnificent full size and gold lined dinner set so easily—so very easily—that there is really no work to it at all. You do not have to canvass and tire yourself out for this splendid premium as you do for other inferior premiums. All we need is a friendly word, a recommendation from you.

AND the dinner set is so beautiful that the picture does not begin to show the beauty of this superior china. Each dish is full size and decorated with the prettiest arbutus blossom flowers in all their natural colors, and every dish is gold lined. An ornament for the most refined home. Even if you become very rich and have the finest kind of house furnishings you will always be proud to entertain your friends with this dinner set. Just think! This chinaware won the gold medal at the St. Louis World's Fair. Among all the many exhibits of both foreign and American potteries this was the only chinaware that won the gold medal. We quarantee that you will find the gold medal trade mark on the bottom of every dish.

I am giving away $75,000 in premiums during the next few months — just to advertise our business. You can have your share, for I need your help and we are going to pay you well. can get this splendid dinner set without paying us one cent. We want to introduce our new style of art pictures and we want you to show these pictures to your friends. By a special process we can produce these pictures so they exactly resemble famous paintings costing many thousands of dollars. They are lithographed in many colors and you will be surprised when you see them; they are so artistic and pleasing and the whole room looks brighter when one of these pictures is on the wall.

HERE are the pictures. We flustrate here-you are to introduce. The reproduction can give but a faint idea of the deady of these pictures with their many colors and artistic designs. They are pictures at for the most refined home.

If, as we suggest, you will hang a rew of the pictures a your parlor and show them to your visitors, the full ize dinner set and hand decorated motto plate will be ours in a few hours time. Here's a letter Ireceived today:

She Earned the Dinner Set IN A FEW HOURS.

DEAR Siz: Enclosed you will find the money, $3.50, and the fourteen names. I received the pictures the 17th and went out the next day and got all—for which you agreed to send me the full size dinner set and the extra premium. Yours. GOLDIE GURBER.

premium. Yours, GOLDIE GURBER.

The pictures cover a wide variety of subjects—to suit every taste, people, animais, fruit, etc. So that one or the other of the pictures will appeal to every kind of taste. We send you only 14 pictures because we know hove easy 15 is to find only fourteen of your intimate friends to accept the pictures on this introductory offer. Such a small lot of pictures is distributed almost before you know it. There will be less than fourteen people to speak to, for some will take two or three pictures. Explain to your friends that this is an introductory offer made simply to advertise my business in your neighborhood, and that is why we want to be extra tiberal.

Remember, just as soon as you have disposed $5.50 collected, we send you the magnificent gold medal dinner set free, and besides, if you write at once, the gold medal, gold rimmed motto plate is free, ABSO-LUTELY FREE to all our agents. Better get the 14 pletures (prepaid) at once; so sign the coupon now.

For a limited time we are willing to introduce these pictures on a special arrangement, only 25¢ being collected with each picture, and we want you as our agent to help us.

You need not send us any money. Send your name and address and we will send you prepaid fourteen (14) of the pictures complete. Remember, we send all the pictures prepaid.

Hang up a few of the pictures in your parlor and invite your friends to come and see the beautiful colored pictures just as here described. All you need to do is to give the 14 pictures, on our special plan, to your visitors at only 25c each (or 2 for 50c). On our plan it will take no effort on your part to quickly dispose of only 14 pictures. —everybody will be so glad to get them. Only 14 pictures to distribute among 14 friends or 2 pictures to each of 7 friends! 14 times 25 cents is tures to each of 7 friends! 14 times 25 cents is $3.50. Send us the $3.50 and we will send you at once the beautiful gold medal dinner set for the favor you have shown us. A full size gold medal set of china for a few minutes of your time!

An Extra Gift

FREE to All Our Agents
This motto plate is FREE to our agents. It is positively FREE Free means free. But you should write at once if you want to get the motto plate free besides earning the dinner set.

sse motto plates were among the famous exhibition at the St. Louis orld's Fair and received a Gold Medal. Each plate has the gold medal amped on the bottom. You can use it as a fancy plate for your table, byery plate is 8½ inches in diameter, has a heavy gold rim over ½ of an ench and another narrower gold rim inside; decorated by hand with beau-mendation in introducing our pictures as per above offer. You need and mail in an envelope. We'll then send you all the pictures at once prepaid.

Remember — the motto plate free besides the dinner set if you write at once.

M. S. ROBERTS. Manager

M. S. ROBERTS. Manager

So Wabsah Avenue.

Decartment 1121 (Chicago, Illinois)

Send the dinner set is your need of the dinner set is your result o Your Name

Chicago,

600 Second-Hand BICYCLES 83 to 88. Bargain list free. Dept. C3, Mead Cycle Co., Chicago

$36 Weekly for Agents, selling Self-Wringing Floor Mops. Wm. Wiley, Evanston, Ill.

VISITING GARDS Good quality, labor styles, onto make seatly private the property of the 25 Named the transfer of the PA Named the PAINTER, BEEBE PLAIN, VT.

Colored Postals. 20c. Frosted Love Scenes, Illuminated, Satin Florals. Souvenir Art Co., West Haven, Conn.

PLAYS Large List. Dialogues. Speakers Hand Books, Drills. Catalogue free T. S. DENISON, Pab. Dept. S. Chicago

SONG WRITERS, send us your poems. We compose the music. Simple songs often make great hits. Established & years. 6ROOM MUSIC CO., 8 Steleway Hall, Chicago.

PICTURE AGENTS Portraits and Frames—lowes Our "SEPIOLE" a great seller. Write for cotalog and terms of free samples. MODEL PORTRAIT CO., 188-2 S. Western Avenue, Chicago.

FOR 40c WE MAIL Webster's Modern Dictionary and beautiful Oval Mirror; or extra heavy silver plated Baby Spoon and Mirror for 35c. Art Novelty Co., Buffalo, N.Y.

ELECTRIC Supplies, Telephones, Novelties, Dynabelts, books, toys, Big Catalog 4c. We undersell ali. Want agents. OHIO ELECTRIC WORKS, Cleveland, Ohio.

CARDS Sand to comp for New CAMPLE ROOK of all the FILEST Styries in Good Serviced and Calling Cards for 1807. We sail GRAVITHE CARDS, No Track CHIOR CARD CO., B S. Columbus, Oble-

916 CARDS 20 New Songs, 100 Rich and Rasy and 1 Acquainmage Cards, Standard Seau Catcher, &c. A. CROWN CARD CO., Columbus, Ohio. 991 Silk Prince, Envelopa, Gold Berel Eder, CARDS Verset, 123 Rich and Rard Jokes, I Pask Acquaintance and I Take Escort Carls, New Beau Catcher and Dir Sample Rook LUBBUS CLAB CO., 139 F. St., Columbus, Ohlo.

294 Hidden Name, Friendahlp, Silt Friese Control of Chine Carle and Frentium Articles. Sample Albam of Piner Carle and Frentium Articles. Sample Albam of Piner Carle and Frentium Articles. Sample Albam of Sensi stamp, OHIO CAED COMPANT, CADIA, OHIO.

CASH FOR YOUR FUR no matter where you are. If you trap or buy fur write today for our new plan to make extra so on fur. Corry Hide & Fur Co., Box 30, Corry, Pa.

COLD LAID RINGS FREE

COMIC POST CARDS FREE story paper 3 months on trial free. Address The Household, 73 Crawford Blk., Topeks

We Will Make You a Present of $100.00 give you a splendid suit of clothes every ninety days, enlarge your picture free and pay you a salary of $85.00 per month and all traveling expenses, with our Draft for $50.00 when engaged to take orders for the greatest and most reliable Portait House in the World. All this will be guaranteed. Address R. D. MARTEL, Deps. D 4, Chicago, Ill.

TWO RINGS FREE I

Sell 13 Boxes GEM BREATH
PERFUME at lot. a box. Send us the money $1.20 and we give you.
PREE these two Solid Cold laid Ringes, one set with dark Emeral and two brillsels the other with Twin Gernets divided by three pearls. No money wanted till goods are sold. We take back all not sold,
Your friends buy them. Extenpresent with each box. Address Dept. Il GLOBE GEM OO. Emerals E. E. GLORE GEM CO., Lensdale, E. L.

I will send a full two weeks' treatment of my new Epilepsy Remedy and my "Guide for Epileptics" to anyone wishing to test it. In many cases the fits are stopped by this FREE treatment alone. Try it for yourse'f and see what a wonderful change it will make ou. Address Dr. Chas. W. Green, Monroe St., Battle Creek, Michigan.

COLD Watch AND RING FREE graved on both sides, proper sizes; requal to 35-year SOLID GOLD WAYCH; to control to 25-year SOLID GOLD WAYCH; to late as a GENUINE $50 DIAMOND, for sail Dismothy articles at 100 seek. It is not address and we will send or startly perpaid; when sold seek gravity perpaid; when sold seek land we will send watch and what for the said watch and with the said watch and with the said watch and we will send watch and we will send watch and then

We want more salesmen in all parts of the Country to sell our goods to grucery dealers. No canvasing. We pay from $75 to $100 per month and traveling expenses. Experience not necessary. We have the best system ever adopted per the part of the territory is all taken. Iddress Purity C. R. Co., Chicage, ill.

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 9.)

cember issue, but I have to keep my work months ahead, so that in the event of sickness you might not miss your monthly laugh. Poor Elton, pretty tough to be cut up like that in one's youth. Life's a hard proposition for a man with health, strength, and all his limbs and faculties in good order, but with one leg and arm gone, and that arm his right one, this poor boy has indeed a sorry prospect before him. I can sympathize with Elton, for I got badly smashed up in my boyhood myself, and the doctors wanted to take my left arm oil, but my mother just wouldn't let 'em, and to her I owe my arm today. It got all right in time, but I saw a gleam of the instruments, and I've not forgotten them, and my heart goes out but I saw a gleam of the instruments, and I've not forgotten them, and my heart goes out very tenderly to this poor kid, who apparently has no home, and no parents, or he would not be in an institution. The citizens of Circle-ville ought to provide an artificial limb for this boy, it only costs $100, and there ought to be enough wealthy people in a town of 7,000 inhabitants to fix this poor lad up in as good shape as possible. However, nothing seems to have been done, and maybe COMFORT millions will come to the rescue. Anyway you can all write to this little hero and cheer him up, and let him know there are kind and loving hearts in this world. Better put stamps on your letters if you want to impress him with the truth of this statement. Boys don't care for sentiment when it comes in an empty letter. Gush won't buy wooden legs.

Frank Spaugy of Severy, Kansas, writes:

Frank Spaugy of Severy, Kansas, writes:

DEAR UNCLE CHARLIE:

I will give a good home to a nice refined old gentleman, for company, or to any two of San Francisco's homeless, over twelve years of age, or to a man and his wife, or to C. Camissa (and two bables), of 2615 Octavia Street.

Frank Spaugy.

Frank has a big heart. If traveling was not a tedious job for me, I'd pack up my one sock and ear mitts, and make tracks for Kansas right away.

Comfort's League of Cousins

For the information of those who have not been regular readers of Comfort, and others who are becoming interested in the Cousins' League for the first time, and are ignorant of its aim and objects, the following facts will be of interest:

The League of Cousins was founded as a means of bringing the scattered members of Comport's immense circle of readers into one big, happy family. Its aim is to promote a feeling of kinship and relationship among all readers. It was primarily started as a society for the juvenile members of Comport's family, only, but those of more mature years clamored for admittance so persistently that it was deemed advisable to impose no age limit; thus all are eligible to admittance into our League provided they conform to its rules and are animated by the child spirit.

Though the older folks are admitted, the young folks will always be the first consideration, and Uncle Charlie will write his page with a view of entertaining our young people solely.

Those who wish to join our League can do so by subscribing to Comport for one year or inducing some one else to subscribe, and sending us their subscription. No premiums will be given those sending in members for the League.

If you are already a subscriber you can join by renewing your subscription, or subscribing a year ahead. You can have the membership card and button sent to yourself and the Comport to a friend, if you already take the paper. All who join the League will receive a button and a handsome certificate of membership, also Comport for one year, and the privilege of having their names in the letter its.

How to become a Member

In order to become a bear of course.

How to become a Member

the letter list.

How to become a Member

In order to become a full-fledged League member and procure a card and button, you must become a paid-in-advance Comport subscriber by sending fifteen cents to the subscription department, for yourself, or renew your own subscriptions now. When you do this, send five cents extra, or twenty cents in all, and say that you wish to join Comport's League of Cousins.

The five cents additional pays your membership fee and for the League button and membership fee and for the League button and membership offers are hereby withdrawn and only those who strictly comply with our above offer will be admitted to membership. It costs but twenty cents to join the League, a League which promises to be the greatest society of young people on earth, Never in the world's history was so much given for so little. Never could twenty cents be invested to such advantage, and bring such splendid returns. Don't hesitate, join us at once and induce your friends to do likewise.

All those League members, who desire a list of the cousins residing in their several states, can secure the same by sending a stamped addressed envelope and five cents in stamps to Nellie Rutherford, 1442 Pacific St., Brooklyn, N. Y., our grand secretary. Some of the lists contain hundreds of names, so our secretary must have some triffing remuneration as she is devoting the whole of her time to this work.

League Sunshine and Work of Mercy

League Sunshine and Work of Mercy for January have the best system ever adopted Deslers buy at sight. Write today before the territory is all taken, a month dress Purity C. R. Co., Chingo, III.

FREE TRIAL OFFER.

AT HALF PRICE, TRIAL LAN, on our FREE TRIAL PLAN, on the most liberal terms and payment conditions ever heard of for 1907, we offer every style of the world famous Beckwith Organ Co's high grade parior, home, church and school ORGANS. Received highest award at World's Fair. THE BECKWITH ORGAN THE BEC FACTURIES & Louisville.

Paul. Minn., produce higher for your kindness to him. My appeal brought him fifty-seven letters, some money, poetals, a tie, penwiper, etc., and you made him as happy as a lark. God bless you for that. Keep him fifty-seven letters, some money, poetals, a tie, penwiper, etc., and you made him as happy as a lark. God bless you for that. Keep him mind. J. W. Back, Overlook Farm, Easton, Pa., bedridden and helpless, desires cheery letters and postals. Writes beautifully, and wishes all to know bis cure for bed sores, which he claims to be unexcelled. Take the white of an electer seventhing in organic process of the bodd. The correction is simply so you can get a god and it will eventually form a salve. Place salve you can get free trial plan, no payment down method. 25 years quarantee, great challenge test and comparison offer. VOI WILL RECEIVE THE MOST Certificates free, and you will get our valuable free, and you can get free a man's or woman's marking certificates free, and you can get free a man's or woman's marking certificates free, and you can get free a man's or woman's marking certificates free, but will not the profit Sharing Certificates you can get free a man's or woman's marking certificates free, but will not the profit Sharing Certificates you can get free a man's or woman's marking contractions, parior table, volin out it, buy's suit, mante clock; more valuable articles, like a sewing machine, furniture, dinner set, burgey, fee for larger amounts in certificates, worte to be profit sharing can be a selection of the profit sharing certificates for the profit sharing can be a selection and old of the profit sharing can be a selection and old of the profit sharing can be a selection and old of t girl, needs your love and sympathy. William Wiley (28), Yap, W. Va., tied in knots by rheumatism, head drawn down on his breast, Wiley (28), Yap, W. Va., tied in knots by rheumatism, head drawn down on his breast, can't walk, or lie down, sits in a chair night and day. Send him books, papers, letters, stamps and cheer—he is poor and needy. Ellen Kinney of Brockport, N. Y., wishes to thank those big-hearted souls who have helped to buy the lumber for her house. My appeal for her brought $40, and I'd like to print the names of the donors, but it would take too much space. God bless 'em, say I. Ellen's house is not finished yet, and further help is needed. A little more help, and she will have a house of her own for all time. She is helpless and bedridden. Rebecca Whitefield, Finleyson, R. F. D., 2, Ga. Did you get her little book? Needs stationery and stamps badly. Sarah H. Duncan, Carr, Stone County, Mo., has been in bed twenty years. Can't lie down, sits propped up with pillows. Her only pleasure is the mail. She wants books (not musty old papers, remember), and other reading, and will reply to those who send stamps. Not a stamp, but stamps. Don't send one stamp and expect it back on a letter. That's making yourself a nuisance, not a help. Sally E. Pennypacker, Phoenixville, R. F. D., 3, Pa., wants letters, stamps and stationery—don't pass her by.

Now I think I have given you a good bunch of laughs this month, and I hope you will feel all the better for reading my sass. Don't forget that the three who send in most new members to the C. L. O. C. will get an autographed book of Uncle Charlie's poems. Be good till we meet again, and win those books some of you.

Lovingly yours,

Uncle Charlie

Cure for Liquor and Tobacco.

The Kansas Anti-Liquor and Todacco.

The Kansas Anti-Liquor Society is mailing free a recipe for the cure of the liquor habit. It can be given secretly in food. Also one for the tobacco habit that can be given secretly. The only request they make is that you do not sell recipes, but give copies to friends. Add. with stamp, Kansas Anti-Liquor Soc'y, 78 Gray Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

AGENTS Get out of the rut. Own your business. 83 a day sure. Expensive Samples free. T. M. SAYMAN, 2181 Franklin Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Uncle Charlie's Poems-Sure cure for the blues. Address Uncle Charlie, care COMFORT, Augusta, Maine

$80 PER MONTH Salary and expenses, to men 'Remedies. Bank ref's. Don't answer unless in earnest. ACME MFG. CO., A 40, East St. Louis, Ill.

Agent's Outfit Free.—Rim Strainer, fits any pan. Agents make $ to 5 dollars per day. any pan. Agents make 3 to 5 dollars per cay. Large catalogue new goods free. RICHARDSON MFG. Co. Dept. C. BATH, N.Y.

16 COMIC POST CARDS 100 every one a corker. 16 cards, 10s; 46 cards, 25s. Big novelty catalog free. DRAKE CARD CO., DEPT. 81, 530 VAN BUREN ST., ORNOAGO.

RODS The latest improved; sold under guarantee. Used for locating mines, lost treasures, etc., Cir. 2a, Add. L.A. Lowry, P. O. Box 1301-05, Denver, Colo.

CASH SALARY, and all expenses to introduce our Guaranteed Fulltry and Stock Remedies. Send for contract, we mean business and furnish best references. G.E. BIGLER CO., Y 218, Springfeld, III.

$100 per SALARY Paid Weekly. Energetic man in each Co. trepresent Hardware Dept. Established business. Expense money in advance. The Columbia House, 112, Chicago.

Your Poems May Be Worth
THOTSANDS OF DOLLARS
Send them to us today. We
Will Compose the Music.
Will Compose the Music.
Hayes Music Co., 39 Star Bidg., Chicago. UNIVERSAL MENDING TISSUE.

For mending tears in any kind of clothing. Good for cuts, burns and sores. Package 10 cents. Dept. A. V & X MERCHANDISE CO., Woodside, Queens Borough, N. Y.

LEARN VETERINARY DENTISTRY and $2000 a year. We teach you at home in make $2000 three months of your spare time by illustrated lectures and grant diploma with degree. Particulars Free. Detroit Veterinary Dental Gollege, Detroit. Mich.

AGENTS GOATED in every county to sell the General Goates of the sell that the sell of the

FREE DINNER SET PIEGES
Queen Baking Powder, giving a Glass Water Set free to each purchaser of a can. Also many other premiums.
WEPAY FREIGHT. Write for our plans. American Supply Co., Dept. 57, 900-906 N. 2nd St., St. Louis, Me.

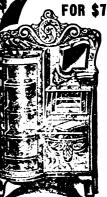

Consumption Book

This valuable medical book tells in plain, simple language how Consumption can be cured in your own home. If you rown home. If you whow of any one suffering from Consumption, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma or any throat or lung trouble, or are yourself afflicted, this book will help you to a cure. Even if you are in the advanced stage of the disease and feel there is no hope, this book will show you how others have cured themselves after all remedies they had tried failed, and they believed their case hopeless.

Write at once to the Yonkerman Consumption Cure Co. 1328 Water St., Kalamazoe, Mich., and they will gladly send you the book by return mail free and also a generous supply of the New Treatment, absolutely free, for they want every sufferer to have this wonderful cure before it is too late. Don't wait—write today. It may mean the saving of your life.

25 Combination BOOKCASE

FOR $7.95 we furnish a handsome solid oak, 6-foot high combination bookcase and writing desk, equal to what others sell at $12.00. For signal at $12.00. For signal till finer combination bookcase and writing desk, equal to what others sell at $12.00. For signal till finer combination bookcase and writing desk, equal to what others sell at $12.00. For signal till finer combination bookcase and writing desk, equal to what others sell at $12.00. For signal till finer combination bookcase and writing desk, equal to what others sell at $12.00. For signal till finer combination bookcase and writing desk, equal to what others are combination bookcase and writing desk, equal to what others are combination bookcase and writing desk, equal to what other sell at $12.00. For signal till finer combination bookcase and writing desk, equal to which the sell at $12.00. For signal till finer combination bookcase and writing desk, equal to white till sell at $12.00. For signal till sell at $12 Great SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO

Liberty Bells

For Washington's Birthday

In this glorious country of ours the Liberty Bell always rings. Preedom and liberty are our dearest heritage. No other people on earth enjoy the freedom or bounties of a progressive government, a rich country and a prosperity exceeding the ancient dreams of Midas. What more typical symbol of patriotism or expressive demonstration of appreciation can you imagine than the Stars and Stripes, unless it be a Liberty Bell we now offer you and will send to you by mail? Can be suspended in the house or out of doors as well, anywhere and everywhere they should be hung for ornamentation, nothing in the decorative line can equal the beauty of these handsome bells.

For Washington's and Lincoln's birthdays you should have one or more paperet Liberty Bells in Bed, White and Blue or plain Red, with loop for hanging from the window fastening. Hung under a hanging lamp, or in any suitable place where decorations are usually placed, they will add cheer and brilliancy to the room, particularly in the sick room as they are made of rich colored paperet ingeniously tolded into the pretty bell eighteen inches in circumference and six inches high, as shown in our illustration, and being nearly sun proof, may be kept hanging for months. We have a special quantity of these Bells made to fold compactly for sending away by mail, so that all may have one just as the people do who live in the larger cities where one sees them hanging in nearly every home.

Send us only six cents for part cost of packing and postage and we will send you one Bell with our immense line of useful premiums all free. Address COMFORT, Box R, Augusta, Maine-

Hunting Rifle Boy's

This is a genuine HAMILTON TAKEDOWN HUNTING RIFLE. Shoots long and abort 22-calibre cartridges; will kill at 100 yards.
It has black walnut stock, steel barrel with rifled brass inner tube, steel frame, peep sights, lever action, automatic shell extractor. Very latest model and perfect in every way. We give it free for selling only 30 packages of BLUINE at to cents a package. Send us your name and address. We trust you. Return our $3.00 after the sale of our BLUINE and we will send the rifle at once. Address
BLUINE MANUFACTURING CO., 665 MILL STREET, CONCORD JUNCTION, MASS.

50,000 FREE Pillow

This catchy new Pillow Top, entitled I'D LEAVE MY HAPPY HOME FOR YOU and showing the chicken chasing a butterfly, is tinted by hand in natural fast colors on Tan Belmont cloth, size 21 x 21 inches. This pillow top issure to please all who see it. We want every lady to have one, and also to read our interesting lady's magazine, Popular Fashions, which contains the best serial and short stories, fancy work, household hints, fashion, toliet and health talks. We guarantee you will like both. Anyway, we want you to become acquainted with our fine illustrated magazine and so we will send you one of these very pretty and catchy pillow tops free by mail if you will send us only 15 cents for a full trial subscription to our magazine. The 15 cents pays for magazine and we give you the Pillow Top Free. Sendtoday.

Popular Fashions Magazine, Dept. 36

AGENTS QUICK

FARMERS STAND SV Staple Puller Nati Claw Wire Outler Leather Function of the Punch Pinchers 8 TOOLS IN ONE Leather Punchers
Every Farmer Wants One at Sight
One of our agents says he will make $1600 mest year. We he

One of our spenie says be will make $1500 next year. We be-lieve be can. This is the best saller we ever saw. We have Swears Owns and plane is Asserved more nown, Swears Owns, both Peters, O. Predericktown, O. The Great Agents Supply House.

GOLD WATCH and RING FREE

STHMA CURED TO STAT DELICATION OF CHOKING Spells or other abit in a tile symptome to be the brown to be ment approved by best U. S.

medical authorities as the only system known to permanently FREE TEST TREATMENT disease.

cription of the case and sending names of 2 asthma-sufferers. Address FRANK WHETZEL, M.D. Mr. L. American Express Building, Chicago.

NEW STEEL RANGE

S8.75 buys this BIQ, HANDSOME, NEW 1907 MODEL, FULL SIZE, SIX-HOLE, SQUARE STEEL RANGE.
HOLE, SQUARE STEEL RANGE.
With reservoir and closet, as illustrated, a trifle extra.) For full description of this wonderful steel range bargain, write six sur FREE STOYE CATALOBUE. In our own, the largest stove foundry in the world, in Newark, Ohlo, we make every variety of the highest grade stoves and ranges, and sell them direct to the user at about one-half the lowest prices asked by others. Every stove covered by others, and we agree to always furnish any repairs in the years to come. We can you will have your stove in fust a few days after you order it. So you will have your stove in the years to come. We can you will have your stove in fust a few days after you order it. So you will have your stove in the years to come we can you will have your stove in the years to come. We can you will have your stove in the years to come we can you will have your stove in the years to come we can you will have your stove in the years to come we can you will have your stove in the year of your come to the year of your stove in the years to come. We have new stove offers that will please and surprise you. Write us a letter or a postal card and simply say, "Send me your Free Stove Catalogue." mention this paper, and by return mail you will receive, postpaid, our very latest Special Stove Book, with large pictures and complete descriptions of our entire line of stoves, all the wonderful low prices, the greatest stove offer you ever received. Our FREE PROFIT SHARING PLAN is also explained. Don't buy a stove st home or elsewhere until you get this NEW STOVE CATALOGUE and jall our new offers. Write today. Address, SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO.

SEARS. ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO.

SONGS FREE

Just think of it,
180 Popular Favorites, Songs that everybody wants to know and sing.
FREE, with the nusic. Just the book you have been looking for. We send with it a Chart of Chords
with which anyone
ean play the ac companiment to any song. All sent free by mail to every person sending us only 10e, to free by mail to every person send-ing usonly 10c. to pay for a full trial subscription to our Popular Illus-trated Magazine.

Whetzel system of treatment approve

Comfort Recitation Club

Conducted by Harold C. Hazleton

EDITOR'S NOTE.—This is the seventh article in this department and we invite you all to read the introduction appearing in January issue where first article appeared.

EFORE commencing the second year of Our Recitation Club I want to thank those who have expressed such hearty appreciation of the department. We shall try during the year to come to make it even better than it has been before. The requests for selections along special lines will be granted as far as we can do so. Space does not permit us to print very long selections. Remember that we are always glad to hear from you.

Elocution, that is, the art of expressing the feelings by voice and action, is not limited to public speaking alone. The practice which you receive in studying these directions thoroughly will make itself felt in many ways. You will find, I think, that you can talk with greater ease, use more expression in oral reading, and also in ordinary conversation. You will also find that it will quicken your perception in reading, and that you can grasp a subject more quickly than before you began the study. So you see, aside from its social advantage, these little selections may prove a great help to you.

Little Rlossom

Little Blossom

- "Oh, dear! I'se so tired and lonesome! I wonder why mamma don't come; I wonder why mamma don't come;
 She told me to s'ut up my blue eyes,
 And 'fore I waked up she'd be home.
 S'e said s'e was going to see gamma;
 S'e lives by the river so bright;
 I s'pect that my mamma fell in there,
 And p'r'aps s'e won't tum home tonight.
- "I dess I'm afraid to stay up here,
- Wivout any fire or light,
 But Dod's lighted the lamps up in heaven,
 I see 'em, all twinkling and bright.
 I fink I'll go down and meet papa,
 I s'pose he has stopped at the store,
 It's a great, pitty store, full of bottles,—
 Wish he wouldn't go there any more.
- "Sometimes he is sick when he comes ho And he stumbles and falls up the stair; And once, when he comed in the parlor, He kicked at my poor little chair. And mamma was all pale and frightened, And hugged me up close to her breast, And called me her poor little Blossom, And—dess I've forgotten the rest.
- "But I 'member that papa was angry,
 His face was so red and so wild,
 And I 'member he striked at poor mamma,
 And hurted his poor little child.
 But I love him, and dess I'll go find him;
 P'r'aps he'll come home with me soon,
 And den it won't be dark and lonely Waiting for mamma to come."
- Out into the night went the baby,
 Her little heart beating with fright,
 Till the tired feet reached the gin-palace,
 All radiant with music and light.
 The little hand pushed the door open,
 (Though her touch was as light as a breath),
 The little feet entered the portal
 That leads but to ruin and death.
- "Oh, papa!" she cried, as she reached him,
 And her voice rippled out sweet and clear,
 "I thought if I comed I could find you,
 And I is so glad I is here.
 The lights are so pitty, dear papa,
 And I fink that the music's so sweet;
 But I dess it's most supper-time, papa,
 For Blossom wants something to eat."
- A moment the bleared eyes gazed wildly Down into the face sweet and fair, Down into the face sweet and fair,
 And then, as the demon possessed him,
 He grasped at the back of a chair.
 A moment—a second—'twas over!
 The work of a fend was complete,
 And the poor little innocent Blossom
 Lay quivering and crushed at his feet.
- Then, swift as the light, came his reason,
 And showed him the deed he had done,
 With a groan that the devil might pity,
 He knelt by the quivering form.
 He pressed the pale face to his bosom,
 He lifted the fair, golden head;
 A moment the baby lips trembled,
 And poor little Blossom was dead.
- Then in came the law so majestic,
 And said with his life he must pay,—
 That only a fiend or a mad-man
 Could murder a child in that way.
 But the man who had sold him the poison
 That had made him a demon of hell,
 Why, he must be loved and respected,
 Because he was "ticensed" to sell!
- He may rob you of friends and of money,
 Send you to perdition and woe,
 But so long as he pays for his license,
 The law must protect him, you know.
 God pity the women and children
 Who are under the Juggernaut Rum,
 And hasten the day when against it
 Neither heart, voice, nor pen shall be dumb.
 Margaret J. Bidwell.

Lesson Talk

This pathetic little recitation is best adapted for a young lady. A child would hardly be able to render the deeper parts. Look around like atired, lonesome child, then heave a deep sigh before commencing. Impersonate a little girl as closely as you can whenever little Blossom speaks. In impersonating a child care must be taken not to overdo the matter lest it become ridiculous. I remember, when a child myself, hearing an elocutionist (or at least he called himself one), render Longfellow's Wreck of the Hesperus. He squeaked so over the child's part, and growled so in certifications.

wrick of the Hesperus. He squeaked so over the child's part, and growled so in certain other places that, to this day, the poem is distasteful to me. Throughout the immers are made to make the places that, to this day, the poem is distasteful to me. Throughout the immers are made to make under similar circumstances. Fig. 35 gives you the gesture for the stauza beginning "Out into the night." The right hand indicating where she went, the left, over the heart, her childish terror of the dark. The right hand is brought into position first, the left coming into place on the second in the fift of the selection—a point in its favor, since it is always best for a recitation to grow stronger towards the close. Impersonate the drunken rage fig. 36. "Heek, swift that seizes the man at the AS THE LIGHT CAME sight of the child, slow and HIS REASON." So the shows no fear of him. Now comes the really strong part of the child, slow and HIS REASON." So the shows no fear of him. Now comes the really strong part of the child, slow and HIS REASON." So the shows no fear of him. Now comes the really strong part of the child, slow and HIS REASON." So the shows no fear of him. Now comes the really strong part of the child, slow and HIS REASON." So the shows no fear of him. Now comes the really strong part of the child, slow and HIS REASON." So the shows no fear of him. Now comes the really strong part of the child, slow and HIS REASON." So the shows no fear of him. Now comes the really strong part of the child, slow and HIS REASON." So the shows no fear of him. Now comes the really strong part of the child, slow and HIS REASON." So the shows no fear of him. Now comes the really strong part of the child, slow and HIS REASON." So the struck her with the chair. You must have the picture clearly before your own mind before you can hope to portray it vividly. Let sorrow and horror show in your voice as you point towards the quivering form." Fig. 36 shows the gesture for the first half of the next stanza. If you can do it well and graceful

- An' Bill wuz lazy—so they said,
 An' half dead;
 Never useter laugh an' holler,
 Never tried to make a dollar,
 But he wuz a first-rate scholar,
 A great head!
 He'd take some tarnal book and shirk,
 An' let his brothers do the work.
- An' they sent Bill to General Court— Curus sport!
 An' him with them air legislaters,
 Men, I s'pose, uv sim'lar naters,
 Who thort he wuz some pertaters,
 Held the fort.
 His speeches wuz so full er snap
 They struck 'em like a thunderclap.
- He talked so well an' knew so much,
 Books and such,
 Thet now he lives away up yander
 In the State House—quite a gander—
 An' folks call him Governor Blander.
 It's too much!
 That chap who useter watch the ducks
 Because he didn't amount to shucks!
- Because he didn't amount to be a surface of the what uv Bijah, Ben an' Bart,
 Who war smart?
 Never fear that they'll forsake us—
 Bige and Ben are good shoemakers.
 Bart he drives Josiah Baker's
 Butcher cart.
 An' all three brag about the ducks
 An' Bill who didn't amount to shucks!
 —S. A. Foss.

Butcher cart.

An' all three brag about the ducks
An' Bill who didn't amount to shucks!

This humorous little sketch would make a good encore. It is also especially good for an entertainment where all the selections are of a monologue or dialogue character and each one is "dressed to fit the part," he or she impersonates. Such entertainments are novel and will "take" with almost any audience. The gestures throughout should be typical of the character of the piece. This selection is given in a conversational tone. The little subtle changes in tone and facial expression will bring out the underlying vein of humor. Commence with wide base, that is, with feet rather far apart. Direct your conversation to the words of the thark and facial expression will bring out the underlying vein of humor. Commence with wide base, that is, with feet rather far apart. Direct your conversation to the words of the third stay over yander." You have seen people point that way many times. Watch those who do so that your gesture may be natural. Similar gestures of indicating place by pointing with the thumbare used in other places. Try each line over several times, emphasizing different words, and then take the way which you think the best. In describing Bill in the last of the second and first of the third stanzas, act the part, drawl the words and loll from one foot to the other, as though you hadn't spunk enough to hold yourself erect even. On the word "shirk" make a motion as if Bill was sneaking off to the rear with his books. The next two stanzas have a great deal of play. The more Fig. 38. "It's 700 you study them the more you will find in them. Fig. 37 shows you the gesture begun for the last two lines in the third stanza, with the last line bring the right hand up, clenching the fist, and on the words "thunderclap" bring it down into the left palm. The second gesture begun for the last two lines in the proposite side from the place where Bill watched the ducks. Say the words "quite a gander" slowly and with a rising inflection

Address all letters for this department to Cousin Hal, care of Comfort, Augusta, Maine.

A STOLEN PROPOSAL

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 6.)

self, and, sending Valencia away, she moaned piteously:

piteously:

"Oh, what shall I do? What is my duty?"

The part that hurt her most of all was the terrible certainty that Arthur did not love her as he did Anna Ruthven. She saw it now just as it was; how, in an unguarded moment, he had offered himself to save her good name from gossip, and how, ever since, his life had been a constant struggle to do his duty by lier.

"Poor Arthur," she sobbed, "yours has been a hard lot trying to act the love you did not feel, but it shall be so no longer. Lucy will set you free."

This was her final decision, but she did not reach it till a day and night had passed, during which she said that she wanted nothing but to be left alone.

"I do not know; I have not thought. I guess God will take care of that."

He would, indeed, take care of that just as He took care of her, inclining the Hetherton family to be so kind and tender towards her, and keeping Arthur from the house during the time when the Christmas decorations were completed and the Christmas festival was held.

Many were the inquiries made for her, and many the thanks and wishes for her speedy restoration sent her by those whom she had so bountifully remembered.

Thornton Hastings, too, who had come to town, sent her by those whom she had so bountifully remembered.

Thornton Hastings, too, who had come to town, and was present in the church on Christmas Eve, asked for her with almost as much interest as Arthur, although the latter had hoped that she was not seriously ill and expressed a regret that she was not seriously ill and expressed a regret that she was not there, saying that he should call on the morrow after the service.

"Oh, I cannot see him here. I must tell him there, at the rectory, in the very room where he asked Anna and me both to be his wife," Lucy said, when Fanny reported Arthur's message. "I am able to go there and I must. See, the snow is falling now," and, pushing back the curtain, Lucy leoked dreamily out upon the fast whitening ground, sighing, as she remembered the night, when the first snowflakes fell, and she stood watching them with Arthur at her side.

Fanny did not oppose her cousin, and with a kiss upon the pale forehead, she went to her own room, leaving Lucy to think over for the hundredth time what she would say to Arthur.

(For text to illustration see next month.)

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The continuation of this fascinating story will be told in the February number. If you are not a sub-scriber send 15 cents and read this story to the end.

Every Lady Read This.

Years ago when I was a sufferer, an old nurse told me of a wonderful cure for Leuc rrhea, Displacements, Painful Periods, Uterine and Ovarian troubles. It cured me in one month. It is a simple harmless letion that can be prepared by any one having the recipe. I will send it Free to every suffering sister who writes to me. Address Mrs. L. D. Hudnut, South Bend, Ind.

DYEING COMB

German patent; produces any shade by simply combing without staining the scalp; perfectly harmless, durable, undetectable. Saves time and money and is the only practical way of coloring the hair. Write for particulars. Address Dpt. 20, H. Bieneck, 318 Mott Av., New York.

S75 A HONTH
Sure-Patent Gem Aluminum Steam
Cooker FREE to Agents. We are the largest manufacture of Aluminum Cooking Utensis in the world. R. H. Smith, Oakville, Pa. cleared 2212 in 6 days; so can you. Every woman needs can. We chare profits with our agents. No capital required. We ship on time Experience not necessary. We teach you the work, turn Manufacturing Co. Dept., 13 Lemont, III.

.OO A WEEK and Expenses We want women to help us advertise an article of exceptional merit. No experience necessary and you can easily make $30.00 a week and expenses. The article value, fifty-cent samples are distributed free. They create the demand. Sales are easily made. Big profits are assured. Address, Harriet M. Richards, Cor.Sec., Box 702. Jollet, IL.

SI.OO EACH FOR NAMES

of people having CANCER. This man got 83 on our plan for 3 names. "Received money for names. Was well pleased. Will send more names." WM. UPHOUSE, Mil-lord Station, Pa. We refer to this paper or any bank. Send names of all people who have CANCER to SEPTICIDE CO. 242 Fourth St., Milwaukee, Wis-

We teach by Correspondence. Cartoonists and Illustrators earn from $1,000 to $15,000 yearly. Women can succeed as well as men. Send for our magnificent illustrated booklet. Address Fine Art School of Drawing, Studio 916 Omaha Building. Chicago, Ills.

SHAKER SIFTER
Sent with 4 other attractive nevelties Free to Agents. One hand shaking this sifter works the internal mechanism. Good material and wears well. Catalog free, Dept. X
Household Novelty Works, 25 Randolph St., Chicago

SONG "HIT" will make you rich. Send us your Poems. Cash or Royalty for available manuscript. WALKWRIGHT MUSIC CO., 78-47 Evergreen av., Chicago

GOLD WATCH AND FREE Guaranteed American Watch with gold-laid case beautifully engraved. The manufacturers will repair any breaks for one year. Perfect time-keeper; very thin. With it comes a handsome gold band Ring which will wear for years. Send us your name and address for only address for only 24 Packages of BLUINE to sell at loca package. Return our $2.40 and and any size Ring you select.

666 Mill St., Concord Junc., Mass

Sister Ann. But My Old Mon

Popular Illustrated Magazine, Dept. 20 291 Congress Street, BOSTON, MASS

Souvenir Post Cards Free EVERYBODY WORKS BUT FATHER

The most famous Souvenir Post Card published, Millions sold and the demand increasing daily. This Card offends no one, pleases all, yet the most suitable "take off" card we have offered. One "Everybody Works but Father" Card with three other handsome View Cards (four in all) free for four cents with name and address of some friend or neighbor who has never seen our monthly magazine.

Address COMFORT, Box A, Augusta, Maine.

BOYS AND GIRLS MEN AND WOMEN EARN ELECANT WATCH AND CHAIN EARN $3.00 DAILY. EARN ELECANT WATCH AND CHAIN IN ONE DAY'S WORK. SEED NO HONEY.—Simply send your name and address, and we send you, charges paid you, 12 heaatical Fictures, 16 inches wide, olinches long, no 2alke (stores charge $1.00 ach for them). With them we send 12 loxes of our famous CLOVERINE SALVE in handsome tin boxes), greatest remedy mown for Cuts, Sores, Plies, Eczema, Cats to. You sell the CLOVERINE at 25c. p

EARN $3.00 DAILY.

give one Picture free. When sold return money and we send beautiful Watch and Chain, or you can keep cash commission. You can also earn Silverware, Lace Curtains, Musical Instruments, Guns, Dolls, Magic Lantern, Talking Machines, etc. Large premium list sent with your order. Be first in your town. Everyone buys two to three boxes after you show pictures. A doctor discovered CLOVERINE, Millons use it. Agents earn St. 26 a day sure. Write onlick We send CLOVERINE and pictures at once. Address

WILSON CHEMICAL CO., Tyrone, Pa. Dept. 38

SOLO ACCORDION

a full-voiced musical instrument, beautiful in tone and appearance, and suitable for furnishing music for enter-tainments, dances, etc. It is a very popular instrument and brings a high price in all the stores. We give it away absolutely free for selling only two dozen pieces of our exclusively designed, swell Jewelry. Nobedy will refuse to buy of you, as our Jewelry is genuine gold plate and the best people wear our goods. Sell the Jewelry at 10 cents a piece and return our $2.40, and we will send the Accordion at once and guarantee satisfaction. This is not a cheap toy. It is a perfect instrument with ten keys, two stops, double bellows, ebonized case and nickel-plated valves and trimmings. You will be delighted with it and with our goods. Write to-day. Address

FRIEND SUPPLY CO.

BOSTON, MASS

SKIN Trouble cured. Beautiful complexion. Send $1.50 for treatment. F. Danies & Co., Lindenhurst, N.Y. daily selling for us on credit. Sample 10c. MIAMI CO., Winthrop. Mass.

Know Thyself Send date of birth and 25c for full life reading, P. O. Box 39, Washington, D. C. Free CATALOG Millinery, Furs, Ladjes' and Children's Wearing Apparel. Chicago Mall Order Co., Chicago, Ill.

TAPE-WORN EXPELLED ALIVE, WITH HEAD GOAL ANTEND. BOOKLET FEEL ADD., 102 STATE ST., CHICAGO.

$8 Paid Per 100 for Distributing Samples of Washing fluid. Send 6c. stamp. A.W. SCOTT, COHOES, N.Y.

Your name printed on 50 Cards for No Two Alike Postpaid. Dame Co., 694 C. Washington St., Boston, Mass.

CANCER Cured at home; No pain, knife, plas-ter or oils. Send for Free Treatise Add. A. J. Miller, M. D., St. Louis, Mo AGENTS WANTED Sell $1 bottle Sarsaparilla for 35c best seller; 200 per cent profit. Write today for terms. F. R. GREENE, 25 Lake St., CHICAGO.

$36 A WEEK AND EXPENSES TO MEN with rigs to introduce our Poultry Goods. JAVELLE CO., Dept 17 Parsons, Kausas.

LADIES to work on piecework $3.00 per doz. All materials furnished. No Canvassing, steady work. Stamped envelope. Best Mrg Co, Champlain Bldg, Chicago.

A MONTH and expenses advanced to men and women to travel, introduce our goods and distribute samples. Northwestern Com-pany, Dept. S. 338 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

$83 SALARY and liberal commission also expenses paid Monthly. Best proposition on Market for Agents BAILEY PORTRAIT CO., 30 Potomac Ave., Chicago

WANTED Lady to advertise our goods locally. Several weeks home work. Salary $12.00 per week, $1.00 a day for expenses. Saunders Co., Dept. A. 46 Jackson Blvd., Chicago.

SONGS Publ'd ROYALTY
On By New York's BIG MUSIC FIRM. NO
CHARGE FOR WRITING MUSIC. NORTH AMERICAN MUSIC CO., Dept. L, 59 W. 28th St., New York.

MUSIC LESSONS SEND FOR OUR FREE. s how to learn to play any instrument, Plano, Organ, Gultar, Mandolin, etc. Write American School usic, 211 Manhattan Building, Chicago, Ill.

IF SICK Send a LOCK OF YOUR HAIR Name, Age, Sex, and 2 stamps, and I will send you a diagnosis of your disease FREE and tell what will cure you. Address DR.C.W.ROBERTS, Dept. F, Mechanicsville, Iowa.

Outfit Free to Agents Best selling Handkerehlets, Dress Goods and Fancy Goods on the market. Quick seilers, big profits. Deal direct with a large manufacturer. Send stamp for full particulars. FREEPORT MFG. CO., 251 & 252 Jay St., Brooklyn, N.Y., Dept. 60.

16 COMIC POST CARDS FREE Funnisst colored cards away printed, all new, no two allke, and every use a corker. Full set of 10 cards seat FREE if you seed only TEN cents for membership in our Post Card Exchange, which has thousands of members. You'll get hundreds of pretty and coulle post cards FREE from all over the world. DRAKE CARD CO., Dept. 221, 539 van Bures St. (GHCAGO.

BE AN ACTOR OR ORATOR

atic art by correspondence. CHICAGO SCHOOL OF ELO GUTION, 941 Chicago Opera House Building, CHICAGO

Gold Watch FREE
AND RING
An American Meremoni Watch with beautifully engraved

GANGER GURED

MR. M. YANT, ORETE, NEB., so of Our Mild Method of Ouring Cancer; ou have performed one of the most miracul-scures in my case ever heard of."

Ous cures in my case ever near of.

No need of cutting off a woman's breast or a man's check or nose in a vain attempt to cure cancer. No use of applying burning plasters to the flesh and torturing those aiready weak from suffering. Thousands of person successfully treated. This wonderful Mild Methodis also never-failing cure for tumors, catarrh, ugly ulcers, piles, fistula, and all other skin and blood diseases. Write to-day for free filustrated book.

DR. BYE, 701 Bye Bldg., Kansas City, Mo-

SEWING MACHINE 電FREE GIRLS! We will give you a Reliance Sewing Machine, a perfect beauty, made of iron and yickeled steel and hands om ely ornamented.
With it you can make elothes for your dolls and help mamma with her sewing. It is perfect ly safe and easy to run.
Ladies can use this machine for light sewing, and every little gipleased with it. 40 05 L chine for light sewing. Setc., and obtain good satisfaction, and every little girl will be more than pleased with it. We give it free for selling only two dozen pieces of our Swell Art Jewelry at 10 cent each. Send us your name and address at once and we will send you the Jewelry postpaid and trust you. Return our $2.40 after the sale and we will send you the Reliance Sewing Machine, needle, and full speed of thread without delay. Address, FRIEND SUPPLY CO., Dept. 572, Boston, Mass.

Conducted by Cousin Marion

In order that each cousin may be answered this column, no cousin must ask more than aree questions in one month.

APPY NEW YEAR to all of you, my dears, and may you have many, many more, each one happier than the one that came before. Of course, when the new year comes you make all kinds of good resolutions and—and—and break them. But don't let the breakage prevent your making them. It is good for you to try to do better even if you don't always succeed. If you didn't think you needed improvement, goodness knows, what you would be like after a little while. Therefore make your resolutions, and let one of them be, that you will try to make the new year as happy for others as for yourself. Now, for the first work of 1907. work of 1907.

work of 1907.

Brunette, Orange, Cal., is the first one whose letter I open, and she wants to know if it is proper to make arrangements over the telephone. We are not so formal now as we used to be. I think, and while once upon a time, a girl might decline an invitation from a young man over the telephone, she doesn't do so now. At least, not among her friends. For formal affairs the telephone is not the thing, but for all ordinary occasions it is the same as if the person were asking in personal presence.

American Beauty, Jefferson, Ky.—When a young man has the gambling and drinking habits, it is not safe to trust him further than a friendly way. Help him to break away from his bad habits, encourage him all you can to be better, but don't marry him to save him, for the risk is too great. (2) Don't ask the young man his intentions. If he will not tell you of his own accord, he'll despise you for asking him. (3) It is very cheap and vulgar.

Blue-eyed Daisy, Key West, Fla.—No kissing un-

Blue-eyed Daisy, Key West, Fla.—No kissing until you are engaged. (2) You cannot love two men at the same time. If you tell them you do, you are not telling the truth. Unless you are engaged you can correspond with one young man while accepting the attention from another.

Wild Rose, Long Beach, Cal.—Better write to him, and tell him why you neglected him. Don't be looking forward to being married before the young man has mentioned the subject to you.

Blue Bell, Bay Minette, Ala.—The course of true love never did run smooth. You will have to put up with all your small troubles, and wait until you marry to have the great ones.

marry to have the great ones.

Henrietta's Niece, Busch, Ga.—A girl of fourteen should not be writing letters to unknown gentlemen of twenty. Under the circumstances you mention, which seem to be all right, you might do so with your parents' consent. The fact, however, that he wants to know more about you than he will tell you about himself looks suspicious.

Texas Beauties, De Leon, Texas.—Don't go with a boy like that. When he is older maybe he will know better. (2) An invitation to a wedding coming at the last hour, and by telephone, might well be declined.

Evergreen, Chicago, Ill.—Love is not to be won.

Evergreen, Chicago, Ill.—Love is not to be won. It must come of itself or not at all. (2) Girls of seventeen often go to dances with young men. It is proper enough if the girl is out of school, and in good company. (3) Come home with the escort who takes you, unless he permits otherwise.

who takes you, unless he permits otherwise.

Little Girl, Morgantown, W. Va.—You may visit the man's home on the invitation of his sisters.

Snowflake, Cooleyton, Neb.—Of course, when a young man asks you if you are going to an entertainment, tell him you are not because you have no way of going. Then he ought to take you. If he doesn't want to get into trouble he shouldn't ask questions. (2) Ask him to call again if you want him to. Most young men feel a hesitancy in asking if they may call again. It is the lady's duty, as hostess, to ask callers to call again.

hostess, to ask callers to call again.

Briar Rose, Wauka, Wis.—It is rather cheap for a young man to ask to take a girl home from a show to which she has paid for a ticket. I wouldn't let him take me home, if I were you. (2) You can't eat your cake and have it. Either you must tell him directly you do not want his attentions, or you must accept them. There are lots of men like that that girls tolerate because they don't want to hurt their feelings. (3) Hallowe'en jokes are allowable if not carried too far.

their feelings. (3) Hallowe'en jokes are allowable if not carried too far.

Subscriber, Chanute, Kans.—Thank anyone for any courtesy extended. Don't say: "I thank you for the ride." but let him know it in icely and gracefully. (2) The lady may say when it is time to go, and she may opeli the door, or wait for him to do it, as she pleases.

Rosebud, Moscow, Idaho.—If you take your mother's advice you will probably never marry. But you had better try it porobably never marry. But you had better try it porobably never marry. But you had better try it probably never marry. Grant you had better try it probably never marry. But you had better try it probably never marry. But you had better try it probably never man who wants to marry, you. If he is all right, and young for his age, his forty is not too much for your twenty. But a younger man might be easier to get along with. Anyway you would have longer to get used to him. Twenty years is too wide spart ordinarily, but some of the happiest marriages have even greater difference in years than that.

Troubled Vesta, Weston, Pa.—Tell him you have reconsidered and do not want him for a beau. That's the only way. (2) Let him go, Isn't he letting you go? (3) Don't be in a hurry. By the time you are twenty, you will have beaus a -plenty. Nellie, Bloomingdale, Ill.—The young man asks Nellie, Bloomingdale, Ill.—The young man asks the head of the family for the daughter, which is the father if he is living.

Faith, Actus, Ark.—It is nice to give a birthday or Christmas present and the present to give is something that he can use, and wants. (2) In a voting contest at an entertainment, for the handsomest young lady, your escort should certainly vote as often for you as he has money to buy tickets.

Annie Laurie, Adair, I. T.—Wear your dresses to your shoe-tops, and blues will be most becoming, though you can wear any color if not too pro-nounced.

Myrtle, Parker Landing, Pa.—Don't worry about the young man not coming back. You ought to be glad if he never comes back. Forget him. (2) If you don't know how to "get going" with the young man you love, I'm sure I can't tell you. (3) See answer above to "Briar Rose."

answer above to "Briar Rose."

Lily Belle, Konts, Ind.—There is nothing for you to do but wait four or five years until your heart can settle. Whichever man you marry now you will wish you had taken the other, and your married life will be trouble from beginning to end.

Blue Eyes, Hazelhurst, Ga.—Yes. (2) It is enough for the man to tip his hat, though if the lady speaks he should speak also. (3) Ask your escort to come in if the hour is not late.

Lady, Salt Lake City, Utah.—You are thirty-one and he is seventeen. Well, really, now, do you think you ought to marry him? Why not adopt him as your son? My land sakes, what are you thinking about?

Alverta, Ashland, Pa.—He was no gentleman or a Assolutely fact to introduce our goods. Just send name he would not have acted so he (2) There is no rule to and address and we will send it to you at once, Address for sending comic post cards. Anyone can send but it, Mr. ALDEN MFG. Co., PROVIDENCE, R. I.

first. (3) Treat the man with the same indifference that he treats you.

Deserted, Richmond, Va.—I can't advise any girl how to forget a lover who has deserted her. She cannot forget him, but she can harden her heart and think only of him as a traitor and one she should not hold in the same esteem she holds any honest and good man. If he should use for pardon and you should grant it, how do you know that he will not desert you again?

Now, dears, your questions are answered in the spirit of the New Year and I hope they will do you as much good as the New Year will, and I am sure I wish that you would get more good out of it than any other year you have lived. So by, by, now, till we meet again.

COUSIN MARION.

The Great Chicago Mystery or, The Man with Many Aliases

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 11.)

"Hang-eye" smiled, and nodded, and they all understood that he was wearing a wig to conceal his shaven head. Before he had gone to pay his debt to the state, "Hang-eye" had been noted for his long, black, dark hair, which always fell over his greasy velvet coat collar. The crooks all gathered about "Hang-eye" asking for particulars of his escape, and he gave them a sensational account of guards bribed, doors mysteriously left unbarred, and an entrance strangely unguarded, which, had it been true, would have very seriously reflected upon the integrity and honor of those in charge of the great penal institution at Joliet. However, as it was all "faked" no reflection could be cast upon those who at the very minute the gang at the twenty-second street dive were welcoming back "Hang-eye" John, were guarding the criminal who when free bore that name, who was now only 821.

"When did youse get out?" was asked in the Twenty-second street saloon by more than one. "Day before yesterday," was the prompt response, and the crooks were delighted, and did not think it strange that no account had appeared in the papers, for they knew that the response, and the crooks were delighted, and did not think it strange that no account had appeared in the papers, for they knew that the officials would exhaust every means before confessing to such a lack of proper care on their part. However, the cell occupied by $21 was occupied; his head was not adorned with a wig, and there was no chance of his escaping until he had worked his way through the ten years' sentence given him, for the real "Hangeye" was still safely in Joliet, and the man in the dive was Crit Truman.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Read the next chapter, "A Woman's Love," and watch the coils as they slowly tighten around the guilty, bringing them to speedy punishment. If not a subscriber send 15 cents and read this story to the end.

Orange Lily cures Leucorrhoea, Ulceration, Displacement. Painful Periods. For a free trial address, Mrs. H. L. Fretter, Detroit, Mich.

$10 DAY Selling Spectacles. Agents wanted, Catalog free. Bates Optical Co., Boston, Mass.

PATENTS SECURED OR FEE RETURNED.

Free reports as to Patentability. Illustrated Guide Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent free EVANS. WILKENS & GO., 840 F, WASHINGTON, D. C.

OPIUM or Morphine Habit Cured. Free trial treatment. We specially desire-cases where other remedies failed. Condiential.

SINGING Taught by Correspondence.
Send for handsome booklet on VOICE CULTURE FREE ILLINOIS CONSERVATORY, 913 Lakeside Bidg. Chicago

FINE POST CARDS FREE

A set of 3 most beautiful post cards you ever saw, if you send 2c-stamp for postage. Full set of 12, all different, for 10 cts; 3 full sets 25 cts. Everyone answering this ad immediately will also receive our splendid family magazine and story paper 3 months on trial free, Address at once The Household, 73 Grawford Blk., Topeka, Kas.

A SONG IS OFTENER FORTUNE
Sold FOR A FORTUNE is sold for a song."
Send us your best song poems and musical manuscript.

Past, present, future by America's Leading Astrologer. All personal matters of business, health, friends, travel, changes, love affairs, marriage plainly told. Life Reading sent (sealed) for birth-date, 2c. stamp.

ADDRESS LEON A. KYRA CO., BOX 683, SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Can Be Cured My mild, soothing, it and FREE SAMPLE proves it. Stops the Itching and cures to stay. Wrige Now-Today. DR. J. CANNADAY, Sedalia, Mo.

Union Mfg. Co., 92 Main St., Cambridge, O.

To prove that you may have a superb figure with well developed bust, shapely neck and shoulders and properly developed limbs, we send a coavincing sample of Dr. Whitney's Nerve and Flesh Bullder absolutely free, Special treatment for developing the bust alone, when desired, Guaranteed to benefit the general health and improve the complexion, Free trial and book, by return mail— write at once, and improve the complexion. For and book, by return mail. Write The C. L. Jones Co. 1464 Realty Filmina. N.Y.

ASTHMA CURED SCHIFFMANN'S ASTHMA CURE

mantly relieves the most violent attack and insures con-trable sleep. NO WAITING for RESULTS. Being used by abhalation, its action is immediate, direct and Cortain, and a cure is the result in all curable cases. A single wish onvinces the most skeptical. Price, 50c. and $1.00 of any treggist, or by mail. Samples Froe for stamp. DR. R. SCHIFFMANN, St. Paul, Minn. ARITHMETIC

Plain, easily understood volume for TAUCHT ALL who have not had the opportunity of learning this subject thoroughly, or who have forgotten what they once learned. 257 pages. Requires no teacher. Send 66c. (stamps accepted) for this great book, in cloth. Edition de Luxe. 81.00.

GEO. A. ZELLER BOOK CO., 70 S. 4th St., St. Louis, Mo. Est. 1870.

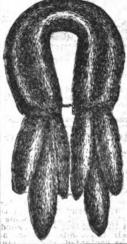

TWO RINGS

take back all not sold.
COMFORT MEDICINE CO., Providence, R. I.

Beautiful Prize Free!

CAN you arrange these four groups of letters into the names of four States of the United States? To everyone who answers this puzzle and names not less than three of the States correctly we will give a prize of the magnificent picture. "Welcome Gifts," a fine work of art, 16x20 inches, showing flowers in eight beautiful colors, a handsome ornament fear any home that you will always be proud of. If you are smart enough to solve this puzzle, you will be entitled to this fine picture absolutely free, immediately. We make this remarkable offer to advertise our splendid family magazine and story sper, which alread half million renders. In addition to the picture of the picture

Big Fur FREE

We will give you this Beautiful Fur Scart, nearly 11-2 yards long made of rich dark Batiets Seal, with six heavy tabs, very stylish, warm and dressy. It will give years of satisfactory wear. Send us your name and address and we will send you, postpaid, 24 pieces of our elegant art jewelry to sell at 10 cents-each. When sold return us the $2.40 and we will send the Scart at once. We give an extra premisms for prompt return of our money. This is the biggest offer ever made by a reliable firm. Write today. Address FRIEND SUPPLY CO.,

Dept. 573, BOSTON, MASS.

GASOLINE ENGINE

WITH ELECTRIC IGNITER.

Highest Grade Gasoline Engines, all sizes up to 18horse power, at one-half what others ask and offered on 60 DAYS' FREE TRIAL.

FOR $53.45 grade, most efficient, most durable, least liable to get out of order, easlest handled, most reliable, simplest and safest gasoline engine made, fully covered by our binding guarantee. The greatest power in the world for all purposes.

IN OUR NEW, free and special
in the world for all purposes.

IN OUR NEW, Engine Catalogue, sent free on request, we illustrate and describe the greatest variety of vertical and horizontal gasoline engines outlits, etc., the best and simplest made in the world, all sold on 66 days' free trial, on all most library of the control of the co

Address SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO

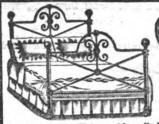

WE WILL GLADLY SEND

WE WILL GLADLY SEND YOU A CREAM SEPARATOR; you can use it sixty and it you are not sure you have received, the best separator in the world, the trial won't cost you one cent. Write for our ne w Cream Separator Catalogue and learn of THIS GREAT OFFER.
S19.75 buys our wonderful and the sold by anyone else up to $40.00. Our Improved Economy
Cream Separator, the equal of any machine sold by anyone else up to $40.00. Our Improved Economy
Cream Separator, slightly higher in price than our Dundee, is guaranteed the best separator made, regardless of na me or price, and is sold at a others ask for high grade separators; and we guarantee our Economy to have greater capacity, to sk in coller machine in the masier, and hot get out of or der, wear longer than any other machine in the masier, and not get out of or for you from the layou furnish you any needed repair or part in the years to come, promptly and on a few days' notice.

REPADATOR OFEFES are more liberal more Write and ask for our New Cotalogue with all offerweether

PRICES NOW CREATLY REDUCED. OUR CREAM SEPARATOR OFFERS are more liberal, more wonderful than ever before, greatly improved models, prices lewer than last season. If you have more than one cow, write us a letter or a postal and say, "Send me your new Oream Separator Catalogue and all your new orders," and our great 1907 cream separator proposition will go to you by return mail, free and postpaid, We have two big cream separator factories and can sell you a machine on a two months' free trial, on manufacturing cost basis, much on a two months' free trial, on manufacturing cost basis, much on a two months' free trial, on manufacturing cost basis, much, at a lower price than you even the post of the post of the post of the property of the post of t

For 13 YEARS OUR PREMIUMS ALWAYS BEST. COMPARE with OTHERS

Ne. 321/2-Brass Trimmed Iron Bed Three coats best white enamel, large brass knobs, height 56 in., width 4½ ft. For selling 2 doz. (Our books show 4 other beautiful designs.)

Turkish couch, gondola pattern, 76 in. long, upholstered in beautiful velour. Genuine steel construction. For selling 31/2 doz. (5 other beautiful designs in our catalog.)

No. 2047-Gultar

Standard size, mahogany finish, inlaid soundboard, highly polished, excellent tone. For selling 2 doz. (All of our Guitars, Mandolins, Violins, etc., are made by the well known house of The Rudolph Wurlitzer Co.) al colored maple, top of maple, top of base 28 x 42, k n e e ding board 17 x 23, 1 drawer and 2 bins. Solid bolted legs. Top 38 in. high; 1 large and 4 small drawers. For selling 3½ doz.

Elegant 3-piece set, divan, arm chair and reception chair. Steel construction, velour upholstered, frame of rich mahoganized birch, all pieces full size and strongly built. For selling 5 doz. (Also bargain in 5-piece set, as wel as odd and fancy parior pieces.)

IT IS EASY TO EARN THESE Beautiful Premiums

Why not earn a beautiful and useful premium easily, by selling what the people want and will buy again. You will be agreeably surprised to find how pleasanthe work is. It doesn't pay to sell trash. Sell "Mother's Salve." the greatest cure known for Catarrh, Croup and Colds. The world never saw its equal for healing Cuts, Burns, Sores, Chaps, Piles, etc. Every jar is guaranteed; our first customers are our best ones. Ask your neighbors; nearly everyone knows of our Mother's Salve. Mrs. J. J. Ward, of Freeport, Fla., writes: "I am thankful to know that there is one honest firm selling honest goods through the mail. I have been selling your valuable remedies for five years, and have received many valuable premiums, all of them better than you claimed." Our new illustrated Catalogue of reliable groods shows nearly one thousand premiums besides those shown here, any of which we offer free to ladies and girls for selling only a few jars of "Mother's Salve" at 25 cents a jar. We give many valuable premiums for selling only ½ dozen. Compare our premiums with other premiums in this paper and you will see our offers are the best ever made by a reliable firm. Remember, ne money required in advance. Your credit is good with us. Just say you will try; send your name and address and we will mail six 25 cents a fast safetion guaranteed.

MOTHER'S REMEDIES CO., 1106 85th Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

MOTHER'S REMEDIES CO., 1106 85th Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

1XXXXXXXXXX

13XXXXXXX

No. 697 - Rogers' Silver Set 26 full size pieces, hand engraved, attractive pat-tern: 6 knives, 6 forks, 6 teaspoons, 6 tablespoons, 1 sugar, 1 butter, in leath-erette case, satin lined. For selling 3 doz.

No. 715—Tea Set
56 full size pieces, beautifully decorated in neat fieral design, blue or green. Genuine Arcade ware, in newest shapes.
For selling 2 doz. (We have a complete line of dinner sets, toilet sets, glassware, etc.)

No. 6221-Enamel Set No. 6221—Ename! Set 14 full size pieces, best double coated purple blend, white dots glass finish, 8 qt. tea kettle, 3qt. coffee pot, 4-qt. covered kettle; other pieces in proportion. For selling 2 doz.
(We have a fine tinware premium, also table cutlery and a complete assortment of hardware.)

No. 312 Petticoat

No. 73—Clock
Oak case, finely carved, height 22
in, 6 in, dial, Correct timekeeper, eight-day move—ment, strikes hour and ½ hour. old Morris Chair. Solid oak,
For selling 1½ flowly finished, height41 in, doz. (We give a very fine Cuckoo Clock for selling only 4 doz.)

No. 805—Morris Rocker
An improvement over the hour and ½ hour. old Morris Chair. Solid oak,
For selling 1½ flowly finished, height41 in,
square. Upholstering best velour. For selling 3 doz.

Clock tor selling only 4 doz.)

No. 60—Reed Rocker
Hand decorated unne Nottingham, loose back, to match, bright edges, 60 in. wide, 2½ match. Color story fine Cuckoo coat is the best value we have ever offered it is double bre as the dinto one, to be used a sillustrated. Gen-coll ar and edges as illustrated. Gen-coll ar and edges, 60 in. wide, 2½ match. Color story fine cuckoo coat is the best value we have ever offered it is double bre as the dinto one, to be used a sillustrated. Gen-coll ar and edges, 60 in. wide, 2½ match. Color story fine cuckoo coat is the best value we have ever offered it is double bre as the dinto one, to be used and elocorated unne Nottingham. loose back, the coat is the best value we have ever offered it is double bre as the dinto one, to be used and elocorated unne Nottingham. loose back, the coat is the best value we have ever offered it is double bre as the dinto one, to be used and elocorated unne Nottingham, loose back, the coat is the best value we have ever offered it is double bre as the dinto one, to be used and elocorated unne Nottingham, loose back, the coat is the best value we have ever offered it is double bre as the dinto one, to be used and elocorated unne Nottingham. loose back, the coat is the best value we have ever offered it is double bre as the dinto one, to be used and elocorated unne Nottingham. loose back, the coat is the best value we have ever offered it is double bre as the dinto one, to be used and elocorated unne Nottingham. loose back, the coat is the best value we have ever offered it is double bre as

Comfort Sisters' Corner

No. 99-Jute Smyrna Rug Both sides alike, pretty design, bright colors, 5 ft. long, 30 in wide. For selling 1 doz. (We have wool rugs, art squares, carpets, etc.)

No. 2012-Ladles' Skirt Walking length, good qual-y black Meridan suiting, eautifully trimmed, stylish, well made and serviceable. For selling 1% doz. (See our line of tailor made suits, dress skirts, fall and winter waists.)

Letters of Thanks

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 13.)

pathway, with but few roses. When the dark clouds hover around us, remember behind the cloud the sun is still shining, and though some of us are blessed with but little of this world's goods, while others have their thousands, and are not satisfied, let us try to be contented, and not murmur, for a contented mind is a continual feast.

J. A. D. I would be glad to receive a personal letter from you. I have often thought of writing to you, and sometime in the future you may hear from me.

from me.

Ada Hudgens. I, for one, made scrapbooks, and they never get old to me, I read them over and over. Ministering to others, brings happiness to us.

Mrs. K. S. Heath. I will be on the lookout for you, as I am one of the shut-ins. I know your little daughter has many cute sayings for I have a little you, as I am one of the snut-line. Landy you daughter has many cute sayings for I have a little dear of my own.

Mrs. T. J. Kinsella. Visit the page again soon.

Elmer Davis. After reading your letter I pronounce you a good cook, you certainly know more about cooking than the average run of men, but I happened to have luck in getting a husband who understands cooking pretty well.

I want to thank all the kind friends who so generously responded to my request in behalf of the little crippled girl, Gladys Miller, Leach, Tenn. She received several kind letters, and many nice presents, all of which were a great comfort to her in her hours of suffering. But she only had the pleasure of receiving them, for on July 10, she went to live with the angels. Her mother has thanked some, personally, but it was impossible for her to write each one a letter. So I hope all who did not receive a letter from her will accept this as a letter of thanks. Mrs. Miller requested me to thank the dear friend who sent the little pin with the word Darling on it, as Gladys thought so much of it, but in some way the address of the friend had become misplaced. Your shut-in friend,

Mrs. A. T. Cable, Essex, Ark.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS: Since my letter in July issue I have received forty letters and still they come. I thank all the kind friends, and I am answering them each as fast as I can.

If you want a certain pattern of a flower leaf or vine to work—how many have ever tried this plan? Place the object on the window pane, over it your cloth and then trace the pattern with a pentil.

Many thanks to the sister who sent in the catarrh remedy. I am trying it.

MRS. CHARLES TURNER, Terrill, Texas.

Dear Comfort Sisters:

For a long time I have been a silent admirer of Comfort, and especially of the Sisters' Corner, for it is a comfort indeed. And the effort that is being made to cheer the dear shut-ins, is a noble one, and I think all who have a share in this grand work will receive a blessing for it. For is it not a work that will please our dear Saviour? How deeply and truly, we that have experienced affliction, can sympathize with all sufferers. For nearly five years I have suffered from a spinal and nervous trouble, and for several months last year was shutin from outside beauties. But I tried to think that "all things work together for good," and put my trust in the Friend we always turn to in trouble, and am now gradually improving.

My home is in the Kansas wheat belt, and as I have not noticed a letter from any sister from this part of the country, I want to ask for a letter party on the ninth anniversary of my marriage, March 12th. I would be glad to have a letter from some sister in each state.

Mrs. O. Tanner, Mullinville, R. F. D., 1, Kans. DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

MRS. O. TANNER, Mullinville, R. F. D., 1, Kans. DEAR READERS:

I wish to express my most heartfelt thanks to the dear editor for printing my request and to all the dear sisters who responded. I received about forty dear sisters who responded. I received about forty letters and still more are coming with every mail; it would be so hard for me to write each personally soil again ask the editor to give me a little noom. With a God bless you for our Band. I female.

MRS. HENRY LESSEY, 5003 Fleet Ave. Gieveland,

Requests from Shut-ins

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

I am a partial shut-in and have a daughter fourteen years old that is in very poor health. We are entirely alone in the world. I have been a widow for over seven years, and as long as I had my health got along fairly well, but for three years have been unable to do only a little light work.

We haven't a relative, and sometimes feel very lonely, so thought I would invite all the sisters to write us; if you did we wouldn't be lonesome for a while, would we? Hoping to be remembered by a few at least, I remain your shut-in sister, MRS. A. E. THOMPSON, BOX 59, Oxford, R. F. D., I, Me.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

I have been confined to my bed for two long years with spinal trouble, and can't straighten my limbs out, but thank God I can use my hands a little.

I get very tired lying in one position. I should be pleased to receive cheery letters and anything which would interest and help pass the weary hours.

EDITH FISHLEIGH, 159 4th St., Wyandotte, Mich.

Miss Martha Dupree, Clanton, Alabama, a bright cheerful cripple girl, who has been an invalid since childhood, tries to help earn her own living. She is very worthy and would greatly appreciate anything. Materials for fancy work she could utilize. Please remember her as you can, and receive our thanks in advance.

A FRIEND.

DEAR FRIENDS:

My dear grandmother, Mrs. Lottie McMorris, Cloud Chief, Okla., who has been an invalid for many years, would be very glad to get letters, quit pieces or any little remembrance. She does not know of this letter so it will be a surprise.

OLLIE HULL.

DEAR SISTERS OF COMFORT:
I am a shut-in, have not walked a step for ten years. My right hand is in bad shape, deformed by rheumatism, but still I do a little fancy work now and then, as well as write. I would like the readers to send me a few silk pieces for crazy-work.
Trusting you will not forget me, I remain,
MRS. LIZZIE MOULTON, New Lisbon, Wis.

DEAR COMFORT READERS:

I am a sufferer from heart trouble and am so nervous I do not have much pleasure in life, so I would ask all readers of Comfort to send me reading matter and quilt pieces, also letters. I will an-wer all I can. Mrs. August W. Peterman, Fredericksburg, Tex.

Will the kind readers of Comport give a deal shut-in friend of mine a letter party, Feb. 27, 1907. Her address is Mrs. Gracie Bradley, Schroon Lake New York. She lives in a very lonely place, and would appreciate any little remembrance such a velvet and wool pieces, postals, snap shots, or any little souvenir.

A Sunshine Friend.

Comfort Postal Request

How to Get a Lot of Souvenir Postals Free

How to Get a Lot of Souvenir Postals Free

This exchanging of Post Cards has become a great fad all over the world and we are now helping our readers get thousands of postals without cost.

Get up a club of subscribers to this paper and have your name put in this list free; you will then receive many exchanges in souvenir postals of all kinds, and will be in a position to return the favor to all who see your name in the list and send you cards. Some parties have received hundreds and hundreds of cards from just having their name inserted here. The Publishers simply ask the slight service from you of getting up these small clubs. We know any one can get a few more subscribers now we are giving such a good big paper for 15 cents a year, and we have a very large assortment of elegant Souvenir Post Cards. We will send an assortment of elegant Souvenir Post Cards. We will send an assortment of six cards for clubs of three, or twelve for a club of five. As we have thousands of cards, we are ready to help you get a large collection without any outlay on your part whatever. In sending in your club, say whether you want them from any particular city or just assorted up. You can start your collection this way and then exchange with AEREATER, we cannot insert requests for cards in this column unless you take advantage of this offer. Send us a club of twenty-five subscribers and we will send you our Banner assortment of one hundred American, Foreign and Comic Postals. Below we give a list of some of our regular cards: New York City Yiews including Flatiron Building, Waldorf Astoria Hotel, Grant's Tomb, Central Park Yiews, Brooklyn Bridge, Broadway, New York Harbor, Post Office, Statue of Liberty, and hundreds of others comprising Goney Island Views, etc., making a great assortment of every kind of scenes in and around this great metrapolitan city. We give a list of some of our regular and Canade. Post Gards of Whith we have in great numbers: Albany, N. Y., Buffalo, N. Y., includes all prominent Niagara views: Philadelphis,

Bella Klinger, Locust Gap, Pa. Olive G. Kirlin, Box 94, South Seaville, N. J. Miss Annie Hope, 226 York St., York, Pa. Miss Annie Bergen, 19 Spring Street, Utica, N. Y. Mrs. E. A. Councilman, Castle Creek, N. Y. Miss Delvia Mindel, Fairmont, R. F. D., 6, W. Va. G. E. Partridge, 412 Boone St., Orlando, Fla. Geo. W. Brands, Montrose, R. F. D., 2, Pa. Blenda Bergstone, Box 179, Sherrard, Ill. Mrs. James K. Dorsey, Dorsey, Ill. Miss Laura Hartman, 1105 S. Wash. Ave., Scranton, Pa. Priscilla V. Olson, 654 Woodward Ave., New Haven, Conn. Miss Ruth Simmons, Friendship, Maine. Lydia Heald, North Buckfield, Maine. Mrs. Homer Carman, Swanton, Vt. Alida W. Kelsey, Box 317, Guilford, Conn.

Good Old Songs We All Love.

By special request from many of our readers we print the words of a few songs and will continue to do so each month as space allows. We invite our readers to send in the words of popular old songs which they think would please our six millions of readers. In copying, give each line of poetry a line by itself, do not run it in, as though solid. Please write on one side of paper only.

They all went into strangers' hands that day.
The table where I played, the cot in which I lay,
All passed away like chaff before the gale,
But when the end came near, I cried with piteous

Oh, save my mother's picture from the sale!

CHORUS.

The picture 'round was passed, and questions they were asked,
A price was bid for it just here and there;
The tears streamed down my face, I could scarce keep in the place,
When I saw the picture pass without a care.
But an angel of a girl, with a mass of golden curls,
Who was struck to see my face so sad and pale,
Outbid them all, you see, and presented it to me,
And saved my mother's picture from the sale.

CHORUS.

The Pardon Came Too Late

A fair-haired boy in a foreign land at sunrise was to die; In a prison-cell he sat alone, from his heart there came a sigh;
Descrited from the ranks, they said—the reason none could say;
They only knew the orders were that he should die

next day:

next day;
And as the hours glided by, a messenger on wings did fly
To save this boy from such a fate—a pardon, but it came too late.

CHORUS.

The volley was fired at sunrise, just at the break of day;
And while the echoes lingered, a soul had passed away
Into the arms of his Maker, and there to hear his fate;
A tear, a sigh, a sad "good by"—the pardon came too late.

And 'round the camp-fire burning bright the story then was told; How his mother on a dying bed called for her son so bold; He hastened to obey her wish, was captured on the way; She never saw her boy so fair—he died at break of And when the truth at last was known, his inno-cence at once was shown, To save from such an unjust fate, a pardon sent-but 'twas too late.

CHORUS.

ST. ELMO

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 19.)

Dear Sisters:

Will you kindly remember my little five-year-old son on the third of March. Anything which will amuse or interest him. I will try to answer all letters containing a stamp. Address Johnnie R. Warren, Sims, Montgomery Co., Ark.

Dear Sisters:

I would like to join your circle. I am almost helpless from an attack of rheumatism. I can not go to see my friends as many of you can. I am confined to my chair, and alone the most of the time. I would appreciate any reading matter that would comfort me. If any of the sisters will write me, I will answer all if possible, if they leclose a stamp.

Mrs. JULIA Byers, Zionville, R. F. D., 1, N. C.

Will all you who can kindly remember my father, with postals.

Mrs. L. T. Wilson, Box 1, Apollo, R. F. D., 2, Pa., has been a rheumatic shut-in for ten years, and would be very grateful for reading matter.

Mrs. M. J. Elliott, Antelopegap, Mills Co., Tex., and expecially good literature.

Mrs. M. J. Elliott, Antelopegap, Mills Co., Tex., and expecially good literature.

The auction-day came 'round, with mirth the room which she inked and expecially good literature.

Dear Sisters:

I would appreciate any reading matter that the lomb;

I remember then how bitterly I cried.

J thut a boy was then, my age was scarcely ten, and with sorrow I had grown thin and pale;

Wen the home had to be sold, I cried with gried to see you gain, I should regret to learn that you had prolonged your stay even one hour on my account.

"You are ungrateful, Ednal And I begin to realize that you are unterly heartless."

"If I am, at least I have never trified with or deceived you, Mr. Leigh."

"You have what you are about to say, and I would appreciate any reading matter.

Mrs. L. T. Wilson, Box 1, Apollo, R. F. D., 2, Pa., has been a rheumatic shut-in for ten years, and would be very grateful for reading matter.

Mrs. M. J. Elliott, Antelopegap, Mills Co., Tex., with the day that has long since the day that ha

Mrs. Miller Makes a Fortune

Says She Will Now Give Away $10,000 Worth of Medicine to Women.

Until a few years ago Mrs. Cora B. Miller lived in a manner similar to that of thousands of other very poor women of the average small town and village. She now resides in her own palatial brown-stone residence, and is considered one of the most successful business women in the United

Several years ago Mrs. Miller learned of a mild Several years ago Mrs. Miller learned of a mild and simple preparation that would readily cure female diseases and piles. After curing herself and many of her friends she was besieged by so many women needing the treatment that she decided to furnish it to those who might call for it. She started with only a few dollars' capital, and the remedy, possessing true and wonderful merit, producing marvelous cures when doctors and other remedies failed, the demand grew so rapidly she was several times compelled to seek larger quarters. She now occupies one of the city's largest office buildings, which she owns, and almost one hundred clerks and stenographers are required to assist in this great business.

Million Women Use It.

More than a million women have used Mrs. Miller's Specific, and no matter where you live, she can refer you to ladies in your own locality who can and will tell any sufferer that this marvelous remedy really cures women. Despite the fact that Mrs. Miller's business is very extensive, she is always willing to give aid and advice to every suf-fering woman who writes to her. She is a generous, good woman and has decided to give away to women who have never used her medicine $10,000.00 worth absolutely free.

Every woman suffering with pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing-down feelings, nervous-ness, creeping sensations up the spine, melancholy, ness, creeping sensations up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness, or piles from any cause, should sit right down and send her name and address to Mrs. Cora B. Miller, Box 3162, Kokono, Ind., and receive by mail (free of charge in plain wrapper) a 50-cent box of her marvelous Specific; also her valuable book, which every woman should have.

Remember, this offer will not last long, for thousands and thousands of women who are suffering will take advantage of this generous means of getting cured. So if you are ailing do not suffer another day, but send your name and address to Mrs. Miller for the book and medicine before the $10,000.00 worth is all gone.

Cancer Cured No Knife, No Pain

The need of the knife and its attendant horrors in the treatment of cancer is gone, for I have cured cancer again and again without danger, painful operation or inconvenience, and in two or three months the patients were well. I do not use a knife or any burning fluids, or caustic salves or oils. The method is my own. It gives instant relief to the terrible burning pain of the cancer. In the past years it has cured many sufferers who stood face to face with death, and not one cancer cured by this method has returned. I can give you the names of people in almost every state, whom I have treated in the past year; write them and see what they say. The treatment is given successfully by mail in your own home and I am glad to give any sufferer full information and proofs of many wonderful cures. Ask for the proofs. Address DR. RUPERT WELLS, 2191 Radol Building, St. Louis, Mo.

TO WOMEN WHO DREAD MOTHERHOOD!

Information How They May Give Birth to Happy, Healthy Children Absolutely Without Pain—Sent Free.

No woman need any longer dread the pains of child-birth; or remain childless. Dr. J. H. Dye has devoted his life to relieving the sorrows of women. He has proved that all pain at child-birth may be entirely banished, and he will gladly tell you how it may be done absolutely free of charge. Send your name and address to Dr. J. H. Dye, 107 Lewis Block, Buffalo, N. Y., and he will send you, postpaid, his wonderful book which tells how to give birth to happy, healthy children, absolutely without pain; also how to cure sterility. Do not delay but write today.

Perfect Bust FULL INFORMATION

FREE Do you feel yourself deficient as to a plump, well-rounded figure? Is your bust measurement all that you desire? Are there hollow places x3ove and below your collar bone? Whatever you may lack in the way of perfect form or figure Nature will supply for you if you use the VESTRO method. A request will bring to you free of cost a scaled package in plain wrapper giving you full information how you can, in the privacy of your own room, increase your own room, 'nerease your bust measure 6 inches in a short time and develop and perfect every part of your form. They also send free, new beauty book, showing photos with testimonials from many prominent society ladies, who have used this safe, sure and rapid method. Write to-day, enclosing stamp.

day, enclosing stamp. Aurum Co., Dept. 13, No. 79 Dearborn St., Chicago.

Has latest design motor, governor, springs and bearings.
Wind the motor spring and move the start lever, and the governor regulates the speed. Absolutely the most valuable talking machine ever offered. We give it free for selling only 40 pickages of BLUINE at 10 cents a package.
He trust you and send your talking machine and Columbia record the same day that you return our $4.00 received from the sale. We gnarantee satisfaction. BLUINE MFG.

Oc., 664, Mill St., Concord Junction, Mass.

"Virtue itself offends when coupled with forbid-ding manners."—Bishop Middleton.

In order to meet the demand for information made by COMFORT readers on the kindred subjects of Etiquette and Personal Appearance, this column will be devoted to them, and all questions will be answered, but no inquirer shall ask more than two questions each month. We would suggest to readers to cut this column out and paste it in a scrap book. Address letters to Etiquette Editor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Brown, Eyes, Eagle Lake, Fla.—While there are no rules of etiquette governing a girl's conduct in a love affair, we think this one has been very impolite to you and is what we would call a "firt," as you inquire. We think a you do, that you had better drop her. If we may be permitted to add somewhat to this, we should say, drop her hard.

Twin Sister, English, S. C.—Yes, it is quite proper for the gentleman to put his arm around the lady when he is going to kiss her. As they are engaged the entire proceeding is quite correct.

D. R. L., Worthville, Pa.—There is no difference between the summer and the winter style of tipping the hat by gentlemen. The most graceful way of doing it is the proper way. (2) Ask your local druggist or barber.

druggist or barber.

M. F., Woodfield, O.—The lady should regard your wishes in the matter as you are engaged to be married to her, and are, to all intents and purposes, her husband. Ordinarily, brothers-in-law with perfect propriety may kiss their sisters-in-law in purely brotherly fashion, their wives not objecting, but when a sister-in-law's fiance does not want her to kiss her brother-in-law she should not doso. If she insists upon doing it, the engagement should be broken, for she is not the kind of a woman a man should have for a wife. If the brother-in-law encourages the lady it is time for his wife to be saying something.

Perplexed Lassie, Laucaster, O.—Unless you are saying something.

Perplexed Lassie, Lancaster, O.—Unless you are hopelessly in love with the man who is younger than you, now is the best time to break off the possibility of it. Marriages between men and women, where the women are older, very often are very happy, but there must be great love. Women age more rapidly than men and only the very strongest love on a man's part, will keep him loyal to the woman who is old while he is still young. It is all right to let the young fellow remain as a very good friend, but don't marry him unless you simply cannot live without him.

P. S. A., Mainport, Ind.—As you are of age and he not live without him.

P. S. A., Mainport, Ind.—As you are of age and he is all right, we think you would be doing yourself only justice to choose him against your parents' wishes. You can't tell whether he is true or not. That is one of the risks all women have to run. But most men we are glad to say, are loyal husbands. Some are not, of course, but they are not the ones to judge by. Six years' difference in ages is about the proper thing.

White Rose, Mariana, Fla.—Ask the young man for the ring. He has very bad manners if he will not give it to you without asking. (2) Have a talk with the man whose friendship has been broken by the other and if he wants it to remain broken, let him go. He can't be worth having if he will lose you so easily. (3) Girls should not receive the attention of men until they are out of school, no matter what their age. It is proper to accept the man's photograph if you are corresponding with him.

N. G. H., Gowanda, N. Y.—Marry the man you love best. What kind of a wife could you be to one man while you loved another whom you could have married? Your parents may think you ought to marry the man with money, but you should not marry to please them when it wrecks your happiness. Better die an old maid.

marry to please them when it wrecks your happiness. Better die an old maid.

A. E. G., Ringwood, Ill.—Ask the lady if you may call on her, if she does not ask you. This is quite permissible. Indeed, some ladies wait till they are asked before inviting gentlemen to call, which they should not do, if they want callers to come to see them. It is not necessary to say so in so many words, that you want to be her best young man, but you can show her by numerous attentions that you want to be. She will learn it soon enough, and will let you know whether she wants you in that capacity or not. And don't be foolish as so many men are—when, or if she shows you that she doesn't want you, then that instant, get away and stay away. When you call talk about the local events that you both know about, or anything that is of common interest. There is no rule forthat. Of all things be your own natural self, and talk to her at first as if she were your sister. Don't put on frills and try to be what you are not.

Auxious, Waterbury, Conn.—Some young ladles permit gentlemen to kiss them to whom they are not engaged. Kissing is an old custom among the young people of all parts of this country. But we think it is a custom more honored in the breach than in the observance. Promiscuous kissing is vulgar and unladylike, and if you permit one man to kiss you, why not another? And if two, why not all? If all the men may kiss you, be sure none will want to. Can you imagine anything less to be desired than that? Save your kisses for the man you expect to be your husband. That is the sweetest, cleanest, best and safest rule of conduct.

M. B., Hubbard, Texas.—Having declined his invitation, and reconsidered it, there is nothing for

M. B., Hubbard, Texas.—Having declined his invitation, and reconsidered it, there is nothing for you to do, but to say nothing, or to send him word that you have changed your mind and will accept. Most men would be glad to get a message of that kind.

M. R., Allentown, Pa.—Wait a little and he will tell you. If he does not, you may conclude that you were mistaken in his feelings. Etiquette of the ordinary sort does not apply in this case and there is no way by which you can go other than as we tell you. You may in various proper ways let him know that you have a preference for him, but only let him see them when he has shown you that he prefers you to anyone else.

The Shadow of a Cross

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3.)

cannot—surely you will not dash it aside in the hope of some diviner drink to fill it when you and I are crumbled into dust! Think, dearest, life is so fleeting. Only a few short years and the lonely winter of old age will be upon us. Come to my arms, sweet—and find your heaven—here!"

As the musical voice ceased she stood before him white, shaken with the internal struggle which was consuming her, then in a gasp, these words broke from her:

"I dare not! I dare not!"
He took a step nearer.

"You mean that you will not?"
She glanced up at him, a look of unfaltering upon him-he felt the futility of further struggle.

"Then I must let you go," he said, sadly, "but first—this—to feed my heart upon."
He took her into his arms with fierce passion and once, twice, three times crushed her lips with a kiss.

In the moment that followed she gave him In the moment that followed she gave him one look, a look so filled with anguished tenderness its sweetness and its sadness haunted him all his days, then she tore herself from his arms and ran from the spot, scarcely knowing whither she went for the tears that welled into her eyes half blinded her.

He watched her go and he felt as if all his little world had crumbled into ruins. All his life long he had worshiped at the shrine of Nature. Her trees, her flowers, her sunshine, her smiles, her singing birds and her humming

Nature. Her trees, her flowers, her sunshine, her smiles, her singing birds and her humming bees—all these had been as his playmates from early boyhood, but now they had lost their power to comfort, to console.

A little while before he felt himself strong to conquer, strong in the power of his young manhood, now he felt crushed to the dust by the weight of his sorrow. He sank down on the soft earth. In that hour he knew the need of some higher power, some power that was of Nature, yet which was apart from her and as far above her as the stars are above the earth.

far above her as the stars are above the earth.

Was it—could it have been a prayer which was wafted from his lips? Only the God of Nature and his own heart may know, but even the birds singing in the branches above might have pitied him as he knelt there in the morning sunlight, while the tears, that were no shame to his manhood, coursed down his cheeks, and his pride battled with that anguish which kills the soul although the body yet lives.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The heroine of this story chooses between the church of her childhood and the man she loves. Firm in the belief of her early teachings the lover pleads in vain. Read the next chapter, "Mrs. Wurnetd: The Parting." Send 15 cents for a year's subscription, and read not only this strong serial, but others now running in COMFORT.

A Happy Bald-Headed Man.

H. Dayton, a chemist, living at 3004 S Magnolia Ave., St. Louis. Mo., accidently discovered a mixture that made his hair grow. He tried it on his ball-headed friends with the same result. He is so proud of it that he has had the recipe printed by the thousand and is sending it to all who write and enclose stamp.

SEWERS: Gingham Anrons. Make highest wages, Material sent to door f charge. Stamped addressed envelope for particu-L. P. Richards, 4504 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago.

We Will Pay Men $85 Per Monfh to travel, collect names, advertise and give away samples. Expenses advanced. Write today, W. R. Rider Company, thiengo.

"THE CONFESSIONS OF A MODERN MIDAS" graphically describes a millionaire's sharp practices. Fas-cinating Book. By mail, fine cloth binding, $1.00. Ad-dress T. W. NEVIN, Keystone Building, Pittsburg, Pa

GOLD TEETH THE LATEST FAD that its any tooth. Really edjusted; removed at will. Looks like regular dendate; work. Fools them all. Over two million sold. Everybody wants a gold tooth. Fries 10 cents cond.; 4 for 25 cents, 12 for 50 cents. CX, FARGO. FRENOHTOWN, N. J.

ASTHMA CURED BEFORE

I will send by express to any sufferer a bottle of LANE'S ASTHMA CURE. If it cures send me $1: if it does not, don't. Give express office.

D. J. LANE, Dept. C., St. Marys, Kas.

YOUR FORTUNE TOLD

FREE send two-cent stamp with birth date and I will send you a pen picture of your life from birth to death as indicated by astrology. All matters of business, love, marriage and health, plainly told by the world's greater at the control of the c est Astrologer. Patrons astonished and satisfied with my true predictionsProf. A. H. ASTRO. Box 3693, Philadelphia. Pa.

RARE CHINA FOR YOUR HOME.

Wonderful Opportunity Given to Any One to Secure a Gold-Medal Dinner Set without Paying a Cent.

An Opportunity is Offered the Readers of this Paper to Take Advantage of the Ex-ceptional Offer and Prepare Their Dining Rooms for the Most Se-lect Visitors.

Readers, do you want a beautiful dinner set for your dining room, one that will make you Proud of your home when anyone comes to dinner?

I can point out the way for you to secure one of the finest sets to be found any place, absolutely free. All you will have to do is to give away among your friends a very few beautiful pictures, one of which you see here and which they will be glad to get in view of the fact, that, considering their values as treasures of art, their cost is almost nothing.

Elsewhere in this paper you will find a full statement of the entire plan, but the offer is so good that I want to say something about it here, so as to bring the very best chances to the notice of readers whenever possible.

chances to the notice of readers whenever possible.

This Gold Medal Hinner Sect is one of the pretiest and most delicate services anybody ever laid his eyes on. It bears proof of its worth, for on each plate is stamped the fac-simile of the Gold Medal which was awarded to this particular kind of china at the St. Louis World's Fair. This is a very high honor for it means that out of the hundreds of different kinds of China from home and from foreign countries this brand was the one chosen as the Very Best.

The dinner set of which I speak is gold lined, and traced beautifully with arbutus blossoms, vines and leaves, all in their natural beauty. They are so real that one can almost imagine he smells the odor of the blossoms.

Mr. M. S. Roberts, 50 Wabash Av., Chicago is the one making this offer. In addition to the dinner set, however, he offers absolutely free a fine "Motto Plate," gold lined and traced with exquisite art. This plate is 8½ inches in diameter and bears an appropriate motto which makes it a perfect beauty.

You will receive the plate extra besides the dishes for distributing a few of the most beautiful fac-simile oil paintings you ever saw. And please don't think you will have to do any canvassing for YOU WILL NOT.

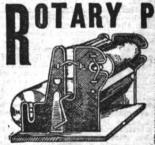

The full details of the offer will be found on Page 19. Don't neglect to read every word on that page or you may be sorry when it is too late.

YOUR HEART

Does it Flutter, Palpitate or Skip Beats? Have you Shortness of Breath, Tenderness, Numbness or Pain in left side, Dizziness, Fainting Spells, Spots before the eyes, Sudden Starting in Sleep, Nightmare, Hungry or Weak Spells, Oppressed
Feeling in chest, Choking
Sensation in throat, Painful Breathing, Dropsy, Swelling of the feet or ankles, or Neuralgia around the heart? If you have one or more of the above symptoms of heart disease, on't fail to use Dr. Kinsman's Celebrated Heart Tablets: One ont of four has a weak or diseased heart.
Three-fourths of these do not know they have heart trouble and thousands die who have been wrongfully treated for the Stomach, Lungs, Kidney or Nerves.
Don't drop do d like hundreds of others, when Dr.
Kinsman's Heart Tablets are within your reach.

FREE TREATMENT COUPON Any sufferer cutting out this coupon and mailing it with their name and P. O. address, to Dr. F. G. Kinsman, Box 862, Augusta, Maine, will receive a box of Heart Tablets for trial, by return mail, free of charge Enclose stamp for postage. Don't risk death by delay.

ied by hand. It is a wonderful, practical little press, suited to printing programs, circulars, tickets, cards, letter heads, envelopes, dodgers, price lists, etc. It will print eight full lines of type on a sheet four inches wide. We give you the Fress with complete outfit, including a cabinet containing type tray, font of type, bottle of ink, bottle of bronze, tweezers, blank visiting cards, etc. When printing big jobs from a roil you simply turn the crank and the press automatically feed sitself, prints and delivers the finished job. We will give this complete Press and Outfit to anyone who will sell only 24 of our beautiful asserted articles of jewelry at 10 cents each. Just send us your name, we trust you with jewelry. When sold send money (82.40) and we will ship Press and outfit complete from factory same day money is received. plete from factory same day money is received Sand myour name today. This fine premium will please you.
F. R. BIRD MFG. CO., Dept. 39
291 Coursess St., Boston, Mass.

Can You Make 12 Words?

TBROIANL

Now here is a puzzle that is a prize-winner. You do not have to sit up and work over a dictionary all night. Just a little ingenuity and skill. The puzzle is to get as many words as possible out of the letters herewith given. Use only the letters given and only as many. Words as possible out of the letters herewith given. Use only the letters given and only as many times as they appear. For instance, the letter R appears four times, so in all your words you must use R more than four times. If you used k twice in another, you cannot use R many times as it appears. You do not have to use the send it to you unless we have your name and address, so we give these prizes to induce you to send us your is at once, as the person winning first prize many not have more than that many words.

THE OFFER We will give $25 in cash as any not have more than that many words.

THE OFFER We will give $25 in cash as any not have more than that many words.

THE OFFER to the person sending in the largest list of words, $10 to the second largest, $5 to the third, $1 to the next five and 50 cents each to the next ten. There are no conditions to the contest for these prizes. If there should be at the between two or more persons for any of your money. Show this offer to your friends.

WORD CONTEST EDITOR, 309 RIDGE BLDG., KANSAS CITY, MO.

ELMO

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 28.)

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 23.)

She rose and answered quietly:
"The future may contain only disappointments for me, but however lonely, however sad my lot may prove, I think I shall never fall so low as to regret not having married a man whom I find it impossible to love. The sooner this interview ends the longer our friendship will last. My time is not now my own, and as my duties claim me in the schoolroom, I must bid you good by."

"Edna, If you send me away from you now, you shall never look upon my face again in this world!"

Mournfully her tearful eyes sought his, but her voice was low and steady as she put out both hands, and said solemnly:

"Farewell, dear friend. God grant that when next we see each other's faces they may be overshadowed by the shining, white plumes of our angel wings, in that city of God, where the wicked cease from troubing and the weary are at rest." Never again in this world, ah! such words are dreary and funereal as the dull fall of clods on a coffin-lid; but so be it. Thank God! time brings us all to one inevitable tryst before the great white throne."

real as the duil fall of clods on a coffin-lid; but so be it. Thank God! time brings us all to one inevitable tryst before the great white throne."

He took the hands, then drew them to his lips and left her.

With a slow, weary step she turned and went up to her room and read Mr. Hammond's letter. It was full of affection and wise counsel, but contained no allusion to Mr. Murray.

As she refolded it she saw a slip of paper which had fallen unnoticed on the carpet, and picking it up she read these words:

"It grieves me to have to tell you that, after all, I fear St. Elmo will marry Estelle Harding. He does not love her, she cannot influence him to redeem himself; his future looks hopeless indeed. Edna, my child! what have you done! Oh! what have you done!"

Her heart gave a sudden, wind bound, then a spasm seemed to seize it, and presently the fluttering ceased, her pulses stopped, and a chill darkness fell upon her.

Her head sank heavily on her chest, and when she recovered her memory she felt an intolerable sensation of suffocation, and a sharp pain that seemed to stab the heart, whose throbs were slow and feeble.

She raised the window and leaned out panting for breath, and the freezing wind powdered her face with fine snowflakes, and sprinkled its fairy flower-crystals over her hair.

Physical pain blanched Edna's lips, and she pressed her hand repeatedly to her heart, wondering what caused those keen pangs. At last, when the bodily suffering passed away, and she sat down exhausted, her mind reverted to the sentence in Mr. Hammond's letter.

She knew the words were not lightly written, and that his reproachful appeal had broken from the depths of his aching heart, and was intended to rouse her to some action. "I can do nothing, say nothing! Must sit still and wait patiently—prayerfully. Today, if I could put out my hand and touch Mr. Murray, and bind him to me for ever, I would not. No, no! Not a finger must I lift even between him and Estelle! But he will not marry her! I know—I feel that he will not mar of the silk ornamens at bottom of tabs, lined throughout with sateen to match, an up to late, stylish neckpiece and is given free in exchange for Profit Sharing Certificates amounting to only $25.00. This big, rich, beautiful banquet lamp will be furnished free in exchange for Profit Sharing Certificates amounting to $25.00. The latest style for this season, beautifully decorated in floral beautiful beautif had a terrible pain here, and—" She laid her hand over her heart."

"Felix, let use of downstairs. I think if your mother would give me some wine, it might strengthen me."

Notwithstanding the snow, Mrs. Andrews had gone out; but Felix had the wine brought to the schoolroom, and after a little while the blood showed itself shyly in £dna's what lips, and she took the boy's Latin book and it was nearly nine o'clock before Felix feli the sleep that night. Softly unclasping his thin fingers which clung to her hand, she went up to her own room, feeling the full force of these mournful words:

"I Kee' In the esuffers from it. I only pour out my heart before God—and here. Oh! the mournful words:

"I would not be suffers from it. I only pour out my heart before God—and here. Oh! the profiless adness—this sadness without tears—arid, bruising the heart like a hammer!"

There was no recurrence of the physical agony; and after two days the feeling of prostration passed away, and only the memoral and introducing her to self-styled "fash-ionable society," had taken possession of Mrs. Andrews mind, and she was quite as much delighted with her patronizing scheme as a child would have been with a new hobbyhorse. On Thursday she informed Edna that she desired her presence at dinner, and urged that no alternative remained but acquiescence, and reluctantly the governess prepared to meet a formidable party of strangers.

When Mrs. Andrews presented Sir Roger Percival, he bowed rather haughtily, and with a distant politeness, which assured Edna that he was cognizant of her refusal to make highly horse on the sixty part of the strangers.

When Mrs. Andrews presented Sir Roger Percival, he bowed rather haughtily, and with a distant politeness, which assured Edna that he was cognizant of her refusal to make highly her party with the province of the strangers.

When Mrs. Mandrews presented sir Roger Percival, he sowed to heart and carefully flattering his vanity; but wheneve Edna, his visa-vis, looked toward him, she invariably found hi that he never takes up his pen without using it to break some social shackles; and its strokes are tremendous as those of the hammer of Thor. But surely, Miss Earl, you Americans cannot with either good taste, grace, or consistency, upbraid England on the score of woman's rights' movements?"

"At least, sir, our statesmen are not yet attacked by this most loathsome of political leprosies. Only a few crazy fanatics have fallen victims to it, and if lunatic asylums were not frequently cheated of their dues, these would not be left at large, but shut up together in high-walled enclosures, where, like Sydney Smith's 'graminivorous metaphysicians,' or Reaumur's spiders, they could only injure one another and destroy their own webs. The noble apology which Edmund Burke once offered for his countrymen, always recurs to my mind when I hear these women's conventions' alluded to: Because half-a-dozen grasshoppers under a fern make the field ring with their importunate chink, while thousands of great cattle repose beneath the shade of the British oak, chew the cud, and are silent, pray do not imagine that those who make the noise are the only inhabitants of the field; that, of course, they are many in number, or that, after all, they are other than the little, shrivelled, meager, hopping, though loud and troublesome insects of the hour. I think, sir, that the noble and true women of this continent earnestly believe that the day which invests them with the elective franchise would be the blackest in the annals of humanity, would ring the death-knell of modern civilization, of national prosperity, social morality, and domestic happiness! and would consign the race to a night of degradation and horror infinitely more appalling than a return to primeval barbarism.

"Even my brief sojourn in America has taught me the demoralizing tendency of the doctrine of 'equality of races and of sexes,' and you must admit, Miss Earl, that your countrywomen are growing dangerously learned," answered Sir Roger, smilling.

"I'ven my brief soj said Wait, Miss Earl. What do you want, Hattie?"

"Bro. Felix wants Miss Earl, and sent me

"Wait, Miss Earl. What do you want, Hattie?"

"Bro. Felix wants Miss Earl, and sent me to beg her to come."

"Go back and tell him he is in a hopeless minority, and that in this country the majority rule. There are fifteen here who want to talk to Miss Earl, and he can't have her in the schoolroom just now," said Grey Chitton, slyly pelting his niece with almonds.

"But Felix is really sick today, and if Mrs. Andrews will excuse me, I prefer to go."

She looked imploringly at the lady of the house, who said nothing; and Sir Roger beckoned Hattie to him, and exclaimed:

"Pray, may I inquire, Mrs. Andrews, why your children do not make their appearance? I am sure you need not fear a repetition of the sarcastic rebuke of that wit who, when dining at a house where the children were noisy and unruly, lifted his glass, bowed to the troublesome little ones, and drank to the memory of King Herod. I am very certain 'the murder of the innocents' would never be recalled here, unless—forgive me, Miss Earl! but from the sparkle in your eyes, I believe you anticipate me. Do you really know what I am about to say?"

"It hink, sir, I can guess."

"Let me see whether you are a clairvoyant!"

"On one occasion when a sign for a children's school was needed, and the lady teacher applied to Lamb to suggest a design, he

FOUND DEAD IN BE

Mr. John C. Harris, a prosperous young farmer of Chambersburg N. Y., went to bed last Thursday night feeling at well as usual. Next morning his wife found him dead in bed beside her! Was it murder? Yes and no. No, because he died from so-called natural causes-yes, because for months he'd known that he had heart disease, and that sudden death might come from the least over-exertion, or by sleeping on his left side, and this last proved too true! And yet this bright, intelligent young man, with every-thing to live for, wouldn't listen to reason either to his doctor or to the earnest pleadeither to his doctor or to the earnest pleadings of his wife to do something. "It don't amount to anything," he'd say, "only a little palpitation, It's my stomach, I think. It will go away of itself." But delay cost his will go away of itself." But delay cost his life! Was not this self-murder? This case is only one; sixty thousand peo-ple die yearly of Heart Disease! Six in every ten have it. Many don't know it, they think ten have it. Many don't know it, they think it's something else and doctor the stomach, kidneys, female organs, etc., and get no better; and a good many who do know think it can't be cured. Now Heart Disease is just as curable as any other disease; we have proved this fully by curing over a hundred and thirty thousand cases! Many of these were the most chronic, serious, complicated kind, in which all other remedies and doctors had failed and hope seemed gone but our treatmost chronic, serious, complicated kind, in which all other remedies and doctors had failed, and hope seemed gone, but our treatment cured them quickly and to stay cured! In very many cases of Heart Disease the Nerves and Stomach are affected also and in such it is useless to treat the heart alone, and one reason why our treatment cures is because it sets the stomach right, removes constipation, steadies and revitalizes the nerves and builds up the whole system, besides strengthening, controlling and curing the heart. We can cure YOU! no matter how bad off, and to prove it we will send you by mail, postpaid, without any conditions, without any restrictions, and without any cost, a regular full-size treatment of Dr. Fuller's Heart and Nerve Cure, and his illustrated book with which you will know your own case as well as any doctor. Both are free.

Understand this is not a "sample" or "trial," but a regular full size treatment. Neither is it a C. O. D. scheme or anything of the kind, nothing but a fair, square chance for you to fully test this grand treatment for yourself, in your own home, without cost. If you have one of the symptoms, Nervousness, Trembling, Twitching or Nightmare, Palpitation, Fluttering or Skipping Beats of the heart, Short Breath, Fainting, Smothering, Choking, Numb or Sinking Spells, Dizziness, Nose-bleed, Swelling Legs, Asthma, Pain in Heart, Side or Shoulder-blade, your heart and nerves are surely wrong! Don't wait, but send now for the full free treatment and get well. Address The Heart Cure Co., 76 Masonic Building, Hallowell, Maine.

meekly advised that of "The Murder of the Innocents." Thank you, sir. However, I am not surprised that you entertain such flattering opinions of a profession which in England boasts 'Squeers' as its national type and representative."

The young man laughed good-humoredly, and answered.

resentative."
The young man laughed good-humoredly, and answered:
"For the honor of my worthy pedagogical countrymen, permit me to assure you that (CONTINUED ON PAGE 29.)

If you have ever sent an order to Sears, Roebuck & Co. you may be entitled to receive from them, FREE OF ANY COST TO YOU OF ANY KIND, one or more of the valuable articles illustrated hereon, this by reason of our LATEST REVISED AND MOST LIBERAL PROFIT SHARING PLAN, FAR MORE LIBERAL THAN EVER BEFORE, READ OUR LIBERAL OFFER, OUR NEW REVISED $25.00 PROFIT SHARING PLA

PEOPLE WHO BUY GOODS FROM SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO. not only get far more value for their money than they can get elsewhere, but they get a Profit Sharing Certificate for the full amount of each purchase, and now for the first time they can exchange the Profit Sharing Certificates when they have amounted to only $25.00 for their choice of an al-

This rich, big, go hed metal stand or table, with a ome, rich, onyxize This or ith a his peautiful stand, inches high, top 15a inches, is one of the ricest gold finished met on yx12ed top stand made, will be sent free to any customer of our exchange for President to to the ricest gold finished met.

This handsome new style laddes' mackintosh or raincoat will be furnished free in exchange for Profit Sharing Certificates amounting to only $25.09. This is a very handsome garment, made from an extra yerkley cloth. The inside of the coat is a light weight brown cloth, it is beautifully finished throughout;
handsome, stylish garment. Comes in size 32 to 44 bust measure. ment, Comes in size 32 to 44 bust measure, length 54 to 58 inches, cates :

only $2:
style men s waterproof macksintosh or raincoat, a coat that can be worn either as a rainonat or overcoat, a really high grade and valuable article of wearing apparel, will be sent to any customer in exchange for Profit Sharing Certificates amounting to only $25:00. This coat is made in the very latest style, made from a good quality
tan covert waterproof cloth, fancy plad waterproof cloth,
fancy plad waterproof lining, made in the latest double breasted style, with yelvet collar and three outside pocketa, a handsome, large, showy and durable coat, and if you will send us Profit Sharing Certificates amounting to only $25:00, state your size, height

This handsome, extra

Sewing Machines, Furniture, Buggies, Harness, Organs, Pianos, Fine Curtains, Rugs, Silverware, Watches, Dinner Sets, etc., are now given FREE by us for a SURPRISINGLY SMALL AMOUNT IN Publishers Confidence and explained in the share of our profits than ever perofe.

It inches high and 10 inches in diameter; cups are full size, all latest pattern, beautifully cut, very brilliant.

This fine rifle with steel barrel and sear walnut stock, will shoot either 22 short or cartridges, is now given by us free for only $25.00 in Profit Sh Certificates. THIS SHOWS ONLY A FEW OF THE VAST VARIETY and make your selection from the enormous assortment now shown. If never sent us orders borrow a catalogue of your neighbor or send to us 1300-page catalogue, which we will mail you free, start at once, and a your orders have amounted to $25.00 or more, you can exchange the cwe send you for your choice of an almost endless variety of valuable me of merchandise now given in exchange for a surprisingly small amount in Profit Sharing Certification of the Profit Sharing Certification of the Profit Sharing Certificates are now worth than when you received them, and if you are be Profit Sharing Certificates amounting to $25.00 or more, don't fail to write for our latest free Sharing Book. Write us on a postal eard or in a letter and simply say: "Send me your received book by return mail, postpaid, free.

PLEASE TELL ALL YOUR FRIENDS AND NEIGHBORS

OUR FAMOUS BIG FREE

DON'T BUY ANYTHING ANYWHERE until you see Profit Sharing Book what we are giving to our customers free. If you need anything of any kind today send your order to us. If you haven't one of our big catalogues and can't borrow one in your immediate neighborhood, write for it. We will send you the big 1300-page book by return mall, postpaid, free. Just write us a letter or a postal and say, "Send me your Big Catalogue," and the big 1300-page book will go to you immediately by return mall, free and postpaid. It is a better catalogue than ever, the greatest money saying book in the world. Then get your order to us, get your Profit Sharing Certificates started, and when they amount to $25,00 or more there is hardly any end to the variety of valuable articles you can get free. You will be surprised what a big part of all the money you send us will go back to you in your own selection of valuable articles that you may choose to select from OUR BIG FREE PROFIT SHARING BOOK. ADDRESS.

The sad story of MY FATHER'S GREAT SUFFERING FROM CANCER

Read the following and be convinced away his nose and portions of his face (as shown in his palate was entirely destroyed together with porfinis throat. Father fortunately discovered the great that eured him. This was over forty years ago, has never suffered a day since.

same discovery has now cured thousands who were sed with operation and death. And to prove that this put we will give their sworn statement if you will Doctors, Lawyers, Mechanics, Ministers, Laboring inkers and all classes recommend this glorlous life-iscovery, and we want the whole world to benefit by it.

VE YOU CANCER. To make the way to the commend the sufficiency of the commendation of the commendati sein, discovery, and we want the whole world to benefit by it.

HAVE YOU OANCER, Tu mo rs,
Ulcers, Abscesses, Fever Sores, doitre, Catarrh, Sail-Rheum, Rheumatism, Piles, Eczema,
Scald Head or Scrotula in any form.

We positively guarantee our great treatment, perfect satisfaction and honest service—or money refunded.

It will cost you nothing to learn the truth about this won derfal home treatment without the knife or caustle. And it you know anyone who is afflicted with any disease above mentioned, you can do them a Christian act of kindness by sending us their addresses so we can write them how easily they ean be cured in their own home. This is no fell talk, we mean just what we say. We have cured others, and can cure you. Forty years experience guarantees success. Write us today; delay is dangerous. Illustrated Booklet TREE. DRE. MIXER, 269 State St., HASTINGS, MICH.

Gold Watch FREE

CURE GOITRE Have Found a Remedy That You Should Try. YOU MAY TEST IT FREE.

Mrs. L. R. Brent of Bardwell, Ky., writes:—'I am happy to tell you that my goitre is entirely cured and that I am in better health every way than for years. You have a wonderful treatments Dector, and I am recommending it to all my afficted friends."

I have cured scores

FREE to the RUPTURED

I have made new and important discoveries in the cure of Rupture and for the next 30 days I will give every ruptured person who follows these directions a chance to try this remarkable Home Cure, FREE.

Mark on the discount of the cure of the cure, FREE.

Mark on the diagram the location of the rupture. Answer the questions and mail this to DR. W. S. RICE, 242 Main Street, Adams, N. Y.

Age	Time Ruptured
Name
Address

Does rupture pains __.

STAY

Obesity Quickly and Safely Cured. No Charge to try the NEW KRESSLIN TREATMENT. est Send Your Address and a Supply Will Be Sent You FREE—Do It To-day.

Fat people need no longer despair, for there is a home emedy to be had that will quickly and safely reduce their eight, and, in order to prove that it does take off superfluous esh rapidly and without harm, a trial treatment will be

This represents the effect the Kresslin Treatment has had in hundreds of cases.

Treatment has had in hundreds of cases.

Jent, free of charge, to those who apply for it by simply sending name and address. It is called the KRESSLIN FREATMENT, and many people who have used it have been reduced as much as a pound aday, often forty pounds a month when large quantities of fat were to be taken off. No person is so fat but what it will have the desired effect, and no matter where the excess fat is located—stomach, bust, alpha, cheeks, neck—it will quickly vanish without exercising, lieting, or in any way interfereing with your customary nabits. Rheumatism, Asthma, Kidney and Heart Troubles leave as fat is reduced. It does it in an ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS way, for there is not an atom in the treatment that is not beneficial to all the organs. So send name and address to the Dr. Bromley Co., Dept 530B, 108 Fulton St., New York City, and you will receive a large trial treatment after the properties of indorsement from those who have taken the treatmentat home and reduced themselves to normal. All this will be sent without one cent to pay in any shape or form.

In this department will be carefully considered any legal problem which may be submitted. All opinions given herein will be prepared at our expense by eminent counsel.

herein will be prepared at our expense by eminent counsel. Inasmuch as it is one of the principal missions of COM-FORT to aid in upbuilding and upholding the sanctity of the home, no advice will be given on matters pertaining to divorce. Any paid-up subscriber to COMFORT is welcome to submit inquiries, which, so far as possible, will be answered in this department. If any reader, other than a subscriber, wishes to take advantage of this privilege, it may be done by sending fifteen (15) cents, in silver or stamps, for an annual subscription to COMFORT thus obtaining all the benefits which our subscribers enjoy including a copy of the magazine for one year.

Should any subscriber desire an immediate, special opinion on any legal question, privately mailed, it may be had by sending one dollar with a letter asking such advice, addressing the same to "THE EDITOR, COMFORTS HOME LAWYER," Augusta, Maine, and in reply a carefully prepared opinion will be sent in an early mail. Full names and addresses must be signed by all persons seeking advice in this column but not necessarily for publication. Unless otherwise requested, initials only will be published.

Matilda, Ohio.—Under the laws of the State from which you write, we are of the opinion that, if the property you mention did not come to the man you mention by descent, devise, or deed of gift from any ancestor, and if upon his death his widow survives him, and he leaves no children, and no will, the whole property, both real and personal, will go to the widow. If, in the case you mention, the widow should not survive the husband, we are of the opinion that her children by a former marriage would not come in for any part of his estate, unless he made a will providing for them, but that his property would go to his own brothers and sisters, or their representatives. If the property was deeded to the wife, and upon her death her husband survived her, it would go to the children of the wife by the former marriage, subject to the husband's dower of a one third interest in the real estate for her life. It may be necessary for this man to make a will, if he wishes to make the disposition of his property which your letter intimates.

G. W. S.—We are of the opinion that, under the laws of the State from which you write, peddlers of merchandise not manufactured within the State must pay a license fee, and that there is a penalty for peddling without a license.

Mrs. M. C. M.—We think that, under the laws of the State from which you write, the proquired by the State from which you write the neonety acquired by State from which you write the neonety acquired by State from which you write the neonety acquired by State from which you write the neonety acquired by State from which you write the neonety acquired by State from which you write the neonety acquired by State from which you write the neonety acquired by State from which you write the neonety acquired by State from which you write the neonety acquired by State from which you write the neonety acquired by license fee, and that there is a penalty for peddling without a license.

Mrs. M. C. M.—We think that, under the laws of the State from which you write, the property acquired by you in the manner you describe is your sole and separate property, and that your husband has no title to the same, except that he had the right to manage it during the time the marriage exists. We do not think the bank had any right to pay out money on the check upon which your signature, as payee, was forged, unless they can substantiate by proof that your signature was placed on it by someone having the proper authority.

O. S.—Upon your statements to us, we are of the opinion, that A. or B. could both, or either of them, bring action against each other for slander, but, in case the defendant in such an action should set up in his answer that he was justified in making the statements he did, it would be necessary for the one bringing the action to fully prove that he was entirely innocent of the acts of which he was accused of committing, before he would be entitled to recover any damages. Bither of them would be very foolish to bring such an action without being fully prepared to prove their own innocence. Under the laws of the State from which you write, we are of the opinion that the bringing of an action for slander is limited to one year from the time that the right of action accrues.

H. W. J.—We do not think that the act of B., in giving

H.W. J.—We do not think that the act of B., in giving and for a new country road, releases A: from the covenants of his deed to B., unless the deed is so worded as in some way to covet such a contingency.

Mrs. S. B. H.—Under the laws of the State from which you write, and from the statements made by you to us, we are of the opinion that, if the child you mention predeceased the man you mention, and the man dies leaving no will, his widow would only be entitled to her widow's share, and would not receive the share which would have come to the child if it had survived its father. (2) An adopted child would inherit the same as any other child, provided it was legally adopted by a decree of a court having competent jurisdiction. In many instances, so-called adopted children are not legally adopted.

R. A. T.—If your ancestor's title to the land you men-

R. A. T.—If your ancestor's title to the land you mention is a good title and he died without disposing of the land, the title would still remain in his descendants unless the same has been disposed of by them by deed, will or otherwise, unless some other person has established title by adverse possession or tax sales. Under the laws of the State from which you write all actions for the recovery of property from persons holding under adverse possession, or any other claim of title, are limited to twenty-one years, except in cases of persons under legal disability, but all such are barred in thirty years. We fear from the tenor of your letter that you are probably barred by this limitation.

B. H. C.—We think A. should remove the tree and re-

B. H. C.—We think A. should remove the tree and repair the fence, but that he should first procure permission from B. in order to escape liability for trespass upon B.'s land in doing so.

Mrs. E. J. A.—Address Bureau of Free Lands, Washington, D. C.

ton, D. C.

Mrs. A. W.—If the property you mention was the Community property of your father and mother, we are of the opinion that you inherit your father's share, but that your half-brother would share equally with you in your mother's portion of it. An action for partition of the property, we think, would be the proper action for you to bring in order to have it divided. Perhaps you can come to some agreement with your half-brother as to your respective shares in the property; in case you do this you should have some lawyer draw the deeds for you.

L. D.—We do not think the way you purphased the land spective snares in the property; in case you do this you should have some lawyer draw the deeds for you.

L. D.—We do not think the man you purchased the land from can execute any paper which would give you a good title to the land you purchased without his wife's signature. The right, in the State from which you write, of the wife to dowers in her husband's real estate is one which the husband can in no way dispose of, and in case he died before his wife she will receive her dower in the property you purchased from him unless she releases the same to you. Perhaps you might be able to purchase this release from her, or in case she should die before her husband the right of dower will die with her, but that would necessitate the tying up of your property until that time, as you could not convey good title in case you desired to sell or mortgage the property.

Miss E. M. W. S.—We think you could purchase the property you mention, and take title in your own name. We do not think your father's creditors could bother you, unless they can prove the money you used for the purchase belonged to him. You could not sell or mortgage the property until you become of full age without going through an elaborate proceeding for that purpose.

R. T. W.—As a general proposition we are of the

R. T. W.—As a general proposition we are of the opinion, that a city government has power to do the things you enumerate. Possibly an examination of the charter of the city you mention and a study of the local conditions might reveal the fact that the city council has exceeded its authority. Your statements to us would not alone justify our thinking that they have.

SASH, DOOR, AND MILLWORK BARGAINS

Write Gordon Van Tine 4-Co. for Catalog and Buy Guaranteed Building Material at 50% Saving—Quality and Safe Delivery Guaranteed.

Gordon Van Tine & Co., of Davenport, Iowa, are the largest manufacturers in the world of sash, doors, millwork and building material. Their catalog tells all about their own timber lands, their own sawmills, their factories, their enormous capacity, their guarantees of quality and safe delivery, and shows why they save 50 o/o over dealers' prices, no matter where you live. They sell by mail order only, and guarantee safe delivery and quality.

To get the benefit of this saving, whether you are a contractor, carpenter or individual user, or whether you want a $5 or a $10,000 order; whether you are agoing to build a handsome home or put storm windows in the old home—first write for the catalog to Gordon Van Tine & Co., Station X, Davenport, Iewa. See their advertisement, 80c door, on another page.

FREE ADVICE ON CURING

CATARRH SPECIALIST SPROULE

Read these questions carefully, answer them yes or no and send them with the Free Medical Advice Coupon to Specialist Sproule. You will receive a careful diagnosis of your case, without its costing you a cent.

Is your throat raw? Do you sneeze often? Is your breath foul? Is your breath foul?
Are your eyes watery?
Do you take cold easily?
Is your nose stopped up?
Does your nose stopped up?
Do you have to spit often?
Do crusts form in your nose?
Are you worse in damp weather?
Do you blow your nose a good deat?
Are you losing your sense of smell?
Does your mouth taste bad mornings?
Do you have a dull feeling in your head?
Do you have pains across your forehead?
Do you have to clear your throat on rising?
Is there a tickling sensation in your throat?
Do you have a discharge from the nose?
Does the mucus drop in back of throat?

Answer the questions I've made Answer the questions I've made out for you, write your name and address on the dotted lines in the Free Medical Advice Coupon, cut them both out and mail to me as soon as possible. 'Twill cost you nothing and will bring valuable information. Address Catarrh Specialist SPROULE (Graduate in Medicine and Surgery, Dublin University, Ireland, formerly Surgeon British Royal Mail Naval Service), 233 Trade Building Boston.

Don't suffer with Catarrh any longer! Don't let it destroy your happinessyour health-your very life itself.

Don't waste any more time—energy—money, in trying to conquer it with worthless nostrums.

Don't think it can't be vanquished just because you have not sought help in the because you have not sought help in the right place.

Write to me at once and learn how it can be cured. Let me explain my new scientific treatment—perfected by myself—used only by myself. Thousands of persons, many of them living right near you, testify it has cured them absolutely—completely—permanently manently.

Catarrh is more than an annoying trouble

Catarrh is more than an annoying trouble —more than an unclean disease—more than a brief ailment. It's the advance guard of Consumption. Neglected Catarrhitoo often becomes Consumption. It has opened the door of death for thousands. Take it in hand now—before it's too late.

I'll gladly send you a careful diagnosis of your case and give you free consultation and advice. It shall not cost you a cent.

LET ME TELL YOU JUST HOW

Let me show you what I'll do for you entirely without charge. Thousands have accepted this offer—today they are free from Catarrh. You've nothing to lose and everything to gain. Just for the asking you'll receive the benefit of my twenty-one years of experience—my vast knowledge of Catarrh and the way to cure it.

FREE MEDICAL Catarrh Specialist Sproule, 233 Trade Building, Boston, please send me, entirely free of charge, your advice in regard to the cure of Catarrh.

BOY'S AIR RIFLE Long

this 2 lbs., elegantly finished, steel barrel, all working parts nickeled; walnut, pistol grip, peep sights; used indoors or for killing small game; shoots B B shot darts; most accurate rifle made. Send us your name and address for only 24 pieces of elepty to sell at 10c. each, return $2.40 when sold and we will send this rifle at once and a free ly of shot.

Address EAGLE WATCH CO., Dept. 217, East Boston, Mass.

Watch AND RING FREE A Ten Thousand Dollar Check We give Storn-Wind, SolidGold Laid, ruanased Watch, Gold Laid, ruanased Watch, ongrawed on selfengrawed on the selfengrawed on in every locality throughout United States to adver-tise our goods, tacking up showcards on trees, fences and along roads; also distributing advertising matter; com-mission or salary $83 per month and expenses $4 per day. Steady employment; no experience required; write for particulars. Wm.R. Warner Medicine Co., London, Canada.

Energetic Men Wanted

MORPHINE the only absolute cure for drug habits, and the only only one containment free treatment ing the vital principle. It treat Drug users free until UNTIL CURED cured. Write for free trial today. State kind and quantity of drug used. Dr. Waterman, 14 Lexington Ave., Suite 63, New York.

WANTED Men to Learn Barber Trade. $60 Monthly made by graduates. Can earn expenses before completing if desired. Few weeks completes. Write nearest Branch. Moler System of Colleges. New York City, Chicago, Ills., St. Louis, Mo., Kansas City, Mo., New Orleans, La., Cincinnati, Ohio, Atlanta, Ga., Omaha, Nebr., Denver, Colo., Dallas or San Antonio, Texas.

WANTED—A Bright Man

with light team, as salesman in your own locality. Experience not necessary. Steady work and good pay guaranteed to right man. Reference required. For particulars address KOCH V. T. CO., 167 East 2nd St., Winona, Minn.

OLD SORES CURED

FREE

Address SUNSHINE, Augusta, Maine.

FREE! The New External Prize Remedy. WHAT OXIEN POROUS PLASTERS WILL DO.

THEY will, if used as directed, kill bodily pain as if by magic. They banish Backache, Rheumatiam, Neuralgia, Nervous and Sciatic Pains, Colds. Coughs, Quinay, Croup, Pleurisy, Pneumonia, Fever, Soreness, Stiffness, Lameness, Strains, Sprains, Bruises, Cats, Wounds, Growing Pains in Children, Lumbago, "Stitch in the Back," Inflammation, and other bodily Aches and Pains.

of Oxien Plasters is 25c. each, to the fir friends who can prove they have never before d the Oxien Remedies, and will agree to tes powers of our Wonderful Discovery, am their friends if they find relief from thei

FREE TRIAL

TRIAL OFFER
TO YOU.

Let their friends if they find relief from their miseries, we will send a sample Oxien.
To YOU.

Cures have already been made. Write at once—today—and we will also send ample box Oxien FER LAL OFFER must be addressed to THE ALL OFFER must be addressed to THE OXIEN PLASTER CO., 44 Willow St., Augusta, Maine.

Under this heading all questions by COMFORT readers on subjects not related to the special departments elsewhere in the paper will be answered, as far as may be.

COMFORT readers are advised to read carefully the advertisement in this paper, as they will often find in them what they seek through their questions in this column. They will thus save time, labor and postage. Letters reaching this office after the 25th of the month cannot be answered in the issue of the following month.

Mrs. M. T., Saybrook, Ill.—Try the Westen und Daheim, Chicago, Ill., $1 a year, weekly. There are a great many German papers published in this country and you should inquire of a newsdealer in your town as to what one he thinks you would like. The Gegenwart, Chicago, is a German religious monthly, price $1.50 a year. Write for a sample copy.

H. C. M., Dennison, O.—We keep no addresses and cannot give those you ask for. We can print your address and ask them to write to you, if you wish Vera, Busch, Okla.—Write to the editor, with your story or drawing, merely what you are inclosing to him. Write your address on each article sent in. Always inclose a stamped and addressed envelope.

W. H. C., Powell Station, Tenn.-We don't know W. H. C., Powell Station, Tenn.—We don't know where typewriter ink can be bought nor how to make it. We do not believe it is for sale. If you want to make experiments you might get ink enough for them by applying direct to any of the leading typewriter manufacturers. Write to them and see what they tell you. Incidentally we may say that we have never yet seen a reconstructed typewriter ribbon that was any good. We should be glad to hear from you if you succeed in producing one. Write to a typewriter manufacturer who does not use ribbons. You will have a better chance there, we think.

W. A. B., Calvert Station, Ky.—You can get such

W. A. B., Calvert Station, Ky.—You can get such pasteboard from any paper manufacturer, and you can get prices by writing to any of them in Cincinnati or Louisville. We suggest these two cities because they are near enough to make express charges the lowest. Try Chatfield & Woods, Cincinnation

W. G. B., Bethel, Mo.—The Pennman's Art Journal, monthly, $1 a year, New York City.

W. B. Gibreth, Dawson, Ala., would like to know where he can get the book, "Brother Against Brother." Can any Comfort reader inform him?

H. C. S., Douglassville, Pa.—Unless you know more than your great-grandfather's name, the task of finding where he lived in Virginia will be hopeless. Probably if you wrote to the Secretary of State, Richmond, Va., giving him all the information you have, he might be able to start you on the way to something definite.

way to something definite.

M.S., Linden, Ala.—You will have to show your patent before you can do anything towards selling it. Write to some stove manufacturer in Birmingham, of in St. Louis, or elsewhere, stating what you have and offering it to them. If it is a good thing they will buy it.

D. H. H., Sycamore, O.—Write to McKisson & Robbins, New York City. You could probably do better in Cincinnati.

R. A. P., Rockwood, Conn.—There is no cure. You ought to leave him, but as you may get his pension, you might as well hold on a little longer. Consult an atterney. We think there is no doubt-about getting the pension. He is the first man we have ever heard of who was too lazy to apply for a pension.

C. C., Armstrong, Ia.—Ninety-first street and Fith Ayenue, New York, N. Y., is his home ad-dress. But you are simply wasting your postage

Peggy, Longton, Kans.—We think not. But write b Editor, Numismatist, Monroe, Mich. Inclose postage.

V. S. C., Merrill, Wis.—They do not exist, to our knowledge, therefore we cannot give them to you.

knowledge, therefore we cannot give them to you.

Mrs. H. S., Stanley, Wis.—All the lace curtains we know of have the paper and cloth torn off, so we don't know the answer to your question.

Miss K. McG., Westminster, Cal.—You can get such instruction that will be worth anything to you only by attending a school where it is taught.
You cannot teach yourself, and you cannot acquire it successfully without a teacher.

O. W. C., Collison, Ill.—You can become a secret service agent for the government, by showing that you have the ability to do the business the government wants done, and then having sufficient political pull to get the job.

H. S., St. Joe. Ark.—There may be hospitals in political pull to get the job.

H. S., St. Joe, Ark.—There may be hospitals in the West which train nurses free, but we believe there is none in the East. Write to Superintendent City Hospital, St. Louis, Mo. Unless you have special qualifications to be a nurse, you should not undertake it, because it is very difficult work.

Mrs. A. K., Peoria, III.—Write to Wehman Bros., 126 Park Row, New York City. If they cannot supply them, they can tell you who can.

E. O. H., Waterview, Ky.—Bogert & Durbin, 116.

E. O. H., Waterview, Ky.—Bogert & Durbin, 116 Nassau St.; Perrin & Co., 106 East 23rd St.; D. Proskey, 853 Broadway, all of New York City.

Proskey, 853 Broadway, all of New York City.

M. A. W., Cross Fork, Pa.—Before doing anything else, you should let some competent judge of music hear your daughter sing and play. Then if the judgment is favorable, send her to some music school in the city nearest to you. If she has real ability, with application, she will succeed. But do not depend on your own judgment unless you are a competent musician. Hundreds of girls are wasting time and money trying to become musicians and singers.

M. M. Prescott, Iowa.—Good pictures for adver-musicians and singers.

M. M., Prescott, Iowa.—Good pictures for advertising are in demand. Try the American Lithographing Co., New York City; Morgan Lithographing Co., Cincinnati, Ohio; Free Press Co., Detroit, Mich. Or any of the Chicago companies.

R. R., Shirley, Iowa.—You can learn it with any jeweler who wants an apprentice. You will have to go out looking for a job as a beginner and work your way up. If there is an easier or better plan, we don't know it.

V. F. C. Hattischurg, Mich.

V. F. C., Hattiesburg, Miss.—Harper Brothers, Franklin Square, New York City, is the present address, and if you will write to them they may be able to give you information of the book they published years ago. The chances are that you will only find it, if at all, in some second-hand shop.

S. J. J., Wesley Ill.—Better have it published first in a newspaper or magazine. Such books as you mention do not publish original poems.

C. D. A., Vedro, O.—We are afraid we cannot be of assistance. Only a lawyer in that line of work can do anything. Better not waste money you have, trying to get that which you have not.

have, trying to get that which you have not.

Brunette, Orange, Cal.—Your mother is right.
You are too young to attempt nursing, even if you have the qualifications. The work is very difficult and wearing, and calls for unusual strength of mind, body and nerves. What your friends may think of your ability counts for nothing unless it coincides with the opinion of physicians. If they say you have the necessary qualifications you may undertake the work.

MAN'S FAREWELL TO LOW WAGES

Good-By Forever to Hard Work—Little Pay—Hard Times—Job Hunting! You Can Own and Boss this Money-Making Business! Get Money as this Man Did! Change From Wage Earner to Wage Payer-From Serving Others to Commanding Others

As it Would be Told at Home.

You may well rejoice, my wife, over our good fortune in getting for almost nothing a business which made money the very first day and has grown better all along until now after a few weeks the daily profits run from $8.00 to $12.00. You have just counted today's receipts and seem surprised that they amount to $15.00 plus some cents, but I have good reason to expect even larger returns as time goes on. Of that $15.00 you must take out about $3.00 for cost of material and the $12.00 remaining is profit. So business gets better as it gets older. I need have no worry about the future, because there remains many dollars' worth of unfinished work upon which I can calculate as in the past about 75c profit on the dollar and the past about 75c profit on the dollar and more orders coming in all the time. My trouble has not been the want of orders, but facilities good to receive such generous encourage. to fill orders as fast as many customers would like, and to make matters better have engaged a boy to help in the shop, including an extra solicitor.

It has kept me hustling this far to take care of family customers whose orders range from $2.00 to $10.00; but increased facilities will enable me to get business in even larger quantities from botels, restaurants and public institutions, manufacturers and retail stores, there being searcely any person in business or out who does not at all times have urgent need for my services. I never thought it possible to like this with only a few dollars, for almost every business worth having requires several thousand dollars to begin with, and I was not thousand dollars to begin with, and I was not in that class, in fact, we can both recall with sad regret the days of no work, no wages—debts piling up—nearly everyone and everything combined to keep me.down. Then my siege of sickness—no work—laid up—laid off—almost laid away—nothing coming in—expenses going on—doctor bills and what not. Trouble, trouble, trouble, but that's the common hard-ship of every man who sells his time to others—hard work—long hours—little pay—en-—hard work—long hours—little pay—en-riching those who boss, but never himself. Verily, my good wife, we know from experience and now after years of hard labor here and there and almost everywhere—from factory hand to office clerk—teaching school or selling goods—town and city trades—now and then the farm—we find ourselves in prosperous cir-cumstances, owning a pleasant business which promises to pay from $1800 TO $2500 ANNUALLY.

START A PROSPEROUS BUSINESS

Goodness knows, we might still be slaving for a bare existence if this opportunity hadn't come as a God-send, but we know too well the need as a God-send, but we know too well the need of money to get foolish or spoiled by sudden prosperity. I am happy to think that our days of self-denial and privations are over, that you and the children can have many things in the future which you craved but alas! didn't have the money to buy. You can dress better, visit more, work less, buy new things for the house and give the children a better education. What a blessing it is to have money coming in all the time, and how different the people treat a successful man.

It's really wonderful how people took to my business from the very start, just seemed that business from the very start, just seemed that everyone had something for me to do—eager to have it done—a cordial welcome everywhere and people came from miles around-

GOODS WERE GOING OUT-MONEY COMING IN-almost a dollar cleared every time a dollar taken in. You remember my starting here at home— set off one room which was soon filled with a great assortment of merchandise-some gold, some silver—big and little heaps—how things glistened when the sun came through—then the change to larger quarters owing to increased ment from the people everywhere, for I can't forget my ups and downs-hard knocksnever a boost until this thing happened.

The people certainly looked kindly upon home industry, and home industry, and because my business was conducted there in their very midst a feeling of confidence was immediately established. My work has always been well done and I do not fear to meet the same customer twice even ten years from now. I have never been the kind to deceive anyone and would not eare to bring that disgrace upon my children.

been the kind to deceive anyone and would not eare to bring that disgrace upon my children even though success was the reward.

Yes, people do wonder at my sudden rise in the world, but there is nothing remarkable in my performance, simply a case of supplying something which the people did not have but wanted awful bad—never had before, it's a regular business in some large cities, but just as well suited to town and country places as my own success proved. My success has not been due to influence, business training, special schooling or technical knowledge, but to human endeavor, faithful work and earnest purpose. Had I failed to make good in this opportunity when everything was favorable to success it that it's mighty inconvenient to be poor and now after years of hard labor here and there and almost everywhere—from factory my part if I did not give

PRAISE TO THE MANUFACTURERS

who not only suggested the opportunity but furnished at slight cost everything needed to start the business, including special teaching, valuable instructions and trade secrets and did this so well that my ignorance of the business itself was no drawback at all. Quite a few people from other sections have already written them on my recommendation, for they

WILL START OTHERS

in all parts of the world, either men or women, in this business at home or traveling, all or spare time, but do not encourage business re-lations with drones or idlers. I am only one of thousands whom they have started in their twenty years of business experience, and I can't imagine a business which offers equal money-making opportunities to people of limited means—something or idlers. I am only to people of limited means—someth in g easy to do, easy to get, easy to maintain, offering almost the only chance for people in moderate circumstances to better their position in life.

Though you, my wife, regard my success as remarkable in comparison with the old days it seems to be quite the regular order of things with their customers, as for example, one man claims $301.27 in two weeks, another $88.16 the first three days and hundreds of similar reclaims $301.27 in two weeks, another $88.16 the first three days and hundreds of similar reports have come to my notice, which makes me feel that there is nothing of personal quality in my own success. You won't torget how skeptical I was at first, but these fears were unfounded, as we both know now, for I have found the business even better than their claim as a money-making chance which anyone without leaving home and without previous experience can manage successfully.

I shall continue advising people out of employment or working hard for a little money to send their name on a card to and receive FREE as I did their proposition, valuable information, testimonials and samples.

GRAY & CO., 830 MIAMI BUILDING, CINCINNATI, OHIO,

They don't offer any impossible inducements, such as $50.00 a day without work, but simply claim that those willing to hustle have every reason to expect from

Diseases Cured by My New System. Examination. Opinion and Book Free. DR. J. F. SHAFER. Kidney Specialist, 51 Penn Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

$1 SOLID GOLD 12C. Pattern SIGNET RING. 12C. Warrented three years. Initial engraved Warrented three years. Initial engraved FREE. Sent with Premium List for 12c. SHELL. NOVELTY CO., Dept. CF 53 Chambers Street, New York.

Print Your Circulars, books, newspaper. Press $5. Large size $18. Money saver, maker. All easy, printed rules. Write factory for catalog, presses, type, paper, cards. The Press Co., Meriden, Conn.

VETERINARY COURSE AT HOME. $1200 year and upwards can be made taking our Veterinary Course at home during spare time; taughtin simplest English; Diploma granted, positions obtained for successful students; cost within reach of all; satisfaction guaranteed; particulars free. ON TARIO VETERINAR V COUNTESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Dept. 40, London, Canada.

Brooks' Sure Cure
Brooks' Appliance. New discovery, Wonderful. No obnoxious springs or pads.
Automatic Air Oushions.
Binds and draws the broken parts together as you would be broken limb. No salves.
No lymphol. No lies. Durable, cheep. Pat. Sept. 10, '01.
SENT ON TRIAL.
CATALOGUE FREE.
SROWS APPLIANCE CO., Box 28 BRESALL, MIRK

Souvenir Post Cards Send 10 cents for full value in handsome of American and Foreign Views, Comic, Leather, Birthday, etc., and Post Card Albums at lowest prices. Our Valentine Cards are the finest. NATIONAL POST CARD CO., 727 Logan Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

BIG VALUE FOR 10 CENTS. J. H. PIKE, Box 58, So. Norwalk, Conn.

PROF. LEO AMZI, Dept. 31, BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

A BEAU tiful neck, face and arms. Don't pay 50c. but send 10c. for sealed package to make your skin soft and white and cure pimples, freckles, moth, black head, wrinkles, &c. A perfect skin and food powder combined Warranted absolutely pure. TOILET COMPOUND CO. Box 1927, Boston Mass.

Play the New Checker Game, Checker-Board and Men Free, The latest and best game played after the style of the old game of Checkers; "Skidoo" and 28 are the amusing features of the game. It is just patented but easy to learn and both old and young are delighted. We want to let you try it, and to help introduce to your friends, will send a complete game—a Folding Checker-board, Skilinches, and 38 men—free if you enclose only seen for making, sic. Will also send Premium List and show you have to make those. Absolutely cured. Never to return. A Boon to Sufferers. Acts like Magic, Trial box MAILED FREE. Address, Dr.E.M.Botot, Box 978, Augusta, Me.

BED-WETTING CURED It is not a habit but a discase.
Cure guaranteed. SAMPLE FREE Box Li26, Bloomington, Ili.

SO.00 GOLD WATCH. and Sart, high-grade Roya-Vewalko mogeomout, BUARANTEED FOR 25 YEARS and handsogne Gold" match chain and charm. Send us this 'ed and write if you want Lides or Genth Which & watch chain, 'we will gedd them for FARE EXAMINATION & after you Evapine the watch & watch chain at your express office & find It is qual to a 21 jeweled $50.00 Gold Watch pay 33.78 and seprees-therey and they are yours. it is equal to a 21 jeweled $50.00 Gold Watch pay $3.75 and express-charges and they are yours. RELIABLE WATCH CO. Dept. 40 Chicago.

FREE! FREE! FREE!

It is made of the finest Oak and so arranged by a simple device in the back that it can be adjusted to either a founging or upright position. It is the most useful and popular Easy Chair on the useful and popular Easy Chair on the cred to be depended by the control of the con

Sell only six Electric Plasters at 25c. each, which we trust you with and we will send you a pair of these elegant Nottingham Lace Curtains, each Curtain is nine Feet long so you got aix yards of Curtains, each Curtain is nine feet of these elegant Nottingham Lace Curtains, each Curtain is nine feet of the two, they gather up nicely and furnish an elegant drapery for even the very broad windows, in fact in many instances one pair would do for several windows, and just what any one needs to adorn the home with. Every one of teste will tell you that there is nothing which "dresses up" as obtained by these draperies. They show from the outside an well as from their side. They are of the real Italian pattern and formerly sold as high as aix or eight dollars, a little part of the self-dollar and the self-dollar inducement. It will surprise you in liberality. We do not give the $15,00 Chnir for selling only $1.50 worth of goods as some firm sprofess to de, but we make you the most liberal, honest and straightforward offer ever put out. We are paying our agents over two dollars for selling only one dollar's worth of goods is order to get them advertised. We want to prove there is a sure preyention and cure for Lame Back, Rheumatism, La Grippe, Coughs, Colds, Pneumenias, Mainrira, etc. vet. Send for thesix Plaster to-day. Address

R E

E

So many inquiries are received by COMFORT concerning that a column will be devoted to answering them The remedies and advice here given are intended only for simple cases; serious cases should be referred to physicians, not to us. COMFORT readers are advised to read carefully the advertisements in this paper, as they will often find in them what they seek through their questions in this column. They will thus save time, labor and postage. Address The Family Doctor, Comfort, Augusta, Maine

F. D., Aledo, Ill—Possibly the trouble with your heart arises from indigestion. Many persons have what they think is organic trouble with the heart, when it is from indigestion. From your symptoms, which you give very meagerly, we cannot tell, and advise you to consult a physician who can make an examination, and do not wait, but see one at once.

make an examination, and do not wait, but see one at once.

Subscriber, Willmar, Minn.—You have what are commonly known as "blackheads," the result of impeded circulation of the blood. To remove them cleanse the face twice a week with cleansing cream, by applying with the fingers, and wipe off with a soft towel. Then steam the face for ten minutes. Partly dry the face and press the blackheads out with a watchkey. Massage the face with a rotary motion, working from the nose outward and upward. Do this for fifteen minutes. Then cleanse the face with the cream, and in the morning wash with hot and cold water, ending with the cold. We give you a formula for the toilet water and cream. Cleansing cream: Orange flower water, four ounces; almond oil, four ounces; white wax, two and half ounces. Melt the wax in a double boiler, and add the other ingredients. In addition to this local treatment, eat simple food, no grease, no coffee, and eat very little sweets. Take plenty of exercise in the sunshine.

Mrs. H., Henley, Cal.—Under the circumstances we do not see our way clear to giving you any advice beyond what you have received already from physicians who have examined the case. If they can give little or no relief it is hardly possible that we should. We think, however, that if you will continue your watchfulness, and give the child as little liquid as possible, that he will outgrow it in a year or two. You might encourage him to sleep some in the daytime, so his sleep will not be so heavy at night, and he will know when the trouble makes itself felt.

Subscriber, Alden, Iowa.—Better let chloroform alone except as prescribed by a physician. As a makes itself feit.

Subscriber, Alden, Iowa.—Better let chloroform alone except as prescribed by a physician. As a liniment you can apply it as you please, but you must exercise care, for it will blister. Any druggist can prepare a chloroform liniment for you. A better cure for your toothache is a dentist. Have you ever tried that?

better cure for your toothache is a dentist. Have you ever tried that?

A. J. B., Noble, Okla.—Cold hands and cold feet do not necessarily indicate brganic troubles, though they may be symptoms if such exist. A great many persons suffer from cold hands and feet, who are otherwise in good physical condition. What do your physicians tell you?

Josephine, Denver, Colo.—The remedy is very generally recommended, but we know of no especial cases of benefit. We have never heard of any ill effects from it; from which we may infer that while it may do no good, it does no harm. The time required varies. We do not know the address, but suppose that a letter sent to him simply "Chicago, Ill.," would reach him.

Distressed, Richmond, Va.—There are dozens of remedies which are said to prevent the hair turning gray, and yet, there are thousands of young persons with gray hair. In our opinion, gray hair and bald hair, are about alike, and when they begin to appear, they come right on despite all opposition. Why not let the gray hair take its course? It is oftener much more becoming to young persons than any other color, and you are no older though your hair is gray.

Subscriber, Dalton, Ky.—An old-fashioned remedy for night-sweats is compounded as follows:

though your hair is gray.

Subscriber, Dalton, Ky.—An old-fashioned remedy for night-sweats is compounded as follows: Dissolve fifteen grains sulphate of quinine in half an ounce essence of tansy, one fourth ounce alcohol, one fourth ounce water, and thirty drops muriatic acid. Take a teaspoonful two or three times a day. In connection with this cold sage tea is recommended to be taken freely. At the same time a tempore the cause of them.

A V. M. Brownsville, Tenn.—Your question can

A. V. M., Brownsville, Tenn.—Your question can only be answered by experts who have examined the body for the effects of poison. The action is different in different conditions and persons. Any druggist can answer your questions as to arsenic and strychnine and let you see the two poisons and judge for yourself.

V. M., Slabtown, La.—Moles are not to be tampered with by inexperienced persons. Sometimes a specialist can handle them properly, but unless you want to make a bad matter worse, you had better let them alone.

Mrs. C. H., Olmitz, Kans.—Women are ordinarily better let them alone.

Mrs. C. H., Olmitz, Kans.—Women are ordinarily not troubled by losing their hair as men are, and yours may be prevented from falling out, though we cannot guarantee that it will remain. A remedy for falling hair is given herewith: Tincture of nux vomica, one ounce; spirits of rosemary, two ounces; alcohol, two ounces. Apply once a day.

E. E. K., Nasbie, Va.—Fresh air is the antidote for chloroform. Drugs are not used, except in some cases strychnine or digitalis may be used to increase heart action. Death will follow if the application is continued too long. It will have no appreciable effect when not held close over the nose. Go into a drug store and read up on the subject in the Pharmacopæia.

STOMACH TROUBLE.

If your stomach is ailing, if your food distresses you and fails to feed you, you ought to try Vitæ-Ore. Sent on thirty days' trial. See offer on last page.

Catarrh Advice Free

The attention of our readers is called to the really generous offer announced in our issue of this month—the offer of helpful and valuable medical advice, absolutely free of charge on the cure of Catarrh; from one of the great specialists and great public benefactors of this country—Health Specialist Sproule.

We advise our readers to turn at once to this offer on page 26 of this paper and we urge them to read every word of it and send today for that valuable medical advice. Remember, this advice is free. Address Health Specialist Sproule at his office, Trade Building, Boston.

1,000 POINTERS FOR STOCK RAISERS.

1,000 POINTERS FOR STOCK RAISERS.

We have just received from Sears, Roebuck & Co. a copy of a book entitled "1,000 Pointers for Stock Raisers," published by the Davis Stock Food Company, and distributed by Sears, Roebuck Co. It consists of 548 pages, and from cover to cover is filled with valuable information for the farmer and stock raiser. It treats exhaustively all the feeding problems Every disease known to live stock is covered, giving cause, symptoms and treatment. There are numerous plans and specifications, together with itemized bills of materials, for poultry houses, farm residences, barns and dipping vats. There is a chapter devoted to irrigation, explaining fully how the farmer may lay out and construct his own irrigating ditches; also a full chapter on good country roads that is worthy of more than passing notice, and the final chapter in the book entitled "The Truth About Stock Foods," will prove an eye opener to the up-to-date stock-pan. Suffice it to say that the value of such a book cannot be estimated in dollars and cents, and it has evidently cost a world of time, research and money to get the book out. Sent to all farmers and stock raisers who will write Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, and tell them how many head of stock they own. You will be agreeably surprised at the book.

NEW REMEDY SENT FREE

SENT FREE

Oh! what a pleasure to see your man or boy turn, with a wry face from tobacco, cigars, cigarettes, or snuff, disgusted and sickened by the very odor!

Here are a few of myriads I have helped. I believe all will verify me, if stamped envelope is sent: J. D. Dear, DeRidder, La.; E. M. Deiap, Sunnyside, S. Dak; J. E. McAllister, Byrnside, W. Va.; Miss C. Windon, Penn Yan, N. Y. (father); Mrs. W. W. Blazer, Walland, Tenn., (snuff.) Robt P. Baker, Rockford, Wash. My husband was a tobacco "flend." This wonderful New REMEDY cured him, restored his broken health, and I am determined that the whole world shall know of this great blessing for women, who cure their loved ones; the POWDERS being odorless and tasteless, may be GIVEN SECRETLY In tea, coffee and food.

GIVEN SECRETLY in tea, coffee and MEN CURE THEMSELVES easily and gradually, by taking the remedy in Tablet foom three or four times a day. They like this remedy because they don't have to quit, it makes them quit.

The Free Treatment has cured hundreds, although merely sent to show how harmless it is, how it may be used, etc. If you need more, it will cost less than tobacco, and thus you will save money and health and lose no pleasure. Send NOW: state if secret remedy is wanted; send two stamps and you will hear from me, in plain envelope, promptly. welope, promptly.
MRS. K. A. DOWNING.
832 Victory Bldg., Dayton, O.

FORTUNE
Send a 2 cent stamp, name, address, and birthdate for fortune worth having, the greatest of all.
I tell more than all others and it comes true, Please for me and see.
SALVO, DEPT. 18, STATION A, BOSTON.

TWO GOLD RINGS FREE

Sell 19 packs of Smith's Hair Grower and Dandruff Cure at 10c. each. The great Hair Remedy. We trust you; when sold send money and we'll send 2 rings or choice from our premium list. Agents wanted.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO., Box 99, Woodsbore, Ma.

RYRICH Big List of Descriptions and Photos FREE (Sealed). andard Cor. Club. 108 Avers Ave., Chicago

MARRY Photos and addresses of rich and handsome people who want to marry, sent free, sealed. Write to day THE PILOT, Dept. 19 168 N. Hamiin Ave., Chicage, ili.

MARRY WEALTH - BEAUTY. Marriage Directory FREE TO ALL. Pay when money for particulars. Sciect Glub, Dept.15, Tekonsha, Mich.

STEM-WIND COLD WATCH AND RING An American Movement Watch with Solid Gold Plated case, stem wind and set, warranted to keep correct time, similar in appearance to a Solid Gold Watch warranted for 25 years; also a Gold-Filled Ring, set with a Spark-ling Gem, are given free to any-one for selling FRIEND SUPPLY CO., Dept. 73, Boston, Mass.

BIG MAGIC LANTERN with lamp and chimney of metal. The main lens is one half inch thick. This lens and the supple mentary crystal te less cop ic lenses make a bigger, stronger, and brighter than the regular lenses make a course than the regular lenses make our picture out fit comes with the lantern and is also best ever given. We and brilliant and all different. These views will magnify to the enormous diameter of 5 feet. For prompt work we include a supply of posters and tickets so that you can earn money giving shows. Send us your name and address for only 25 packages of BLUINE, the great washing blue, to sell for us at 10

Send us your name and address for only 25 packages of BLUINE, the great washing blue, to sell for us at 10 cents a package and return the $2.50 received from the sale. We will send you this lantern and complete outfithe same day you return our money. Write today, Address BLUINE MFG. CO. 660 Mill St., CONCORD JUNCTION, MASS. (The old reliable firm.)

FOR A CLUB OF SEVEN. GOLD FINGER RINGS.

The delight of every young lady is in having handsome finger rings of the latest style and finish set with three handsome stones. A large center stone with smaller ones on either side same as shown in the illustration. These are Gold Rings you may be proud of and they will wear forever and not turn; they look like gold, wear like gold and will stand gold acid tests. These settings are very rich and look refined and just as attractive as rings costing $25.00 or more. We have three styles of settings and will allow you to make your own selections, Opal, Emerald and Ruby, with the finest imitation chip diamonds which add great brilliancy and set off the whole ring. We guarantee the sparkle of these stones to be equal to Genuine Diamonds costing hundreds of dollars and are always behind this guarantee. Each stone is set separately in Tiffany style and are sent in A Bronze Ring Box, plush lined, just the ornament for your room and keeps the ring clean and from getting lost when not in use.

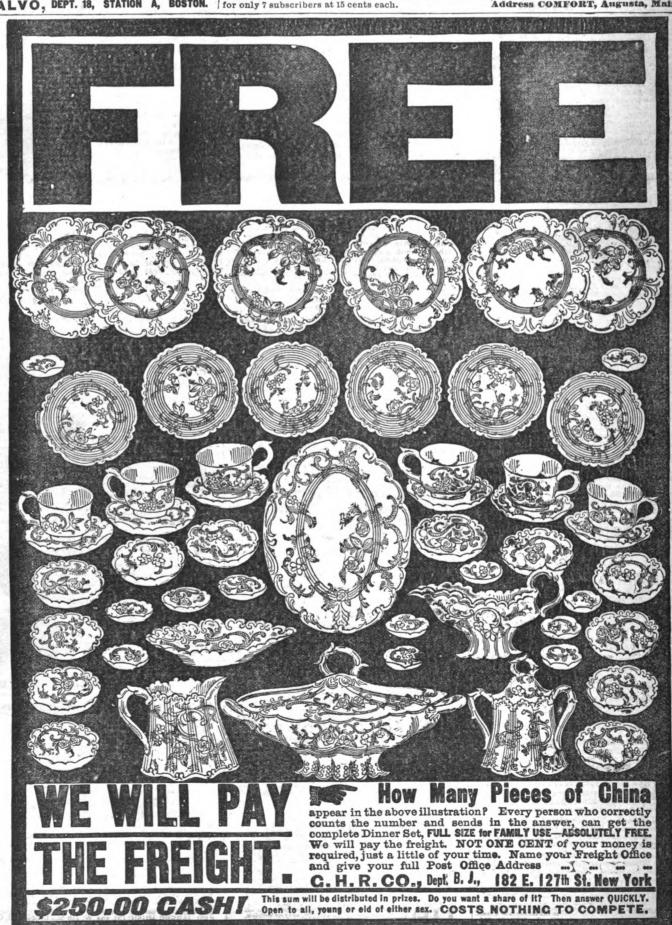

Opal.

These Rings are Free. We bought these rings to give away and the following offers are liberal enough to enable every reader to own one at once. Mothers should have one.

The boys should get one for their sweethearts. They make a swell present. We will give one ring Free for a clab for only 7 subscribers at 15 cents each.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

"ST. ELMO" ONE THOUSAND BOOKS EXHAUSTED "ST. ELMO"

Two thousand five hundred more promised. Do you want to get one of this last lot FREE?

The Author of "St. Elmo"

Life and Works of Mrs. Augusta J. Evans Wilson

Books Which, Though Written a Number of Years Ago, Still Have Thousands of Read-ers—Her First Novel Written When She Was But Fifteen Years of Age—Great Suc-cess of "St. Elmo"—Her Hospitable Home at Mobile.

cess of "St. Elmo"—Her Hospitable Home at Mobile.

The illustration gives but a faint idea of the cover to the wonderial book, "St. Elmo." This book has heretofore sold for not less than $1.50 to $2.00 per volume, but to make it possible for any of Comport's subscribers to own this complete story without the outlay of even a penny, and by only doing a very slight service, we secured a trial thousand books, bound up in an artistic and serviceable manner, that we decided to offer as Premiums free to club raisers who would secure only seven yearly subscribers to Comport at 15 cents each. These went off like hot cakes, and we have secured two thousand five hundred more, which will soon be all taken. Get your copy before too late. Only from the fact that we paid so large a price for the rights to publish this great story exclusively in Comport, could we now be able to offer it free in book form to the comparatively limited number of subscribers who care to now send in these small club lists to secure the book without cost. We would like to have it go into every Comport subscribers who care to now send in these small club lists to secure the book without cost. We would like to have it go into every Comports subscribers who care to now send in these small club lists to secure the book without cost. We would like to have it go into every Comports subscriber's home, it is such a high moral tale, but only those among you who feel to take advantage of this extremely favorable opportunity now—at once—just as soon as you can get out and secure your club, can expect to get this 565-page great prize book, for they certainly cannot last long.

Augusta & Evant Wilson

Why, do you know what a simple little thing it means to secure only seven subscribers to a great, big, 32-page Monthly like Comfort, at only 15 cents per year? Why, Comfort is filled clean full of choice articles and stories, any one of which is worth more than the yearly price of the paper to you or any other subscriber! If you cannot get all now subscribers, get part renewals. All those now interested in reading "St. Elmo," and the other new and old continued stories and departments, will certainly desire to renew. If their subscription is not quite run out, why, it will expire in a Marriage PAPER FREE, many very rich Agency 54, Bridgeport, Ct.

SKUNK Highest price for skunk and other furs. Send stamp to M. J. Jewett, Redwood, N. Y., Dept. H.

YOUR FORTUNE FREE and two cent stamp. ZORRAY, Box 581, Bridgeport, Conn.

$100 A MONTH AND TRAVELING EXPENSES EXPENSES ADVANCEU. A. X. Darel Co., Parsons, Kansas.

Good Pay WANTED MEN everywhere-to distribute circulars, advertis-ing matter, tack signs, etc. Na-tional Adv. Bureau, 214 Oakland Bank Bidg., Chicago.

GALL STONES ANY LIVER DISEASE.
Write me all about it. Will tell of a cure FREE. Address

WANTED
Men to travel, deliver samples and advertise our goods locally; salary $91 per month, expenses advanced.
Monon Block, Chicago.

FOR SONG POEMS THE will write the music and present to mg and a fortune writing songs; my experience will and y songs "Blue Bell" and "Way bown In My Heavy songs "morld wide fame. Write to-day for Free Book

EDWARD MADDEN, 36 Madden Bldg., New York

There has never been such a popular demand among our Million Subscribers for a Book that was running in COMFORT as a serial as there has been for the famous story of "St. Elmo." Although the Book had always sold at from $1.50 to $6.00 each, owing to an immense call for this story in Book form, we were enabled to arrange for the publication of a popular edition of one thousand volumes of ST. ELMO at a price where we could afford to give it as a Premium for a club of only Seven Subscribers to COMFORT. price where we could afford to give it as a Premium for a club of only Seven Subscribers to COMFORT. The demand from our subscribers has been so great, that this edition was soon exhausted and we have prevailed upon the publishers to now let us have an edition of TWO THOUSAND AND FIVE HUNDRED MORE COPIES OF "ST. ELMO" of the same style and binding, at the same rate. We know there are many people among our readers who were not fortunate enough to commence reading this great story with the first installments, and are thus anxious to read it entire. There are also many COMFORT readers who say they have not had time to get the required number of subscribers, on account of being very busy with other matters, but can now get up the club if they can earn the Book. We will be able to furnish from this limited supply as long as they last, so we urge you all to hurry up now and get the required number of subscribers and send them along to secure a copy of this great work.

EVERY COMFORT SUBSCRIBER SHOULD OWN A COPY OF THIS GREAT BOOK OF "ST. ELMO." You will never have such a fine chance to possess so good a book without paying out any money yourself. If your friends are already paid-in-advance subscribers, tell them to have their subscriptions extended for a year from the time they are now paid for, so to get their names enrolled in your club. They will never year from the time they are now paid for, so to get their names enrolled in your club. They will never get such another bargain. Why, only think of getting a nice, big, 32-page paper like "COMFORT" for only 15 cents per year. The price must be advanced soon to 25 cents per year, and then their great chance has passed, for they can't take "COMFORT" so cheap again.

by Secrets per year. The price must be advanced soon to 25 cents per year, and then their great chance has a process of the companion of the c

Her Experience with Macaria

During the Civil War, Mr. Derby heard occasionally from Miss Evans through the lines, and in 1868 she sent him by a blockade runner "Macaria," printed upon coarse brown paper, and published by West & Johnson, of Richmond, Virginia. It was "entered according to the Confederate States of America," and dedicated to "the brave soldiers of the Southern Army." Much of it was written in pencil at night, while the author watched in a hospital beside the cots of sick soldiers, and she says of it:

"My heart throbbed in every one of its pages, coarse and yellow though they were."

It is considered a faithful representation of life at the South during the Confederacy, and was immensely popular in the army. In one of the battles around Chancellorsville a bound copy of it saved the life of a soldier, who, called suddenly into action while reading it, thrust it into his breast pocket. When the engagement was over, a bullet which unarrested would have entered his heart, was embedded in its leaves. When it reached Mr. Derby's hands, he arranged with Lippincott, of Philadelphia, for its publication, and it was advertised as in press when it was discovered that a New York firm had an edition almost ready to be put upon the market. No provision had been made for copyright, "rebels not being entitled to such emoluments," and Mr. Lippincott was at once apprised of the situation. Hastening to the spot, he protested against the injustice of such a transaction, the result being that, upon his generously agreeing to withdraw his edition, the New York publisher promised to pay to Derby & Jackson a royalty in trust for the author on all copies sold.

In the summer of 1865, Mr. Derby was sitting in his office one morning, when a lady was announced.

sold.

In the summer of 1865, Mr. Derby was sitting in his office one morning, when a lady was announced. She was closely veiled, but he recognized the voice as that of Augusta Evans. She was accompanied by her brother, who had been wounded, and, assuring her that she would find an excellent nurse in his wife, the good publisher insisted that she should go at once to his house. He also ventured to hint that a change in the fashions since they had last met made some additions to her wardrobe advisable, and when informed that she had lost everything by the war, told her of the large sum subject to her order from the sale of "Macaria"

The Success of "St. Elmo"

The Juccess of "St. Elmo"

Miss Evans' next venture was "St. Elmo," the clever travesty "St. Twelveno," which it elicited, in which the author endeavors to account for the singular conjunction of culture and rusticity in the bare-footed heroine on the supposition that she had "swallowed a dictionary," rather acco natuating its success. Its sale was tremendous, and hamlets, hotels, steamboats and country seats were named in its honor. It contains a description of the Taj Mahal at Agra, in India, and a traveler visiting the spot, writes that he discovered a Parsee boy in the shadow of the tomb, reading the London edition of one of Mrs. Wilson's books.

The great sale of "St. Elmo," had made the author so famous that when she presented "Vashti," she received a check for $15,000, while the story was still in manuscript, so anxious were the publishers to secure the right to print it. Probably Mrs. Wilson has received hundreds of thousands of dollars, in royalties from the sale of her books, "St. Elmo" being the largest seller. As Mrs. Wilson is a very philanthropic lady, she has done a great deal of good with her money, helping many needy persons in their struggles.

Although the G. W. Dillingham Company, the present publishers of "St. Elmo," put a price of two thousand dollars on the serial rights to run "St. Elmo," in "Comport," we feel that our readers will appreciate the opportunity of reading one of the best, most interesting and instructive stories ever written, while Comport, we feel that our readers will appreciate the opportunity of reading one of the best, most interesting and instructive stories ever written, while Comport, we feel that our readers will appreciate the opportunity of reading one of the best, most interesting and instructive stories ever written, while Comport can be secured for only 15 cents for a whole year. We thus invite our old readers to all renew or extend their subscriptions now this month, also to tell your friends about this great story of "St. Elmo."

Above Shows the Cover Design of "St. Elme."

So many have expressed a wish to possess a copy of the famous story "ST. ELMO." in book form to preserve, or for the library, that we bought a large quantity to give away as premiums, of an excellent edition, printed on extra quality book paper from new, clear type, bound in cloth, with a very attractive halftone cover portrait of both St. Elmo and Edna, with embossed title. This is a suitable presentation or library edition worthy of any home.

For a club of only 7 yearly subscribers to COMFORT at 15 cents each, we will send you a copy of this beautiful book at our expense.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

MONEY Made quickly by smart men. F. GEM CO, 117 Nassau St., N. Y.

$10 Cash Paid PAR NAME BEST OF THE PARK.

Ladies: Make Sanitary Belts. $1.20 dozen. Stamped enve-lope particulars. Sanitary Co., Dept.J30, Chicago.

YOUR FORTUNE FREE Send 2c. stamp Prof. Bameses, Dept. A, Stratford, Conn.

WE PAY $36 A WEEK AND EXPENSES to men with right line

WANTED AGENTS in each county to sell "Family Memorials." Good profits, steady work. Ad. Campbell & Co., 10 "A" St., Elgin Ill.

BED-WETTING WIE AVE SAMPLE FREE, Dr. R. W. Tonkin, Box CI Kdwardsburg, Aleb.

LADY SEWERS wanted to finish off shields at home; $10 per 100, can make 2 an hour. Work sent prepaid to reliable women. Send reply envel-ope for particulars. UNIVERSAL CO., Dept.29, Phila., Pa

GREENBACKS $100 IN STAGE MONEY FOR 10

ASTHWAINSTANT Place of Associative Associative Association and Associated Association and Asso

ST. ELMO

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 25.)

the aforesaid 'Squeers' is simply one of Dickens's inimitable caricatures."

"Nevertheless I have somewhere seen the statement that when 'Nicholas Nickleby' first made its appearance, only six irate schoolmasters went immediately to London to thrash the author; each believing that he recognized his own features in the amiable portrait of 'Squeers."

She bowed and turned from the table, but Mrs. Andrews exclaimed:
"Before you go, repeat that passage from Rogers; then we will excuse you."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

This serial, weaving a romance of unusual interest This serial, weaving a romance of unusual interest around Edna Earl, a young girl, whose faith in God's eternal goodness remains firm, though her heart bleeds, when she loses all dear to her, her meeting with St. Elmo, his surprise at her expressed disapproval of his bitterness and hate, the trust he imposes, the promise he exacts, all this fascinatingly told, will interest our readers, and be continued with marked strength in the February number of COM-FORT. If you are not a regular subscriber, or your renewal, and also one or more new subscribers at the present 15c. yearly rate, as all old subscriptions are promptly removed on expiration. Read notice on another page. The price will soon be advanced.

Back numbers of COMFORT cannot be furnished. Read our offer below.

"ST. ELMO" IN BOOK FORM

So many have expressed a wish to possess a copy of the famous story "ST. ELMO." in book form to preserve, or for the fibrary, that we secured a trial thousand coples to give away as premiums, of an excellent 565-page, 37-chapter edition, printed on extra quality book paper from new, clear type, bound in cloth, with a very attractive haiftone cover portrait of both St. Elmo and Edna, with embossed title. This is a suitable presentation or library edition worthy of any home. For a club of only 7 yearly subscribers to GOMFORT at 15 cents each, we will send you a copy of this beautiful book at our expense.

Address GOMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

RHEUMATISM CURED.

Vitæ-Ore has been successful in curing thousands of cases of Rheumatism, many old and chronic. Sent on thirty days' trial. Read offer on last page.

RUPTURE CURED WILLE YOU WORK. No clastic or spring around body or under leg. No pressure on back, spin or kidney. Two U.S. patents. Agents washed. Bocklet "How Rupture is cured "FREE. S.H.Co., Noz 553, Westbrook, Maine.

Your Fortune; send you Lift Reading, also Photo' your future Husband or Wife, with True Luck Charm and Wedding Ring, All for 10 CTS, and your birthdess, LOCK BOX 100, DEP. P. PALATINE, ILL.

AGENTS CREDIT. Perfumes, Flavors, etc. Big Profits. Expr. Pd. Terms free, Herbene Agency Co., Box254, Station L. New York.

$80 in C. S. A. money sent to any address for $1. Will give $50 to any one who can detect it. FRANK O. SHILLING, Navarre, Ohio.

$150 PER MONTH AND EXPENSES to men introducing our King Seperator, Acrator and other "specialities, SALARY CONTRACT and Free Samples furnished good men. DE KING 2FR. OO. Dept. 14, Chicago.

GORN and Bunion Remover. Antiseptic, safe, sure. No pain, no blood. Lasts years. Why suffer? Sent prepaid, 25 cents. Sanitary S. Co., 27 Griswold St., Detroit, Mich $25 to $30 Made Weekly Distributing Circulars. Steady. New plan. No canvassing. Merchants Out Door Adv. Co., Chicago.

Distributers wanted for Circulars and Samples. Tack signs. Nothing to sell.

Universal Advertising Co., 3ED Drexel Bank Bidg., Chicago

Your Fortune FREE. Send birth date with 2c stamp for Horoscope of business, health, marriage, by the great Astroloscope of business, health, marriage, by the great Astrolo-ger PROF.ADNAH ZURLO, Noroton Heights, Ct.

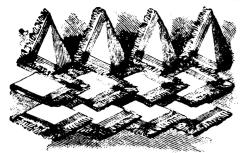

SONG-POEMS and music published ON ROYALTY. We write music and popularize Popular Music Publishing Go., 162 Enterprise Bidg., Chicago

HUSTLERS everywhere to tack signs, distributed ute circulars, samples, etc.; no canvassing; good pay. We give bank references. Sun ADVERTISING BUREAU, Inc., 753 Baltimore Bldg., Chicago. SELL TOBAGGO and Cigars, locally or travsion; full time or side line. Salary or commission; full time or side line. Good pay and promotion. Address Morotock TobaccoWorks, Box M56, Danville, Va.

NANTED 10 men in each state to travel distribute samples of our goods and tack advertising signs

SONG POEMS WANTED, also Musical Compositions. We pay Royalty, Publish and Popularize. We Compose and Arrange melody FREE of charge. GEO. JABERG MUSIC CO. 124 W. 7th St., Cincinnati, O.

TABLE NAPKINS.

What an acceptable gift is a dozen white napkins for e dining table. A clean, fresh napkin gives a relish id delight to the table that nothing else will. There is thing more appealing to the husband than the wife's fort to have his meals tempting. Table linen goes far meet this effect and it will be a great pleasure for you possess a set of one dozen of these domestic linen apkins. It matters not how many you may have in use, few more will be acceptable and can be saved for est" or when you have visitors. Rich is the housewife ho has a large quantity of fine table linen, and the ivilege of adding a few pieces free of any cost must possel to our lady readers. who has a large quantity of him privilege of adding a few pieces free of any cos. privilege of adding a few pieces free of any cos. Club Offer. We will send you postpaid a set of 12 napkins for a club of 8 yearly subscribers at 15 cents each. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

FREE SILVER SPOONS.

COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

PAIR OF SHEARS, MAG

YOU CAN'T LOSE THIS POCKET KNIFE. The two-

The above few articles are selected as representing our most popular premiums, also a club of five is a very popular quantity. Many send five subscriptions rather than work up larger clubs. For a club of only five yearly 15 cent subscribers to this monthly, we will send your choice of any one of these nine articles.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. AIR RIFLE. Pneumatic action. A New King all Steel Gembination Rifle for Birds or Game using shot that can be obtained THIRTY MINUTES is time, but many have earned one of these watches in these watches in less time than that. It is one of the very best watches for time ever offered to our readers at no matter what the price asked for it. We know, of course, there are watches that cost more money, because they are in gold or silver cases, but they will not keep any better time simply because they cannot. This watch does not keep perfect time, we never saw the watch time, we never saw the watch be obtained anywhere at a triffing expense, also shoots darts making it desirable for outdoor target practice or parl or amusement. There is no smoke, odor or dust from this gun, it is endorsed by army officers as the best macronic trifficers and the possession of one of our accurate shooting air riffes makers aboy manly and affords him an excellent means of successfully competing with his chums for marksman's honors as well as teaching him the use of a rifle.

Inis watch does not keep perfect time, we never saw the watch that did, but it keeps as near parfect time as watches susually do. We have such faith in this watch as a timekeeper that we send with every one a guaran-tee just as binding as that given with any watch no matter what make. what make. SIX TOWELS. Few words are necessary to acquaint our readers with the value and use of a supply of nice towels. They are an indispensible to a sift for our six huckabuck ze, 16x29, made sterial.

You may have your choice of any one of the above excellent premium articles for a club of only ten yearly subscribers to this magazine at 15c. each. Address

COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

We print here but a very few premium offers, although we publish for free distribution a large and comprehensive catalogue illustrating thousands of articles, all of which are free to our agents, who will solicit new subscription orders and renewals to this peerless home magazine, COM-FORT, at the present and popular yearly rate of FIFTEEN CENTS. Send postal card for complete catalogue subscription blanks and try the easy, pleasant sub-getting work and be convinced of our sincerity in making this offer to you. Countless thousands of agents have been made happy through their connection with COMFORT and this is just the time for you to identify yourself with the good work and find every day and

One beautiful Shirt-Waist Set (collar, cuffs, front and belt) shadow. A Nobby Hat; can be on

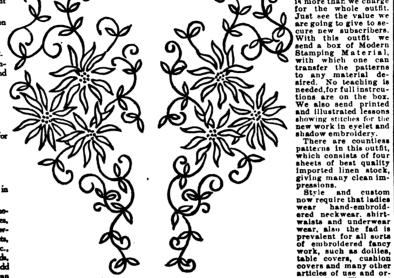

A Chemisette for eyelet. A Corset Cover in eyelet. A Pillow Top for em-broidery; daisies and ribbon A Child's Bib. A Hanbkerchief. A Heart Sachet. A Stock Collar. Collar and Cuff Set for Alphabet of 26 Lette Borders and Scallon. Tie Case.

Photo Frame; design in Holly.

Sprays of

DESIGN FOR EMBROIDERED SHIRT-WAIST

For a club of 4 yearly subscribers to this magazine, at 15 cents each, we will send you one of these outsis free of cost. Address COMFORT, Augusta_Maine.

COMFORT greets all of its old and new subscribers with this "A HAPPY NEW YEAR and wishes all of you much prosperity." We have the good news to announce that we will, for a short time longer, allow the subscription price of COMFORT to remain at only so anyone can send in clubs at this rate until further notice. From the many good stories now published you can get an idea of what you may expect WHEN OUR NEW PRESS is entirely complete to allow us to give you many more pages of just such interesting reading as you now receive. Don't delay renewing your subscription before our price advances. See our special offer about THE BOOK, "ST. ELMO," on another page and get up a club for this elegant book, or some of the premiums offered on these pages. Be sure and see to it that your subscription is paid in advance all of the time, and try and get at least one friend to TAKE COMFORT also.

COMFORT'S influence is all for good. From cover to cover it is full of matter that is instructive, entertaining, amusing and elevating, and through all runs a note of earnest sympathy for those who have fallen in the battle of life and are lying by the wayside with extended hands, asking for our pity and our love. It is the human note in COMFORT, a note that rings strong and true above the columns of cold type, that has won our magazine a place in the hearts of six millions of America's best people. No other magazine has the personal following that COMFORT has; it is our proud boast that we enter not only a million and a quarter homes, but as each home averages five persons there are six million hearts to beat for us, as well, and in saying that, we say something which no other magazine or publisher on earth can say, and are we proud of it! Well, indeed we are, and in our pardonable pride we stretch out our hands to you and say: "Thanks, thanks, dear friends: your praise and encouragement is precious to us. We will try and believe we deserve all the good things you say of us, though we think you give us more praise and credit than we are entitled to. Anyway, we will try and deserve your praise in the future, even if we do not deserve it in the present. COMFORT'S motto is 'Upward and onward.' You cannot beat that motto and we are living up to it all we know how. Our one single desire COMFORT to us.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE WRAPPER IN WHICH THIS PAPER COMES

Every month a certain number of subscriptions expire. The expiring number this month is 219, and the Dec. number was 218, while for February it will be 220. If any of these numbers appear on the address seal in which we send your copy of COMFORT, please attend to the renewal of your subscription without futher notification from us; we do not carry delinquent subscription accounts nor send COMFORT to any whose subscription has expired.

has expired.

Now we have appreciated your patronage during 1906, and wish to here thank you for every favor or courtesy extended. If you will continue to share with us in the upbuilding of COMFORT by repeated courtesies of similar character, we shall be enabled to make COMFORT the greatest home publication in the civilized world. Begin today by subscribing for a friend or neighbor using coupon below. Or better still, get up a club of subscribers as per premium offer here printed.

Publisher COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

For inclosed 15 cents please enter this subscription to COMFORT for one full year from this date. State You can copy the coupon if you do not care to cut the paper. Jan. '07.

CHILD'S FUR SET

in depth providing full wearer—the hittle wearer—the muff, which is nine inches wide further than the provided provided in the provided provided in the provided prov

A GENUINE RICHTER

THE MAGIC FORTUNE TELLER, is a Marwaler

uan

seads
In a Great

Many

Sizes

and Shapes. In this assortmentary on will find sufficient mentary of like beads to make everal useful and stylish articles for personal use. Many persons have developed such skill and taste with beads that they can now make heautiful imitation Indian relies, such as a chind's dress or chamois skin with ornaments of beads of varied color, of a wampun necklace of large sized beads.
The outfit to make these various articles is chiefly a box of out heads, some trong meney will and a children for months,
and a children for months,
ligrest variety of beads, pacty eleven hundred, is packed in a next, round, woodturned box with cover that fits acurely so the beads are not likely to ever be spilled.

Please read careful dolls and you are were that the nose can't be broken off nor can baby punch in the eyes; the bright colored cheeks and ruby lips retain their rolor and shape for all time. Every child delights to have from one to twenty different dolls in their family. Bright inventors, artists, and mechanics have been at work for years trying to perfect low-price, jointed.insettructible colls that can be made to sit down, bend over, stand on their heads, move arms and legs, and be placed in all sorts of cute positions, cither when dressed or when dressed or anything ever Please read carefully our descriptive matter above, also note our illustrations. In all cases will our premiums be found as represented; a large assortment, newest goods and liberal offers. Send us only two yearly subscribers to our peerless monthly, COMFORT, at 15c.

each for any one of the above articles. choice clearly and article will go forward same day at our expense. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

BABY'S FIRST RING.

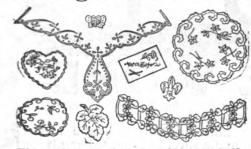

These are baby sizes only and are designed for the little one's tiny fingers. Each is heavily embossed with the words BABY, PET or DARLING, just as you prefer. Made in one style only, the regular hoop or band ring of 14 karst gold and babies' sizes has encouraged us to have this special line made up for our particular customers, and we are delighted with the patterns. They will please the parents of every lovely baby. Mamas and Papas, also friends, will find this an excellent privilege of obtaining the first ring for baby. We can promise satisfaction in fit if a bit of string or ribbon is sent showing size of the little finger. We will pack the ring in a cunning plushlined box and you will be delighted with the whole.

SPECIAL DEFER. Send us only seribers to this monthly at 15 cents each per year and we will send a ring same day and enter subscriptions for one year.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Designs on Linen

This outfit consists of 324 square inches of embroidery designs. A set of two collars, one Centerpiece, one Bookmark, one Pen-wiper, one Match-safe, one Doiley, two dress ornaments, plainly stamped ready to embroider. An outfit of smaller designs, this suggests itself for those who are learning or do not have much time for fancy work.

Special Offer. As a special inducement we will will send but one yearly subscriber at 15c. with 5c. additional, in all 20c. We send postpaid.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Post Card Album That Will Hold Fifty Cards.

Our fifty-card Album is the most attractive on the market. On each page two cards may be displayed; the leaves are very heavy rigid paper stock of a heavy green shade, providing a very tasty and attractive background for all cards, and when two pages are opened together showing four cards, the appearance is extremely attractive, and one cannot neatly preserve a collection of Post Cards unless they are displayed in an Album. And better still, a very nice collection of Souvenir Postal Cards represents the individual and personal thought of absent or distant relatives and friends and they are very entertaining for visitors who enjoy looking them over; so, that in an Album, arranged in order, they are readily accessible and may be examined time after time with no harm to the Cards, and thus preserved in remembrance of the senders. No one thinks of collecting Souvenir Cards without an Album. Everyone wants an Album and the demand, just now, exceeds the supply. We are fortunate in having a great quantity on hand of first-class Albums which we are to distribute as premiums to those who will send us clubs of subscribers to this magazine as per our offer below.

Club Offer. For a club of only 2 yearly subscach, we will send an Album free and will include a set of four Post Cards free, as a beginning towards filling the Album.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Accurate Weighing Scales

for home, store, office, farm or factory. Weigh any quantity by pounds and ounces up to 21 pounds. Can be used with or without the scoop, as scoop, as there is a lever which can be turned back to take up the tare or weight of scoop. A pair of scales in the kitchen are of great assistance to the assistance to the lady of the house. When preserving she can weigh hersugar or her berries; when purchasing of the grocer she can verify the weight of a package of sugar, meat or sh, and oftentimes detect an error. A few errors save many pennies. For the man of the house scales are many pennies. For the man of the house scales are handy to weigh many things, such as his produce or poultry, or in his general work there is always need arising for a pair of scales, even for weighing the baby. In stores and shops where so many articles are sold by weight, a pair of scales are indispensable and in constant use. These family or counter scales are thoroughly well made, the sides, top and bottom are pressed steel, with a laked enameled surface, the dial is white with the graduated lines and numerais in black, the surface of the rim around the dial is stendied in gold leaf, the scoop holder is cast iron, enameled, and the scoop is of block tin plate. The balance is two sections of cast steel and a spiral spring, with an adjustment for correcting the balance, should the scale at any time vary in weighing, due to heat, cold or other conditions. However, at the factory and before shipping, every scale is adjusted and inspected by agovernment scaler of weights and measures, therefore you are protected from any lanceuracy. Remember, these scales are full family size, thirten inches high, with a six-inch dial, and when ready to ship they weigh boxed seven pounds. So you are getting a bona fide article than which there is nothing better or more practical. 17. Family Pride.

18. Homestead on the Hillside.
19. The Leighton Homestead.
20. Lena Rivers.
21. Meadow Brook.
22. Maggie Miller.
23. Marian Grey.
24. Mildred; or the Child of Adoption 25. Milibank; or Roger Irv stegetting a bona fide article than which there is better or more practical.

Club Offer. For a club of only 20 yearly subscribers of 8 at 15c. each, we will forward to you a set of these Scales, including Scoop, just a shown in our illustration, and guarantee satisfaction.

Address. COMFORT, Augusta, Maine

NUT CRACKER and SIX PICKS

A practical set of table articles, seven pieces, including a sub-stantial Nut Cracker with Six Picks. These articles are made of solid steel highly plated, impossible to wear off the finish, and they are so strong you cannot bend or break them. The Cracker is so made it can be inverted, use one side for large nuts, such as walnuts, and the other or narrower opening for small nuts. The leverage is so nearly perfect, that a slight pressure does the trick. The handles of the Cracker and Picks are perfectly round, a bit fancy, as shown in our illustration. The entire set is thoroughly good, and as solid gold or silver is naturally soft, there is no more suitable article than nickeled steel for a nut set. We guarantee these sets to be perfect, to be just as described, full family or adult size, and practically indestructable, or money refunded.

> Club Offer. For a club of only 5 yearly sub scribers to this magazine at 15c each, we will send you one of these Seven-Piece Nut Sets, Six Picks and a Cracker, postpaid.

> Another Offer. If you already have a Nut Cracker, we will send you a set of six of these Nut Picks for a club of only 3 yearly subscribers to this magazine at 15c. each, postpaid.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Family Dining, Reading, Game @ Sewing Table

In getting up clubs, only actual subscribers count; those who agree to take the paper and pay you their money for it

PRINTING OUTFIT

Make Money Printing Cards.

About all boys have an ambition to learn a trade that will give honest employment and mental improvement. With our handy Printing Outfit a boy that will give honest employment and mental improvement. With our handy Printing Gutfif a boy or girl can accomplish the art of type setting as well as printing, thus conquering two subjects at one time. These complete outfits consist of a six-font set of rubber type; that is, there are six of each of most all the letters in the all phabet except some important letters have eight, and others only four, such as "Q." A double set of numerals, commas, periods, and four handsome ornaments; also slugs or spaces to separate words—in all about 200 separate pieces of type. A two-line type holder for printing cards, etc. It works like a miniature Franklin printing press, so you can print cards for your friends and thus make money. A pair of nickeled pincers to handle type and a metal case ink pad. This ink pad is everlasting and can be renewed if constant use removes the ink. With each set we send a wooden type case so that type can be arranged and kept in perfect order, also full and complete instructions how to set type, etc. A wonderful outfit for printing cards or small amount of text. Will afford amusement and instruction unbounded. Every child will appreciate one and grown folks can make use of these sets for marking linen by procuring an indelible ink pad. It is probable such an outfit as we offer can not be found everywhere and we expect to give away a great many for the slight work done in getting subscribers tions for us.

CLUB OFFER For a club of only 3 yearly subscribers at 15 cents each, 45 cents in all, we will send you postpaid one of these Printing Outfits all complete as described.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, In getting up clubs, only actual subscribers count; those who agree to take the paper and pay you their money for it.

BEST BOOKS FREE

26. Miss McDonald. 27. The Rector of St. Mark's. 28. Rosamond. 29. Rose Mather.

Charles M. Sheldon. 0. In His Steps.

Elizabeth Wetherell.

Ralph Conn or T. S. Arthur.

32. Ter

Queechy.

G. A. Henty. author of favorite ju a autnor of favorité jucooks.

Among Malay Pirates.

Bonnie Prince Charile.

By Pike and Dyke.

By Right of Conquest.

By Sheer Pluck.

Dragon and the Raven.

For the Temple suse.

In Times of Peril.

Jack Archer.

Orange and Green.

Sturdy and Strong.

Frue to the Old Flag.

Under Drake's Flag.

With Clive in India.

With Wolfe in Canada.

The Young Buglers.

The Young Buglers.

The Young Buglers.

54. Treasure Island.

rie Corelli, Augusta J. Evans, Charles Garvice, Mary J. Holmes, G. A. Henty, Charles M. Sheldon, Charlotte M. Braeme, Mrs. South-

The works of the popular authors above mentioned, also a large number of other popular authors' best efforts, are included in our new list of gift books. From an assortment of over 400 titles we have selected the most popular and desirable works of these famous American and European Authors.

Each book is printed on good quality paper, from large, clear type, is 7½ inches long, 6 wide and vary in thickness, all one inch or more, and weigh about one pound each. Cloth Bindings are genuine Linen Cloth of several attractive and striking colors, especially made for this series. Each cover has an ornamental design, as shown in the illustration, and the titles are all done in genuine gold and two-colored inks. Each cover design is by some well-known artist, and the high quality of this alone makes the outer appearance of each book at once attractive, as it gives the book a rich appearance for shelving or when lying on the table. Taken all in all this series of books is an excellent edition and we are pleased to have the opportunity to place them before you at this particular season of the year and at such liberal terms.

USE NUMBERS NOT NAMES. When order-

USE NUMBERS NOT NAMES. When ordering kindly use numbers to aid in promptly handling orders at this end.

Aikenside.
Bad Hugh.
Cousin Maude.
Darkness and Daylight.
Dora Deane.
English Orphans.
Edith Lyle's Secret.
Ethelyn's Mistake.

72. Bride's Fate, Sequel to No. 71-73. Deserted Wife.

Mrs. May Agnes Flem

Charlotte M. Braeme,

74. Magdalen's Vow.
75. The Queen of the Isle.
76. The Midnight Queen.
77. The Dark Secret.
78. Gypsy Queen's Vow.
79. The Heiress Castle Chiff.
80. The Rival Brothers.

Marie Corelli. Mary J. Holmes.

Romance of Two Worlds. Theima. Vendetta.

Augusta J. Evans.

Daniel Defoe. Harriet Beecher Stowe

56. Uncle Tom's Cabin. Charles Garvice.

Elaine.
Farmer Holt's Daughter.
Her Heart's Desire.
A Wilful Maid.
Woven on Fate's Loom.

Emma D. E. N. South-worth.

62. Wife's Victory.
63. Hidden Hand, Part 1.
64. Capitola, Part 2 of No. 63.
65. Allworth Abbey.
66. Phantom Wedding.
67. Cruel as the Grave,
68. Tried for Her Life.

Robert Louis Stevenson

69. Ishmael.
70. Self Raised, Sequel to No. 69.
71. Changed Brides.

Sequel to No. 69.
72. Simple Life

Charlotte M. Braen
E. N. SouthPorth.
Sorv.
Sor Charles Wagner.

Subscription Offer. For a club of 3 yearly subscribers to this magazine at 15c. each, we send you any book of 8 at 15c. each, we send any four books you may select. REMEMBER. We send our magazine to the subscribers you get, and to you we send the books you may select, by mail or express at our expense, and fully guarantee them to be in every respectas represented. Just think what an opportunity for Book Clubs.

Address COMFORT. Augusta, Mafne.

Perforated Shirt-Waist Pattern.

Perforated Shirt-waist and Collar design. We call your particular attention to this very dainty Shirt-waist and Collar design, perforated upon fine Linen Bond Parchment Paper, furnished with complete directions that any lady can stamp her own shirt-waist, worth in any art store at least 75 cents. We can furnish each in the following designs, if the one illustrated does not please you! Violet, daisy, forget-me-not wild rose or chrysanthemum.

Special Offer. We will send you one of these Shirt-but one yearly subscriber to this magazine at 15c., and include 5c. additional, making 20c. in all:

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

SHIRT-WAIST PATTERNS.

Two and One Half Yards Goods,

Chrysanthemum design stamped front, collar and cuffs, ready to be hand embroidered. Just think of it, you can now have an embroidered shirt-waist without the immense expense heretofore necessary to purchase one. Anyone familiar with needlework can embroider this simple design and make up the complete waist from any patterns you are familiar with. We place before you the opportunity to get the stamped goods, two and one half yards, so that all you have to do is to embroider the design with the Utopia Luster we furnish, then cut out the material according to your pattern and make it up. You will then have one of the most fashionable and dainty shirt-waists imaginable, all your own handwork. Embroidered garments are all the rage and we can supply not only this waist, but a Linen Hat to match, Corset Covers, Chemisette, Beltis, etc., etc.

Club Offer For a club of only 9 yearly subscribers to this magazine at only 15c. each, we will send you one of these 2½ yard stamped Chrysanthemum Shirt-waists, including sufficient skeins of mercerized embroidery cotton to work out the design.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

In getting up clubs, only actual subscribers count; those who agree to take the paper and pay you their money for it.

In getting up clubs, only actual subscribers count; those who agree to take the paper and pay you their money for it.

FREE! AS BIG AS BABY, FREE!

finished, and can be placed in any natural position. Will last for years. Are more Ufelike than anything ever gotten out before. For hours and hours every child will play with these good old grandma style, unbreakable stuffed dolla, even putting saide the very expensive and more elegantly silk and said and more elegantly silk and said the stuffed of these as they can be dressed in many different ways to suit the tasts. They can be filled with more or less cotton just as the weight is preferred, as the material they are made of enables you to sew them together easily, so so to have a good, fat, plump dollie or 1 of lighter weight.

We Send You 2 Dolls

Now Instead of 1.

A new arrangement enables us to send you a 10 inch doll free, in comnection with the 20 inch doll we have already described. So you get 2 dolls for the price of 1. We have arranged to give these dolls for cluraising and will send 1, all charges fully prepaid, if you send the name of new yearly subscribers at 15 cents each

Remember, we send this maga-the subscribers you secure and send the Dolis to you as a premium. Will send 2 sets. 6 Dolls for securing 4 yearly subscribers at 15 cents each. 4 sets, of Dolls free for a club of 7 yearly sub-scribers at 15 cents each. Address

COMPORT. Augusta, Raine.

Don't Send a Penny until you are sure—keep your wallet closed until you know. If you are not sure, you do not pay at any time—not a cent, for there is nothing to pay for. You pay for the benefit—not the medicine. You pay for results—not the treatment. If it does not help you the matter is ended. You have nothing to return, as you use all we send you. Your final judgment, Yes or No, closes the deal. We take all the risk, you have nothing to lose, not a penny. How can you refuse such a fair, plain spoken, liberal offer. Over a million people have already accepted it.

If there is something wrong in the workings of your system, something wrong with your sleep, your digestion, your blood, your nerves and your vitality, you cannot afford to suffer another day when the thing that has set thousands right is offered you without a penny's risk, when it takes but a letter to start you on the treatment which has won international reputation by the work it has done for thousands. You cannot lose a penny—you win back health or pay nothing. Read our 30-day trial offer and judge for yourself. Then send today for that which thousands have used and are using with the success denied them in other treatments.

Was Permanently Cured

Senath, Mo.—I have been afflicted with Rheumatism ever since 1875, and have been so bad that I was almost paralyzed; at times I could hardly move more than if I were dead. I had tried several doctors and all the patent medicines I heard of. The doctors here all told me I was incurable. They said they could give me some temporary relief, but they could not cure me. Two years ago I saw the Vita-Ore advertisement; I knew I must do something or die and I sent for the trial package. I got three more packages. Before I finished the second package I was entirely cured. I used the third package to make the cure sure. It is now two years since my cure, and I have not felt any trace of Rheumatism since. When I sent for the trial package I could not walk across the house, and I did not weigh one hundred pounds; now I weigh 145 bls., I am sixty-two years old, and today I feel as well as if I were but twenty-five. I can do all my work and my washing and walk two miles to church and it does not tire me. The people here who knew me when I was tell them Vitæ-Ore and nothing else.

MRS. N. J. MILAM.

30-Day

Used Two Packages Two Years Ago, and Has Had No Return of the Trouble.

Senath, Mo.—I have been afflicted with Rheumatism ever since 1875, and have been so bad that I was almost paralyzed; at times I could hardly move more than if I were dead. I had tried several doctors and all the patent medicines I heard of. The doctors here all told me I was incurable. They said they could give me some temporary relief, but they could not cure me. Two years ago I saw the Vitæ-Ore advertisement; I knew I must do something or during the next 30 days to try it? Can you not spare 100 minutes to write for it, 5 minutes to properly prepare it upon its arrival, and 3 minutes cach day for 30 days to try it? Can you not spare 100 minutes time if it means new health, new strength, new blood, new force, new energy, vigor, life and happiness? You are to be the judge. The cure sure. It is now two years since my cure, and I have not telt any trace of Rheumatism since. When I

WHAT VITAE-ORE IS.

WHAI VIIAL-OKE IS.

Vitæ-Ore is a mineral remedy, a combination of substances from which many world's noted curative springs derive medicinal power and healing virtue. These properties of the springs come from the natural deposits of mineral in the earth through which water forces its way, only a very small proportion of the medicinal substances in these mineral deposits being thus taken up by the liquid. Vitæ-Ore consists of compounds of Iron, Sulphur and Magnesium, elements which are among the chief curative agents in nearly every healing mineral spring, and are necessary for the creation and retention of health. One package of this mineral-substance, mixed with a quart of water, equals in medicinal strength and curative, healing value, many gallons of the world's powerful mineral waters, drunk fresh at the springs.

PERMANENT CURES.

Cures with Vitæ-Ore are like a house built on a rock, in their permanency, in their positiveness, in their completeness. First is created a structure of health in the blood, a substantial basis for all else to rest upon. Then the edifice is built naturally, stone after stone, day by daynerve, tissue, muscle and ligament are placed in a normal, healthy, natural condition, the drains put in thorough working order, the parts cleansed, healed and purified, and the completed work is then turned over to the tenant's hands. The foundation is right, the work is right, and it lasts. Dosing stops—there is nothing to require it. Suffering ends—there is nothing to cause it.

Vitæ-Ore strikes the disease at its root. Its cures are permanent and for this reason it itself is a permanent remedy, one that has come to stay, that is growing in popularity and selling more rapidly from year to year, curing with permanent cures, satisfying with permanent satisfaction.

cent. Well, sir, in 18 days I felt like a new man. I could walk five miles and walk perfectly straight and had gained 7 pounds in weight. I have taken five packages of Vitæ-Ore and am well. I walked 18 miles yesterday and carried about 40 pounds. I am still taking Vitæ-Ore and I advise anyone who is suffering to try it and they will thank the Theo. Noel Company all the rest of their frank Kino.

Trank Kino.

ATLANTA, GA.—My in the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases and the same and they man curing such diseases. ATLANTA, GA.—My in the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases and the same and curing such diseases. ATLANTA, GA.—My in the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases and the same and they of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases. ATLANTA, GA.—My in the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases. ATLANTA, GA.—My in the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases. ATLANTA, GA.—My in the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases. ATLANTA, GA.—My in the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases. ATLANTA, GA.—My in the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases. ATLANTA, GA.—My in the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases. ATLANTA, GA.—My in the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases. ATLANTA, GA.—My in the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases. ATLANTA, GA.—My in the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases. ATLANTA, GA.—My in the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases. ATLANTA, GA.—My in the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases. ATLANTA, GA.—My in the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases. ATLANTA, GA.—My in the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases. ATLANTA, GA.—My in the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curing such diseases. ATLANTA, GA.—My in the efficacy of Vitæ-Ore in relieving and curin

Out of the Jaws of Death

Permanently Cured in One Month's Time of a Serious Kidney and Rheumatic Trouble.

Was Broken Down, Disheartened and Almost Helpless.

ATLANTA, GA.—When I look back on my condition and suffering during recent years, and think of the herbs, roots, barks, tinctures, powders and linaments I have taken and rubbed with, all to no purpose, and think that I was cured at last in one month with Vitae-Ore, I stand dazed and amazed at the result. I feel that I have in truth been drawn out of the jaws of death.

Thirty years ago I contracted a disease of the kidneys and commenced passing gravel from them, the pain often throwing me into spasms, though only those who have passed through this ordeal can give an idea of the suffering connected with it. These spells continued at irregular but frequent intervals down to a month ago. During all this time my urine was highly colored, sometimes profuse and sometimes scant, but at all times charged with a yellowish, albuminous brick-dust deposit.

About three years ago I was attacked with Rheumatism in my right hip joint, knees and the muscles all over my body Physicians told me I had Diabetes and marked symptoms of Bright's Disease and commenced to dope me with mercury, soda, lithia, salicylic acid, potash, etc., all of which were constantly constipating me, and nearly-everything I ate disagreed with me. You can well imagine my condition and apaper containing an advertisement of Vitae-Ore, and, like a drowning man, caught at it, sent for it, and it has proved to be the "Oar" that enabled me to paddle my frail blarque into the haven of Health. I used it in hot water and it commenced to benefit from the first dose. In four days I saw a marked charge for the better. My urine became cleared up and natural in color. In six days the brick-dust deposit was gone. My bowels became regular, I could eat what I wanted, and what I did eat did not hurt me and was perfectly digested. I slept soundly at night without those terrible halucinations that had haunted my slumbers so long; but best of all, the pain was leaving my limbs. I could walk without crutch or stick.

Now, after taking a dollar package of Vitae-Ore, I say I am b

Re-affirmed Over One Year Later.

ATLANTA, GA.—My faith in Vitæ-Ore grows strongsr every day.

I suffered with Kidney Trouble for years and never got any relief until I used Vitæ-Ore, more than a year ago. That did the work, and I am still well. Can get insurance on my life in any company that HOUSER, ALA.—Three years ago I was running a dynamo near Ouray, Colorado, and fell from a water dam and hurt my hip. This injury developed into what the doctor called Rheumatism and Lumbago. I tried the doctors there and all the patent medicines I could get, with no relief, and therefore had to give up my position and come home. I tried our physician in North, Ala., and he is as good as any that ever compounded a pill or wrote a prescription, but he could do me no good; then I tried a specialist and he failed. I also tried Polecat Oil, Barfoot and old Bacon rinds, also Whiskey and Polk Root and all the old remedies which we folks down here generally use, and all with no relief.

This kept up until I could hardly walk a step. My appetite was gone, my flesh was gone and I thought I was gone.
When I noticed the Vitæ-Ore advertisement and sent for a package, I had no faith in anything. I was just grabbing at every straw in reach. You sent me the package of Vitæ-Ore edvertisement and said if I was not benefited not to send you one cent. Well, sir, in 18 days I felt like a new man. I could walk five miles and walk perfectly straight and had gained 7 pounds in weight. I have taken five packages of Vitæ-Ore and am well. I walked 18 miles yesterday and carried about 40 pounds. I am still taking Vitæ-Ore and I advise anyone who is suffering to try it and they will thank the Theo. Noel Company all the rest of their

PROVE LETTERS

WHY VITAE-ORE CAN BE OFFERED ON THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL, THE USER TO BE THE JUDGE.

BUILDS UP ROBUST, VIGOROUS MEN.

The proudest glory of man lies in his health and strength. To be entirely successful he must possess strong nerves, a clear brain, and a sound body full of energy, vitality and manly vigor. Without health of body man cannot be at his best mentally. Health out health of body man cannot be at his best mentally. Health builds up that strength and character of mind which goes so far to insure true and complete happiness as well as success. If disease or debility take the place of the health, activity and energy of youth and early manhood, the mental forces become impaired along with the physical. When this time comes, Vitæ-Ore proves a regenerator which fills the blood with renewed energy, correcting irregularities, curing disease and restoring the force and vitality so

ALL ELDERLY PERSONS NEED ITS AID.

There is nothing so certain in life as the weakness of old age. The young MAY need a tonic, but the old MUST use one. The loss of appetite and impaired digestion of age deprive the blood of the nutriment which should be its portion. Sound, unbroken sleep is as much needed in age as in youth, to repair waste tissues, but fortunate indeed are those who can sleep soundly the entire night. The enlarged volume of waste products, due to the ever increasing tissue-breakdown of old age, requires additional activity in the kidneys to eliminate them, and the kidneys of the aged are apt to be refractory. Vitæ-Ore serves as an aid in most every disordered condition incidental to old age. It increases appetite and desire for food at the same time it improves the power to digest and assimilate it, so the blood may be enriched thereby. By its beneficial action in the system it induces a more refreshing sleep, and assists the kidneys to perform the requisite action. It helps to prevent the rheumatic condition of the joints usually co-incidental with age and by its upbuilding powers to prolong vigor and activity to a ripe old age.

MAKES STRONG, HEALTHY WOMEN.

Woman may be called the most perfect piece of mechanism in all God's creation, but, from the nature of her organism, she is the most delicate. It is due to the ease with which irregularities may creep in that not half of the women of today are entirely free from some of the many and varied allments peculiar to their sex. Many object to or are financially unable to "begin doctoring" and so struggle along and suffer in silence, bearing a crushing weight of distress, torfure and disease. Vitæ-Ore is a true "Balm of Gilead" to such sufferers and is markedly successful in promptly alleviating and permanently remedying many diseased conditions which keep women from the full enjoyment of active life. Every woman should use it. Woman may be called the most perfect piece of mechanism in all

AS A BEACON LIGHT

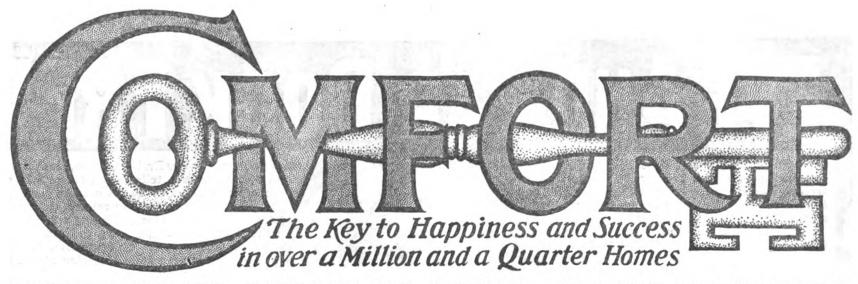

Vitæ-Ore points the way for storm-tossed sufferers to a Haven of Health and Comfort. If you have been drifting in a sea of sickness and disease, towards the rocks and shoals of Chronic Invalidism, Port your Helm before it is too late; take heed to the message of Hope and Safety it flashes to you, stop drifting about in a helpless, undecided manner, first on one course and then another, but begin this valuable treatment immediately to reach the goal you are seeking by the route so many have traveled with success. Every person who has let it guide them home to health is willing to act as a pilot for you; each knows the way from having followed it; attend their advice and follow the light. Thousands have allowed it to guide them in the past, thousands are depending upon it today. Send for a trial package without delay. Address

NOEL THEO.

COMFORT DEPT. VITÆ-ORE BLDG.

CHICAGO, ILL.

DEVOTED TO ART, LITERATURE, SCIENCE, AND THE HOME CIRCLE

Vol XIX

February 1907

No 54

Published at Augusta, Maine

AND EAR BOOK

Dr. Curts' Free Eye and Ear Book tells of a Method by which people from every state in the Union as well as Canada were cured of Chronic Eye and Ear Troubles at their own homes by Mild Medicines. Most of these cases had been pronounced incurable by other doctors, but they wrote for this book, followed its advice, and today are cured. Tells how all diseases and defects of the Eye, such as Failing Eyesight, Cataract, Granulated Lids, Scums, Sore Eyes, etc., may be successfully treated by the patients in their own homes. No necessity of seeing a doctor and absolutely no interference with their daily duties.

This book, written by Dr. F. G. Curts, the famous Eye and Ear Specialist, tells how deaf people, except those born deaf, may be restored to perfect hearing. Tells how to quickly relieve and cure Distressing Head Noises, Ringing and Buzzing in the Ears, Discharging Ears and Catarrh (which causes most cases of deafness). This book tells all about the Mild Medicine Method used by Dr. Curts, which has restored sight and hearing to scores of supposedly incurable patients in every state. The Mild Medicine Method makes it entirely unnecessary to submit to an operation for any Eye or Ear trouble whatsoever.

A Letter of Thanks

Lapine, Ala. Dear Doctor: I will drop you a few lines to-night. This leaves my little girl cured of her eye trouble. I certainly thank you for what you have done. You will find her on the group. I will close giving you my best wishes.

Yours truly J. E. DAVIS

Cured in Three Months

Dear Doctor: Wilson, Minn.

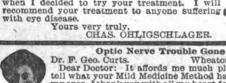

I wish to express my heartfelt thanks for the good your Mild Medicine Method has done for me. I had been troubled more or less with weak and painful eyes for the past eight years or more, and after taking your treatment three months I feel entirely cured. I will be very glad to recommend it to any one as a safe and certain cure.

MRS. JULIA COLLITON.

Vision Clear As Can Be Dear Doctor:

La Salle, Ill.

About four years ago I noticed that my eyes were going to the bad, and I tried a few doctors, without satisfactory results, till last winter, when I decided to try your treatment. I will recommend your

Optic Nerve Trouble Gone
Dr. F. Geo. Curts.
Wheaton, Minn.
Dear Doctor: It affords me much pleasure to tell what your Mild Medicine Method has done for my eyes. I thank you with all my heart for the good results I have obtained. The trouble was that of the optic nerves. I took treatment for four months and am now glad to say that the eye trouble is gone. I know this has all been done through your Mild Medicine Method.
ANNA NEUMANN.

Thanks From a Doctor Thanks From a Doctor
Dr. Curts.
Connelsville, Mo.
Kind Friend: As a physician I have met with and conquered numbers of cases of granulated lids, but my own eyes I could not cure. I had a badcase of granulated lids; although trying every remedy known to the old school of medicine my eyes got worse. I was well pleased and surprised to find my eyes cured with less than one month's treatment of your remedies.
S. G. WRIGHT, M.D.

Eyes And Ears Both Cured Eyes And Ears Both Cured

Dr. F. George Curts:

Before I commenced your treatment my sight at times seemed almost to leave me, everything would get black around me, but now I can see quite clear. It has now been four months since I have been under your treatment, and my eyes are feel-ing splendid—I believe they are entirely well—my hearing seems clear—no more singing in my head. Your friend, MRS. SARAH GARREN. Dear Doctor: Meridian, Miss.

I today take pleasure in thanking you for your skill in straightening my eye. My eye had been crossed since a child, but can say by your wonderful method of straightening eyes my eye is as straight as anybody's. Thanking you again, I remain.

Yours truly, T. J. GIPSON.

Daughter's Pleasant View, luance.

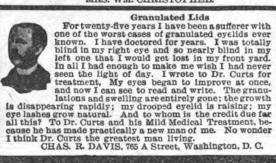

Kansas City, Mo.
Dear Sir: I feel thankful to you for your medicine last winter. The eyes of my little girl, 11 years of age, were so bad that she could not attend school, and with two months' treatment I think her eyes entirely cured, as they are all right now.

Yours truly,

MRS. C. R. THOMAS.

Can Hear As Well as Ever Can Hear As Well as Ever
Dear Doctor:
Ledyard, Ia.
I can truthfully say that I do think that I can hear just as well as I always did, as far as I know, I would not hesitate to use some more treatment if I thought it necessary, but as far as I know I don't think it any use for me to spend any more money for that.

don't think money for that. Yours very truly, MRS. WM. CHRISTOPHEL.

DR. F. G. CURTS, EYE AND EAR SPECIALIST.

Catarrh of 20 Years' Standing Cured
Dear Dr. Curts:
I am so glad to tell you that you have, with your Mild Treatment, cured me of that loathsome disease, catarrh of the head, of twenty years standing, which rendered me at times almost totally deaf and life hardly worth living. Now, after using your treatment only three months, I find myself completely cured, and can now hear as good as I ever did.

REV. P. C. NEWELL.

Can Hear Across the Street Can Hear Across the Street
Dear Doctor: Columbia City, Ind., Oct 12, '06.
I will endeavor to tell you what your Mild Method Medicine has done for me. I was so hard to hear anything or anyone talking. They had to get right close to me and then speak loud, or I could not hear them, or anyone talking in an ordinary tone.
I could not understand a word and now I can hear my neighbors across the street.
Yours truly, MRS. J. M. HAPNER.

Nearly Deaf-Cured in Sixty Days MR. JOHN JONES, a railroad employee, of Ninth Street and Strom Avenue, Kansas City, Kas., was almost totally deaf, with incessant head noises, caused from catarrb, when he began the use of my Mild Medicine Method. Cured in

No More Head Noises Lovilia, Ia., Nov. 8, 1905. Dr. Curts.

Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Sir: Your medicines are all right, they have done me great good. My head does not trouble me any more and my right ear, that has been a great trouble to me ever since I was two or three years old, seems to be entirely cured, no more head noises or roaring in the head. Yours respectfully,

C. L. HIBBETS.

Dr. Curts Makes The Following Statement To The Readers Of This Paper:

Y entire professional life has been devoted to the treatment of diseases of the Eye and Ear. I have probably treated more and been more successful than any other living doctor. The larger portion of my patients I have never seen. By the aid of the Mild Medicine Method I am able to treat my patients as successfully as though they were to come to my office. I believe though they were to come to my once. I believe that any person having any Eye or Ear trouble should read my book, which I will gladly send free to any afflicted one. It will bring to them tidings of great joy. It will show how easy it is to regain perfect sight and perfect hearing.

Every statement Dr. Curts makes is backed up by proof — proof that will stand the closest investigation. These pictures and letters are all genuine. He has hundreds of letters just as strong and convincing as these. His reputation is so firmly established that there is scarcely a town or hamlet where he cannot point to a cured patient.

Cross-Eyes Straightened In One Minute

Five hundred dollars will be paid by Dr. Curts for any case of Crossed or Turned Eyes that he fails to straighten in one minute without pain or chloroform.

No matter how serious your affliction-no matter what other treatments you have tried—no matter what other doctors have told you—write for my book; it will cost you nothing, and will tell you how you can be cured at your own home.

DR. F. G. CURTS, 262 Gumbel Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

Under Many Obligations Dr. Curts. Push. Ark.

Kansas City, Mo. Dear Dr.: I feel under many obligations to you. My eyes are well, I can see to attend to my business. I can see to go anywhere with my hat off the brightest noon-sun day. I boast to the beys that I can beat them shooting.

Very truly yours, JOHN R. BAKER.

Cannot Thank You Enough
Dr. F. George Curts. Modoc. Ill.
Dear Doctor: I am writing to you today to tell you that my wife's eyes are now all right.
We cannot thank you enough for what you have done for her. She is 41 years old and does her own work and can see to go anywhere she wants to. Thanks to you, doctor, she can say that she is entirely well. C. H. WAHLMANN, R. R. No. I. Prairie Du Rocher, Randolph Co., Ill.

Treatment Did More Than Claimed Dear Dr. Curts:

Bancker, La.
Your very thoughtful letter reached me last night, and I now write from an eye that you brought to light in less than three months' treatment by mail. It would be quite an honor to my little ones to have a picture of Dr. Curts in their album—the man who brought light to their father's eye after twenty-nine years of blindness.

WM. CADE.

Twenty-Nine Years of Blindness

Twenty-Nine Years of Blindness
My Dear Doctor:
Pittsfield, Mass.
I feel that I cannot thank you sufficiently for what you have done for me. My eyes had been giving me serious trouble for four years. Spots and specks constantly moving before my vision, dizziness, and my hearing had become very much impaired. I also had a continual buzzing in my head.
I used your treatment one month and I am entire-I used your treatment one month and I am entirely cured. HENRY W. WARREN, 36 Fenn St.

The Cure Is Permanent Dear Doctor: I feel it my duty to write to you and thank you for what you have done for me. It has been over two years since my eyes have been cured of granulated cyclids by your Mild Treatment. The cure has thus far been perfect and permanent. I hope you may live long to benefit others.

OTTO PEUSCHEL.

Made No Mistake
Blue Mound, Kas.
Dr. Curts treated me two years ago last May, and performed an operation successfully, straightening my left eye. My eye is now as straight as anyone's.

The operation was performed without pain. I can very cheerfully say to you that if you are troubled with cross-eyes you will make no mistake in having Dr. Curts treat you. NAOMI CRAIG.

Cross-Eyes All Right Vivian, W. Va. Dr. Geo. F. Curts. Dear Sir: My eyes have gotten all right, and I am highly pleased with your treatment, and my advice to all who may be suffering with cross-eyes is to write to Kansas City and take your Mild Medicine Treatment. Hoping much success,

Yours truly, W. E. MYERS.

Eyes Greatly Improved Eyes Greatly Improved
Dear Dr. Curts:
I have now used your Mild Medicine Method four months, as prescribed for inflamed eyelids and infiamation of the optic nerve. My eyes feel greatly improved and are also looking well. I heartily recommend your treatment to those suffering with any disease of the eye, and thank you for the good you did me.
(MISS) CARRIE A. KAUFFMAN.

Cross-Eyes Straightened
MR. ISAAC HOFFMAN. Quincy, Ill., was terribly disfigured with cross-eyes, both eyesturning in and upward. I straightened them and he is as happy as can be. Mr. Hoffman writes me: "In reply to your letter will say that since you straightened my eyes in May, 1900, six years ago, they have never given me any trouble whatever, and are in perfect line. I am entirely satisfied."

ISAAC HOFFMAN.

Her Eyes Perfectly Cured

Dear Friend: I never shall forget your kindness to my wife. Mrs. Wheeland's suffering was something awful and I know that she would have become insane had it not been for you. As I told you before, my wife had Glaucoma in its worst form; her eyes and head gave her pain every minute, and we all expected the eye to burst. Every eye specialist we went to said nothing could be done, that her case was hopeless, but thanks to your great knowledge of this awful disease and to your Mild Medicine Treatment, her suffering was relieved and her eyes cured. If any person doubts that you can cure Glaucoma, send them to me and I will guarantee to satisfy them that you did all and more than you claimed to do.

all and more than you claimed to do.

C. J. WHEELAND.

A Million and a Quarter Homes.

Devoted to Art, Literature, Science, and the Home Circle

Its Motto Is "Onward and Upward."

SUBSCRIPTION.

SUBSCRIPTION.

United States and Cuba.

England, Canada and foreign countries.

SUBSCRIPTIONS are entered on our books as soon as received, and re all ways dasted from the current issue, unless otherwise ordered.

PUSLAGE to all parts of the United States and Canada as trepaid by us. When making a change of residence, in order to insues the uninterrupted decivery of COMIORI, it is essential that we be advised of the fraction in address IMMEDIATELY. As Postmasters cannot forward extenses matter with stamps, your missing copies of COMPORI SILLIVAN PRINTED TORS. All literary contributions should be accompanied by stamped and addressed envelopes for their return in case they are not available. Manuscripts should not be rolled.

Special Notics. We do not supply back numbers

Entered at the Post Office at Augusta, Maine,

Entered at the Post Office at Augusta, Maine, as second-class mail matter.

Published Monthly by
W. H. GANNETT, Incorporated,

Augusta, Maine.

New York Office, Flatiron Bidg. (Thicago Office, Harquette Bidg.

February, 1907

CONTENTS

	Page
CRUMBS OF COMFORT - • •	3
A FEW WORDS BY THE EDITOR	3
CURRENT TOPICS	. 3
TOLD AROUND THE STOVE	3
IN & AROUND THE HOME, Fancy Work,
Comfort Sisters' Corner, etc. 4, 5, 10, 12, 1	3 , 21 & 20
THE SHADOW OF A CROSS-A Religious	1
Ouarrel and Separation Written in Collaboration by Mrs. Dora Nelson and F. M.
C. Henderschott	6 & 15
COMFORT'S LEAGUE OF COUSINS Conducted by Incle Charlie	· / & 9
JERRY, THE BACKWOODS BOY (contin-
ued) Horatio Alger, Jr.	8 & 14
THE HIDDEN WEDDING TREASURE: or, The Mystery of the San Francisco Earthquake
(concluded) William T. Valentine	. 10
THE CREAT CHICAGO MYSTERY or
The Man with Many Aliases Rosser W.
Cobbe	11 0C 2U
POULTRY FARMING FOR WOMEN Mrs.	13
A CORNER FOR BOYS Conducted by
Uncle John	. 14
HATS, AND HOW TO MAKE THEM	Į
Comfort's Home Milliner	15
ST. ELMO (continued) Mrs. Augusta J.
Evans Wilson 10, 1	9, 22 & 28
MY OLD NEW HAMPSHIRE HOME Song Andrew B. Sterling	. 17
COMFORT RECITATION CLUB Conducted by Harold C. Hazleton	. 18
HOME LAWYER · · ·	20
A STOLEN PROPOSAL (concluded) Mrs.
Mary J. Holmes	23
INFORMATION BUREAU	- 24
TALKS WITH GIRLS	. 25
NEW INVENTIONS AND DISCOVERIES	. 25
MANNERS & LOOKS	. 27
FAMILY DOCTOR	. 29
• • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • •

Crumbs of Comfort

Hope lives until love dies.

A good man does good merely by living-Bulver. Parading a cross is no proof of possessing a Round and round the old world goes;

Ain't she hard to beat?
Gives a thorn with every rose,
But every rose is sweet.
—Frank L. Stanton.

God often comes to visit us, but generally we are not in .- Abbe Roix. God's silence may be long, but they are never the silence for forgetfulness.

It is no sign that a man is riding to heaven because he is driving others there.

"Yesterday's yesterday while today's here,
Today is today till tomorrow appear,
Tomorrow's tomorrow until today's past,
And kisses are kisses as long as they last."
—Oliver Hereford.

Better the service without the sentiment than the sentiment without the service.

No grip is so hard to shake off as that of early religious convictions.—Maurice Thompson. Bind together your spare hours by the cord of some definite purpose.— William M. Taylor.

Get leave to work,
In this world 'tis the best you can get at all;
God says "sweat" for forcheads, men say "crowns."

* * * Get work, get work,
Be sure 'tis better than what you work to get.

-Elizabeth Browning.

If instead of a gem, or even a flower, we could ast the gift of rich thought into the heart of a friend, that would be giving as the angels give. Blessed are they who have the gift of making friends, for it is one of God's best gifts. It ing friends, for it is one of cours less gits. It involves many things, but above all, the power of going out of one's self, and seeing and appreciating whatever is noble and loving in another.

Open the door of your heart, my friend, Open the door of your heart, my friend, Heedless of class or creed, When you hear the cry of a brother's voice, The sob of a child in need. To the shining heaven that o'er you bends You need no man or chart, But only the love the Master gave,—

A Few Words by the Editor

All nature feels the renovating Of winter, only to the thoughtless eye In ruin seen. The frost contracted globe Draws in abundant vegetable soul, And gathers vigor for the coming year. A stronger glow sits on the lively check Of ruddy fire; and luculent along The purer rivers flow, their sullen deeps, Transparent, open to the shepherd's gaze And murmur hoarser at the biting frost.—Thomas

HERE are people who will not read a story paper. We regret such people do not read COMFORT, and they would then no doubt against their will, be compelled to change their views. This is not a religious journal, but we believe we are well within the bounds of truth, when we say, that COMFORT's influence is all for good. And we also believe there is not a religious journal in the land that exerts a better influence upon the home life of the household than does COMFORT. than does Comfort.

In all our stories it is virtue that is lauded, it is vice and wrong-doing that is execrated and punished. Every story conveys a moral, and proves forcibly that sin is wrong, that falsehood and crime do not pay, and honesty, purity and virtue are alone worth while—the only ronds to happiness.

No paper in the land tries to help the sick. No paper in the land tries to help the sick, and unfortunate, and put in action the practical works of Christ-like charity as does this publication. Certainly no religious magazine does as much of this work as we. If every publication were as clean and wholesome, uplifting, and in sympathy with poor humanity as Comfort is—this would be a better world. Comfort is all right, and its readers know it.

President Roosevelt's visit to Panama was one of unusual interest, not only because it was the first time the chief executive of this nation ever went outside the boundaries of the United ever went outside the boundaries of the United States during his term of office, but it also draws the attention of our people to this the mightiest engineering work of modern times. We would like every reader of COMFORT to take an interest in this work, which, when finished, will add immensely to our power and influence in the world's affairs, and will bring by water the products of the Pacific slope to Eastern markets, and supply our people with the luscious fruits of that section at a much lower rate than they can be procured at the present time, as ocean freight rates are always very much less than the cost of cartage by railvery much less than the cost of cartage by rail-had a man become competent in his work, than he was obliged to vacate his office, and hand it over to a man who had absolutely no experience in the work he had to perform. This did incalculable injury to the public service.

We advise all the bright and ambitious among our readers (especially those who have graduated from High Schools and are of a naturally studious bent) to study Civil Service requirements, with a view to entering government employ. Uncle Sam is an excellent em-

Current Topics

Oklahoma has adopted Alfalfa, which bears a small blue flower, as a state emblem.

Commander Peary will make another search for the pole. He has already made nine trips to the arctic.

A badge is to be given to every American citizen who for a given time participates in the work of building the Panama Canal.

The last reports from Shanghai tell of increasing horrors of the great famine in Central China. The appeal made by the President for contribution to relieve them should have a generous response.

Professor William James after 35 years' service in the chair of Philosophy at Harvard will retire. His rare scholarship is know the world over, and from American, British, Italian, and French institutions he has received high Oliver Dyer, who is said to have introduced stenography into the United States, died in Boston, January 13th. He was the first shorthand reporter of the United States Senate, and was ordained into the Swedenborgian ministry.

"Next after the English, the Americans are the greatest consumers of champagne," remarked a gentleman with a red nose, "and we import 4,500,000 quarts a year, half of it in pint bottles. Champagne is called the gentleman's drink, and it certainly calls for a gentleman's purse to pay for it, because it usually sells at from $3.50 to $5 a quart and most champagne drinkers can get away with a quart apiece and not think they are taking an overdose. But everybody in the United States doesn't drink champagne for the imports represent a bottle for every nineteen persons. To produce a bottle of champagne requires the work of forty-three men, and the juice of four and a half pounds of grapes worth twenty cents a forty-three men, and the juice of four and a half pounds of grapes worth twenty cents a pound. The consumption of champagne has increased thirty-three per cent, during the past five years, and manufacturers say that it is a sure sign of prosperity and progress in a country when the demand for champagne is stiff. The cost of the corks in the four million and a half bottles we drink cost $200,000 and the bottles cost $650,000 and can not be again used for champagne. Age does not improve champagne, and it is at its best at about five years after it has been bottled. The Russians are the third on the list of champagne consumers, and the consumption per capita is greater in Belgium than in any other country. We make a very good champagne in this greater in Belgium than in any other country. We make a very good champagne in this country, but it is not popular with champagne connoisseurs and only those who are not regular champagne drinkers call for it. To the uninitiated champagne seems to be the very limit of superiority in drinks. However, it is the most popular of all wines for dinners among those who like to do 'swagger' things and make a display."

TOLD PROUND THE STOVE

Concerning Champagne

Something about Canary Birds

"Nearly everybody knows the pretty song of the bright little bird known as the Canary, and some households are not considered complete unless there is at least one cage in the house, with a bird or a pair in it," said the New York drummer. "Nobody knows how many canaries are hatched and caged in this country, but it is estimated that 200,000 a year are imported from Germany where the best ones come from. Others are brought from England, Scotland and Belgium, but while they may be showier birds than the German singers, they are not sold here, most of them going to Canada. There is no reason apparent why the German bird should be better than the others, except that the Germans look after their birds because they love them and care for them tenderly. No one German raises more than seven or eight hundred a year, but some are raised by all German families, and nearly the whole product comes from the Hartz mountains. They originally came from the Canary Islands, and there they still fly about wild in the woods, but they are not shipped from there. It is estimated that the Germans raise a million birds a year. The first birds are sent to this country in August and the shipments continue until March. Dealers do not like to receive young birds that have not been taught to sing, but many are shipped young and they are sold to persons who are willing to teach the youngsters. They are taught by the Germans either by raising the young ones with an old bird which is a high-class singer, or by letting them hear the canary organ, a little musical whistle kept going day and night by water power. The birds we raise in this country from German stock are about equal to the changes of our climate. Prices of birds vary according to their singing qualities, health, color, shape, size, some selling as low as a dollar a bird. But Hartz mountain birds range from $2, to $2.50 for a fairly good bird, and running up as high as $50.00 for the very choicest specimens. The English 'Manchester Topknot,' larger than the German bird, but not so

CHANGE IN POSTAL LAWS

The Postal Commission, which has been in session for some time, has recommended a bill to Congress which, if passed, will take away many of the privileges now enjoyed by people living in the rural sections. By this bill the SAMPLE COPY PRIVILEGE IS PRACTICALLY DONE AWAY WITH, and the rates on second-class matter will be raised on papers over a given weight. As the bill will have to come to a vote before the first of March the question will be settled in short order, and if Congress passes such a measure it means that the people will be obliged to pay more for their newspapers and magazines in the future, and RECEIVE NO MORE SAMPLE COPIES. We urge all of our subscribers to RENEW or EXTEND their subscription to COMFORT at once while the PRESENT LOW FIFTEEN-CENT-A-YEAR RATE IS IN FORCE and all subscribers must keep paid up in advance all of the time in the future or else the paper must be stopped. If anyone receives this paper as a sample copy it means that it is sent to you that you may read it with the view that you will subscribe while the rate is only Fifteen Cents per year. The price will soon have to advance, but if you subscribe now, or get up a club of subscribers, you can all have it for only Fifteen Cents for the next year, and thus enjoy for a small sum of money the many good things we are now able to give you at this extremely low price.

We have no doubt that every American will strive, once at least in a lifetime, to make the New York, San Francisco journey via the Canal. Fast and palatial steamers will be placed upon this route, and we know of no more delightful and enjoyable trip than this promises to be. The voyage will probably not take more than two weeks. The Canal will also shorten the distance by sea, between San Francisco and Europe, by many thousands of miles, and we have no doubt that the benefits that will accrue to California, and the coast generally by drawto California, and the coast generally by drawing our Western shores closer to the teeming cities of Europe, will be of incalculable advancities of Europe, will be of incalculable advantage to this country. The Canal will also double the strength of our navy, as it will permit us to concentrate our battleship line, on either ocean, within a couple of weeks. For this advantage alone, the Canal is well worth while. The present long journey round the Horn practically isolates our Pacific Coast cities, and leaves them without sufficient naval protection. Strategically then, the Canal will be of enormous advantage, and in view of the uncertain state Strategically then, the Canal will be of enormous advantage, and in view of the uncertain state of things in the Orient, the growing power of Japan, the awakening of China, and the struggle that must inevitably come for the mastery of the Pacific, we can not but help turn our eyes longingly to Panama, and hope for the completion of that mighty work in the shortest possible time.

The distance from Colon to Panama is fortysix miles. Of this distance sixteen miles was six miles. Of this distance sixteen miles was excavated by the French. The French idea was to dig a sea level canal, but our engineers have decided that the lock plan is much the cheaper and better way. This plan will permit the work to be completed in seven or eight years instead of sixteen required by the French plan. When the work first began, the Americans employed in the undertaking were very much disheartened by vellow fever outbreaks. This disheartened by yellow fever outbreaks. This is all altered now. A sanitary force of 2,300 men under Colonel Gorgas has made the Canal Zone under Colonel Gorgas has made the Canal Assass as healthy as an American city, and American mechanics can go there with the certainty that the care they will return alive. We by proper care, they will return alive. We know of no better field for capable, energetic, enterprising skilled labor, as the wages are considerably higher than those paid at home. By applying to the Isthmian Canal Commission, Washington, D. C., the rates of wages for various grades of skilled labor can be obtained.

The Shah of Persia, Muzaffer-ad-Din, a progressive ruler, died January 8th, in the 54th year of his age. The late Shah will be succeeded by his eldest son, Mohammed Ali Meiza, who is well educated and in sympathy with his fether? liberal ideas father's liberal ideas.

According to the reports from Russia, the distress in the famine districts is steadily growing. In the government of Kozan the peasants have been driven to desperation, and are selling their daughters into slavery. The ages of the girls sold range from twelve to seventeen years.

Among the important recent discoveries is that of intercepting wireless messages, by the Rev. Frederick L. Odenback of St. Ignatius College. The discovery was made by accident, and the apparatus is simple, consisting of a copper roof, two common steel pins, known as the black-headed pins, and four or five lead. the black-headed pins, and four or five lead pencils.

Among the marvelous inventions is an instrument that can be attached to any telephone and will receive messages mechanically, recording the voice on flat sheets of magnetized cording the voice on flat sheets of magnetized steel. The records are made simply by magnetism, and the steel sheet shows no indentation or marking of any kind. One can talk upon one of the steel sheets, inclose it in an envelope, and mail as you would an ordinary letter. The receiver inserts the tin sheet into his instrument, and the letter is spoken with every inflection of the voice of the sender. flection of the voice of the sender.

One of the most remarkable women, of the last century, Baroness Burdett-Coutts died re-cently in London at the advanced age of ninety-two. She was the daughter of Sir Francis Burdett, adding the name of her materna grandfather, from whom she inherited a vast fortune. It is believed she gave away nearly five million dollars. In 1871, Queen Victoria elevated her to a baroness in recognition of her great philanthropies. At the age of sixty-seven she married Mr. William Lehman Ashmead-Rattlett. He asymed the person his mile. Bartlett. He assumed the name of his wife.

Progress of the South

"At the close of the Civil War in 1865," said "At the close of the Civil War in 1865," said the political looking party with a campaign document in his hand, "the South—meaning by that, the states which had seceded or tried to—the states in which slavery existed—was about as poor a proposition as could be found on earth. The land was devastated, property was valueless, the men nearly all killed off, or invalids, government overthrown, states in debt, nothing doing anywhere, and worst of all an entirely new sociologic condition presented in the freedom of the slaves. It was a good deal the freedom of the slaves. It was a good deal worse than beginning with a wholly new country. That was forty years ago, and the South began to pull together right away with the true American spirit. It took fifteen years at least to get things going at all right, and now let me read you some figures of what progress least to get things going at all right, and now let me read you some figures of what progress has been made within the past twenty-five years. From $257,000,000 invested in factories she has gone to 1,500,000,000, an increase of over 1,200,000,000 dollars with an increased product of over twelve hundred millions annually; from 21 millions in cotton mills to 225 millions; from 225,000 bales of cotton used in Southern mills to 2,163,000 bales; from 39 millions yearly product of lumber to 250 millions; from 397,000 tons of pig iron a year to 3,100,000 tons; from 680 millions of farm products a year to 1,750 millions; To the shining heaven that o'er you bends You need no map or chart, But only the love the Master gave,—
Open the door of your heart!

Look on the bright side of all things. Believe that the best offering that you can make God is to enjoy to the full what he sends of child who believes in all his father's dealings with it, whether he understands them or not. The day is coming when the great ship of the world, guided by the band of the Son of God, shall float out of the clouds and storms, out of the shadows and conflicts, into the people; 181,000 of these have passed the Civil Service examination, proving that they are conditions as long as they faithfully perfect in the shadows and conflicts, into the property of God.—H. Van Dyke.

To the thick the best offering that you can make God is to enjoy to the full what he sends of child who believes in all his father's dealings with it, whether he understands them or not. The day is coming when the great ship of the world, guided by the band of the Son of God, shall float out of the clouds and storms, out of the shadows and conflicts, into the perfect of the full what he sends of the shadows and conflicts, into the perfect of the full what he sends of the shadows and conflicts, into the perfect of the full what he sends of the shadows and conflicts, into the perfect of the shadows and conflicts of the

IN @ AROUND The HOME

CONDUCTED BY MRS. WHEELER WILKINSON

Terms Used in Crochet

Ch. chain; ch. st. chain stitch; s. c. single crochet; d. c. double crochet (thread over once); tr. c. treble crochet (thread over twice); dtr. double treble crochet (thread over three times); l. c. long crochet; r. st; roll stitch l. loop; p. picot; r. p. roll picot; sl. st. slip stitch; k. st. knot stitch: sts. stitches; stars mean that the directions given between them should be repeated as indicated before proceeding.

Terms Used in Knitting

k. knit plain; o. over; o. 2, over twice; n. narrow 2 stitches together; p. purl; sl. slip a stitch; tog. together; b. bind; stars and parenthesis indicate repetition.

Terms Used in Tatting

d. s. double stitch; p. picot; l. p. long picot; chain; d. k. double knot; pkt. picot and knot together. * indicates a repetition.

Another Fancy Work Competition

Valuable Prizes for Home Workers irst Prize $5.00 Third Prize $2.00 econd Prize $3.00 Fourth Prize $1.00 Also one hundred special consolation awards. First Prize $5.00 Second Prize $3.00

Second Prize $3.00 Fourth Prize $1.00
Also one hundred special consolation awards. The above prizes are offered for the best original articles of home work received by us before April 30, 1907, and the awards will be announced in June or July Comfort.

We want all kinds of articles suitable for birthday or holiday gifts, church fair, bazaars, etc., useful and attractive things which can be made at home by the woman of limited means, and especially novel ideas which can be made with cardboard as a basis; anything in this line will be especially welcome.

Think out some new way of developing an old idea, or devise something new for which you have a use; it may also just meet the needs of another, but do not copy; we want original articles; also new designs for crocheting, knitting, netting, tatting, cross-stitching, patchwork, teneriffe and drawnwork, Hardanger etc., etc.

As we assume a large expense to carry out this plan, devoting space and time as well as money for illustrations, we want every lady reader to consider this appeal directed personally to her, and for her to send in her needlework whether she "thinks" it will win a prize or not. Your own work may be better than you know. Where the designs are worked in colors have as much contrast as possible. Black and white make the best illustrations for the paper.

If your article sent in is not a prize winner, and white make the best illustrations for the paper.

If your article sent in is not a prize winner, remember we may be able to use it in these columns; and if so will pay you for the privilege. So send in your designs anyway.

The only conditions are the following:

1. Each sample must be of original design and not copied from other papers.

2. Full directions (written on one side of the paper only) must accompany each sample, showing how it is made.

3. Your return address must be on outside wrapper of both package and letter. Send separately.

separately.

4. All samples must be received at this office before April 30, and be addressed Comfort, Home Work Competition, Augusta, Maine.

Home Work Competition, Augusta, Maine.

On account of many submitting work requesting us to withhold their full address we have decided to discontinue giving the name and address of persons to whom we are indebted for fancy work articles, which we use on this page. Comfort's circulation is so large, many of our subscribers have been besieged with requests for samples or further particulars in regard to work which has appeared, and to answer these letters takes time and money for postage, and it is impossible for one to send samples or directions to so many.

Whenever publishing any particular piece of work, we endeavor to give the plainest possible directions for making, besides illustrating it. So it is absolutely useless for you to write for more information, samples, or patterns of anything, unless stated that they can be supplied. Fancy work of an inexpensive nature we gladly receive at any time, and if available for these columns will be used and paid for at current rates, and samples are returned, but we seldom purchase anything outright.

Knitting, crocheting, netting and tatting, to be acceptable, must be accompanied by full directions for making, written plainly on one side of the paper only, and in accordance with above abbreviations.

Novel or original ideas for utilizing ordinary material are especially desired.

Hardanger Embroidery

Hardanger Embroidery

N the past year we have illustrated and given directions for making several pieces of this work, but as numerous questions in regard to the stitches employed continue to come in, this month we will endeavor to be more explicit, and illustrate the work in such a way that any one ought to be work in such a way that any one ought to be

Hardanger embroidery is the national needle-work of Norway, and is really very simple when the principle of the work is understood.

The different patterns are all geometrical, and formed by counting the threads as in crossstitching, hence, the necessity of having a fabric woven in a square mesh.

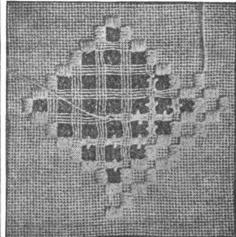

mesh.
The principal stitch is SEAM STITCH. FIG. 1. a very old one, and is known as the seam stitch, see Fig. 1. This consists of going over a certain number of threads a given number of times, and then repeating, only doing the work at a right angle.

work at a right angle.

For example in Fig.1, beginning at the bottom, four threads are crossed five times, working up and down, then working from side to side, cross four threads five times; repeat again, working up and down. At first only this stitch was used, and large articles were almost entirely covered by patterns worked out in this way.

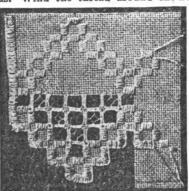

as is most convenient. Never put a knot in the thread, but begin from the wrong side, and weave the thread in and out through the mesh of the goods, then cover with the seam stitch, which is always worked on the right side of the goods.

goods.
Most all designs are defined with groups of this stitch, see Fig. 2, and should always be taken over an even number of threads, usually either two or four. This square is outlined with a double row of seam stitches the same as are shown in detail in Fig. 1.

SEAM STITCH IN GROUPS. FIG. 2.

In working out any design remember that the corner group is never counted. By referring to the illustration it will be seen that there are six groups of stitches on each side of the square twice, hold firmly with the thumb, pulling the needle through, and proceed to weave. All weaving should always be done on the wrong side of the work.

FILLED SPACES. FIG. 4.

side of the work.

Fig. 3, illustrates a way of filling in fancy woven blocks, which is much used in centerpieces, and as motifs for shirt-waists, or collar and cuff sets. In this block the seam stitch is pleces, and as moths for shift-waiss, or collar and cuff sets. In this block the seam stitch is taken a little differently from that shown in Fig. 2. The block is made across twenty threads of the canvas each way. Beginning at one corner four stitches over eight threads, four stitches over twelve threads, four stitches over eight threads, four stitches over twelve threads, four stitches over eight threads, four stitches over four threads. This completes one side of the square. Repeat for the remaining sides. Cut the threads inside the square as follows: Cut seven threads leave six threads, cut seven threads and pull out. Start in the center of the six threads on one side of the square, and over and over around three of the six threads. When half the distance to the center block has been wound, loop the silk to the starting point, then proceed to wind until the center of the square is reached. Repeat this in each quarter section of the large square. Four of these blocks placed together make a very handsome figure.

wery handsome figure.

This way of filling in the open spaces can also be used in alternate spaces, as shown in the Hardanger Scarf, and in the edge illustrated in Fig. 4.

in Fig. 4.

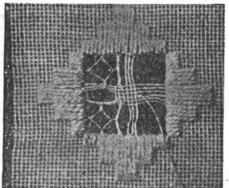

HARDANGER CENTERPIECE. By Mrs. Lizzie Warner.

canvas, one group across the canvas, and the open spaces, next group with the length. This point must is button-be remembered if one is to follow the designs intelligently.

intelligently.

After both rows of seam stitches are finished, the threads should be cut inside the inner row, as shown in the illustration. When all the groups of threads have been cut and pulled there will be alternate squares of open spaces the considerable practice, as and groups of four uncut threads as are shown in the unworked part of Fig. 2.

The uncut threads are to be woven first across the square and then from the opposite direction. Weave over and under two threads each time.

in the inner row, while in the outer there are eight, without the corner groups.

As has been before stated, each group of the seam stitches is taken over four threads of the define the practice, as have to be turned with practically all the stitches taken from one point. Unless the edges are done firmly, and the THE CORNERS BUTTONHOLED.

and the estitches placed close together, they will not wear well when cut out. Before the cutting is done if the edges are stitched on the machine with a fine stitch, just inside the edge of the button-holing the edge will be much more durable, but it is tedious work, which requires much time, patience and care, or the effect of the hand work is spoiled.

To Make the Stars

The star is a favorite design, made as is shown in the scarf end, and the doily. First, find the center of the space which the star is to occupy, and work an eyelet over two threads of the canvas all around, this forms the center of the covered by patterns worked out in this way, then later the threads were cut away, and in the open squares fancy stitches were worked.

For this work one needs a blunt needle, and hoops for holding the work may be used or not be squared part of Fig. 2.

The uncut threads are to be woren first across the star. To make the four double points of the star, start by going over two threads, then three, four, five, six, seven, and eight, and then cross one less each time; until only two are bars, bring the needle up between two threads, then three four double points of the ways they going over two threads, then three center of the star. To make the four double points of the star, start by going over two threads, then three, four, five, six, seven, and eight, and then cross one less each time; until only two are cross one less e that is, in the center of the four threads of the canvas. Wind the thread around the needle

A fancy stitch which shows just inside the edge of both scarf and centerpiece is known as back stitching. To do this one works diagonally over the threads of the canvas, over six threads as follows: Bring up the needle at the point on the canvas representing the top of the first right-hand side stitch; count two holes in the canvas down and two across towards the left, this being for the center of the three stitches. Repeat this stitch twice in the same holes bringing up for the side stitch on the left. Bring needle back to bottom of the first side stitch made, and repeat the length desired. See Fig. 6 for detail of this stitch.

Hardanger Centerpiece

Hardanger goods eighteen inches square will be needed to make this piece.

Begin by measuring in four inches from any corner diagonally, then count twenty-four threads, and begin to define the open work border with a double row of seam stitches, as shown in Fig. 2. Work over four threads in each direction five times as heretofore explained, continue all around the four sides.

Now, count sixteen threads towards the adda.

each direction five times as heretofore explained, continue all around the four sides.

Now, count sixteen threads towards the edge, and work the buttonholing all around as illustrated in Fig. 5. To have the work come out perfect great care must be exercised in counting, or one will come out wrong.

Between the edge and the double row of seam stitches work in the fancy back stitch illustrated by Fig. 6. This should be about half way between the edge and double row of seam stitch.

Now count for the open spaces, and work in another double row of seam stitches, then cut out and pull the threads, and work as has been explained, and is illustrated by Fig. 2. Weave over the threads either with or without the picot, as one prefers.

The center of the piece is further decorated with cross rows of seam stitching and four stars in the opposite squares. In the narrow strips in each corner a fancy stitch is worked in by crossing two threads each way to form squares.

Hardanger Scarf

(See illustration on opposite page.)

This can be used for either a bureau or sideboard scarf.

One and one half yards of goods was required for the one here illustrated.

Measure in four inches from the corner, diagonally, then count twenty-four threads and work all around a single row of seam stitches.

Next count and work seam stitches around the four open-work groups in each corner. Then count off threads for the open-work border all around, but before cutting and pulling the threads work a row of straight seam stitches by working over four threads in a straight row, after this is completed finish the ends as shown by working in the fancy stitches illustrated in Fig. 3 in every other square. Along the sides this is omitted.

Next work in another row of seam stitching across each corner and then complete another row of straight seam stitching, working over four threads across the scarf from the upper corners of the corner squares as shown in the illustration.

corners of the corner squares as shown in the illustration.

Then comes a row of fancy back stitching and another line of straight seam stitching.

Using this as a base-line count off the squares for the open-work point and along each side put a double row of seam stitching.

The two smaller points of open work are defined with rows of straight seam stitching and then a row of fancy stitching the same as that worked in the corners of the centerpiece.

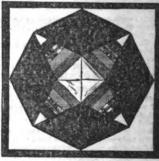

Now finish the double row of seam stitching around the space occupied by the star, then find the center of this space and work the star by directions given and finish the opposite corners with the groups of four cyclets.

The fancy row of stitching between the first two rows of straight seam stitching can be easily done from the illustration simply by working the desired forms with the seam stitch and placing cyclets as shown for a finish.

Illinois Star

This hexagon pattern, with a star in the center, has for its background material of one color. It may be of red or blue, or any color which will harmowill harmo-nize with the points of the star. The center may be cut of one solid piece or of four different colors; when the hexagon is then basted on a square of white.

Narrow strips of the same color as the hexagon are used around the square, and when the quilt is finished it will not only be attractive, but the pieces which will accumulate have been to advantage. MRS. J. RI MRS. J. RICE.

Perfume Sachet

Cut two leaf-shaped pieces of taffeta silk, baste on white lawn, work veins, and button-hole edges. When finished, place perfume in wadding and lay between, and overstitch together. This one is made of olive This one is made of olive green on one side and an on the other, worked with white. Any kind of plain material, which suits the fancy of the worker may be used in these little sachets, showing as they will how one's taste and incenuity may taste and ingenuity may develop not only in the design, but in the various rnamented. When comways they may be ornamented.

PERFUME SACHET.

pleted it makes an acceptable gift, particularly if a handkerchief of one's own work accompanies it.

MRS. E. J. BRITTON.

Points to Remember

Always write on one side of the paper only and leav space between the lines.

Write recipes, hints and requests on separate paper in-stead of including them in the letters.

stead of including them in the letters.

Mail all letters at least THERE MONTHS before the issue for which they are intended.

Always give your correct name and address, as no letter will be published excepting over it. This enables the sisters to write directly to each other.

Do not write us for samples or patterns of the fancy work which have appeared. When publishing any particular piece of work, we give the plainest possible directions for making and usually illustrate it. It is absolutely useless for you to write for more information, or for samples, or patterns of anything unless stated that they can be supplied.

As it has come to our notice that sisters have been ask-anything unless stated that they can be supplied.

It has come to our notice that sisters have been asking certain sums for information and patterns that abould have been furnished free, we here give notice that no charge should be made or money asked for any offers of assistance or information which have or will appear in any letters here published; should there be, kindly notify us, and the offender will be denied the further use of these columns. As this department is run solely to afford an opportunity for the mutual exchange of ideas, recipes, and helpful information, we do not intend it to be used by anyone for a commercial purpose.

Do not send us exchange notices; we have no exchange column, and cannot publish them.

Do not ask us to publish letters referring to money in any way, such as requesting donations or offering articles for sale. Much as we sympathize with the suffering and unfortunate it is impossible to do this as we would be flooded with similar requests.

Do not request souvenir postals unless you have com-plied with the conditions which entitle you to such a notice. See offer.

such a notice. See offer.

All subscribers are cordially invited to write to this department and all stand an equal chance of having their letters appear, whether they are old or new members. As our space is limited, naturally the most interesting helpful letters are selected. Write fully of your views and ideas, yourself and home-surroundings, "give as freely as ye receive," but if your first letter does not appear, do not feel utterly discouraged. Remember the old adage, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again."

DEAR SISTERS:

I have just a word or two to say this month before we turn to the many interesting and instructive letters.

Mrs. M. E. Peebles. Maybe later we can publish some of the poems you suggested. Many thanks for your kind words of appre-

Many thanks for your kind words of appreciation.

Mrs. Jennie Huff. Have you consulted physicians in regard to your little one's condition?

Mrs. H. B. Jones, Indiana. Your letter was interesting. I am sorry you have had such an experience, but you are only one of many, hence the above rules which we hope will prevent such impostors from using these columns in the future. The letter you inclosed is only a sample of the hundreds which I receive.

The sister from Ford, Va., forgot to sign her name. Write us again, all will be glad to hear how you make the pretty puffs and bookmarks.

Will Carleton's poem received and it will appear as soon as we have the space to devote to it.

Dear Comport Sisters:

DEAR COMPORT SISTERS:

COMPORT SISTERS:
"If I knew you and you knew me,
And both of us could plainly see,
And with an inner sight divine—
The meaning of your heart and mine,
I think that we would differ less,
And clasp our hands in friendliness,
And we should pleasantly agree
If I knew you, and you knew me."

And we should pleasantly agree

If I knew you, and you knew me."

I want to say how much I appreciate "our" corner. For though we have a "corner" in Comport," yet that corner doesn't "corner" all the comfort, but spreads it abroad to all. Those who have not visited Kansas City, at least recently, will be surprised at the progress this growing city is making. I cannot say too much in praise of our park and boulevard system, which is a source of much beauty to the city in summer. Come and see.

My home is just about a block from a boulevard which connects with Penn Valley Park, which is not a place of amusement, but one of great beauty. We have quite a number of amusement parks here, which are very attractive.

We are buying our home now, and are very happy in what will be our very own before a great while, we hope. I have a dear little boy twenty-two months old, and I wish you all could know him. To me he is the brightest and sweetest of all bables. How natural it is that we mothers should think our own are the dearest and best in all ways. How human it is to feel so. And yet all bables are so dear.

To me a baby especially appeals because of its

was an invalid for some time, so I understand what it is, and I realize how we should appreciate our health—we who have it.

I will be glad to answer any of the sisters' letters, who will write. How far Comport extends! But then the "comfort" spirit should encircle the earth.

MRS. PRUDENCE MORAST, 3119 Penn St., Kansas City, Mo.

Are you reading "The Shadow of a Cross," the new serial? It is a delightful story and will appear serially in COMFORT for some months. Only 15 cents for a full year's subscription, if sent at once.

months. Only is cents for a full year's subscription, if sent at once.

Dear Sisters:

Since my last Hardanger work appeared in Composer I have received so many letters asking for directions and samples it has been impossible for me to supply all, so I send in two new pieces of work for illustration, and think with the directions given you will all be able to work out these designs. Many who wrote me forgot to give their addresses, and some letters which I wrote were returned, this was the case with Sophia Collins, Ornoro, Ont. and Mrs. J. W. Welch, Downings, Va., so it both of these parties will send stamped self-addressed envelopes, I will remail the samples. Now I will answer a few of the numerous questions which so many ask. This work should be done on the regular Hardanger goods which can be purchased at most dry or fancy goods stores, and costs from fifty cents to one dollar and fifty cents per yard according to quality and width.

Use any good make of the silk flosses, No. 1, which come especially for this work, for the seam stitching, fancy back stitching, stars and eyelets, use heavy linen thread No. 26, for buttonholing all edges, and linen thread No. 50 for weaving and working fancy stitches in the open squares.

An inexperienced person had better begin on some small piece, as a beginner is very apt to make mistakes in counting, and if this is done a piece will not be perfect, so great care should be taken.

I find this work very fascinating, but so tedious to count the threads that one can work atit steadily only a short while. It is especially hard on the eyes and back as it takes a long time to do a large piece. I am working on a piece now which I have put all my spare time on for the past two years.

Well, dear sisters, now I will close. I was glad to hear from you all, and would have complied with all requests for samples if it had been possible, but all who undertake to do this work will soon find out how much time it takes to make so many samples, even though each is small.

Thanking you for t samples, even though each is small.

Thanking you for the many kind words and wishes, I remain mii, Mrs. Lizzie Warner, Cedar, Iowa.

MRS. LIZZIE WARNER, Cedar, Iowa.

DHAR MRS. WILKINSON:

After reading the interesting letters written by Mrs. B. E. Ward of British Columbia in the November, March and July issues of Compor, I have wanted very much to write to her, but I note in her last letter she said she had already received more letters than she could reply to, so just allow me to throw her a bouquet, and beg her to write often.

end of the cave. Some places were so small they had to crawl through.

If this finds its way into the corner, I will write again about Oklahoma, and describe some of our beautiful sunsets.

If Mrs. H. A. Lowden of Lynbrook, N. Y., sees this, I wish to thank her for the belt and collar I received for the cacti I sent her.

ADA L. WALKER, Cestos, Okla.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

There was a mistake made in publishing my caramel filling, so I will send it again for I want all the sisters to try it. I'll also send in my recipe for making Light Bread which is the best bread of all and easiest to make.

The Best Bread

Scald about two quarts of milk, take from the stove and add five teaspoonfuls of sugar and a heaping tablespoonful of lard or butter, when this gets cold add a couple of teaspoonfuls of sait, a yeast cake and a half which have previously been dissolved in lukewarm water, then stir in flour till very thick, let stand over night, then work up good with flour, knead and let this rise two hours, then knead thoroughly again, form into loaves and let raise about a half hour; bake and when done rub the crust over lightly with butter and it will not harden.

Caramel Filling

Caramer Filling

One cup of white sugar, one cup of light brown sugar, meit with cold water, boil it until it threads, then beat in two tablespoonfuls of cream, and one tablespoonful of butter, and one teaspoonful of wanills, take from the fire and beat until quite thick and spread between the layers.

Mrs. Ella Sidell, Phoenix, Ariz.

DEAR COMPORT SISTERS:

I have never visited you in your corner before, and now I come for information. Do any of you know what will relieve or cure ulceration of the bladder?

bladder:
My dear mother has been a sufferer of that disease for over four years and has tried everything we could hear of, or find, that she thought might help

her.

If any sister, who knows what will cure her positively or even relieve her to a great extent, will write her or me, I will return postage. By doing this you will place me forever in your debt, unless I can repay you sometime by sending in something some other sister needs and wants.

Hoping to receive the desired knowledge in a short while, I am IRIS MCKINZIE, Homer, La.

My mother's address is MRS. FANNIE MCKENZIE.

Dear Mrs. Wilkinson and Comfort Sisters. It is a long time since I wrote you. I have been busy answering the six hundred or more sisters who wrote me after my letter describing my Cuban home. Now I am traveling for pleasure and am bound for the home of my grandfather in Bartow, Kitssp Co., Washington, where I will go canoeing, trout fishing, salmon fishing, etc. The white house on the hill surrounded by the beautiful royal

ille. "DĒ 10 1000

HARDANGER SCARF END. By Mrs. Lizzie Warner.

Date of the progress, which is a source of much hearty

We have quite a number of amassment parks here, which connects with Bern Valley Park, which is which and it is not rest to the ordinary of the state of the progression of the prog ness, the more "long-green" it means to the farmer.

I have noticed the past few days, the mistletoe berries are fast forming and soon the branches will be covered with the little waxy-white fruit.

Did any of you know a strong brewed tea of mistletoe is a fine cough remedy? it must be well

Did any of you know a strong brewed tea of mistletce is a fine cough remedy? it must be well sweetened.

Now I would like to ask a bit of advice in regard to taking the best care of matting and Linoleum. What can I use to prevent or lessen the wear and tear on both, making them durable and keep the original colors? I will appreciate the kindness of any sister's advice.

I would like to hear from any of the sisters, interested in instrumental music. I would dearly love to see more of such kind in our Compost pages, also would someone who has "Curfew Must Not Ring Tonight," send it to me. I had it but lost or misplaced it. Now in conclusion I will give my way of keeping granite cooking utensils bright and clean without much washing and unsightly hands. I grease the bottom and sides of my pots, etc., when using them over a fire, and when cooking is over, take some old paper, or tissue paper, rub off all the smoke and soot that you can, and your pot will need very little washing to make it look like new again.

With best wishes to one and all, I remain as ever an old friend of Compost. May its life be long and useful.

Mrs. E. B. Behrens, Brady, Texas.

EDatch the number on your wrapper. If the least of the subscripe.

Watch the number on your wrapper. If it is 221 or less, it means that your eubscription has or is about expired and you should renew at once so as to not miss any papers containing the great story, "St. Elmo," which will be continued for some months during 1907; it only costs 15 cents to do it now.

DEAR EDITOR AND SISTERS:

I am sending in my subscription for one of the best little magazines, COMFORT, on earth. I want to thank all the readers, who have written to me, for their great kindness.

What a great, big, round world we are living in, and how kind and thoughtful most of the people are. No matter how discouraged and sad hearted we may be, if we will just look up we can behold life's sun still shining, and we may find that each cloud, no matter how dark it may be, has a silver lining.

we may be, if we will just look up we can behold life's sun still shining, and we may find that each cloud, no matter how dark it may be, has a silver lining.

I was feeling very sad and lonely, and as I was reading Comport, I became interested in the Sisters' Corner, so I thought I would write and ask some of the readers to write to me. I expected to receive as many as five or six letters. Imagine my surprise and pleasure when the letters and so wenir postal cards began coming six or seven a day, and some times more. Many were so kind as to send me the quilt blocks I desired, and I was so thankful for all favors. The letters were all just fine, and I am sorry I cannot answer each one personally. I would like to, but not being a rich man's wife, nor a millionaire's daughter, I find it impossible to do just as I would like in all cases. I have returned all favors and postal cards as far as I can, and have written to many, but not to all. I am sorry to disappoint any, but trust all will understand the situation, and accept my thanks for all their kindness. You have taught me a lesson, dear sisters, and I shall ever try in the future to look more on the bright side, and less at the clouds. I also received several copies of those "endiess prayer chain letters," quite enough in number, as to place me in need of a stenographer were I to try to inffill the requirements of them all, and if I were suspicious enough to let them cause me uneasiness of mind I might be caused greater trouble; but truly, dear sisters, I think that it is very unwise for us to pay any attention to them. Just as if they had any power to cause us trouble or calamity. The prayer itself is all right, and I believe in it, but I think it will do us more good to pray, that prayer individually, to God in the privacy of our own rooms, than to spend time and expense to copy and send to others to whom it may cause a world of trouble, especially, if some might be of a suspicious nature. So please, dear sisters, when such letters come to us, let us remembe Mich.

DEAR EDITOR:

I noticed some little time ago there was a request for a cure for Dropsy; about two years ago I was quite ill with it, two doctors said that I would have to be tapped, but a lady told me a simple remedy that I believe cured me. Take black currant leaves and make an infusion, and drink it freely, if there is any trouble in getting the leaves I will be glad to send some upon request, and receipt of self-addressed stamped envelope.

Mrs. D. Wiggins, Pairdale, N. Dak.

Don't fall to promptly renew your sub-scription to COMFORT while the present low 15-cent yearly rate is in force. We may be obliged to advance at any time, but if you send 25 cents now, it will pay for and ex-tend your subscription for two years from the time of expiration.

DEAR SISTERS:

DRAR SISTERS:

I have been a reader of Comport since I was a wee girl and knew nothing but the happiness of child-hood's sunny days, and I have often thought of writing the club, but have failed to do so.

I hope you have a welcome for a Tennessee sister. I will pass along what has proven a great blessing to us inexperienced young parents. A remedy for croup. Take soft fiannel, and cut a chest protector to come down well below the lungs in the front and below the shoulder blades in the back, cut a thin lining for both, and have ready two teaspoonfuls of pure pine tar, and four of hog's lard, mixed well, apply evenly to the fiannel, sew on the lining, and put on the little body, and fasten by means of tapes under each arm. It should be stitched together on each shoulder, when this wears thin make a new one. My little one, five years of age, wears this from early fall until late spring. We have come very near losing him with croup three times, and other mothers will not wonder that we feel like passing a tried and true remedy along.

I should be pleased to receive letters, and pieces of silk, satin, or velvet, and will try to return all favors.

Mrs. A. M. Lee, Harriman, R. F. D., 2, Tenn.

favors.

MRs. A. M. Lee, Harriman, R. F. D., 2, Tenn.

DEAR COMPORT SISTERS:

I have missed but few copies of our paper in years gone by, although not always a subscriber. I have not seen anything from this part of the country. The snow lays on the ground about eighteen inches deep up here where I am today. We are over nine thousand feet above the sea level, so we have considerable snow, the first coming September 13, when it snowed for three days. My home is about twenty miles down below in the valley, about seven thousand feet above sea level. Some of the finest fruit ever grown is raised here. One man took the gold medal at the Chicago World's Fair for Baldwin apples. Peaches and pears are also fine.

Cleared land sells from one hundred and fifty dollars to one thousand dollars per acre, and uncleared can be bought for much less. We have fine soft water, and the climate is very healthy. The lack of water makes the land costly as everything has to be irrigated.

My bushand is superintendent of a large Irriga-soft water, and the climate is very healthy. The lack of water makes the land costly as everything has to be irrigated.

My husband is superintendent of a large Irrigation Company, and is obliged to stay up here all the time. I have been here most of the time. I will describe the place so the Eastern sisters may know how we get our water.

The lake lies right on the top of the divide with the water going to the west. The lake is over a mile long, and a half mile wide, and is raised by a dam over the natural height, so they can draw off ninety million gallons of water. Where the natural overflow to the west used to be they built a dam twenty-six feet high with a gate at the bottom, so they can let out the water that way if they want to. On the eastern side they cut a tunnel under the mountain twelve hundred feet to bring the water to the eastern slope. There is a head gate at the end in the lake, and a large bulkhead of logs and cement inside the tunnel about three hundred feet. There is another gate in this, it is very strong, and held the weight of the whole lake this spring as

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 10.)

THE SHADOW OF A CROSS

A Religious Quarrel and Separation

Copyright, 1907, by Mrs. Dora Nelson and F. C. Henderschott.

Serial rights controlled by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Inc.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTER.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTER.

The tall athletic figure of a young man is seen leaning against the trunk of a tree. Half aloud he soliloquizes, and wonders what is keeping them. He asks himself why a woman of Mrs. Rosslyn's Puritanic strength of character should embrace the Catholic faith. "Is it for this I am to be separated from the object of my dearest desire?" The sound of many voices chanting the Ave Maria is borne to his waiting ears. The service ends, and Theta Rosslyn meets her lover, Gene Warfield. There is an opening for him in the West in Judge Blodgett's office. He will win wealth and fame, and coming back make Theta his wife. As he pleads he sees a small chain about Theta's neck, and asks what talisman is hiding there. Pulling at the chain he finds a tiny gold crucifix; he snaps the chain and dashes the crucifix to the ground. With a cry like a wounded animal, she catches the crucifix to her breast. "God forgive me, if even for a little while I let your love words deceive me into forgetting the depth of the gulf which lies between us." Gene pleads with all the fervor of youth, but the girl dare not yield, and his pride battles with the anguish which kills the soul, though the body yet lives.

CHAPTER II.

MRS. WARFIELD-THE PARTING.

N the clear starlight Eugene Warfield went N the clear starlight Eugene Warfield went up the maple-bordered driveway which led to his home. The house stood on an elevation somewhat off the main road, and belonged in architecture to the early colonial period, modified, however, by a great porch that extended across the front, the tall white columns of which, running up to the second story gave a suggestion of the Parthenon.

non.
In the shadow of the pillared porch he found his mother waiting for him. As she heard his step she arose and held out her hands, at her heart the little flutter of delight his near presence never failed to bring there.
Gene took the toil-worn palms tenderly into his own, and bending down he kissed her sweet old face, and the soft folds of snow-white hair that framed it.

that framed it:
"You have been waiting for me, little mother?"

mother?"

"Yes, Gene, you are late tonight," then as she looked into his face, and saw there the white stricken look, it went straight to her heart, and an exclamation of pain broke from her: "Dear lad, what has happened?" For a moment they regarded each other in sorrowful silence, but in that space she guessed at the cause of his trouble. The intuitive perception of a mother is something that is half divine.

With gentle force he made her sit down on the bench, and threw himself at her feet.

"Mother," he said, the pain in his heart quivering in his voice, "will you pet me as you used to do, and let me be your little boy just for tonight?" and his head fell heavily upon her knees.

her knees.

"Is it as bad as that, laddie—is it so bad as that?" she said as her fingers softly patted and smoothed his chestnut curls, then she continued in that soothing tone one sometimes uses to a fretful child:

"Maybe it isn't so very bad after all, Gene, maybe it isn't so very bad. Do you remember, years ago, when Theta was a little girl, and you were a big boy in knickerbockers, and how you had it all planned to take her to the child's party they were going to have at Mr. Warren's house? Do you remember it? And then you came down with the measles, and because you couldn't go, your heart was broken—you felt you just couldn't stand it to lose that party. But the loss doesn't trouble you any now, does it, laddie? I think all our troubles are like that. At first they hurt us cruelly, and we feel that At first they hurt us cruelly, and we feel that we just can't stand the pain, and we don't even know they have begun to heal, because they burn and torture us so; but the wound closes over at last, and by and by not even a scar remains!"

She felt his head lean heavier, and heard a

She felt his head lean heavier, and heard a suppressed sob.

"My scar will remain with me always, mother. I shall carry it to my grave. Somehow, I feel tonight that all is lost save ambition. That is all I have left to live for—that—and you, mother." He added the last words with a little mother." He added the last words with a little feeling of shame.

"Eugene!" He felt rather than heard the pain in his mother's tone. "My boy, you break my heart when you speak so—you do indeed," she gently chided. "Ambition will never make you happy. Even though you climb the highest round, and reach the glittering bauble of success you will find it crumble to ashes in your grasp—I fear you will—I fear you will. Listen, Gene! Could I have had my way I would have you a simple farmer, satisfied to marry and settle down here on the homestead to a long and happy life. But you are determined to have your own will—you would study law—our simple life could not satisfy you. Brother John has abetted you in it, too. John has been a has abetted you in it, too. John has been a good manager since your father died, and has kept up the farm and put money in the bank, and cared for all things well, but he has spoiled you for a contented life, laddie, he has indeed, with all his foolish free thought ideas, and his permitting you to have ready access to all those books that have fed your mind with atheistic theories. And tonight, I find a bitter thought theories. And tonight, I find a bitter thought in my heart for my only brother, loving him though I do. Oh, my boy, why can't you settle down here at home? I fear that great West which is calling you. It seems to me like some monster standing ready to devour my only child. And how I fear for you, Gene—you—with your headstrong disposition and your powerful will! You were ever a willful lad—so hard to control—you pained your mother's heart many a time. Believe me, if there had been any truth in old folk lore tales, and some good fairy had presided at your birth, and had told me to make three wishes for you, and they should be granted, I wouldn't have wished wealth, nor fame, nor great power for you, laddie. No; I would have wished for you a contented mind, a simple, helpful life, and a percentil death. contented mind, a simple, helpful life, and a peaceful death. And in wishing these things I would have gained for you all the good that life has to offer. And, oh, Gene, when I hear you are going to make ambition the you say you are going to make ambition the ruling principle of your life—it just—breaks my heart—"she broke of suddenly with a low cry of anguish

Gene lifted to hers a face white and quiver-

Written in Collaboration

By Mrs. Dora Nelson and F. C. Henderschott

"Mother—little mother—are we never to understand each other? You say you would be satisfied to have me remain here always a simple farmer. Can you not understand that like a caged eagle I should beat my wings against the bars—and die. Even Lincoln himself might have continued a rail-splitter to the end of his days if he had been satisfied to remain on the farm. Satisfaction! To me the very word smacks of moral starvation—mental stagnation. If a man once reaches the point where he is satisfied, he reaches also the state of started a little, and their arms fell anart as they stagnation. If a man once reaches the point where he is satisfied, he reaches also the state of decay, and there is no further advancement for him. Mother, would you have me sit always and gape at the play being enacted on the great world's stage? Would you have me live all my life, in a dull, dead level calm, never to know either the sorrow of defeat, or the joy of victory? Much as I love you, and much as the parting from you will cost me, I cannot, must not do the things you ask of me."

She put her arms about his neck, and drew his head to her breast.

"My boy," she said tenderly, "if I felt sure the forces of your nature were always to be arrayed on the side of the right I should not mind letting you go. But can I feel sure of this?

Think for how small a price men are selling their souls! For the sordid luxuries gold will bring to feed avarice and pride; for the gratification of the appetites and passions, which indulged to satisfy soon fail to yield sensual

I need them, and I shall miss them—when I am far away. And there—don't cry—any more."
They stood for a few moments silently holding each other, neither speaking, then they started a little, and their arms fell apart as they heard behind them the sound of an opening door, and both turned to see Maggie, the stout Irish servant girl standing there holding a lamp in her hand.

Maggie had been Mrs. Warfield's faithful and efficient helper ever since her advent on New Hampshire soil fifteen years before. She was a good soul, and she was pretty, too, in her way; she had suitors and might have married, but she kept them all at a distance, and the wages she earned went regularly to bring comfort and cheer to an old mother and several younger brothers and sisters in a little sod cabin across the great water.

Maggie had a sincere respect and love for her

Maggie had a sincere respect and love for her mistress, and as for Gene, he had been at once the joy and torment of her existence from the first day she had set foot on the threshold of the homestead. "And is it you, master Gene," she called out pleasure. Yet these I do not fear. No. I feel assured my boy will never yield to the power of gold. But I fear because of your one weakness. Gene—your insatiable appetite for power. And I fear in some hour of strong temptation you will sacrifice all for sake of a short period of gratified ambition, the empty honors of this world. And the thought which is tearing my soul tonight is that your manhood may be sacrificed to fill the pockets of the greedy. Dear lad, do you know why this fear has come to me tonight? Listen! It is because you have broken with all religious traditions. You have cut away your last prop, and at some future time when you feel your moral forces tottering you will—"

"THE TIME HAS COME, MOTHER-KISS ME GOOD BY."

2 0

"Mother," he broke in impatiently, "you must not suppose that because I have broken with eld beliefs my mind is not reaching.

"Mother," he broke in impatiently, "you must not suppose that because I have broken with eld beliefs my mind is not reaching.

"Gene smiled up the light with one hand, and shook an admonitory finger at the young man with the other, "and is it you that's out there all this long while, and me keeping the meal waiting till my heart is just gray wid you? Arrah! come on in now and ate your supper."

Gene smiled. Perhaps if the truth were told he was a trifle glad of the interruption, for no man likes the sight of a woman's tears.

"You shouldn't have waited supper, Maggie. I don't wish anything tonight."

Maggie opened her blue eyes wide.

"Indade!" she exclaimed, "and that's a purty way to trate a body, ain't it? After a woman makin'a perfect slave of herself to cook the dishes ye like the best? Quit your foolin' and come in and ate your supper like a good by."

Maggie's good nature was irresistible, and Gene allowed himself to be coaxed out to the

you will—"
"Mother," he broke in impatiently, "you because I have broken must not suppose that because I have broken with the old beliefs my mind is not reaching out, striving continually to force its way through the portal of the unknown in the hope to reach something more intelligent, something which can harmonize with twentieth century progress and ideas. There is no denying the fact that as we remove much of the old creeds which have been outgrown, so we remove from the less intellectual, the less cultivated mind, much of its comfort. Yet after all, as the child grows up it must give up its belief in Santa Claus, and so, as the intellectual human being advances along the stages of life it, too, must advances along the stages of life it, too, must relinquish its early ideals in hopes to progress, and to offer the future generations something better, something more worthy, something more truthful than that which was given to the world in the first century."

As he ceased, his mother looked down at him, her eyes misty with sorrowful feeling.
"My boy, these thoughts are all new and confusing to me. I am anchored to the rock-ribbed past, but you have sailed away across an unknown sea—and my heart is breaking because I know that the width of poles lies between us."

Gene arose, and took his mother tenderly into his arms.

"We can span the distance with our love, "We can span the distance with our love, mother—surely we can do that. And there—don't cry—see—I'll kiss all the tears away."
And he did, very tenderly.
She looked up and tried to smile through her grief.
"Yes, Gene, we will span the distance with our love. And you won't mind, laddie, if your love in that hour of parting.

Gene allowed himself to be coaxed out to dining-room, where, if he did not eat with quite his accustomed relish he partook of, at least, enough to satisfy Maggie's honest Irish

At the top of the stairs he bade his mother a tender good night, and then sought his own

The pain of his so recent sorrow kept him awake a long time, and hearing his restless tossing, his mother's heart ached in sympathy, but when she went in to throw a light quilt over him—for it turned cool along toward morning—she found him sleeping, the moonlight shining on his face and giving to it the innocent trusting look it had worn in his boyhood. She laid a soft kiss on his forehead and then returned to her own room to ground the then returned to her own room to spend the Youth slumbers calmly on but only the watching stars know the lonely vigils mothers *

Gene and his mother were standing at the beginning of the maple walk where she had accompanied him to bid him farewell, for the time had come when he was to leave the old roof-tree which had sheltered him all the days of his boyhood.

"Here is my chain, Gene, and here is my watch," she said, as she placed them in his hand, "and here in the front of the case I have put my picture—the one you like with the 'kerchief about my neck—and when you see it there, dear, you'll remember your mother, won't you? And you'll remember always that she loved you, laddie, and that she wanted you to be a clean, honorable and manly man. And Gene," her voice broke into sobs, "when the time comes, as come it must, although it is now dim, afar off, but when the time comes when you must choose between honor, wealth, ambition, all the world has to offer, and doing the right, you'll choose the right, won't you? Yes, in that supreme hour of your life, when Christ offers you His cross—for believe in His divine origin or not—you'll take it, though in bearing it you lose all the world beside! And in that hour you'll remember your mother's words, and you'll do this because she loves you. And I want you to carry with you the thought, laddie, that there is not an hour of the day when your mother will forget to pray for you." Grief racked her and she could say no more.

"Mother, mother, I'm not worthy of such a patron saint as you, but I will remember your words and try to be what you would have me be, even though I cannot settle down here at home. And I shall miss you, mother—how I shall miss you—"his voice broke into strangled sobs and he left the sentence unfinished.

His uncle drew up the bays under the maple. The old man was wiping the tears from his own eyes, for he dearly loved the lad whose dead father's place he had tried for so many years to fill.

Gene's clasp tightened about his mother.

"The time has come, mother—kiss me good."

years to fill.

Gene's clasp tightened about his mother.
"The time has come, mother—kiss me good

by."
"My boy, my boy! God have you in his care!"

They kissed each other very tenderly, then he loosed her and was driven away. He looked back once and she smiled at him, and that was the last memory of his boyhood's home he carried with him—his mother with the tears running down her cheeks and the brave smile on her lips.

Yes—they smile—these mothers—while their children are watching—but after—ah!

She watched till she could see him no longer,

She watched till she could see him no longer, then her grief found full vent.

"God pity me—I didn't know it would be so hard!" her pale lips murmured.

As she stood with unrestrained passion, noiseless footsteps stole to her side, and a sweet voice murmured words of comfort in her ear.

Theta Rosslyn had been up in the hills gathering strawberries that morning, and from her vantage ground above had witnessed the tender leavetaking, and now that the mother was alone she stole to her side.

"My boy! my boy!" the mother sobbed. "How can I ever bear it to have you go away into the great wild West!"

Theta laid her hands softly on the mother's shoulders.

shoulders

shoulders.

"God will take care of him, Mrs. Warfield, be sure of that. And sometime—I feel it here in my breast, my heart would break else—sometime He will go out into the mountain and bring home His lost sheep." Tears strangled her, and she ceased to speak.

"Theta! Theta!" murmured the other chidingly, "why couldn't you have married my boy and kept him at home? You could have, if you would."

The girl turned away with a cry of anguish. "If I only could have," she said, with a passionate intake of her breath. Then she turned back and held out her arms to Mrs. Warfield, and together they wept out their grief.

CHAPTER III. JUDGE BLODGETT.

Years have passed.
The years! how swiftly they go!
In New Hampshire we count them by the growth of our children; in the West they are measured by the growth of cities.
The West! What boundless possibilities are summed up in those two words! Her rolling prairies that are the granaries of the world; her mighty rivers that are the channels through which the commerce of a continent passes; her hills, whereon the myriads of cattle graze; her hills, whereon the myriads of cattle graze; her mountains which are the source art draws upon for all the trifles in silver and filigive, which and grace to the refinement of our daily life, the gold, the lifeblood of nations.

The West! The golden West! And as yet she is but in her first awakening—a young giantess arousing lazily from a sleep of centuring. turies.

plow, which in future ages will feed unborn millions; undiscovered in her mountains lurk the riches of Golcondas. And her cities are as yet in their infancy.

Those cities of the West; how they take up their march in endless procession! Where the turbulent waters of the Missouri lave the eastern shore of Excelsior, one of those typical Western cities lay basking in the sultry rays of a September sun on the day on which we write. It was crude—that Western city—it would

It was crude—that Western city—it would have offered scant education to the æsthetic sense, yet it was wideawake, and the inhabitants of those showy turreted houses were as eager as any to catch the tone of the great outside world, with its refinements and its humanities.

It was a busy place—the mart to which all the produce of the rich farming district around it was brought. The river brought also its freightage, and great railway systems contributed to its prosperity. It was the home, or rather one of the homes, of the Harvester Trust rather one of the homes, of the Harvester Trust and several lesser industries.

Such was Excelsior, that growing city to which Warfield had come, a young and un-known lawyer, three years before.

He was no longer an unknown lawyer as that modest sign on a doorway half way down the long Court House corridor gave evidence.

EUGENE WARFIELD. PROSECUTING ATTORNEY.

It is a big bare room filled with the musty (CONTINUED ON PAGE 15.)

LEAGUE RULES :

To be kind to dumb animals.
To leve our Gountry and protest its flag.

CONDUCTED BY UNCLE CHARLIE

H there my Valentines! Look at 'em, thousands of 'em, and growing every day. Did you ever see such a bunch of beauties, and one little rosebud resting in the middle is 89 years young? Oh, I just tell you we are a swell crowd, and I'm very proud of you. I thank you for all the affection you lavish on me, and if I had a billion I would do a lot for you all, but I'm only a bald-headed old pen-pusher working for a salary. I am not the proprietor of COMFORT, though I find that erroneous impression prevails strongly amongst most of you. The proprietor of ComFORT is an hoorable, upright, dignified, truthful gentleman, with natural teeth and an automobile. I regret to say I have none of these accomplishments. Above all things I am not upright. It is a sad confession to make, but alas it is true—I'm horizontal, and not upright. The only thing in our family that was upright was the piano. We had an upright piano once, but it took sick with liver trouble and died a violent death some ten years ago. I have no natural teeth, and the store teeth I once possessed I have given away, they ate too much. Those teeth were always hungry. One night I put 'em on the floor, and in the morning I found they had eaten my rubber overshoes. That was where we parted company. I used to be dignified, but I couldn't keep it up. I have no automobile, but there is a strong affinity between gasoline buggies and myself—we both have the same sort of perfume, and we're known and loved chiefly for our scents, and not our sense. Yes, my dears, I am just a poor old ink spiller, and all of COMFORT that I own is the January issue which Billy the Goat is trying to eat. Oh, there is something I do own though, and that something I would not part with for all the money in the world, and that is the love of the readers of this department, and the members of the C. L. O. C.

Now for a few don't's. Don't expect to get your names on the letter list unless you write them with your age and address on a separate slip of paper.

Don't think that because you join the alip of paper.

Don't think that because you join the C. L. O. C., you are entitled to have your letters in print. I print the letters that I think will entertain you most, and I can only print one in every thousand I receive. I fill my space, that is all that I can do.

Don't expect your photographs back for hat is all that I can do.

Don't expect your photographs back, for they will not be returned. If you place such tremendous value on your pictures, keep them at home. I only want pictures that are sent to me to do as I please with.

Don't write and tell me your button is lost and you want another. Buttons are not given away to careless people, but will be supplied on receipt of five cents, and stamped addressed envelope to League members only.

envelope to League members only.

Don't send two cents and ask for personal replies to your letters. You must think my time is mighty cheap, when you do that, and it is a poor compliment to me. I'm paid to write in this page, but not outside of it.

Don't write one month and think your letter.

Don't write one month and think your letter

bon't write one month and think your letter will be published in the next issue. My page is in print weeks before you see it.

Don't send subscriptions to our Secretary in Brooklyn. She does not publish COMFORT. COMFORT is published in Maine.

Now for a few Do's after the Don't's.

Do write your letters in ink: when possible.

Do write your letters in ink; when possible. Pencil writing is hard on the eyes, and half of the pencilled letters are too faint to be read. If you have no ink catch a black cat, and soak her tail in water for ten minutes, and you'll get dandy black ink. If this fails buy a bottle of

Do send me in fifty thousand new League members, and remember there are autographed sets of my books of poems waiting for all those who send in seven one year subscriptions at 15 cents each. If you don't try and win these books you will miss the treat of your life. I'm modest but I can't help it. An hour's work among your friends will do the trick. Remember over the company of the life help. member, every Comfort reader gained, is a help to the cause of humanity and civilization. You are doing your friends a service when you show them an issue of Comfort, and don't show them an issue of COMFORT, and don't forget to tell them they are getting the greatest bergain in the world;—a dollar magazine for fifteen cents a year. Explain to your friends you have only to get seven subscriptions for COMFORT and you can get a copy of Uncle Charlie's poems, and you will get it, and get it quick. Go right out and do it now, don't wait and put it off or you'll forget it. Every home should have its COMFORT, and every American family should know of the good work we are doing in this League. I look to everyone of you to win this premium, and I shall be deeply you to win this premium, and I shall be deeply disappointed if you don't.

her wild-eyed cayuse, to entertain you with tales of far idaho. Here comes a breezy, dashing Western girl on

TROY, IDAHO, Nov. 24, 1906.

TROY, IDAHO, Nov. 24, 1906.

DEAR UNCLE CHARLIE:

I am five feet ten and one half inches tall, weigh one hundred and forty-five pounds, light complexion, blue eyes, and long golden hair that you read about. I was born and raised here. My taker was one of the early frontiersmen in Idaho, and many a time I have fainted dead away at the sight of the red men going into camp by a small stream near our house, but we never suffered a great loss by them. When it comes to chicken, they will steal the last one in the coop and cook and eat it before the eyes of the owner.

I can do all kinds of housework, and enjoy out-of-door's sports, the best of which is fishing, hunting, camping out, and riding horse-back, and, Uncle Charlie, you ought to see me when I am ready for the mountains. I have a heavy buckskin suit made to my order by a squaw of the Nezperce Indians. It is trimmed with beads, and has different designs worked all over with beeds. At the waist there are two pockets, or pistol scabbards, which can not be noticed only when they contain the pistols, and there is also a belt which looks like a ruffle when empty, but when in use is a cartridge belt hard to best for nestness and appearance.

My riding horse is a jet black, weighing 1,150 pounds and my brother says he is of good stock, and I guess he is for when we have races, he always comes out ahead, but I never run him hard, only when some tenderfoot comes in with a new horse that can beat anything in the country.

I have two brothers at present but I guess John will marry soon; he is working in the mines and is making money so he says, but we don't see any of the money. Enos, my other brother, is a fiddler by trade and a dancer by religion, and don't do anything much only have a good time, and tells what he is going to do.

Our house is a story and a half, rough rock building with a basement and cellar, it is thirty by twenty feet, with a porch extending half way round, which in the summer is covered with roses and all kind of flowers.

Most all fruits and garden truck grow in abundance here, but huckle and sarvis berries are the only wild fruit that grow to an excess.

Well, dear Uncle Charlie, I will not trouble you with too much this time, but if this finds its way to print I will tell of the wonderful settlement and development of this country in the last few years.

I would like to hear from some of the cousins and I will try to answer them.

Your loving niece,

Eva Shepperd (No. 9,439).

Eva, quit trying to ride that old cayuse upon my lap. You can sit there if you want to, but I don't want any bronchos on my knees, makes me unkneesy. Eva, you remind me of little Eva in Uncle Tom, because you are so different. Five feet ten and one half inches, that is quite a lot for a man to hold in his lap all at once, but I'm equal to the job. I had a letter from your cayuse this morning, and he says he would rather carry you a yard than a mile, and I believe him. He says there ought to be a law conveiling all women ever five feet ten inches I believe him. He says there ought to be a law compelling all women over five feet ten inches tall to walk, and I'm half inclined to believe there is something in that, as the monkey said when he put his hand into the hornet's neet. Anyway, Eva, you are a magnificent sight sitting astride sideways on your pony, with your golden hair floating in the breeze. I don't think a girl of your physique ought to have been afraid of a band of Indians, for I'll bet if you got good and mad you could clean up your golden hair floating in the breeze. I don't think a girl of your physique ought to have been atraid of a band of Indians, for I'll bet if you got good and mad you could clean up every Redskin that ever wore paint. I'm grieved to hear about your brothers. I think it is terrible for young men to have gone astray as they have. You say John is making money in the mines. Ah, I suppose he thought no one would see him making it if he went down into the bowels of the earth to do the job. If the Federal Authorities knew he was making money he would get ten years right away on the jump quick. It is only the U. S. Mints that are allowed to make money and anyone else caught doing it is in for ten years, if the cops get wise to their game. I suppose the reason your brother does not show you any of the money he's made is because he is afraid you would give him away, and sic the cops on to him. He's a wise gazaboo. Enos may find fiddling a good business, but dancing is not much of a religion, it is too unsteady to build much faith on, and fiddling is not a very good business either as it keeps a man scraping for a living all the time. I am sorry your house is only a story and a half. I hate half a story, for it leaves you guessing right at the most interesting part how the story is going to finish, whether she marries the gink with the glass eye, or freezes onto the guy with the club foot and the fat wad. I hope some day you will get the other half of the story of your house finished, and then you must tell us how it ends. You might buy St. Elmo, and put it on the roof, and then you'd have a complete story. Try it, dear, I won't charge anything for the advice, as you're a niece of mine. I should like to go for a ride in your garden truck. I am getting too stiff in the joints to do much horseback riding. Eva, I thank you for your letter, and if you will send me a picture of yourself attired in that buckskin suit it will go slap bang into this page where millions of American people can gaze admiringly at one of the earth's

A romantic young lady of Kansas wants our opinion of her rhymes, and she wants our honest opinion, and I've no doubt we can manage to give it to her. Ida sent several poems, but as some of your lives may not be insured, I will only spring one on you at this meeting, and this is the best of the bunch. Billy the Goat, has read two of the others, and the doctors are trying to restore him to consciousors. sciousness. They do not give much hope.

BAXTER SPRINGS, KANS., Oct. 28, 1906.

Baxter Springs, Kans., Oct. 28, 1906.

Dear Uncle Charlis:

I have been a silent though a very contented reader I must say, of Comport for some time, and thought I would write and send you a few of my compositions (that ie, poems, if I might use the word) and see if you would oblige me by printing them if they are worth it. Now, Uncle, I want you to give me your honest opinion of them. You can criticise them and pick them all to pieces if you want to.

Well, I guess I had better give a little pen picture of my "little" self. I am five feet five inches high, weigh one hundred and four pounds, am seventeen years of age, have brown hair and dark eyes and fair complexion. How's that? Well, I will cut it short with best wishes. Success to you, Uncle Oharlie. I would be glad to hear from the cousins.

IDA TRUESLOOD (No. 6,179).

The Fickle Soldier

In a country far away came a soldier bright and

To a little village nestling 'mong the hills,
Where dwelt the village belle,
The fairest one that fell, a willing captive to his iron will,
But one summer's day he left and she slewly faded
'way,
And some has heard her soltly, sadly sag.

Ожовия.

His broken vows and a broken heart, Was all he left behind, Oh, what were they, to the soldier gay; But a pleasant hour of time.

Long years have slowly passed away, since cane
the soldier gay.
Sweet Nell is laid to rest beneath the pines,
And her children gently say,
As around her grave they stray, the wind seems to echo back her sigh.

CHORUS.

The years sped on again he came and vainly tried To win her edest daughter for his own, But she spurned him from her side With a voice that trembled cried Go your way; I seem to hear my mother's moan.

CHORUS.

Ida, you have certainly composed a beautiful piece of song pottery, but my dear, you must not call these effusions poems. Common, ordinary, every-day folks, like Shakespeare, Longfellow, Whittier, Bryant, Tenuyson, Byron and all that crowd of dubbs wrote poems, but not one of them could ever write pottery, only the "Pots" of the C. L. O. C. can do that. I have looked over your effusions, Ida, and I regret to say there are a few kinks and bumps in gret to say there are a few kinks and bumps in it that want straightening out. In the first verse you have six lines, in all the rest four. I don't know if you intended that or just did not notice it. Of course it don't matter much, that is, I mean no one is liable to lose any sleep over it—but Toby thought he would like to set over it—but Toby thought he would like to set this to music, and he got worried about there being two too many lines in the first verse, but I told him he could cut those two lines out, and hang the wash on them—so that is all right. Your second line does not rhyme with your fourth. It gets near it, but if I am to send you a check from Toby's pants we must have it correct, my dear. Now suppose for your second and third lines you substitute this, and see how much better it sounds: see how much better it sounds:

Where dwelt the village belle, who wasn't feeling

P. S. She was taking castor oil and liver pills. Now that rhymes, while iron will does not rhyme, and what's more, I don't see why he had his will written on iron. Paper is the conventional thing for one's last will and testament. This soldier was a foxy guy. He showed the girl this iron will, and I'll bet you he islied her into thinking he'd made it out showed the girl this iron will, and I'll bet you he jollied her into thinking he'd made it out in her favor, and was going to leave her a wad as big as a cow barn. I'll bet he sprung this gag on a bunch of easy marks before he'd struck this poor gink, then when the girls thought he was going to marry them and die, and they almost felt they had their hooks on that iron will, he handed them a lemon, and hit the pike for the next burg. Well, it is the girl's own fault, they should not let these fresh guys in pants pass it to them so easy. They should cut out his heart and see if it's a real heart and not a lemon, and they should chlorogirl's own fault, they should not let these fresh guys in pants pass it to them so easy. They should cut out his heart and see if it's a real heart and not a lemon, and they should chloroform him some night when he comes to rub noses with the flower of the flock, and see whether the wad he carries in his breast pocket is the real stuff, or only a one spot wrapped around a bunch of fake green goods. Well, Ida, you say your heroine slowly "faded way." You wanted to say away, I suppose, but changed your mind. My dear, you can fade away (all song writers ought to do that) but you can't fade "way." You try it and see. Then you say someone heard her "soltly say." I've looked through thirteen dictionaries and I fail to find soltly. Maybe you mean saltly. Perhaps she got fresh and the soldier boy salted her down, but Toby thinks that maybe she shed so many briny tears that she talked salt. All the song heroines cry and die, they are the most mournful, mourtuary, weeping goops, that ever diagraced humanity. If ever I meet one of these weeping, melancholic misanthropes, instead of falling in love with her, I'd bat her over the nut and tell her to go and chase herself. But to continue with the song. Ida I don't think your chorus will everenthuse the singing public. You rhyme "behind" with "time." That may do in Texas, but won't go in New York, and if that soldier left a broken heart behind and ran around without one, he is the medal taker, for no man ever did it yet, and lived. Oh, it was the girl's heart he left broken behind was it? Well, I don't believe that story either, for in the next spasm, this frail, broken-hearted, fade-away heroine, is the mother of a bunch of healthy brats, that you couldn't count with an adding machine. Now where, oh where did this progeny come from? Evidently your broken-hearted heroine consoled herself with another lover, though you do not mention who he was or where he came from, or what he did for a living. Your heroine's name is Nell, ah, Ida, all song heroines are Nells, because Nell rh caned, well he deserved to be caned for he was a bad lot anyway. In the third spasm you have the gay soldier boy come back and make love to his old sweetheart's "edeat" daughter. Well, of all the diabolical villains I ever heard tell of, he's the knock out. Why didn't the "edest" daughter get her Pon to come and "edest" daughter get her rop wo come knock his eye out, the sassy brazen piece, he hammered into a jell. No ought to have been hammered into a jell. No wonder the poor Mommer started to moan in her grave. I suppose if you'd have had a fourth her grave. I suppose if you'd have had a fourth spasm, you'd have had the gay soldier boy coming back, and eloping with Nell's grand-daughter. Ida, you have a great imagination, but my dear, this old story of man's baseness, and woman's credulity has been done a million times, and it has been done in good rhyme, rhythm, and meter, and they are something you have only the crudest ideas about. Amateur song-writing is all right for a fireside amusement, but when hundreds of thousands of people take it up with the idea that they can quickly get rich at it—and have wild ideas that the world is longing to hear their effusions, then it becomes a disease, and wild ideas that the world is longing to hear their effusions, then it becomes a disease, and at times almost a tragedy, for often the last red cent in the family purse is taken to have these crude and rhymeless rhymes set to music and published. Then people, otherwise sane, neglect their daily work, and live in a golden castle, where they see millions floating for song royalties, while as a matter of fact not one cent in all the world's history was ever paid in royalties on these brain phantasies, for they never reach the public market, and no one would buy them if they did, and the man who tried to sell or sing them would be who tried to sell or sing them would be who tried to sell or sing them would be slaughtered. I've tried to point out the weak is spots in your lyric, but don't think your work is interior to the work of the average amateur song writer, for it isn't; as a matter of fact you can see away ahead of most of them, so you can pottery is that reaches me. It's the only thing Billy the Goat won't eat, and yet the writers think the public will swallow it and pay for it. How foolish!

A little married cousin from way up in Maine, just where it gets ready to butt into New Brunswick, Canada, wants to join in the New Brunswick, Canada, wants to join in the chip music.

Ashland, Argostock Co., Maine, Nov. 23, 1906.

Dear Uncle Charlie:

Please brush a few of those fat consins off your lap and give me room for a few minutes.

Would you like to hear something of this great potato country? In this country, many of the farmers are buying eggs, butter, oats, meat and vexetables. They will also buy turkeys or other fowls for Thanksgiving. Most of them keep only one cow, no sheep, very few pigs, and a barn filled full of horses. They seldom raise beans, wheat or buckwheat. The staple crops are potatoes and children. Mind, I am not writing of the State, only of the county which is well known as the "Garden of Maine." In this garden, the potatoes are the vegetables, and the children are the flowers. Here where I live sixty miles north of Houlton, there are carried on big lumbering operations, from sixty to seventy million feet of lumber being cut each winter. There is a large sawmill here owned by the Ashland Lumber Co. Our meat don't cost us much and it is of the best. It is running wild in the woods and fields everywhere—all we have to do is to shoot it. My man brought home a fine buck deer the other day. Besides having the two hundred pounds of nice meat for our own use, he has the head with beautiful antlers, that will sell for several dollars. Open time on game here lasts till the 1st of January. We are allowed one bull moose, and two deer of either sex, from the 18th of October until close time. The farmers are allowed to kill deer in the summer if they are found destroying their crops, but every one he kills then, counts against the number to his credit in the open time. I don't think there are many farmers that go meat hungry out of respect for the law. Wild ducks and geese are plentiful on the rivers. Help is scarce, and a combon obover your poems, it is worth its weight in board.

Uncle Charlie, I wish to thank you for that handsome book of your poems, it is worth its weight in gold and many times over the price I paid for it. It is a sure cure for the blues. There now, I must bid you all good by, for I have a long cold walk ahead of me, and I must go. Your affectionate niece or cousin.

MRS. M. DELILAH YOUNG.

Thanks Mrs. Young I am clayers tickled to Thanks, Mrs. Young, I am always tickled to death to have young matrons butt into our magic circle. When the young girl cousins come to sit in Uncle Charlie's lap—they usually approach timidly as maidens should, but when the married cousins come, they come in a way that proves they have never sounted on any approach timinly as mainers should, but when the married cousins come, they come in a way that proves they have never squatted on anything but a male lap in all their life. Well, it is good squatting, and beats a Morris chair to fits, if your hubby is the real goods, and knows how to appreciate a good thing. I've kinder neglected Maine, and I'll try and make amends by doing the square thing by Mrs. Young. Funny, but the name of Young recalls some rather painful memories. I put up fifty dollars some years ago with a matrimonial agency, and the man who ran it guaranteed to put me next to a young lady with a pile of chips that would make the U. S. Treasury look like a kid's savings bank. After a deal of corresponding and a pile of postponements, it was arranged that I was to meet the rich young lady in the office of the marriage bureau. With my heart in my mouth, and my shoes in my feet, I stepped into the reception-room of the bride bureau, and the guy who ran the joint, and bureau, and the guy who ran the joint, and had my fifty salted in a burglar proof safe, introduced me to a lady that I will swear had lost had my fifty salted in a burglar proof sate, introduced me to a lady that I will swear had lost all her teeth before Adam and Eve got chased out of the Garden of Eden. "Where did you dig it up?" said I, "and is that what you call a young lady?" "This is a young lady." said the manager, "she was born Young, and she'll be Young if she lives to be a million years old, for her name is Miss Young." "Well," said I, "she misses being young by one million years." Then I brought suit to recover my fifty dollars, in fact I brought several suits, a whole wardrobe in fact, but I got it where the boy got the boil, right in the neck. Mrs. Young, you are young by name as well as by nature, so this yarn does not reflect on you. I am greatly interested in what you tell us about business developments and agricultural products in your section. I am glad you can raise potatoea, children, and other vegetables of that kind. I never eat venison, much as I would like to, for I am too poor to afford it. No matter how low the price goes it is always deer meat. Cousins, write to Mrs. Young—it is pretty lonely way in the woods, and she will appreciate your cheery letters.

A little hoosier girl wants to say howdy.

A little hoosier girl wants to say howdy. REMINGTON, JASPER Co., INDIANA, Dec. 22, 1906. BAR UNCLE CHARLIE:

DEAR UNCLE CHARLIE:

I have received my membership card and button. I think they are fine. Thank you, Uncle. I will tell you about myself. I am a girl fifteen years old, gray eyes and dark hair, light complexion. I weigh one hundred and seven pounds. I am five feet one inch in height. I have not been able to go much to school, as in our family there has been so much sickness, but we will not look on the dark side of things. Uncle, I milk and harness the horse, and hitch up and do all kinds of housework. I do all kind of work. I can play a French harp, and guitar. I like music of all kinds. Uncle, I hope you will excuse a poor scholar. Everything that is on this earth was put here by God our Father, for us to use, and we must be good to them all. I love my country and its flag. I like to wash and iron all our clothes, and they look like they had come from the laundry.

Your loving niece.

Miss Arransas Bigman.

I am sorry, dear, that sickness has kept you out of school, and on those conditions I will readily excuse the little slips I have found in your letter. What I cannot excuse is the fearyour letter. What I cannot excuse is the fear-ful onslaught on our mother tongue, by those who have been going to school for years, but your case is different, dear, and anyway, I have found very few errors in your letter. I would like to see you hitching up the horse, Arkie, dear, but for the land's sake, child, you don't mean to tell me that you actually milk—but there, you say you do—but I won't, positively will not believe it. You've got the cow and horse mixed. Milk the one and hitch up the other, but for Heaven's sake don't get muddled and reverse it. You are quite right, dear, never to look on the dark side of things. I looked on the dark side of things once and it will be to look on the dark side of things. I looked on the dark side of things once, and it will be the last time. I got corresponding with a young lady in Alabama, her name was Hyacinth Johnson. Our letters took on a very affectionate tone, as letters always do when passing between susceptible people. In course of time Hyacinth said she was coming North, and I went to Pensadelphia in the State of Phillapania to meet her. We were to meet at the depot, and I was to wear a shirt, collar, and shoes, so she could distinguish me from the ordinary mob of Quakers, who dream their lives away in Scrappletown on the Smelltiti lives away in Scrappletown on the Smellkili River. Hyacinth was to wear a skirt and a picture hat, and an expressive smile, and a mole on her teeth, so that I could know it was Hyacinth and not the other girl. It was agreed

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 9.)

JERRY, THE BACKWOODS BOY

Copyright, 1904, by The Mershon Company.

All rights reserved.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Jerry Blue, a boy fourteen years old, lives with Squire Parkhurst. Going in search of a lost cow he finds hoof prints. He hears an odd sound, and "Stop, Nero! Stop, I tell you!" Suddenly a horse bursts into view. From one stirrup drags the form of a horseman. Jerry stops the horse, saving the man from death. Henry Maxwell questions Jerry as to his parents and his home. He is Squire Parkhurst's bound boy and was taken by him out of the poorhouse in New York City. Jerry does not know how long he was there. A man named Cass takes him away for two years; he is killed and Jerry goes back. Henry Maxwell gives him gold for his bravery. When Jerry is his own master he will try to clear up the mystery of his identity. When Mr. Maxwell goes back to New York he will look into the matter for him. Jerry offers the money back; the man refuses to take it and rides off. Jerry finds the cow, and he wonders about himself. He will find out some day, but he does not dream of the odd things to happen before the secret of his identity is revealed.

A few miles to the south of where Jerry meets Henry Maxwell, night and darkness overtake Dick Clarke, who meets Indian John, and asks him to guide him to a place of shelter. He tempts the man with money, and the Indian, reticent by nature, and Dick Clarke, occupied with thoughts of his own, travel in silence. They arrive at Hill's Tavern. The landlord is about to close for the seeks. The landlord is about to close for the seeks. The landlord is about to close for his sea, he will be guided by circumstances, and he inquires about the chief settlers. There is Isaac Davenport, an officer in the war, Henry, the Major's only son, a graduate of Harvard, Squire Parkhurst, and his daughter Mabel. The landlord often sees Henry Davenport and Mabel Parkhurst, her young mistress. Jerry Blue, the bound boy, annoys Mehitable. If Hetty were Miss Mabel she would make him study six instead of two hours.

Jerry Blue takes a gun, the bullet of which lodges in his hat. Jerry

CHAPTER VII.

THE HIDDEN TREASURE.

HEN you left the city a few years ago," commenced the lawyer, "you sold a large part of your furniture at auction."

"All, except the little that you see in this room, with a few other articles," answered Joseph Parkhurst.
"So I understand. Among those who were "So I understand. Among those who were attracted to the auction by curiosity or the desire of making purchases was myself. I was not tempted to purchase until a desk of an antique pattern was put up by the auctioneer. Finding it going at a low figure, and having need of an article of the kind, I ventured to bid upon it, and it was knocked down to me."

"Then you were the purchaser?" said Mr. Parkhurst, looking up suddenly.

"I was," returned the lawyer, a little surprised.

"It was one of the few articles," explained prised.

"It was one of the few articles," explained Mr. Parkhurst, "which I had intended to reserve, but owing to some misunderstanding between the auctioneer and myself my direction was not followed. If either my daughter or myself had been present we should have forbidden the sale, but, for reasons which you will readily guess, the thought of being present was a painful one, and we were both out of the city. When I returned the next day I desired to obtain it even at a large advance, but found to obtain it even at a large advance, but found that the auctioneer retained no recollection either of the name or person of the purchaser, and entry had been made only of the amount for which it sold. If you would be willing to sell it at any reasonable valuation, I should be glad to purchase it."

"I will set no valuation upon it, Mr. Parkhurst, but without consideration of any kind will with pleasure forward it to you when I return to New York, if indeed I am not favored with your company thither."

with your company thither."
"I acknowledge your courtesy," said Mr.
Parkhurst, "but I should prefer at least to pay you the sum you gave for it."
"That was so triffing that the use of the desk

"That was so trifting that the use of the desk has already reimbursed me."

"Then, sir," said Mr. Parkhurst, "it only romains for me to accept your obliging proposal. But you will pardon my interruption, and proceed with your narrative."

"For a considerable time," resumed the lawyer, "I made use of the desk without feeling any especial curiosity about it. But one day curiosity led me to examine with more particularity the numerous little drawers and compartments that it contained, and while thus engaged my finger chanced to press a secret spring which at once revealed the presence of a drawer whose existence I had not before suspected."

"Indeed, this is news to me," said Mr. Park-

"Indeed, this is news to me," said Mr. Parkhurst with surprise.

"Then your father never communicated to you that the desk contained such a drawer?"

"Never."

"I need scarcely have asked the question, however, as otherwise you would have made the discovery it was reserved for me to stumble

'A discovery!" "Yes, and one of importance, as you will ad-

u. "Its nature?" questioned Mr. Parkhurst, fixing his eyes eagerly upon the lawyer.

The drawer, which was a small one, contained a closely written paper in which your father went on to say that in the troubled state of the period-you know at his death the revoluBy Horatio Alger, Jr.

'You are no doubt correct."

"However, it has not been allowed to remain a secret. I suppose the place of concealment was mentioned."

"It was," answered the lawyer briefly.
Mr. Parkhurst looked expectant, awaiting the revelation. But the lawyer was not inclined

A little surprised, he said after a pause, "And this place?"

"My dear sir," said the lawyer, "I may as well be frank with you. I consider this document as a sort of treasure-trove, to which the finder is not without claim."
"Would you lay claim to my inheritance?"
exclaimed Mr. Parkhurst with indignation.

"Pardon my bungling mode of expression," said Clarke. "You have misunderstood me, but it is my fault. I mean that it is only to be expected that I should expect to reap a little advantage from this windfall of fortune."

"In other words you think you ought to receive some reward for your agency in the matter?"

"You have expressed my meaning, Mr. Parkhurst. You know, sir, we professional men are apt to regard such things from a professional point of view, and, however, it may be with others, I do not pretend to be above the weaknesses of bumanity."

"(I) that sir have no disposition to com-

"Of that, sir, I have no disposition to com-plain. I trust I am too much of a gentleman to be guilty of the meanness of leaving you without compensation for so essential a service as this."

"Thank you, sir. I felt sure that such would be your sentiments."
"The only thing that remains, then, is to fix the amount of that compensation. Would you regard two thousand dollars as sufficient?"
The lawyer cast down his eyes, and was silent lent.

"I see that you do not so consider it," pursued Joseph Parkhurst. "Although I do not absolutely promise to accede to your proposal, yet I should wish you to be satisfied. Will you therefore have the goodness to name the compensation which you yourself would consider sufficient?"

Again the lawyer hesitated, as if in doubt.

sufficient?"
Again the lawyer hesitated, as if in doubt.
"The compensation which I desire," he said at length, "is perhaps of a different nature from that which you anticipate."
He paused again, and Mr. Parkhurst, though surprised, signed him to go on.
"You have a daughter, Squire Parkhurst?"
"Assuredly, though what she can have to do with this business is more than I can understand."

stand."

"I remember your daughter as she appeared in the city. I used to meet her every day on her way to school. She is very beautiful."
"I think, Mr.—ahem, Mr. Clarke—that it is a business matter we are discussing," said Mr.

Parkhurst stiffly.

"Very true, sir. I have by no means lost sight of that. As you are evidently impatient for me to come to a conclusion, I will state as explicitly as it is in my power that the only reward I seek is the hand of your daughter in marriage."

ward I seek is the hand of your daughter in marriage."

"Sir!" exclaimed Mr. Parkhurst, rising in indignant surprise, and looking down upon the attorney, with infinite astonishment blended with scorn. "Do I hear aright! Is it the hand of my daughter that—that—"

"That I seek in marriage," suggested the lawyer coolly. "You are quite correct."

"Who are you, sir? What is your pedigree, that you should have the presumption to make such a proposal?"

that you should have the presumption to make such a proposal?"

"As for my pedigree, I take it that it corresponds with yours when you get far enough up. We are both, I believe, descended from Adam, or, if you want to come nearer, I think it probable that Noah is our common ancestor."

"Do you mean to insult me, sir?" said Mr. Parkburst hotly.

"Do you mean to insult me, sir?" said Mr. Parkhurst hotly.
"It certainly would not be very decorous to insult a man whom I have invited to become my father-in-law."
"Probably this is a jest. I regret that it should prove such a sorry one. I am willing to forget it, and will now ask you again to fix upon some components in which records."

upon some compensation which you would be pleased to consider adequate."

"Squire Parkhurst," returned his visitor firmly, "I am not in the habit of jesting, and I am in the habit of saying what I mean. I repeat, then, that I am willing to put you in possession of this sum of fifty thousand dollars —a sum that will enable you to return to the city and resume your former style of living on this condition alone, that you give me the hand of your daughter in marriage? of your daughter in marriage."

Joseph Parkhurst paced the room in no little

Joseph Parkhurst paced the room in no little agitation. He was of what is conventionally designated as a high family, and his pride and prejudices revolted against the proposed union of his daughter with an obscure lawyer of no lineage. It is to be feared that this consideration weighed with him far more seriously than the thought of incompatibility in important respects by which his daughter's happiness would be likely to be imperiled. Like many of that day he considered love to be but a second that day he considered love to be but a secondary matter in a marriage contract, and con-siderations of family and fortune of paramount

The lawyer watched him narrowly as he paced the room, and easily penetrated the nature of the struggle through which he was passing. At the same time he thought he perceived that Mr. Parkhurst was a selfish as well as a proud man, and it was on this that he counted for the ultimate consent which he full restants. ultimate consent which he fully expected to gain.

"I know what the old fellow is thinking of me," passed through his mind. "He no doubt regards me as a mere nobody—as a vulgar adventurer perhaps—and considers it probably as a piece of the most flagrant presumption on my part to aspire to the hand of his daughter. The pride of these old aristocrats is perfectly measureless. Strip them of everything—elect tionar struggle was not decided—I say in con, measureless. Strip them of everything else, wait till he has that he will do it sooner or later."

By this time Joseph Parkhurst had made up his mind to another appeal.

"I think," he said, addressing the lawyer, "I understand your motive in proposing my daughter's hand as the condition of revealing the information of which you have come into clandestine possession."

"Allow me to correct your phraseolog: "At loan Cases or the poorhouse, or said the lawyer mild!"

"Allow me to correct your phraseolog: "At loan Cases or the poorhouse, or said the lawyer mild!"

"Allow me to correct your phraseolog: "At loan Cases or the poorhouse, or somewhere. I wish I knew for certain." sideration of the unsettled state of politics he had decided as a measure of proper precaution to conceal in a secure hiding-place one half of his property, which he had with that design converted into gold."

"Indeed," said Mr. Parkhurst with an air of surprise. "I had not suspected it. It was in relation to this, no doubt, that my father desired to speak to me when he was so suddenly seized."

"You are no doubt correct."

and that remains. Well, I can wait till he has made up his mind in my favor. I have no doubt that he will do it sooner or later."

By this time Joseph Parkhurst had made up his mind to another appeal.

"I think," he said, addressing the lawyer, "I understand your motive in proposing my daughter's hand as the condition of revealing the information of which you have come into clandestine possession."

"Allow me to correct your phrescology sir."

clandestine possession."

"Allow me to correct your phraseology, sir," said the lawyer mildly. "The word clandestine conveys a suspicion of my honor to which, as a matter of course, I object. Suppose you substitute the word 'accidental' as more befitting the actual circumstances."

"Very well, sir," said Mr. Parkhurst, biting his lips. "I repeat, then, that I think I comprehend the motive which prompts you to make application for my daughter's hand. You think thus to extort from me—"

"Extort!"

"Obtain, then, from me a larger sum for the

"Extort!"
"Obtain, then, from me a larger sum for the information of which you have come into accidental possession."
"My dear sir, you greatly underrate your daughter's attractions, if you think that I have introduced her in this way."
Not heading this disclaimer. Mr. Parkhurst

Introduced her in this way."
Not heeding this disclaimer, Mr. Parkhurst proceeded: "This being the case, I yet feel that I am to a certain extent in your power. You have, honorably or otherwise, I will not say which, obtained a hold upon me. If you choose to demand an extravagant price for your information, I am compelled to submit to your terms." your terms."
"You do accept my terms!" exclaimed the lawyer eagerly.

"You are too fast, sir," said Mr. Parkhurst coldly. "I so far yield to your demands that I coldly. "Iso far yield to your demands that I will agree to give you the marriage portion which I should design to bestow with my daughter, this being, as I conceive, what you really are aiming at. That portion will be ten thousand dollars, or one fifth of the property of which I expect to come into possession." "I regard the marriage portion as liberal, Mr. Parkhurst," was the lawyer's reply, "but in one point I grieve to disappoint you. I should of course expect to receive a marriage portion with your daughter, but I must insist portion with your daughter, but I must insist on her going with it."

Joseph Parkhurst drew back haughtily.

Joseph Parkhurst drew back haughtily. "Sir," he said, "I regret to find you so persistent in refusing what I regard as an unusually favorable offer on my part. You must be aware that in respect of birth and station my daughter is no suitable match for you."

"I frankly admit it," was the unexpected reply, "and perhaps it is for this reason that I feel a strong desire to mate myself with one who possesses what I lack. I desire to elevate myself by marriage, and circumstances have pointed to your daughter as the one to whom I can with the most propriety look as a member of such a partnership. Her uncommon personal attractions of course recommend her further, and therefore I shall continue to insist upon this point."

"And if I break off the negotiations peremptorily, and forever?" demanded Mr. Parkhurst. "You will then have gained nothing

"Pardon me," said the lawyer coolly. "You appear to forget one very important circum-

"And what is that?"

"I know where the money is concealed!"

"Good Heavens! You would not possess yourself of it to the exclusion of the true owner?"

owner?"
"I certainly would. Indeed I take credit to myself for not having so done without speaking to you on the subject at all. You must allow that you at least would never have been the wiser, nor have had the slightest suspicion that you had met with a loss."

Mr. Parkhurst groaned and covered his face with his hands, as he realized the truth of these words and the extent to which he was in the words and the extent to which he was in the power of the man before him. "However," pursued Dick Clarke coolly, "I did not do as I have said I might, for more than did not do as I have said I might, for more than one reason, perhaps, but certainly not least becaused I hoped to become your son-in-law, and I have the good taste to value youth and beauty above the mere dross of gold, which, however, is a very good thing in its way. But, sir, I see that in an event of this importance you are naturally unable to decide at a moment's notice. I will therefore retire for the present and take another opportunity of calling upon you. In the mean time I shall take up my residence at Hill's Tavern, where you can readily hear of me, if you should desire to confer further on this important subject. I have the pleasure of wishing you a good morning."

"Good morning, sir," was the stiff reply, and a moment later Dick Clarke was out of the house, leaving Joseph Parkhurst a prey to conflicting emotions.

"Hi think hell come around in time" the stopping at the tavern."

"No, I haven't met any strangers lately.

Some triend of Squire Parkhurst?"

There was a pause, and then the two separated, Jerry to fish in a hole that was a favorite spot with him, and Henry Davenport to go on a hunt for Mabel.

If there was one thing Jerry could do well, it was to fish, and ere long he had a mess of sixteen finny beauties to his credit.

"There, I don't know if he is a friend or not. He spent a couple of hours with the squire."

There was a pause, and then the two separated, Jerry to fish in a hole that was a favorite spot with him, and Henry Davenport to go on a hunt for Mabel.

"There, I don't kinow if he is a friend or not. He spent with the squire."

"There was one thing Jerry could do well, it was to fish, and ere long he had a mess of sixteen finny beauties to his credit.

"There, I don't kinow if he is a friend or not. He spent with the squire."

"There was a pause, and then the two separated, jerry to fish in a hole that was a favorite spot with him, and Henry Davenport to go on the had a mess of six-dence at hill's Tavern, where you can readily hear of me is a friend or not. He spent with the squ flicting emotions.

either give up his daughter or lose it, he'll give in."

Although Dick Clarke did not know it, two persons watched his departure with interest. These were Mehitable, who gazed forth eagerly from a kitchen window, and Jerry, who was lurking behind one of the tell rose bushes. "I left him getting ready to fish. I don't Through Dick Charge did not know it, two persons watched his departure with interest. These were Mehitable, who gazed forth eagerly from a kitchen window, and Jerry, who was lurking behind one of the tall rose bushes.

"A handsome man," thought Hitty. "If only he had stopped around for a drink of water at something. It dikes talk to him.

water or something. I'd like to talk to him. I don't think he's married." Jerry's opinion was not so favorable. From the start he noticed the crafty look on Dick Clarke's face.

"That fellow is a sharper if ever there was "That fellow is a sharper if ever there was one," thought the boy. "I don't believe he is up to much good. What brought him away out here, anyway?"

"Jerry!" called the spinster.
"What do you want now?" asked the boy, coming around to the kitchen door.
"Did you see the gentleman go?"
"Yes."

"Would you marry him, Hitty?"
"What questions you ask! Go and get me a pall of water this minute." 'But would you?'

"Time enough to answer that question when he asks me to."
"Was the squire glad to see him?"

"I don't know. I don't play the eavesdropper, Jerry Blue. Now go and get the water, or you'll get no dinner."

And then Jerry went, for his appetite was good and he could not bear to think of miss-

All through the dinner hour Jerry failed to get Dick Clarke out of his mind.

He ate with Mehitable, so he saw little or nothing of Mr. Parkhurst or Mabel.

"Hitty, did you ever see that gentleman be-fore?" he asked during the meal. "Never. Why do you ask?" returned the spinster.

"It's in my mind that I have seen him some-were—but where I can't imagine."

"He has never been to this place. Perhaps you met him at Hill's Tavern."

"No, I think he's a stranger in these parts."

"Then you think you saw him before you left New York?"
"I ain't sure of it; but his face looks familiar."

"He had a long and earnest talk with the squire, and once they spoke so loud I thought they were quarreling. But what it was about I don't know," went on the spinster, after a pause. 'Perhaps he come for money.

"If he did, I guess he went away disappointed. The squire is hard pushed and has none to spare. The crops weren't half as good last season as he expected them to be."

"It's queer the squire came away out here."

"He was too proud to stay in the city after he lost the most of his money."
"Then he used to be rich?"

"Yes, and his father before him."
"Wish I was rich," continued Jerry, with a

"Yes, and his father before him."

"Wish I was rich," continued Jerry, with a sigh.

"Perhaps you will be some day, Jerry. How would you like to find out that you are the missing son of a millionaire?"

"That would suit me to death."

"I think it's awful to be roaming around this world not knowing who you be," went on the spinster, regardless of how she might hurt Jerry's feelings by the remark.

"I think so myself. But what am I to do?"

"Do? Don't ask me. If the squire and Miss Mabel couldn't find out anything about you, it would be pretty hard for anybody to do it."

"I believe you. But I am going to find out some day, and don't you forget it."

For two hours after dinner Jerry worked in the garden and hoed the corn patch, and then slipped away to do a little fishing at the upper end of the pond near the house.

As he walked along the edge of the pond he saw a handsome-looking young man coming toward him. This was Henry Davenport, and a great admirer of Mabel Parkhurst.

"Hullo, Jerry!" called out the young man pleasantly. "Where are you bound?"

"Fishing," answered Jerry with a grin.

"Good enough. I trust you get a good haul."

"Bo do I, Mr. Davenport. Don't you want to go along?"

"I can't spare the time, Jerry. Is Miss Mabel at home?"

"She was at home half an hour ago. But I think she went out for a walk."

"In which direction?"

think she went out for a walk."
"In which direction?"
"Off that way," and Jerry jerked his thumb in the direction.

"All right, I reckon I can find her."

Henry Davenport started to go on, but Jerry stopped him.

"Excuse me, Mr. Davenport, but have you been to Hill's Tavern lately?" he questioned.

"No, Jerry, not for the past ten days or two weeks."

weeks."
"Oh, all right then."
"Why do you ask?"
"I was wondering if you had met the gentleman who called on the squire today. I think he is stopping at the tavern."
"No, I haven't met any strangers lately. Some friend of Squire Parkburst?"
"I don't know if he is a friend or not. He spent a couple of hours with the squire."
There was a pause, and then the two separated, Jerry to fish in a hole that was a favorite spot with him, and Henry Davenport to go on

In the mean time Henry Davenport hunted. "I think he'll come around in time," the at first in vain, for Mabel Parkhurst. But at crafty lawyer told himself. "He won't want last he found her not far from the wilderness to lose that money, and when he sees he must home. She had just picked a wild rose when "I left him getting ready to fish. I don't if know where he is now," answered Henry of Davenport. He was very much smitten with the beautiful girl, and presently he begged her to make him a gift of the wild rose she had plucked, and which she now held just out of his reach.

She shook her head playfully.
"But why won't you give it to me, Mabel?"

"But why won't you give it to me, Madeir" pleaded the young man.
"Why won't I, sir? Because you are altogether too acquisitive. Why should you deprive me of my poor little rose when there are so many others on the bushes close by?"
"But they are not the same to me, Mahel."
The lively girl pretended to misunderstand.

The lively girl pretended to misunderstand him, while his persistence really pleased her.
"You mean that I have helped myself to the best one. For shame, Henry, to accuse me of such selfishness."

"Well, Mabel, I will make you a proposal."
"Hadn't you better make it to Mehitable?"

said Mabel slyly.

"Pshaw! I was going to say that I would

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 14.)

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 7.)

if we liked each other, we were to go to the minister and get divorced at once. The train minister and get divorced at once. The train arrived, and my heart throbbed so wildly with blissful expectation, that I had to take my teeth out of my face, and hold them in my hand. The passengers alighted, I watched 'em alight. Did you ever watch passengers alight? It is terrible to watch them alight, for it is only by a miracle they don't have to alight? It is terrible to watch them alight, for it is only by a miracle they don't burn to death. It was arranged that Hyacinth should wear a sunflower pinned in the middle of her back, so I'd know her if her face was turned to me. I saw the sunflower and rushed up to the wearer and said "Hyacinth, darling!" and then Hyacinth turned her head, and I shall never forget that face—it was as black as soot and fourteen times blacker than ink. It was a warm day, and the perspiration that dropped from Hyacinth's brow was the color of stove polish. "Man, dat you?" was all she said, and made a dive for me. I dodged and ran, Hyacinth hot on my trail, and I'm still running—I shall run if I live to be a million years old, for if I stopped—well, I'd be looking on the dark side of things, and that's no lie either. Arkie, dear, don't you ever look on the dark side of things. I did it once, but never again. It was a narrow escape.

Here's a brave little girl who needs a whole

Here's a brave little girl who needs a whole lot of love and sympathy.

It is the first letter I've written to you. I have only been a League member but a short time.

I am a young, unfortunate girl. I left school about two years ago, and did housework. Then I left housework to work in a laundry. Six months ago an accident happened to me. I caught my hand in a mangle. My hand was in the machine four minutes, and there was about eighty pounds of steam on at the time the accident happened.

Most everyone says I had great courage for so young a girl. They took me to the hospital. When the doctor saw my hand, he thought it would have to come off. My hand wasn't cut off until two weeks afterward, and then was cut off two inches above the wrist bone. I have been home from the hospital two weeks and am feeling fine.

It is kind of bad for me, because it is my right hand that is lost. You will have to excuse my writing, as I cannot get used to my left hand yet.

I will close now and send my love to you and the cousins.

Your niece,

Laura, you are a brave, heroic girl. Not a

Laura, you are a brave, heroic girl. Not a whimper, whine or complaint in your letter, and yet you've lost your bread-winning hand, which is equal to your two legs when it comes down to hustling for a living, as most of our work falls on that hand. Don't lose heart, dear. It is not necessary to tell you that, as you are all heart, and a stout heart is yours all right. You are pretty heavily handicapped, but you will soon find that that left hand will accomplish double what it once did, and acquire a dexterity and skill, that will surprise you. With a mechanical hand you will be able to do nearly as much around the house as the to do nearly as much around the house as the ordinary two-handed girl does. I've got a friend of mine on the stage, a very clever actor, and he has only one arm, but he does so well with the artificial one, no one ever suspects that he has not two good arms. He visited me twice before I knew of his accident, and then he had to tell me. Of course, no artificial hand will ever do the work of the old one, and you have indeed a cross to bear, but don't be disheartened, for I've no doubt there are plenty of good fellows in the world who will be willing to give you their arms to shelter, aid, and protect you, and will cheerfully do the little things you cannot do, and your very affliction will doubtless be the means of bringing a world of love and sympathy to you that you would to do nearly as much around the house as the love and sympathy to you that you would otherwise have missed. Be assured of our love and sympathy, and just how deep that is you will know, as soon as these lines are in Here is a little lady from Kansas knocking for admission.

McCune, Kans., Nov. 9, 1906. DEAR COUSINS:

DEAR COUSINS:

As I am a little thirteen years old, and I am a reader of Comport, which I enjoy very much, I would like for some reader of the Comport to send me the words of, "Brave Custard's last charge," and "Please Mr. Conductor." And if this don't find the way to the waste-basket, I will write again soon.

I go to school every day. I am in the eighth grade. I have not missed a day this term. I wish you would please send me the songs. I remain your little reader,

EFFIE ATTERBURG, Box 67, McCune, R. F. D., 3, Kansas.

Kansas.

Effle says she would like the words of "Brave Custard's last charge." Well, Effle, I did not know that custards were famous for making brave charges, that is, as a rule, but I'll tell you right now it is a good thing you wrote to me, for I once saw and felt a custard make a brave charge, and if it did not nearly put the kibosh on my earthly career, well, ask me another. I was dining out, you will notice when I dine at all, I dine out. This is for obvious reasons. There is nothing doing in the grub line at home. Well, I was dining both out and in. That is, I was feeding my face on the outside, and storing it away in my safety deposit vault That is, I was feeding my face on the outside, and storing it away in my safety deposit vault on the inside. Anyway, after I had pushed a gallon of soup into my face, and rammed three buckets of kidney stew on top of it in my catchall, the hostess brought me a boiled custard. Just as the hired girl put the custard on the table—the ghostess, I mean the hostess, accidentally upset a bottle of claret, and it fell all over the custard, and gee, that custard got furious, and cussed hard, it was just boiling hot. You see, it appears that this particular custard never drank anything but champagne, and when it got soused with common claret, well, it was fighting mad, and used language that no respectable custard ever articulated before in genteel society. The ladies blushed and That is, I was feeding my face on the outside, and storing it away in my safety deposit vault on the inside. Anyway, after I had pushed a gallon of soup into my face, and rammed three buckets of kidney stew on top of it in my stehall, the hostess brought me a boiled custard. Just as the hired girl put the custard on the table—the phostess, I mean the hostess, accidentally upset a bottle of claret, and it fell all most in the world. Put your religion, your content to the table—the phostess, I mean the hostess, accidentally upset a bottle of claret, and it fell all must be interested, and gee, that custard got furious, and cussed hard, it was just boiling hot. You see, it appears that this particular custard never drawk anything but champagne, which is the property of the p and figuring on royalties that will never come —except in your mind. They all do that, Effie, until they wake up. What's that? It is not a custard you are talking about, but a celebrated Indian fighter, who was wiped out by the Reds.

Oh, you mean "Custer's Last Charge!" Oh, dear,
dear, and I've been and got on the wrong track.
Well dear you've written custord and of dear, and I've been and got on the wrong track. Well, dear, you've written custard, and of course, I took it for granted that you wouldn't put a famous general into a pudding, and make him into a custard. You're too patriotic to do that. Anyway I have given you a very exciting account of a real custard's last charge, and I won't charge you anything for it. As regards account of a real custard's last charge, and I won't charge you anything for it. As regards the song, "Please Mr. Conductor," you must tell me whether you want a song about a street-car conductor or a lightning conductor. I'd advise you to get the latter as it is a flash song, with a swift movement, and strikes right home, and makes a hit every time.

A little lassie from Northern New York has a whole lot she wants to tell us. Order, please, while New York says its little piece.

whole lot she wants to tell us. Order, please, while New York says its little piece.

LA FARGEVILLE, N. Y., Nov. 24, 1906.

DEAR UNCLE CHARLIE:

I received my card and button quite a while ago, and I thought I would write and let you know I received them all right, and I thank you very much for them.

I have only one sister, she is ten years old. I will tell about some of our pets. We each have a cat and a lamb, her name is Nancy. She goes with us everywhere we go, and sometimes she tries to follow us to school. We also have a dog his name is Freddie. He and Nancy have great times together.

Uncle Charlie, if you would come and see us we would go fishing. We live about four and a half miles from the St. Lawrence river. There are a great many kinds of fish caught in this river.

I live about two miles and a half from the village of La Fargeville, and about seven miles from Clayton. We have free mail, and during the summer months there are several egg carts go past our door, so we don't have to go to La Fargeville very often. If you would come out next spring we would give you some work to do. You could help father make maple sugar. He had almost three hundred trees tapped last year, and he had to boil several nights until after one o'clock in the morning, and one night it was after four o'clock.

I will give you a description of myself. I am thirteen years old, have dark, brown hair, blue eyes, and I am five feet two inches tall, and weigh one hundred aud fifteen pounds.

Rena M. Vincent, (No. 12,255).

Rena, your letter is neatly written, and very exciting. You say you have free mail at your Rena, your letter is neatly written, and very exciting. You say you have free mail at your city. That must be dandy. Send out all the letters you want to, and no postage to pay. My, but I'd be busy in a town like that. Every magazine in the country will be moving to La Fargeville directly they get wise to this free mail business. mail business.

I don't like egg carts. When I was on the I don't like egg carts. When I was on the stage they wheeled a bunch of egg carts up to the gallery door, and then let me have them one at a time in bunches. First, they egged me on, and then they egged me off, the papers got out an eggstra edition, and I was full of eggotism for several years. I still feel eggy in the grub box at times. You see most of the eggs went down shells and all, and after a week, they began to batch out, and I was a leggs went down shells and all, and after a week, they began to hatch out, and I was a walking incubator with a barnyard attachment. I was able to crow over everybody in those days. Rena, I should be glad to help your father make maple sugar, but I'd never, oh, never consent to help him boil several nights. To boil one night would seem to me a pretty hard job; but several—oh, that's terrible. How can you get a great big dark night by the leg, and shove it in the pot, and boil it? A whole night is a pretty big proposition, and how you can not only get one, but several of 'em in a pot, and boil 'em, beats me. I should think after you had boiled a night, it would lose its nice dark color, and be a very washed-out sort of affair. I don't go fishing, dear. I went fishing once, and the grasshopper I caught for bait, pushed me into ninety feet of wet water, and I was drowned. Greenbacks are the only things I fish for now, and I would have a fit if I caught pole.

Below you will find a list of those who below you will find a list of those who are bravely bearing their crosses of suffering. You remember how Joseph of Arimathea bore the Saviour's Cross on the way to Calvary, if you don't it is time you did, and if you don't you had better read about it before you are another had better read about it before you are another minute older. Here is your chance to lift the cross from the shoulders of sick brothers and sisters, and give them a brief respite from pain and suffering. Here are a few rules to observe when writing to invalids:

Don't write at all unless you can do them some good. Writing sixteen pages about your own personal troubles as nearly sixty per cent. of you do is enough to put a sick person in the cemetery. Cut your own troubles out, they have got enough of their own without hearing yours.

Don't write unless you inclose a postage stamp, and don't expect that stamp to be used for a reply—let the shut-in do as he or she pleases with it.

Remember, a silver dime "In His Name," beats all the sympathy, religion, tracts, and chin music in the world. Put your religion, your Christianity into deeds, or keep it to yourself, for neither God nor man want talk. Parrots talk, Christians act.

CORNSI Pianos Organs

Why Shouldn't You Buy a First-Class Instrument as Low as any Dealer?

The dealer, even though he buys only one at a time, gets it at wholesale price.

when YOU buy one why don't YOU get it at wholesale price?

THE MANUFACTURER who sells through agents and dealers dare not quote you the wholesale price, for he would antagonize the dealers.

THE DEALER cannot sell to you at wholesale price, for that would leave him no profit.

We get along without the dealer and can therefore quote you the wholesale factory prices direct.

We have thousands more satisfied patrons all over the land, who recommend our instruments and defend our business methods, than there are dealers.

And besides, our instruments sell themselves, by the better value they prove over all others—they are better money's worth than you can get from any dealer or from any other manufacturer.

Cash Down.

We ask you to prove it for yourself—by your own examination, trial and comparison. That's the way a quarter of a million customers have proved it for three generations.

First we ask you to send us your name and address.

We will then send you our catalogue, which is a marvel of printing, color and design, showing the choicest of our fifty styles in miniature. The book will enable you to make a selection just as intelligently as if you saw the instrument at factory, We will also send you a reference book of 5.000 recent purchasers (some of whom you may know) and a list of testimonials from old Cornish patrons.

And further, we will send you a copy of our bond of indemnity, which is an iron-clad guarantee that no responsibility whatever will attach to you in placing one of our instruments in you home for examination and free trial. We take all the risk, We put you under no obligation whatever.

Our bond of indemnity also insures the instrument for a term of twenty-five years against defect in material or workmanship.

We deliver free of all freight charges, if desired. You place the instrument in your home and use it one month just as if it were your own. You call in your musical friends and let them put it to a test and pass judgment upon it before you decide to buy it—we agree to find no fault with your decision.

Cash Down.

Balance on easy installment plan.

back, together with all freight charges and 6 per cent interest added.

The above is THE FAMOUS CORNISH ONE YEAR'S TRIAL SYSTEM—open to every reasonable person in the land.

Two Years' Credit If Needed.

You can pay on convenient installments (no matter where you live) or cash after one month, or cash with order—whichever method attracts you most.

Sit right down and write to us. Simply tell us that you may perhaps buy an instrument within six months, and we will put before you our "Free Aids to Purchasers." They will prove to you that our methods are fair and honorable. Then we ask you to prove one of our instruments for yourself. You will keep it, because you can't find its equal in value.

We give you, by mail, a two years' course (96 lessons) in Musical Education Absolutely Free.

Chapel Organ for H Church or Hall.

Per Month only, on our easy installment plan

(ORMISH (O. Established 50 Years. Washington, N. J.

sending in members for the League.

If you are already a subscriber you can join by renewing your subscription, or subscribing a year ahead. You can have the membership card and button sent to yourself and the Comfort to a friend, if you already take the paper. All who join the League will receive a button and a handsome certificate of membership, also Comfort for one year, and the privilege of having their names in the letter list.

How to become a Member

How to become a Member

In order to become a full-fledged League member and procure a card and button, you must become a paid-in-advance Comport subscriber by sending fitteen cents to the subscription department, for yourself, or renew your own subscriptions now. When you do this, send five cents extra, or twenty cents-in all, and say that you wish to join Comport of the League of Cousins.

The five cents additional pays your membership tee and for the League button and membership card engrossed with your own name and membership offers are hereby withdrawn and only those who strictly comply with our above offer will be admitted to membership. It costs but twenty cents to join the League, a League which promises to be the greatest society of young people on earth, Never in the world's history was so much given for so little. Never could twenty cents be invested to such advantage, and bring such splendid returns. Don't hesitate, join us at once and induce your friends to do likewise.

All those League members, who desire a list of the cousins residing in their several states, can secure the same by sending a stamped addressed envelope and five cents in stamps to Nellie Rutherford, 1442 Pacific St., Brooklyn, N. Y., our grand secretary. Some of the lists contain hundreds of names, so our secretary must have some trifling remuneration as she is devoting the whole of her time to this work.

League Sunshine and Work of Mercy

League Sunshine and Work of Mercy for February

Lottie Monn, Penfield, Pa. Poor child has ad spinal trouble nine years. Edith Fishleigh needy. Rebecca Pennington (25), South Portsmouth, Ky. Shut-in, wants cheery letters. Lonely and friendless. Little Julius Rifli of Suttons Bay, Mich., is confined to bed, owing to an accident, and will never leave it. Wants to an accident, and will never leave it. Wants cheery letters only. Thomas P. Day, Fauvel, Province Que., Can. Invalid for 17 years. Poor, lonesome, and needy. Nannie M. Jones (39), Yorkville, R. F. D., 4, S. C. Invalid. No means. Needs medical treatment. Being cared for by poor family. Gladys Bradshaw, Hale, Mo. Recovering from long illness. Needs cheery letters. Mother is dead. Charming girl. Eva L. Stevens, Greenville, R. F. D., 1, Ala. Shutin, needs cheery letters.

Now, be good boys, and angelic girls, until the March winds blow you all rosy cheeked into my lap, once more, and don't forget that I want every League member to work for one of my books of poems. Get seven 15-cent one-year subscribers to COMFORT, and you will have a beautifully gotten up book, bound in silk cloth, that will keep you laughing for the next thousand years. Lovingly yours,

Uncle Charlie

Uncle Charlie's Poems-Sure cure for the blues, Uncle Charlie, care COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

MONEY MADE EASILY

PHOTO KNIVES OF QUALITY

Blades are forged from razor steel. Every knife is guaranteed. We place your photo, name or emblem under transparent handle. Exclusive territory to agents. Write us for terms and photos of sample case to-day. Cantom Cutlery Company, 1299 West 10th St., Canton, O.

EARN TELEGRAPHY BOOKKEEPING OR SHORTHAND BY MAIL--AT YOUR OWN HOME

Anyone can learn it easily in a few weeks. We are unable to supply the demand for telegraph operators, bookkeepers and stenographers. No charge for tuition until position is secured. Write today for particulara. MICHIGAN BUSINESS INSTITUTE, 540 Institute Building, Kalamazoo, Mich.

The Hidden Wedding Treasure

The Mystery of the San Francisco Earthquake

By William T. Valentine

Copyright, 1907, by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Inc.

CHAPTER XIV.

GOLD IS DROSS UNLESS IT BE SHARED.

GOLD IS DROSS UNLESS IT BE SHARED.

WO MONTHS have passed since the terrible day when the god of fire belched forth flames to destroy, like the city of Biblical times, and when the internal rumblings were stayed, the inrolling of the sea was stopped, and the golden sun of June smiled down upon people aiready becoming happy, in spite of great misery and loss of life.

Men, women and children were numbered among the victims of the San Francisco earthquake, and yet those who remained were looking about for happiness, and trying to build upon the funeral pyres, a new city.

"And just about the best in the city is Miss Rosalie," more than one laborer would remark, as he straightened his back to look up at the handsome Bronson home. In cottages all along the great hill were traces of her great generosity, the girl who had not hesitated to give away her wedding clothes that those of simple means might not go without. Such a girl could never be forgotten.

"And her old Pap," another would say regretfully, and then would sigh, for John Bronson was the friend of everyone.

The story of his wonderful wedding present, in twenty dollar gold pieces, would be talked about, and the question asked, the one of the other:

"Where be it?"

And the reply always came:

"The good God knows," and many there were who knelt praying and sobbing before the various churches, as much praying for Rosalie, as for themselves.

As she came down the hill, in her white motor, with her two friends, whom she had rescued, with her, she smiled and bowed in every direction. It was almost like a young queen in procession through her subjects, and at last Katherine said softly:

"Dear Rosalie, they act as I want to do all the time."

"Get right and tow, you dear," and Violet smiled with Katherine, while Rosalie cried almost im-

time."
"Get right and tow, you dear," and Violet smiled with Katherine, while Rosalie cried, almost im-

"Get right and word, with Katherine, while Rosalie crieu, some with Katherine, while Rosalie crieu, some patiently:
"See here, girls, if fortune had favored me, and spared alone my husband, you would think cruel to keep him boxed up. Just because a little money has been left me, too, is there any reason why I ought not to share it?" and she looked bleading.

wedding gift, we would not your wour wedding gift, we would not spared alone my husband, you would think me cruel to keep him boxed up. Just because a little money has been left me, too, is there any reason why I ought not to share it?" and she looked pleading.

"If you had your wedding gift, we would not mind so much, but you have not enough for yourselves," Violet said slowly.

"Until we come to an end of the pile, allow us to do as we please," and her face looked like an angel's, but her heart was heavy because the end was very near. Owing to the fact that she had been given a thousand dollars for her spending money on the wedding trip, Rosalie and Ireton would have been as poor as any. They had spent so much, and divided so generously, refusing any assistance from others, they were fast becoming poor, among the poor, and she and her kenerous husband were trembling for the time when they would be obliged to turn away those who needed help so much.

As the white motor went along, driven by the young wife in her white gown, women and children ran out, begging for bare necessities, and Rosslie resolved that if she should ever come into possession of money again, she could not enjoy spending it all upon herself, but must give it to those suffering, and while she was resolving, she distributed all she had with her in the way of food and clothing, and a countless supply of tender smiles and soft words.

Ireton, Felton and Gerald met the ladies, and were taken aboard, but Rosslie's eyes caught the anxious line between the dear brow. Therefore as soon as she could draw Ireton aside, Rosalie asked gently:

"What is it, my dear?"

"You little Heartease, how do you know?"

"How do I know? Why because I love you," she returned, and her explanation was returned with a kiss, then he said earnestly:

"I hope you are very strong, darling."

"Strong?"

"Yes, my Rose, for I have news for you."

"My father!" she cried, a little hand clutching her throbbing heart.

"Yes, your father," he returned, then caught his wife in his arms.

CHAPTER XV.

SOME EXPLANATIONS.

Many years ago, when San Francisco was but a mining village, more than one miner looked among the rocks for a safe hiding-place for the treasures gathered up through danger and back-breaking efforts.

gathered up through danger and back-breaking efforts.

A man, who afterwards chummed with Bronson, found one of the best in the place, and when he died, he gave it and all he had in it, to a man who had been so faithful to him. Year followed year, and John Bronson gradually built his palace above the great treasure cave, which not only contained for a month prior to the wedding day, the great fortune in twenty dollar gold pieces, but rare jewels, almost priceless tapestries, golden vessels and exquisite paintings.

After seeing his, to him angelic child, ascend to her room, John Bronson, smiling to herself, had gone to the secret cuddy, behind which was arranged the entrance. Pressing upon the spring, a trap was revealed, which he entered, and he spent the entire night going over everything, hoping to make her dear eyes open wide with astonishment.

Buddenly there came a terrible noise, as though the whole world was being rent asunder, a column of the treasure, cave was thrown across the em-

the whole world was being rent asunder, a column of the treasure cave was thrown across the entrance, and while others were flying from rocks and fire, John Bronson was buried amid his wealth. At last he managed to draw himself out, into the very room containing the wedding presents; heard the gentle plans of his daughter, and those of her new father-in-law, and so, with his own blood, he managed to scratch a message, and took back with him all the gifts, leaving behind a promise that full value for each would be returned to the donor.

donor.

"What made you think of doing that?" his daughter cried, her arms about his neck.

"It was your own plan. I think I carried it out as you wished. I sent money in every case, except one.

"Why did you keep us in anxiety all this time?"
Ireton asked, his face very pale.
John Bronson drew his daughter to his knee,

John Bronson drew his daughter to his knee, saying gently:
"My daughter knew that her old Pappy couldn't be killed any such way, could he?" he asked, rubbing his cheek against her soft one.
Rosalie drew him close to her, crying:
"She knew that her Pappy and she were too closely joined for that," and no one ever again saw her flinch at calling her father Pappy.

John Bronson noticed it, and with several tender kinsea, whispered:

values of roots and herbs, I might have fared pretty bad," then with a tender smile he asked:
"Are you ready to receive your presents?"
"Yes, but where?"
"On the altar of a little church I have been putting up, now call the guests," and he seemed to disappear from their sight.
Rosalie gave a sudden little cry, clinging to her husband, saying nervously:
"I don't think I can stand much more, Ireton," and quite naturally the young husband felt indignant towards his father-in-law for subjecting poor Rosalie to any more stress. She had been carried into the present chamber, as they had grown to call the room in which her presents had been set forth, and it was upon his dear face, Rosalie's eyes had first opened.
"What more did you know, Rosalie?" Ireton who had never before repeated the question to her, asked quickly.
Rosalie held out another piece of paper, on which were a few words written in red:
"When the proper time comes my daughter, bring with you those whom I have chosen, to the secret vault, and wait."
"Is not the real treasure vault, I am sure, for I often played in it, especially when mamma died, and I was so lonely."
"Then you had some idea of this?"
"A little, but I was afraid some of his plans had miscarried, and all this has unstrung me."
Ireton held her close in his strong young arms, wondering if he could ever be worthy of his treasure. It did not matter if she had not a cent, he was rich in her virtues, her sweetness, the one who had the power to shape his koharacter, and keep pure his sou!
"Dearest," Rosalie said softly, "I expect the proper time has come."
"Ithin kso, too."
"Then tell our friends, will you please, and do not forget Jim and Annie, they went through so much with us, that I want them," and first kissing her, and leaving the room, I reton felt almost dazed at the loftiness of her character.
"How few, especially now when she is so filled with our own affairs, would think of those two?" and with a powerful reverence in his heart for her, he summoned all she had mentioned, and they foun

CHAPTER XVI.

THE REAL TREASURE.

The few people sat in the dark vault, shivering, listening to the music with which was commingled soon the tread of many feet, though nothing could soon the tread of many feet, though nothing could be seen.

The words were beautiful: "Onward Christian Soldiers," and awoke keen emotion in the breasts of those who had been through so much.

From out the gloom came a clear voice, and these were the words spoken solemnly:

"Our friends, I was buried alive, and yet I live. My fortune was entombed with me, and yet through the Mercy of God we are rescued.

"Through stress and suffering, you have all proven your real merit, but none more so than my daughter, my little Rosalie.

"On the eve of her wedding day, I promised her an immense fortune in twenty dollar gold pieces. I am now here to deliver it to her," and a sudden radiance lighting up the crypt, the visitors found they were sitting in a cave hollowed out of solid rock, with a chancel in the end, and on it was an immense pile of glittering twenty dollar gold pieces.

"With a little cry. Rosalie spring forward week."

pieces.

With a little cry, Rosalie sprung forward, wearing the dress intended for her wedding gown, for it had not been within the heart of woman to give

With a little cry, Rosalie sprung forward, wearing the dress intended for her wedding gown, for it had not been within the heart of woman to give it away.

"Is it all for me, Pappy?" she asked.

"Every cent."

"And you, Ireton?"

"Every cent."

"My friends?"

"Every cent."

"In my way you want." came from all but a discontented appearing man, crouching in one corner, his skinny fingers about a velvet-lined jewel case.

"Then if it is mine, I want to spend it in a certain way," she cried, her face glorified.

"In any way you want." came from her father's throat and the rest joined in, all but the shabby old Judge.

"During the past months, I have learned how terrible it is to be poor and sad. I have seen mothers thrust away their children from their barren bosoms; I have seen fathers cheeffully rob themselves to feed their children; I have seen children killing themselves to provide for parents.

During the days, when I hoped and prayed for this money that I might give it where it was so needed, I resolved to remove a little bit of the misery in the world, and along this road down the hill, there will always be good, honest work for men who take their pay home to women and children, and if I fail, why it will not be much worse than many others who have tried to do good, and not succeeded, I just want to do it, may I?" and there is no wonder that they all, even the old Judge, roused for the moment, cried:

"God bless you, you may!"

Then there was another dazzling light, and the guests saw wonderful piles of gold and jewels, and as though from out of the distance:

"This is the fortune she can not use as she can her Wedding Treasure, but with it all goes the love of two old miners, an angel mother, and her sweet, tender spirit which has absorbed all that is wise and good from all three."

"The wedding treasure lies there." pointing towards the twenty dollar gold pieces; "there is the rest of the fortune which

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 5.)

ber flinch at calling her father Pappy.

John Bronson noticed it, and with several tender kisses, whispered:

"Little girl you have given me the best gift I could have," and she hated herself to think that she had been so cruel; but if she had known the pleasure the calling of that simple name could have bestowed, she would never had given him any other.

"It suits me, too," Ireton said, deeply touched, as he remembered the difference between the two fathers.

"Thinking of the Judge? Never mind, lad. He's sail right now. Such a shock was enough to kill the strongest of men, and if I had not known of the commissioner. This whole Grand Miss is covered with artificial lakes and reservoirs for water, and it is all measured and turned out by the paid men.

This is a beautiful place to live in after the mosquitos and horse flies are frosted out, then it is liable to snow so soon after that. The Columbine, our state flower, grows luxuriantly here. The lakes are full of trout large and small, but can be caught only at certain times of the year. Wild grouse are quite plentiful, but the game laws restrict the killing of them also.

I should be pleased to hear from any, and especially the sisters in the northern part of Arkansas near the Ozark mountain or in good farming or timber country. I will try to answer all promptly.

MRS. J. W. Lund, Cedaredge, Col.

DEAR EDITORS

DEAR EDITOR:

Inoted a request from H. O. Stiles, 152 West 28th St., New York City, for the removal of paint from garments.

After many years of worry, and trying everything I heard of, I have settled on two ways as the very best. I have never failed with either. For garments that will not stand boiling, grease the paint spots with very salty butter, if very dry and hard hang near fire, rub between fingers and grease again, let hang for some time, then roll up and lay over night, wash in good hot, strong soapsuds. For shirts, both white and colored, I roll up and let stand over night.

I once, years ago, cleaned an all-wool suit of clothes with butter, the edges of the sleeves were stiff as a board though not worn any. After hanging by fire for a day and laying over night I put into hot suds, and spread them on a wash board, then used a scrubbing brush over every bit of them. When dry and pressed they looked as well as when new.

For overalls and jumpers make with the hard lye a very strong lye water. Soak them over night—short time will not do—when the white clothes have been rubbed, put them in tub, lay out on board, and scrub with a good stiff scrubbing brush, one made of broom corn is best, soap well, and boil for ten or fifteen minutes, suds, rinse, starch and dry.

I. M. W. Clayton, Salem, Mouroe Co., Ill.

Dear Mass. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

I am a milliner, but I am keeping house in one

I. M. W. Clayton, Salem, Mouroe Co., Ill.

DEAR MES. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

I am a milliner, but I am keeping house in one room for the present. Rents are scarce here, but there is plenty of work for both men and women, building is progressing rapidly, and the refugees are being cared for. I enjoy the sisters' letters, and agree with Mandy Smith in regard to the badge, I think it would be fine.

Mrs. H. C. Koons. I do not believe in whipping children; there are other methods to be used which have more effect, and are more beneficial; study the child and you will soon learn the best method. I had only to say to my little daughter, "Hazel, mamma doesn't like you for that, she told you not to do it," she would go and sit down on her stool, and sob, presently she would say "mamma, do you like me now?" if I said "yes," she would sit there, until I told her "yes," and would always try to be better. She is now seventeen, and a dear good girl. It pays to go slow and study your child.

I wonder if you all know how to clean white felt hats. Just use corn meal, rub with white cloth and brush thoroughly.

To make deep cream lace use of Yellow Ochre one tablespoonful to two of French rice powder. nut it.

hats. Just use corn meal, rub with white cloth and brush thoroughly.

To make deep cream lace use of Yellow Ochre one tablespoonful to two of French rice powder, put it in box or bag with lace shake well, take out and dust out all that will come.

To clean white plumes, wash through two changes of warm soapsuds, with your hands, then rinse in lukewarm water to which one tablespoonful of laundry starch has been added, then draw through thumb and finger and hang out in the sun. When nearly dry, draw the feather through fingers the wrong way, then shake out well, when dry curl with silver knife by taking a small bunch at a time curl under; try it! they will be like new.

To color artificial flowers use stain for burnt wood, dilute with alcohol until desired shade is obtained, apply with brush.

Will the sisters send me white muslin blocks, tea inches square, with name and address worked on same? All favors returned. I would also enjoy autographs on paper six by four inches with quotations from your favorite author and name and address. Valentines please, don't forget sisters, and I will answer all. An old-time subscriber, Mrss, Lida M. Palmer, 3338 22nd St., San Francisco, Cal.

cisco, Cal.

dotations row your ravoitte author and hame and address. Valenthes please, don't forget sisters, and I will answer all. An old-time subscriber, MES. Lida M. Palmer, 3333 22nd St., San Francisco, Cal.

My Dears:

Here we are in the last month of winter; how short the time has been, what with preparing the Thanksgiving feast, arranging, planning, making and buying our Christmas gifts, the frolicking and buying our Christmas gifts, the frolicking and buying our Christmas gifts, the frolicking way of into Pebruary, a joyous month, St. Valenthes day, when master Cupid is busy, and the birthday of our honored George Washington.

Every month has some bright spot in it for some of us. Frost is king now, and with the warm sunshiny days that we will soon have, comes recollections to many, of the days gone by, "down on the old farm," when came the sap boiling and sugar-making, who of us remembers that, what with the delights of perhaps being allowed to go with "Pa" to the camp and sleeping in the rude shelter, with a breakfast of fried pork, warmed up potatoes, bread and butter. How good everything tasted, and later the joy of going around gathering the sap and riding the old horse, as the snow was too deep for your little short legs to wade through, you could and did gather wood for the fire and kept it going, while "Pa" was out gathering sap and pouring it into the kettles, where it was boiled down to syrup, then taken to the house and made into sugar. Oh. what funi scraping out the kettles for the toothsome syrup, and sugar, making wax, and butternut candy, going to bed full and happy, and the next morning's breakfast, buckwheat cakes, sausage and maple streakfast, buckwheat cakes, sausage and maple sprup. We did not hear of dyspepsia then, or so many enders were not known, alum and acids were not used in cooking, flour was not as orfined, and in consequence was more nutritious, all the nourishment was not known, aluments. In the first place food was not adulterated in any way, shape or manner, baking powders were not gifts you have showered upon me, and some they come.

Mrs. Linden. Thank you very much for the views of Cincinnati, and the music.

So many are writing me of the useful, beautiful and practical prizes they have received from Compost for sending in new subscribers; the book of "Good old songs" mother and graudmother used to sing is worth its weight in gold, one lady wrote me. The Chart of chords and Giant Album of songs are two things that all musicians should have.

The book "St Elmo" is a beauty, the graceful, lover-like way that St. Elmo is holding Edna shows that though a very scientific, scholarly man he

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 12.)

YOU 🐬 DON'T NEED MONEY

To furn ish your home. We sell you anything youwant on liberalored-it terms. No matter where youlivewe will trust you. Our plan makes it possible for you to comple

Kitchen Cabinet 5 you to completely your home on small monthly payments.

It's Easy to Pay, the People's Way.
We sell better goods for less money than anyother store in the world. A postal card sent to us will bring you absolutely free, two big complete Catalogues showing furniture, rags, carpets, stoves, lace curtains and everything else required to furnish the home. No other system of credit in the world is so straightforward and se easy. We trust all the people. No security asked. No interest to pay. Our $6,000.00 guarantee is for the protection of our customers. We have on deposit at the First National Bank of Detroit $5,000.00 in Gold, to assure the eafesty of all payments made to us; to warrant satisfaction with every article purchased and to guarantee the return of all money, including freight charges both ways, for any article that does not meet with your complete approval—or prove to be worth more money than you paid for it.

Write Today for FREE Catalog.

Write Today for FREE Catalog.
We want you to open a Credit Account with us. WE ARE AMERICA'S LARGEST HOME FURNISHERS.

To demonstrate our wonderful bargains we offer this magnificent KITCHEN CABINET (just like picture; for $1.00 cash; the balance on easy terms of $60c per month. The workmanship and material are of the best. The main top 1s 20 inches high; 36 inches wide, 9 inches deep. Has five drawers for spices, etc. Sliding kneading board 1820 inches. Other drawers as in out.

Delca Complete.

Price Complete. $1.00 with order, balance 50s each month

PEOPLE'S OUTFITTING CO. 23-25-27-29 Michigan Ave. DETROIT, MICH.

Great Suit Offer

DREN LOOM CO., 2107th St., Harlan, Iowa.

much lower prices on men's Ene stocking that it will surprise you.

WE WANT A LIVE AGENT

In your town. You can make from $1,000 to $2,-000 per year. If you write us before we get an agent in your town you will get a wenderful effer. As soon as we get an agent in your fown he will get profits on every dollar we sell in his trrittory. WE TURN ALL OUR BUSINESS OVER TO MIM. That's why our agents make so much money. If you want a suit for yourself AMSWER QUICK, before we get an agent in your town; you will then get all of our great indusements. If you would like to be our agent tell us all about yourself. Address.

AMERICAN WOOLEN MILLS CO., Chicago, IIL

EARN beautiful premiums by selling only a few jars of "Mother's Salve" at squeet a jar. The greatest care hanows for Catarth, Croup and Colds. The world never saw its equal for healing Cuts, Burns, Sores, Chaps, Piles, etc. Every jar guranteed. It doesn't pay to sell trash, eople want and will buy again,

It Is Easy To

NO MONEY REQUIRED IN ADVANCES

12 yrs our Pro Mother's Remedies Co. Dept. C. 1155 -35th St. Chicago

NEW STEEL RANGE

S.75 buys this BIQ. HANDSOME. NEW 1907 MODEL FULL SIZE. SIX-HOLE SQUARE STEEL RANGE. (With reservoir and closet, as illustrated, a trifle extra.). For full description of this wonderful steel range bargain write for our FREE STOVE CATALOGUE. In our own, the largest stove foundry in the world, in Newark, Ohlo, we make every variety of the highest grade stoves and ranges, and sell them direct to the user at about one-half the lowest prices asked by others. Every stove correct by our binding guarantee, guarantee the reight charges to be very small, every stove offered on thirty days free trial, and we agree to always furnish any repairs in the years to come, as shown by our latest FREE Stove Catalogue. Our Acmes Triumph. Acme Renown and Acme Regal Steet Ranges have been greatly reduced in price; marvelougly low prices on our entire line of stoves—about one-half regular retail prices. We have new stove offers that will please and surprise you. Write us a letter or a postal and simply say, "Send me your Free Stove Catalogue." mention this paper, and by return mail you will receive, postpaid, our very latest Special Stove Book, with large pictures and complete descriptions of our entire line of stoves, all the wonderful low prices, the greatest stove offer you ever received. Our revised Profit Sharing Plan, more liberal than ever, is also explained. We give our customers a certificate for the full amount of the puschase and when you have $25,00 and upward in certificates you can get FREE clothing, musical instruments, furniture, silverware, choice of many valuable articles free of charge. Don't buy a stove at home or elsewhere until you get this new sow Catalogue and all our new elsewhere until you get this new sow Catalogue and all our new elsewhere until you get this sew sow Catalogue and all our new elsewhere until you get this sew sows Catalogue and all our new elsewhere until you get this sew sows Catalogue and all our new elsewhere until you get this sew sows Catalogue and all our new elsewhere until you ge

SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO

The Great Chicago Mystery or,

The Man With Many Aliases

Copyright, 1907, by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Inc.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Crit Truman and his assistant, Ralph Dayton are called from New York to Chicago, by the Chief of Police to assist in suppressing crime. The leader is variously described, and one asserts he has a harelip. For a moment the men are silent, then the well-trained minds recall the recapture of "The Man with Many Aliases," Jim Hollis, Jim Holmes, Chris Dougherty, and the blow which splits him from the nostril to his mouth, and which, when healed, might pass for a harelip. "How is our work?" asks Crit. "Are the officials satisfied with the return of the money?" They ought to prosecute Percy Mandeville; he has the making of a confirmed criminal. There are several cases in their line. There's a missing girland a jewelry robbery on Fifth Ave., but they can be left for a few days. Truman makes up his mind to catch this man who twice escapes, and he tells Ralph to wire the Police, get Peter, and we'll outline a general plan.

Percy Mandeville calls to see Sylvia Lyster; she tells him the call must be final. He insists she encourages him. She calls a servant to show him out. Sylvia, befriending Kathie Mandeville, confides to her that her husband makes a proposal of marriage to her. Sylvia still loves her husband. Custer Quex is engaged to Sylvia; he will go to her at night. It's the last happy afternoon he has for many a long day. While Crit and Ralph are on the way to Chicago, the former has a telegram. "Percy Mandeville disappeared. Think he went to Chicago. Took Sylvia Lyster with him," signed by the President of the bank. It's the girl, whose people wants Orit to look up. The Chief of Police tells Crit of a hold-up in a saloon, a month previous. Four guys, all masked, line the customers up-nothing is overlooked—even a pair of diamond cuff buttons is taken. As they emerge from City Hall they are joined by Peter, who is waiting. He tells Truman, Jim Hollis swears if he gets free he'll never let you teke him alive. The chief tells Crit of a hold-up in a saloon, a month previous. Four windin

CHAPTER VIII.

A WOMAN'S LOVE.

N almost broken-hearted man sat in the room where he had expected to meet his sweetheart the night she disappeared, reading a letter, written with pencil, and blurred by many tears. It was written on a tab of common writing-paper, and between the lines, he felt he could read a sorrow even deeper than the one she indicated. A sole study in his throot as he she indicated. A sob stuck in his throat, as he she indicated. A sob stuck in his throat, as he read:

"My Own Darling Custer:

"I wish words of mine could convey the terrible sorrow I feel at being obliged to write you this.

"Dearest, although I belong to you with all my heart and soul, we cannot realize our heavenly dream of being husband and wife.

"I know you ask why? I cannot tell you, although I would gladly give all I possess, but Heavens, how little that is now, to tell you all, oh, I must endure the terrible shame alone.

"I go of my own free will away from the home I have always known, and loved so dearly. I go from the man who has treated me so royally and tenderly; and from you my best beloved, and that is the greatest wrench of all.

"Custer, do you remember when we first met, at the Assembly ball? I was introduced to society that night, and there has never been anyone else in my life. I feel yet the thrill which ran through me, when I saw that dear head of yours bowing before me. Perhaps it was a very wicked thing to say, but I told myself that unless I married you I would go single to my grave. I will keep that promise I made with myself, darling, for as I can never be your wife, no other man can claim me.

"I am thinking of oar delightful acquaintance, which developed so beautifully day by day, until my very heart seemed to burst with joy, for I knew that I was fair to you, and that you were growing to love me. Sweetheart, I believe I loved first."

The young lover reading these words, kissed them passionately, exclaiming:

"Indeed you did not, for as I bowed, my heart went forth to you, precious sweetheart!" then he continued reading his letter, teeming with love and devotion, and yet one of the saddest a woman ever wrote.

"Then came the blessed night when you told me that you loved me! Its memory will ever dwell with me, for I knew that I was beloved as I loved.

and devotion, and yet one of the sacatal ever wrote.

"Then came the blessed night when you told me that you loved me! Its memory will ever dwell with me, for I knew that I was beloved as I loved. No matter how long I live, my dear, no one can take that memory from me, nor the realization that I have known the great happiness of being all in all to the man whom I adore.

"From the moment that you received this letter, I will be as dead to you. Why, I cannot tell you, but I implore you to forget me, and to marry some girl without a shadow over her life. I am not to blame, I know I need not tell you that, but nevertheless I have to suffer for the wrong-doing of others. May the Great Father above bless you, my Custer, and bring you the happiness that I once thought I could. Darling, good by,

"Yours broken-heartedly," "Sylvia."

"You are not dead to me, I swear it!" cried the frantic lover, "for I will search the world over until I find you, and wrench from you the terrible secret which parts us!" then he began to read again.

CHAPTER IX.

A VERY NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

When Crit decided to take up the case as presented by Chicago's chief of police, he had considered every point carefully. He knew that he had to go among a desperate and crafty that he had to go among a desperate and crafty set of men, and to put his wits against one of the most successful and daring crooks in the United States. To do this a strong policy must be adopted and adhered to. After duereflection, he decided that he could produce best results by going as some former leader.

Critand his assistants. Ralph and Peter were

By Rosser W. Cobbe

Author of "The Mark of the Beast"

plans had been suggested, when suddenly Crit had cried:

"I have just the thing!"

"What?" Ralph and Peter both cried.

"Remember 'Hang-eye' John?" he asked.

"Remember 'Hang-eye' John?" he asked. The others nodded.
"He went over the road for ten years. I say, Peter, get me long distance Joliet."
After talking with the warden of the Joliet penetentiary for ten minutes, Crit found out that "Hang-eye" John was quietly serving his sentence, and promised to aid the great detective by keeping any outsiders from communicating with him for a few days.
"It will do fine!" Crit had exclaimed as he unfolded a plan which made even Ralph and Peter wonder.
The trial of this noted criminal had been a long and sensational one, and his face was well

The trial of this noted criminal had been a long and sensational one, and his face was well known throughout the country. Crit had seen him more than once, when he was operating in New York, and was well acquainted with his peculiarities.

No man in the country can equal Crit Truman in the art of disguising and make-up, and while it is impossible to reveal all his methods, it is sufficient to say that it is possible for him to arrange his disguise so as to assume it with discovered that the discovered

Ferris led the way, and ducked down into a basement. Crit followed without an instant's pause. Ferris did not stop but went on through what proved to be an empty room into an alley in the rear, in through the back door of a saloon, up a pair of stairs, across a covered passageway, down another pair of stairs broken and tumbledown.

Finally he stopped in a dirty room, evident-y in the back of a low saloon, and said ly in the back of a low saloon, and said hoarsely:

"Wait here," then left the room.
Crit glanced hurriedly about him. His practiced eyes looked for a trap, for he knew there must be one, and immediately discovered it. He saw that the floor sagged fully four inches from the foot board at one end, and searching, discovered that the entire floor was a trap door.

from the foot board at one end, and searching, discovered that the entire floor was a trap door. Without waiting to be dropped, he leaped lightly back to the stairs down which he and his companion had come, and just in time, for his feet had barely left the floor, when it was dropped, the entire surface swinging back towards the stairway. From below came a horrible stench, and considerable sewer gas, and Crit, peering into the dark hole felt glad enough that he was not lying in it, perhaps maimed or dying.

"DON'T JIM! I'LL FORGET ALL I HEARD!" CAME IN AGONIZED TONES.

to conduct some of his most famous cases.

After he had laid his plans, and sent Peter to his wigmaker with instructions for a wig after the sketch Crit had himself drawn, the great man took out all the pictures he had of the man took out all the pictures he ha criminal, and studied them carefully.

The wigmaker was used to working on short notice for Crit, and promised to get what was wanted done before the detectives left the folwanted done before the detectives left the fol-lowing morning, and Peter returned to find Crit fully made up for the part. To judge from the pictures, the impersonation was perfect. Ralph had seen the original several times, and so he was better fitted to judge, and he de-clared it one of Crit's best. Crit was not satisfied with going through the work once, however, but cleaneed his face and went over it again and again, until he was perfect, and knew without looking just how perfect, and knew without looking just how much he needed of each pigment and just where to put it.

This disguise was concealed about the person of Crit Truman when he went to call upon the chief of police, and he carried it with him when he disappeared around the corner of State and he disappeared around the corner of State and Twenty-second street with Christie Ferris. Crit had seen the gesture made by the passing crook to Ferris, and the change in the lad, just as had Ralph. However, he gave no sign, but pretended he thought everything was as before. As has been seen he made no objection to sending his assistants off the car, although he knew they would follow by the next, and when Ferris told him to get off at Twenty-second street, he showed no desire to best results by going as some former leader.

Crit and his assistants, Ralph and Peter were sitting talking the matter over, and several thoroughly distrusted his guide.

Twenty-second street, he showed no desire to back out or indicated in any way that he sitting talking the matter over, and several very little trouble. He can so change his own face as to make it resemble another's with altered, then turned to consider his next move, most lightning facility and in this way is able to conduct some of his most famous cases.

"Mantraps do exist in Chicago," he muttered, then turned to consider his next move, for he realized that he was in a perfect den of thieves.

thieves.

Half way down the stairway was a landing, and it took Crit but a moment to reach it. Several doors opened upon it, and Crit, cautiously turned the knob of one of them. It turned readily, and the door swung inward on oiled hinges. Crit had noticed that the trap below had worked very quietly, as though kept in good order. Another thing he had observed, the table and two chairs were fastened to the floor and went down with it.

the table and two chairs were fastened to the floor and went down with it.

The room was empty, and Crit entered it, for he was anxious to don his disguise. As quietly as though in his own office, the great detective assumed it, and then drawing up the long hair of the wig under a broad, dirty white sombrero, such as the original "Hang-eye" John always wore, he left the room on the landing, and once more descended the stairs, this time, however, opening a door in the wall, just before the bottom was reached, which led into the trap room.

It led, as he supposed, straight to an alley, and Crit had no difficulty in reaching Twenty-second street from there. With his excellent head for locality, he had no difficulty in placing the saloon, behind which was the trap, and he heldly entered it. As he kent his hat well ing the saloon, behind which was the trap, and he boldly entered it. As he kept his hat well over his face, he was not particularly noticed, and so had opportunity to look about him. Crouched in one corner was Ferris, trembling so violently that Crit decided that this was probably the first time he had led a victim into that fatal room. The wretched fellow's face was yellow; his eyes watered, and his mouth, loose and drooping, fairly drooled. At last he staggered to the bar, and tossed off a glass of water, the barkeeper gave him, without comment.

"That settles it," Crit said to himself. "Ferris is Jim Hollis's man. A crook that will keep from brandy after putting a man where he did me, is under Jim Hollis and no one else."

Ferris was evidently making some request of the man behind the bar, but the latter only shook his head, and then muttered:

the man behind the bar, but the latter only shook his head, and then muttered:

"Gw'an, see yerself."

Crit almost pitied the wretched coward, as he dragged his feet to the rear of the saloon, disappeared an instant, and then returned with Crit's bat, which the latter had been careful to drop on the lowest step of the stairway.

The barkeeper uttered an oath, when he saw it, but Ferris, although trembling, bundled it up, and fastened it inside his coat, then with a shifty look about, darted from the saloon, and Crit an instant later followed him.

The crook walked rapidly, but without taking any precautions to hide his destination, and so Crit had no difficulty in keeping him in view. For half an hour he went along, Crit following, then disappeared in a dark hallway. Crit did not pause, he followed him boldly, and up a pair of sagging stairs. So lightly did the detective walk, that the crook did not know he was being followed. On and on the curious pair climbed, emerging on several dirty landings, until they came to the top floor. Just one door opened on this stairway, and as he followed Ferris, Crit heard a low cry.

CHAPTER X. A MISSING HEROINE.

The detective started, for the cry came from a woman's lips, and evidently those of a young a woman's lips, and evidently those of a young woman.

Ferris did not pause, but pushed ahead into a dark doorway, Crit following close at his heels, hearing the words:
"Don't, I say, don't!"
"Then will you stop that noise?" and Crit recognized the voice.
"Yes, yes, anything!"
"You'd better mind me my girl, or I'll give you something to scream for!" muttered the man so cruelly, that Crit could scarcely restrain himself, for a coward is something he could not endure, and a man cruel to a woman is the worst kind of a one.
"Don't Jim, I'll forget all I heard!" came in agonized tones, and then Crit heard a peculiar rap. Two quick taps, one long one, then three still quicker than the first two.
"Well?" came from the inner room, in an en-

"Well?" came from the inner room, in an en-tirely different tone, although the voice was not so disguised but that Crit still recognized

it.
"Skiddoo," Crit heard Ferris say, in a low

"Skiddoo," Crit heard Ferris say, in a low tone.

The door opened immediately, and Crit, flattened against the wall, caught sight of a tall man, with a cleft in his upper lip.
"What is it, Ferris?" the man asked angrily.
"Say, 'Four-time', don't you show no fancy tricks wid me," Ferris cried, dodging as though expecting a blow.
"Why not?" thundered the man.
"Dat fly mug youse always blowin' about, Crit Truman."
"Well, what of him?" the man cried with an

"Well, what of him?" the man cried with an

"I dropped him," was the quick response.
"When, where? Come in. Nell get on your hat and get out. Don't come back for an

"I won't listen, Jim, indeed I won't!" cried

"I won't listen, Jim, indeed I won't letter the girl.

Then she gave a low cry as there was the sound of soft flesh being struck, and Crit felt that if this continued much longer he would be obliged to show himself to prevent any more cruelty. An instant later, he slipped into the outer hall, and was standing there when the circle area out. girl came out.

She was tying a veil about her flushed face, one side of which was already beginning to swell. She was elegantly dressed, and was not what he had supposed, a fit companion for crooks, but an intelligent-looking, refined girl, of perhaps twenty.
She started when she saw the stranger, but

She started when she saw the stranger, but Crit said quietly:
"Pardon me, but I think you are in need of some help."
In spite of his disguise there was something in Crit's voice and manner which encouraged the girl, for she said rapidly:
"If ever there was a woman who needed help it is I."
"Can I give it?" Crit asked.

it is I."

"Can I give it?" Crit asked.

"Can I trust you?" she asked wearily.

Time was very precious. Ferris or Hollis himself might come out any minute. Crit took a card from his pocket and scribbled a couple of lines on it, then he asked:

"Know anything about the city?"

"Know anything about the city?"
"No."

"Can you tell east from west?"

"I do not know."
"Get out of here. Take a car running east.
Get off at State street, and walk one block to Wabash avenue. There board a Cottage Grove avenue car. Ride on it to Fifty-fifth street Boulevard. Go to the number on this card, and present the card whose name I have written there. Stay with her until you hear from me."

"Will I be safe with her?"

"By the memory of my mother. I sweet you

"Will I be safe with her?"

"By the memory of my mother, I swear you will," Crit said solemnly, then he pressed several bills into the girl's hands, and whispering:

"Be very careful for this is a terrible part of the town," he motioned her toward the stairs.

The detective dreaded to let her go alone, for he recognized that she had been trapped in

The detective dreaded to let her go alone, for he recognized that she had been trapped in some way and needed his care, but he did not dare leave these two crooks without learning something of their plans.

The girl with a grateful glance at her unknown friend hurried away, and Crit slipped back into the inner hall, to hear Hollis sneer:

"Well, suppose I did have you railroaded over? It was better to have you do time, than me, wasn't it? You fool!"

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 20.)

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 20.)

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 10.)

certainly understood the art of love making. Take my advice, you that have not got it, and send for "St. Elmo."

"St. Elmo."
Sometime when I have time I am going to write up the history of this dear old Compost. I can recollect it as long ago as I can remember anything, and you all know that "J. A. D." has seen quite a number of years. One friend writes me, "I would have Compost if it were two dollars a year, as I consider it worth even more than that to me. I have taken it for eighteen years, and my mother before me."

before me."
I cannot send any more flower seeds or bulbs this year. Why not all that have flower seeds adopt the plan of inclosing a few in every letter they send out to the friends of Comport? I have sent Velvet Marigold seed all over this continent in that way, as I had a superfluity of them. I should like Zinnia, Double Marigold, and Salvia seed; this exchanging of flower seeds is a beautiful idea.

in that way, as I had a superfluity of them. I should like Zinnia, Double Marigold, and Salvia seed; this exchanging of flower seeds is a beautiful idea.

I have recipes for Buttermilk, Salt Rising, Milk Rising Bread, etc., all good and old fashioned.

My dear Bell: I think you may hear from some of the sisters. As for "J. A. D.," her hands and time are full to overflowing.

Queen City Bachelor. The wireless message received, thanks very much. Sorry that you are suffering from a cold; come up to our Massachusetts mountains where you can breathe the dry, pure air instead of that smoky, sooty atmosphere that you are inhaling. I have in mind a gentleman who came here weighing one hundred and forty pounds in June, the first of October he tipped the beam at one hundred and seventy. You might work off that much perhaps and not miss it.

Sorrowing Comfort Sister. You poor child! Your letter made my heart ache; listen, sisters, while I read you a portion of this dear sister's letter. "I have recently given to God my darling baby girl, fitteen months old. Oh! how "Mother's" arms miss her, those little tender arms around my neck, and soft cheek pressed against my own. She is safe in Jesus' arms, but I miss her so, at times it is all I can say, 'God's will be done.'" Time alone may heal the wound, but the scar will always be there, the memory of that little one, no matter how many come later to bless your home and life, your heart and mind will turn to the darling gone before, but as the years go by, you may thank God on your knees that she was taken. I have seen such cases. I wonder if any of my readers have? In the same letter this dear one tells me: "I have just received a telegram telling us of the death of my brother's wife, leaving four little ones to the mercies of this cold world." Would you not rather know your dear little one was safe in the Father's arms than one of them? All mothers will be touched by this letter I know.

To the one that work end we will should appeal to the one that work of the form in which

Mrs. Berlin writes that: "Husband took Comport needles from Mrs. Mildred Dawson, Lodge, Va., also Mrs. Brown, to whom Mrs. Dawson sent shells and curios.

Mrs. Berlin writes that: "Husband took Comport for a long time, I did not pay much attention to it, until I began reading the letters in the Sisters' Corner, then I fell in love with the entire paper, and now I cannot get along without my Comport."

Mrs. McNave, Tenn. I presume you think "J. A. D" rather dilatory in complying with your request, but I wrote you and inclosed the patterns you wished, directing the letter as I supposed correctly (as your town was rather vague and indistinct), but it was returned to me, so I could do nothing further until I could communicate with you. Will all of you that write me please direct the envelope you inclose very plainly, or write your name and address so that I can read it; now another thing had I not put my address on the upper left-hand corner of the envelope the letter would have been sent to the dead-letter office, and it would have been sometime before I received it back; in the mean time Mrs. McNave would have been sometime before I received it back; in the mean time Mrs. McNave would have been sometime before I received it back; in the mean time Mrs. McNave would have been sometime before I received it back; in the mean time Mrs. McNave would have been sometime before I received it back; in the mean time Mrs. McNave would have been sometime before I received it back; in the mean time Mrs. McNave would have been sometime before I received it back; in the mean time Mrs. McNave would have been sometime help to the first of the control of the profit by this in the future.

Mrs. Eckle. I was truly rejoiced to hear from you again. I trust your little friend will receive the monthly installment, but accidents will happen in the best regulated families, and we are such an immense family, you know.

Will you not please remember little Christoro Brice, Brutus, Michigan, a dear little girl, the old, old story, invalid mother, home burned, lost everything? Such a tale o this cold weather. letter last

Mrs. Ducharm. I received a letter last week from one of my boys in your county.

Will the sisters to whom I sent my Comforts

please return them?
J. A. D. (MRS. VAN DYKE), Orange, Mass.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:
This is my first letter to our interesting, instructive paper, Comfort, and I hope it will make its appearance in the Sisters' Corner, then I shall feel as pearance in the Sisters' Corner, then I shah leed as if I were truly one of you.

I have started a collection of souvenirs for a "hoo-doo" cane, did any of the sisters ever see one? Little bits of ribbon badges, buttons, souvenirs of some trip or excursion, and of course it's all the more interesting if they are all of your own experiences. I haven't been housekeeping long so have make many suggestions.

periences. I haven't been nousekeeping long so can't make many suggestions.

A little kerosene oil on a flannel cloth is good to clean off anything burnt on the cook stove, and a mixture of linseed oil and turpentine applied with a soft cotton or flannel cloth, will clean picture frames or varnished woodwork, and make them frames or varnished woodwork, and make the collock like new.

Dear sisters, do not let us mar the confidence and beauty of our letters with requests for trifles that we might get at the remnant counter for a few pennies, unless indeed it be a request for some present size, and it really seems every number excels the last. I do enjoy the sisters' letters, some of them seem like old friends.

You who live in the North are enjoying some cold weather now, while down here in "Dixie Land" we have all the pretty flowers and green grass to look at.

weather now, while down here in "Dixie Land" we have all the pretty flowers and green grass to look at.

I am living in the growing and hustling little town of Quincy in Gadsden Co., in the extreme northern part of the state and the banner county; it is the county where there are so many Northern syndicates raising cigar tobacco, and everything is on a boom. Tobacco sells at from forty-five to sixty-five cents per pound for shade grown, and from twenty to twenty-five and thirty for sun grown; there are millions of pounds grown every year, the yield is from eight hundred to fourteen hundred pounds per acre according to amount and kinds of fertilizer used. Vegetable and poultry-raising is very profitable also, and dairying and stock-raising for beef.

Quincy is a thriving little town of about two thousand inhabitants, with a fine opening for a good hotel; there are two small ones, and one or two public boarding houses, but it is almost impossible to get hotel accommodation as all the hotels and boarding houses, and every private family who will take boarders or let rooms are crowded. Traveling men often have to sit up all night for lack of rooms. We have four churches, two hardware, nine grocery, thirteen general merchandise, two millinery stores, five drug stores, one bakery, one Chinese laundry, and to our shame be it said, five barrooms, but we are working hard to drive them out, and I think will be successful. We also have two ice plants, and another nearing completion, and the town has its own electric lights and waterworks, and one private light plant, and a telephone exchange out in the country to the tobacco farms, and to several small villages in the country. We have two railroads with bright prospects for two more, with several more brick stores in course of erection.

MRS. A. A. RANDALL, Box 361, Quincy, Fla.

MRS. A. A. RANDALL, Box 361, Quincy, Fla.

DEAR COMPORT SISTERS:

I have lived in Colorado for seven years in a small town called Florence. It is situated in the Arkansas valley, thirty-four miles west of Pueblo, ten miles east of Cannon City, where the state penitentiary is.

We have good water here as it is brought through pipes from the mountains, a distance of ten miles. The well water is alkali, and does not agree with everyone who comes and who has been used to soft water.

Colorado has an ideal climate, more days of sunshine than most any other state. The winters are mild. We have more snow in the spring than in the first of the winter. Our summers are not so hot, and always cool at night.

Trout abounds in all the mountain streams. There are deer in the hills which a person is allowed to hunt so many days each year. The game law prohibits anyone from killing more than one deer each season.

Fruits of all kinds grow in abundance. Irrigation to nunt so many days each year. The game law prohibits anyone from killing more than one deer each season.

Fruits of all kinds grow in abundance. Irrigation is used in all kinds of farming. The land is worth from twenty-five dollars to five hundred dollars per acre. The school system is extra good. We have good Sunday schools, and fine churches, seven or eight different denominations in all.

I would like to know how many of the Comport sisters have twin babies. My husband and I have quite a little family of girls, eight in all. Our last are twins, they are cute, and look so much alike I can hardly tell one from the other.

All of our children are subject to croup when they are small. The first thing I do when I hear them begin to cough hoarse (for I know what is coming) is to give them a dose of castor oil. If it makes them vomit so much the better. Then I get some lard, or mutton tallow, and a few drops of turpentine, and three or four drops of kerosene, and a little camphor. I set it on the stove and melt it all together, then I get a woolen cloth and spread the mixture on it, and put it on their chest, it soon gives relief, and they go to sleep and rest easy. I always keep camphor ready for use. I hope this may help some mothers who have little ones.

Mrs. B. Anderson, Florence, Col.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:
May I come in for a chat with the sisters? First of all I will give a pen picture of myself.
I am five feet one inch tall, light complexion, blue eyes, and weigh about one hundred and twenty pounds.
For the past thirteen years I have suffered from nervous trouble, so I can do but very little work, but I do love and enjoy to read the sisters' letters; they are full of information, and most interesting to me.

Dear Mrs. Rush. You must enjoy living, how I should like to be with you.

J. A. D. I read your letters over and over, how kind and good you are.

Mrs. E. O. Nelson. If you send me stamped addressed envelope I will send you different kind of flower seeds.

E. O. Stokes. Please come again, and tell us of the Maori race of people, I never heard of them before.

the Maori race of people, I never heard or them before.

Mrs. Myrtle Rickard. You may be young, but you have some good ideas, and I should say, lots of common sense. I shall watch for your next letter.

Miss Lizzie Moulton. The bead centerpiece must be very handsome. I think I should enjoy doing such work.

I have a favor to ask, will all the sisters who can, please send me pieces of white lawn thirteen inches square?

Miss Mary J. Heyer, 44 Whitfield St., Nazareth,

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:
At last I will venture to write, and will begin by giving a description of myself.
I am a farmer's daughter living four miles west of Carthage, on a farm, in a pretty, large farmhouse, nestled among tall cottonwood and pine trees. I weigh one hundred and twenty-one pounds, and five feet and two inches in height, black hair and hazel eyes, and twenty-six years old.

H. C. Dunham. I offer my sympathy as I have old.

H. C. Dunham. I offer my sympathy as I have a similar affliction.

Retta Sweeney. I enjoyed your ghost story very much, though I do not believe in ghosts myself. Should I venture to suggest that may have been the reflection of a lantern used by some one around the house as I had a similar experience, it may have been the same in your case.

How many of the sisters think that Mrs. E. L. Culverwell gave the best account of the San Francisco earthquake? I enjoyed and understood it the best of any I ever read.

I am particularly interested in fancy work, and will tell the sisters how I made a 'pretty foot rest; take a small-sized box, and quite a number of empty spools cut in halves, and glue all around in different positions, paint all some pretty color, and cushion the top with velvet of the same or contrasting shade; if desired put hinges on the top and it can be used for a work basket also. Will the sisters try this, and report if successful? I am very much interested in the story St. Elmo.

If any of you have an old clock that stops here is my remedy: Take a piece of cotton, dip in kerosense, and put in the bottom of clock. It will keep it in regular order.

I should be much pleased to hear from the young people living in other states, and will try to answer all letters.

Muss Jennie Markey, Carthage, R. F. D., 4, Ill.

Editor Comfort Sisters' Corner:

sea coast send me a few seashells, mostly large ones. I will return all favors in any way possible. Mrs. Ida Burris, Moreland, R. F. D., 1, Ark.

sea coast send me a few seashells, mostly large ones. I will return all favors in any way possible. MRS. IDA BURRIS, MOreland, R. F. D., 1, Ark.

Dear Editor and Sisters:

Will you permit old Grandma, a crippled shut-in, to enter your corner, if so it will be highly appreciated? Reading your interesting letters so full of good cheer and comfort have very much endeared you all to me.

I have been a silent reader of Comfort for quite a while. It is a magazine I highly prize and always a welcome guest.

Ten years ago the eighth of last March I happened to have the sad misfortune to fall and was so badly crippled I have never been able to walk since that time. I sit in a rocker at a certain place in my room very nearly all the time. I sometimes imagine that if I had a rolling chair I could go to the windows and doors, out into the yard maybe, and view the beauties of nature, the flowers, the green fields, the woods, etc.; it would animate me and tend to while away the hours more pleasantly and enjoyably. But my burden is not brightened by many of earth's pleasures. It seems that to me is given the grinding weight of dependence and privation. But suffering in this world is inevitable and necessary in God's Providence. He knows best for us. He makes no mistakes.

Pray, for me, sisters, that I may patiently bear my burdens, that through the bearing of them I may reap the reward of being by Him made perfect through suffering.

The good Lord has allowed me the balm of human sympathy, and in the hours of pain I reach out for that help. It is a gracious privilege to look up through tears and sing:

"Jesus lover of my soul,

Let me to thy bosom fly."

And also a precious privilege to be able to sit up, read and write to relatives and friends. I am truly thankful that my case, though a sad one, is not any worse. It seems there is no condition but what could be worse. There is a woman who lives a few miles away who is a shut-in and blind. I can deeply sympathize with her; if she could see to read and behold the faces of her

Wishing you much faithfully yours,
GRANDMA HATTIE, Woodbury, Ga.

Tested Recipes from Comfort Sisters The writer's name or initials will appear at the end of one or more of the recipes.—Editor.

Custard Pie

Beat up the yolks of three eggs to a cream, stir thoroughly a tablespoonful of sifted flour into three tablespoonfuls of sugar. This separates the particles of flour so that there will be no lumps; then add to it the beaten yolks, put in a pinch of salt, a teaspoonful of vanilla, and a little grated nutmeg, next the well-beaten whites of the eggs. and lastly, a pint of scalded milk (not boiled), which has been cooled; mix this in by degrees, and turn all into a deep pie tin, lined with puff paste, and bake from twenty-five to thirty minutes.

MRS. R. J. BORSACG, 708 BOSSWOTH AVE., Chicago, Ill.

Squash Ple

Stew the squash, mash and put through a sieve; to one cup of the squash add one egg, half a cup of sugar, one teaspoonful each of ground cinnamon and cloves, half a teaspoonful of ground ginger, two cups of sweet milk. Bake with one crust.

Cream Pie

Line a plate with crust, prick with a fork before putting into the oven; this will prevent the crust from blistering, and while hot fill with the following cream, which has been cooked five minutes in a double boiler: One pint of sweet milk, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, yolks of two eggs, one and one half tablespoonfuls of forn starch, wet with a little of the cold milk, piece of butter size of a hickory-nut; beat all together and cook with the boiling milk five minutes, then fill the crust, beat whites of two eggs to a stiff froth, add two tablespoonfuls of white sugar, beat a moment, and spread over pie, sprinkle over with grated cocoanut if desired.

Fruit Salad for Comfort Dinner.

Fruit Salad for Comfort Dinner

Scoop out center of apples to form a cup, and fill with the following equal parts of apple, celery and nuts, mayonnaise or cream dressings. Stick a sprig of celery into the top of each and stand apple on lettuce leaf.

Cream Dressing

Put half a cup of milk or cream in double boiler, when boiling add two eggs well beaten, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, piece of butter half the size of spanegg, a teaspoonful of ground mustard, a little pepper; cook until smooth, remove from the fire and add slowly half a cup of vinegar, and half a teaspoonful of salt. When cold pour over salad.

Pickled Red Cabbage

Slice into a colander, sprinkle each layer with salt; let it drain two days, then put into a jar, pour boiling vinegar enough to cover over it. A few pieces of beets gives a nice color. Choose purple red cabbage. If you like spice with it put whole cinnamon, cloves, mustard seed in a small muslin bag, and place in jar before pouring the boiling vinegar over. Cauliflower cut up in small pieces, and thrown in the jar after being salted, will look red and beautiful.

Buckwheat Cakes

Buckwheat Cakes

Allow three cups of buckwheat flour to one half cup of white flour; one tablespoonful of corn meal, one tablespoonful of cooking molasses; one teaspoonful of salt, one compressed yeast cake (or one cake magic yeast,) mix with warm water or milk, let rise over night. In the morning, thin to the consistency of regular batter cake mixture, and fry on hot cake griddle. Be sure to reserve at least a cupful of the batter. After breakfast mix again same as before, only leave out the yeast, as the cupful is enough, the next morning add half a teaspoonful of baking soda, dissolved in a little warm water. The batter can be kept in this way all winter, and gradually assumes a slightly acid taste which many enjoy. The soda partially removes that.

Sausage

Sausage

To every ten pounds of lean pork use two pounds of fat pork; chop very fine, or run through meat (CONTINUED ON PAGE 13.)

$2.50 A MONTH To buys a genuine KIMBALL ORGAN

AT FACTORY PRICES
Stool and Music Book FREE
If you write us at once.
We now sell the famous KIMBALL ORGANS direct to reliable people at factory prices on easy payments—$2.50 monthly and upwards, if desired.
If you want an organ at all you want a good one, a mere pretty case with no music in it will not do.
Secure at once the old reliable Kimbail Organ at Factory Prices and pay on convenient terms.

We start you, furnishing complete small capital.

outfits and explicit instructions at a surprisingly low cost.

THE FIELD IS LARGE, comprising the regular theat and lecture circuit, also local fields in Churches, Public School ngs. Our Entertainment Supply Catalogue fully explanations St., Dept. 166, Chicago

$3 a Day Sure Send us your address and we will show you make $3 a day. furnish the work and teach pour free, you work in the locality where you live. Send us your address and we will explain the business fully, remember we guarantee a clear profit of $3 for every day's work, absolutely sura. Write at once, BOIAL MANUFACTURING CO., Box 1700 Detroit, Mich.

VETERINARY COURSE AT HOME. $1200 year and upwards can be made taking our Veterinar English; Diploma granted, positions obtained for successful stu-dents; cost within reach of all; satisfaction guaranteed; particu-NARY CORRESPON-

PATENTS SECURED OR FEE RETURNED.

Free reports as to Patentability. Illustrated Guide
Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent free.
EVANS, WILKENS & CO., 840 F WASHINGTON, D. G.

BY KATE V. SAINT MAUR.

Copyright, 1907, by W. H. Gannett, Publisher. Inc.

Incubation

ARE must be taken to place the incubator so that it will not set in a draught, and it should be made as nearly level as possible. Use a spirit draught, and it should be made as nearly level as possible. Use a spirit level on top of the incubator to test it front to back, and from side to side. If a level is not at hand, use a shallow pan of water on top of the machine for the same purpose. If on top of the machine for the same purpose. If the water is the same depth on all sides, with the bottom resting evenly on the top of the in-cubator, the machine is level. Block up under the legs of the machine until you get it right. If the body of the incubator is not level, the egg chamber will not heat evenly; therefore, be sure that the machine is as nearly even as possible. Be sure it sets firmly. possible. Be sure it sets firmly

Warming Up

When starting the incubator, run with low lamp flame until the machine is thoroughly warmed through. Then run with a moderately high lamp flame, and adjust the regulating device according to the manufacturer's directions. After securing the proper adjustment, the machine should run evenly at a temperature of 102 1.2 to 103 in the egg chember with the the machine should run evenly at a temperature of 102 1-2 to 103 in the egg chamber, with the center of the thermometer bulb two inches from the bottom of the egg tray.

Maintain this temperature throughout the hatch. Run the incubator empty for a few days until you become familiar with it, and are sure that the regulating device is working properly. After you are sure you understand the operation of the machine, and can run it at an even temperature, the eggs may be put in. an even temperature, the eggs may be put in. Do not put in the eggs until you can run the empty incubator at an even temperature.

Supply Fresh Air

Be sure that there is an abundant supply of fresh air in the incubator room at all times. A serious mistake of beginners is being afraid that a little fresh air will jeopardize the hatch. It is important to remember that if you have one hundred and fifty living germs in an incubator, all those living organisms are consuming oxygen every day, and every minute of the day, hence, it is important that they be supplied with that life-giving element.

If the incubator is a moderately warm place, say about 60 degrees, more air can be admitted to the machine, and the eggs can be cooled and aired a longer time than if the machine is in a considerably colder place. This means that cooling and airing the eggs should be much less in cold weather than in mild, spring weather. Then, too, you can do decidedly more cooling and airing the last third of the hatch than earlier, and the living embryos will be the better for it.

be the better for it.

The practice of operators varies considerably, some cooling and airing the eggs a great deal after the first week; and there are some who cool and air from the very start almost. Generally speaking, however, if the incubator is in a cool place it will be found that the eggs get sufficiently cooled and aired at the daily turning the first week then a few minutes a day. sufficiently cooled and aired at the daily turning the first week, then a few minutes a day the second week, and the last week (up to the time of pipping) ten to fifteen minutes a day is none too much. Indeed, if the animal heat in the eggs is strong, and the temperature of the incubator room is 60 degrees or above, quite a long airing daily will be beneficial.

Don't be afraid of giving the embryo chicks shut up within the erg shells too much fresh

Don't be afraid of giving the embryo chicks shut up within the egg shells too much fresh air to breathe,—the errors are all in the other direction. One man, for example, stuffed rags into every crack and crevice, to keep out the life-giving oxygen in the air! He will save a few cents' worth of oil by keeping out the cool air, but at the expense of vitality and vigor of the chicks—and some of them may be so weakened by the lack of fresh air to breathe, that they may not be able to struggle out of the that they may not be able to struggle out of the shells.

Care of the Lamp

Keep the incubator lamp clean. Put in a new wick when starting each hatch. Be sure to trim the wick and fill the lamp after turning the eggs every morning. Never attend to the lamp and handle the eggs with oily hands. Carelessness of that kind has ruined many hatches. Keep the perforations in the disc about the wick tube of the lamp burner clean and open, and do not allow crusts to accumuand open, and do not allow crusts to accumulate on the wick tube. Use only the best grade of kerosene oil.

In filling the lamp, be careful not to run the oil over; have it full, but not too full. Always run a lamp flame of sufficient height so that it can be turned higher or lower as needed. Never turn the flame high enough to cause the lamp to smoke.

Testing the Eggs

An egg tester is furnished with every incu-An egg tester is furnished with every incubator, and hens' eggs should be tested twice during every hatch. Experienced operators will make their first test on the sixth day, but it is easier for the beginner to test on the tenth day. Do not turn the eggs on testing day, as handling them while testing will stir them up all that is necessary. In cold weather test the eggs in a warm room. When the egg tray is removed, close the door of the machine.

The egg tester should be ready for use in a removed, close the door of the machine.

The egg tester should be ready for use in a dark room, and it is more convenient to provide an extra tray, in which to place the fertile eggs and a basket for the infertile ones and dead germs. By holding the eggs before the opening in the egg tester, which has been placed on a lighted lamp, the operator will be able to examine the contents. The infertile eggs will be perfectly clear, or only show a slight shadow of the yolk.

The dead germs are not so easy to recognize, and a little practice is necessary to identify them.

Many dead germs will show a small, irregular red line, apparently adhering to the inside of the shell, or a broken circle of red containing a dark brown spot. The operator will soon be-come familiar with the various types of dead one laminar who and putrid eggs.

On the sixth day the live egg is easily recognized, as it contains a spider-like arrangement of blood vessels, in the midst of which appears a small irregular dark body which the embryo, a small irregular dark body which has pulsating motion, and appears to be float-ing in the center of the network of blood ves-on the center of the network of blood vessels which radiate from it.

On the tenth day the larger portion of the fertile egg appears dark, with a fair-sized air space at the large end. Mark any doubtful eggs and let them remain in the machine until the next test.

When the trayful has been tested, and the when the trayful has been tested, and the infertile eggs and dead germs removed, the live eggs should be returned to the incubator. The infertile eggs may be cooked and fed to large brooder chicks, growing stock, or breeding birds. Do not feed eggs to newly-hatched chicks.

chicks.

The second test should be made on the seventeenth or eighteenth day. All live germs will now appear to fill the greater part of the egg, making it opaque when held before the tester. The air cell will be considerably interested in size and may show a slightly iregg, making it opaque when held before the tester. The air cell will be considerably increased in size, and may show a slightly irregular outline. Dead germs will show a streaky or mottled appearance. All dead germs and any eggs, marked doubtful at the first test, which have failed to develop, should be removed at this time.

Do not be in a hurry to open the machine at the end of the hatch; your chicks will not die of starvation; nature has provided for all their requirements for at least forty-eight hours after exclusion, and more chicks are killed by opening the machine, perhaps with a view of saving some chick which it is thought can not get out by itself, than by any other means. The chick that has to be assisted out of the shell is never any good, and in saving, or try-ing to save, the one, you may kill fifty others.

Correspondence

W. H. C. H.—Are Rhode Island Reds as large as Plymouth Rocks? Are they as good layers and hustlers? Are they healthy chickens? (2) What is good for cholera?

good for cholera?

A.—Rhode Island Reds are not so heavy as Plymouth Rocks, being small boned; are always plump, which makes excellent broilers and roasters; are better hustlers than the Rocks, and excellent layers, healthy and handy. (2) Cholera is a contagious disease. Remove the birds showing any tendency to the complaint from the general flock.

any tendency to the complaint from the general flock.

Add to each quart of drinking water for the sick birds: Spirits of camphor, one teaspoonful, and one fourth ounce of sulpho-carbolate of zinc. The sulpho-carbolate of zinc should be white in color. The more red it shows, the more impure and irritating it is. Much of the sulpho-carbolate offered is not white, and should be avoided for internal use. You will notice that this salt of zinc is often suggested by me. I get much satisfaction from it as an internal antiseptic. For drinking water for the apparently well birds, add to every quart, one eighth ounce sulpho-carbolate of zince.

If the diarrhea is excessive, give a pill of "Dover's Powder," one grain every two hours until the discharge lessens. The opium in the pill relieves pain and quiets the muscular action of the bowels. The diet question is difficult to solve. Anything bulky is out of the question, if indeed the bird does not solve this by refusing to eat at all. Highly concentrated food is needed to sustain life—something easily digested; and this requirement is best found in meat fuice. One tablespoonful, every four hours, given by means of a glass dropping tube or a spoon, will help the case. The meat juice is prepared by half cooking steak, squeezing the liquid out, and adding a little salt and pepper.

L. C.—Will ducks hatch successfully in an incubator, and would a machine heated by steam be out, and adding a little salt and pepper.

L. C.—Will ducks hatch successfully in an incubator, and would a machine heated by steam be better than hot air?

A.—Ducks' eggs hatch splendidly in an incubator. I have always used the same hot-air make as for hens' eggs, only putting a sponge, partly squeezed out of hot water, into the egg chamber as soon as the eggs begin to pip. Ducks take much longer to break out of the shell after pipping than chickens do, so don't get nervous and think they are dying in the shell, and spoil the hatch by perpetually opening the door to help them out. Given sufficient moisture, they will pick their own way from the shell in eight or nine hours.

Note to Correspondents.—Space compels leaving

Note to Correspondents.—Space compels leaving several letters, which do not demand immediate answers, until next month.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

Tested Recipes from Comfort Sisters

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12.)

cutter, allow one quarter of a pound of salt, four teaspoonfuls of ground black pepper; one quarter of a cup of sage. Warm the meat a little so you can mix all thoroughly, pack in stone crock, or shallow pans, the latter is preferable, as it will form into a solid mould, and can be turned out of the pan and sliced to fry.

Corn Pone

Two cups corn meal, one teaspoonful of salt, three level teaspoonfuls of lard, cottolene or butter, one egg, one tablespoonful of sweet milk. Mix the salt and meal together dry, put the shortening in the center, and pour over enough boiling water to wet the meal. Beat well, and bake in a very hot oven about fitteen minutes. The baking pan should be hissing hot and well greased.

Syrup for Cake

Three cups brown sugar, two cups water, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, boil until thick. A little maple sugar can be added, if desired, to give it a flavor. If white syrup is wished, make it of granulated sugar. Now comes the dyspeptics bread.

Rye Bread

One pint rye flour, half pint corn meal, half pint white flour, one teaspoonful of sugar (or if liked very sweet, half a cup of molasses), one teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of lard, cottolene or butter, cake of compressed yeast (or one of magic yeast), set to rise the same as any bread, only do not mix too stiff.

Laxative Bread

Oatmeal, graham, and white flour equal proportions, for one pint of each, use one teaspoonful of salt, half cup molasses, one cake of yeast, and mix same as any bread. Sift bran, use equal portions of that and corn meal for bread, always sweetening with molasses, and not mixing too stiff, using yeast, and salt as for any bread.

Entire Wheat Bread

Entire Wheat Bread
Two quarts of unsifted entire wheat flour, one and a half pints of warm water, one tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of sugar, half a tablespoonful of salt, one cake of yeast. This ought to make three loaves. Never knead any of the above breads as much as white flour bread. Entire wheat flour is made from the whole wheat, with the coarse husk discarded, graham flour is the coarse ground wheat meal, many confound the graham with the entire wheat, but they are very different.

Swedish Bread

One pint barley meal, half pint graham flour, half pint white flour, one teaspoonful of salt, one pint sweet milk, cake of yeast, set to rise over night, do not mix too stiff.

"J. A. D." (Mrs. Van DYKE.)

We Need Secretaries!

top to bottom! It would cost a lot of money to get all that like to have—hundreds of dollars.

Pretty big pay for a few hours of pleasant work that you could do without any preparation. But that's just what we're offering you. We need a Secretary in your neighborhoodamong your most inti-mate women friends. We don't ask you to do any work whatever among strangers.

All we ask you to do is to tell ten women you know how much they can save by buying their Household Supplies—Food Products, Soaps, Toilet Articles, etc.— things they pay out a big share of the family income for, every week-how much they can save by buying these things from the Walker factories at Pittsburg.

They'll get the idea. They'll thank you for the favor. Because we can prove to

NEW Furniture for than they are now buying at half the price your home from they are now paving

And you and they get beautiful household furnishings—Chairs, Tables, Desks, Rugs, Chinaware, Silverware, Stoves—all of the furniture-and especially the kind you'd finest quality and best workmanship, as presents.

We can afford to do this because we sell direct to the consumer.

You can see what a lot of expense we cut out, that you have had to bear-wholesalers'profits, traveling men's expenses, retailers' profits, etc. We give you the saving. Our customers get twice as much from us as from storekeepers for the same money. We have millions of customers. Our factories cover fifteen acres of ground. We can afford to take the minimum of profit. Investigate us! We've been in business 70 years. We'd be glad to have you know all about us. Now don't let some other woman get ahead of you. Drop us a postal card asking for our Secretaryship plan and our Big, Free, Drop us a postal card asking for you and you can prove to them that we Illustrated Catalogue before you put this furnish you better Household Necessities magazine away. Do It Now.

W. & H. WALKER, Club Department B-14, PITTSBURG, PA.

Both the handsome pieces of furniture here shown, are samples of what you can get for acting as Secretary of a Walker

Club---or you can select from 1,400 other articles fully described in our catalogue.

Recipe for Watermelon Cake

Two cups powdered sugar, three fourths cup butter, three fourths cup sweet milk, three cups form, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, white of five eggs.

Red Part

One cup red sugar, one half cup butter, three fourths cup sweet milk, two cups flour, one teaspoonful baking powder, yolks of five egg, one half pound raisins, if desired. The raisins are to represent the seeds

MISS MARY J. HEYET, Nazareth, Pa.

Deviled Tomatoes

Deviled Tomatoes

Remove the skins from three tomatoes, and cut each in three slices, season with salt and pepper, dredge with flour, and put on small pieces of butter, place on dish and pour over the dressing; cream four tablespoonfuls butter and two teaspoonfuls sugar, one teaspoonful mustard, one quarter teaspoonful salt, a few grains cayenne, one egg yolk, which has been boiled, rolled to paste, one whole egg beaten, and two tablespoonfuls vinegar; cook until it thickens.

MRS. FORCE.

Superb Fruit Salad

Superb Fruit Jalad

Six medium-sized apples, one cupful nut meats, chop apples and nuts fine, then add six bananas, or seven, cut up small, and the pulp and juice of six oranges, add two tablespoonfuls of good salad dressing and a dash of vinegar and salt. Then sugar to taste. Make cups of scooped out oranges, notched at top, or orange baskets, and fill. This is filling for about one dozen oranges—and is delicious. Try it and tell me how you like it.

MRS. P. MORAST.

Molasses Cookies

Take a large coffee cup: put in one teaspoonful ginger, one teaspoonful soda, three tablespoonfuls sugar, three tablespoonfuls of hot water, three tablespoonfuls of melted lard, fill the cups with molasses, stir until mixed, pour in the flour, then prepare another, if you like a nice batch. They are to be rolled very thin and baked in a quick oven.

Mrs. Charles E. Nichols.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 21.)

Big Money in Poultry

Our big Poultry book talls how to make it. How to breed, feed and market for best results. 100 dillustrations. Describes largest pure bred poultry farm in the world. Tells how to start small and grow big. All about our 30 leading varieties. Quotes lowest prices on fowls. eggs, incubators and brooders. Mailed for 4 cts.

F. FOY, Box 2 ,Des Moines, Iowa

LEARN VETERINARY DENTISTRY and $2000 a year.' We teach you at home in make $2000 three months of your spare time by illustrated lectures and grant diploma with degree. Particulars Free. Detroit Veterinary Dentail College, Detroit, Mich.

$65 PER MONTH Straight Salary and expenses, to men with rig, to introduce our Poultry Remedies. Bank ref's given. Don't ans'r unless you mean business. Eureka Poultry Food Mfg. Co., Dept. 40, East St. Louis, III.

SEEDS

$1.50 Worth to Test Only 10 Cents
I want you to try my Superior Seeds. One Trial will make a Customer. I will mail one Full Packet each of the following 15 Grand
New Sorts for only 10 cts. These would cost at least $1.50 elsewhere.

New Sorts for only 10 cts. These would cost at least $1.50 elsewhere. BEET, Perfected Red Turnip, earliest, best. CABBAGE, Winter Header, sure header, fine. CARROT, Perfected Half Long, best table sort. CARROT, Perfected Half Long, best table sort. CELERY, Winter Giant, large, crisp, good. CUCUMBER, Family Favorite, favorite sort. LETTUCE, Crisp as Ice, heads early, tender. MUSK MELON, Luscious Gen, best grown. WATERMELON, Bell's Early, extra fine. This 10 cts. returned on first 25c. ord

SOLO GUITAR This is a full size solo instrument of American manufacture, well and carefully made with a cherry finish and richly ornamented.

It is all strung with six strings, gives a clear rich tone, easy to hold, as durable and satisfactory as a $10.00 Guitar. With every instrument we give Free a SelfInstruction Book; by its aid anyone can easily learn to play by note. We guarantee satisfaction. Send us your name and address for 24 packages of Bluine to sell at 10 cents each. Every housewife can make good use of Bluine on washdays. Return our $2.40 and we will immediately send you the guitar and instruction book. Write today.

BLUINE MFG. CO., (The old Reliable Firm.) Concord Junct., Mass.

A Corner for Boys

By Uncle John

When Felix Won

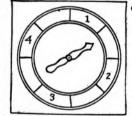

When Petix Won

Said little Tom Teaser to fat Felix Fogg,
"I'll run you a footrace from here to that log."
"Agreed," chuckled Felix, with evident mirth,
And both started running for all they were worth.
Now Tom, being nimble, could go like the wind,
So cumbersome Felix was left far behind.
But when they arrived at the goal-marking log,
Right out from behind it there leaped a big dog.
"Oh, wait for me, save me, my feet are like lead!"
Yelled Tommy, for Felix was forging ahead.
"I have no time to tarry," the big boy did cry,
"Besides you're a much faster runner than I."
And so Tom the tease, who could run like the wind,
Was left several rods and some drygoods behind.

Indoor Game

Boys who love the national game now have a chance to play it all winter. First, however, we must make our diamond and scoring apparatus out of cardboard. Procure a piece one foot square, and mark out the four bases, just as they are on a real ball field, also cut five little tabs to be used as layers. On another piece of the same size draw a dial like the face of a clock, marking it with four alternate numbers and ciphers as shown in cut. The arrow or indicator is fastened with a pin, and we are ready to begin. The first player whirls the arrow with a sharp blow of the finger. If the point stops at two he has made a two base hit and marks it by putting a little tab on second base. If his next trial results the same way, he has forced the first man in thus scoring a run. Every time the arrow stops at a blank, it is one out, and three out, of course, constitute an inning. If a tie results, more than nine innings may be played. The cuts make everything so plain that you can go right ahead and play this game if you wish.

Code Writing

Wouldn't you like to be able to write in such Wouldn't you like to be able to write in such a way that no one could read your note only the person to whom it was addressed? A simple and puzzling code is to use one letter back of the one you really mean, that is to use the character that occurs in the alphabet just before the one you want to write. For instance of "d" use "c" and so on. The word "boy" written according to this code would be "anx." Here is the sentence, "Will you come?" "Vhnn xnt bnld?" Now wouldn't that puzzle anyone not in the secret? With a little practice you can become very proficient in this puzzle writing, and will certainly excite a good deal of wonderment.

Baby Cart

trai part of the axies are square and to them are tacked the bottom of the box. That part of the axie that fits through the spool is round, and fits loosely, for the spools turn and the axies do not. Pins or tacks are put through the outside ends to keep the wheels from falling off. A cord will serve to pull the wagon around.

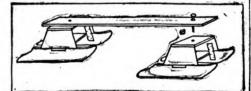

Clothes Line Hanging

Some things escape one's notice by reason of their utter simplicity. Take for instance the little knack of putting up a wire line. One will frequently spend time looking for or making a hook or other device to attach to the post, when, as a matter of fact no such device is needed. Simply device is needed. Simply bore a hole in the post or barn, stick the wire through and give it a couple of twists, so it cannot pull out. Every boy can utilize this scheme in the manner shown by the cut, and it is the neatest and quickest way out of an every-day difficulty.

Bob Sled

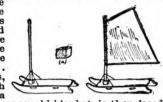

we put crosspieces on top, drill a hole in the center of each, place over same plank with corresponding holes bored, and drop into each hole a long and rather loosely fitting bolt. The only thing now lacking is a hill, and the right

A Sail Sled

If you have never tried sailing on a sled you have missed a good deal of sport. First get a tough, pliable five-foot pole, hickory preferred, and mount it upright on the front of the sled. This may be done by boring a hole through a short piece of scantling "a," fitting the end of the pole into the socket thus prepared and then nailing the block to the block to the front end of the sled seat. Heavy canvas, in lieu of which you may use a piece of carpet, or an old blanket, is then laced to the pole. The end of the sail should be high enough from the sled to permit a person's sitting on same. A small strip of light wood is tacked on the border of the sail so that it may be more easily managed, and a guide line is attached to the lower end. Now with a good stretch of smooth road or ice you are due to have some real fun.

Jerry, the Backwoods Boy

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE S.)

get another rose and then exchange with you."

"I don't see what advantage there would be in that," said Mabel, with provoking obtuse-

"But you will agree to it, nevertheless."
"No, sir, I shall not encourage you in your whims. It is time you began to exercise a little elf-denial." whims. "But you know I am not used to that."

"So much the better. Perhaps, under my training, I may be able to make something of "Will you, indeed, take me under your training, Mabel?" asked the young man earnestly. "I fear it would be too great an undertaking," said she, shaking her head. "I am afraid you would make a very troublesome responsibility. Perhaps Mehitable—"

"Confound Mehitable!"

"What has poor Mehitable done? Do you think I will stand still and hear her abused in "What has poor Mehitable done? Do you think I will stand still and hear her abused in such fashion?"

"Oh, I have no doubt she is a very estimable old lady—"

"Old lady! It would be hardly safe for her to hear you speak of her thus. By her own account she is only about thirty."

"Heaven preserve her then from ever living till sixty! She will look old enough to be the great-grandmother of all living."

"Poor Mehitable! I see you have a prejudice against her. But how we have been wasting our time! If you will come to the house with me, I will give you some cake of my own making."

"That will certainly be a powerful inducement. But why need we be in haste? It is so much pleasanter here in the open air."

"I don't feel as if my friendship for Mehitable should permit me to remain longer with one who is so wanting in appreciation of her charms."

"But, Mabel," said the young man, "I am ready to make amends for that."

"How! By proposing to the young lady? I think she will accept you."

"How provoking you are, Mabel! But since you have tempted me, I am going to be guilty of an act of daring."

"I' Tempting you to an act of daring! I think, Henry, that you overrate my influence!"

"You are quite incorrigible!"

"I am glad you admit it. Now you will see how hopeless a task it will be to attempt reforming me."

While the latter part of the conversation was going on, they had gradually advanced to the base of an old tree of huge proportions—a perfect Titan among the forest trees—under which, for convenience' sake, a seat had been erected.

"Sit down a moment, Mabel," said young Davenpert, with a sudden change of tone." erected.

"Sit down a moment, Mabel," said young Davenport, with a sudden change of tone; "there is something I have wished to say to you for a long time. I feel that the time has come for saying it now."

come for saying it now."
"Perhaps you are about to confess some guilt that lies heavily on your soul," said Mabel lightly, although her heart beat faster than its wont, for with the subtle premonition of a true woman, she felt what it was that Henry Davenport was about to say.
"I am, indeed, about to make a confession," said the youth sortivals, continue himself her."

said the youth seriously, seating himself beside said the youth seriously, seating minious her.

She did not venture to look up, for she knew that she could not meet the steady gaze of his eyes, without betraying her own feelings.

"I am ready to hear your confession," she returned, while mechanically she began to pull apart the rose, which had been the subject of dispute between them.

"I hope, Mabel, you are not unprepared to hear that I love you," said the young man abruptly. "Pardon my coming to the point so bluntly, but I cannot help following the bent of my feelings."

The roses were brighter than ever on Mabel's cheek, but she could not avoid giving way to her natural archness.

"It is a worse offense than I anticipated," she said, "but if you do truly and sincerely repent of it, I may extend you my forgiveness."

"No, no," said the young man eagerly. "I do not feel the slightest particle." "No, no," said the young man eagerly. "I do not feel the slightest particle of repentance."

"But, perhaps, if you make a slight ef-

"Pardon me; that I have no intention of doing."
"Then," said Mabel demurely, "I am afraid I shall have to forgive you on your own terms.

She looked so attractive at that moment—l eyes half veiled in maiden shyness, her cheeks tinged with a crimson flush—and her answer conveyed so much hope and encouragment, that Henry Davenport may be pardoned for yielding to the temptation to which he was subjected and steeling a kies.

subjected, and stealing a kiss.

The action was so sudden that he was completely successful. [See first page illustration.]

"How dare you, Henry!" exclaimed Mabel, who was not, however, very seriously offended, when her intended rebuke was cut short in an unexpected manner. unexpected manner.

The sound of a laugh, half-suppressed and suddenly checked, smote upon the ears of both at the same moment. Mabel with a deep blush separated herself from the embrace of her lover, and looked about her with an air of confusion. The young man started to his feet and looked in various directions for the author of the unpleasant interruption, but no one appeared to be in sight.

"Did you hear a noise, Mabel?" he asked.

"That sounded like someone laughing!"
"Yes!"

At this moment a rustling caught the attention of both, and revealed the whereabouts of the spy upon their privacy.

Perched among the branches of a tree at a little distance was Jerry, with his string of sections.

nsh.

Now it is not very pleasing to be disturbed in an agreeable tete-a-tete, and it was in a stern tone that Henry Davenport called out:

"What mischief are you doing up there,

Jerry's "I ain't doing any mischief," said the boy boldly.

"Then why did you go up there? What "Then why did you go up there? What other inducement could you have?"

"There's a good prospect from here, Mr. Davenport," said Jerry, laughing out of the corner of his eye.
"Humph!" said the young man, coloring.
"That is no answer to my question."
"I ain't responsible to you, as I know of," said the boy. "I'll answer Miss Mabel there, though perhaps it's all the same."
This was said in so droll and knowing a tone that neither Henry nor Mabel could heln that neither Henry nor Mabel could help

"Well, Jerry, come down, and I will give you something," said the young man good-hu-something," said the young man good-humoredly.

"A licking perhaps?" suggested the wily Jerry, not stirring.

"No, Jerry, of course you wouldn't stand in need of that. But here's half a dollar for you." At sight of the coin the boy slid down the tree with wonderful rapidity and presented himself before the young man.

"Of course, Jerry," said Henry, "you know that we feel an interest in you, and if you behave well you may get another."

Jerry perfectly well understood what was implied by the expression emphasized, and signified as much by a very knowing wink.

"I understand, Mr. Davenport," said he. "It ain't always necessary to tell what a feller sees. Did I tell you that Mehitable thinks she's got a beau?"

beau?"
"Mehitable got a beau?" exclaimed Mabel, forgetting her embarrassment.

"Just ask her, if you don't believe me," said Jerry, and strode off, with his half dollar in one hand and his string of fish in the other.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

This story, full of exciting incidents, of a boy, young in years, yet mature in judgment, will hold the interest of the boys and girls as well as those of more mature years. If not a subscriber send 15 cents before the price advances. Read the next chapter, "Second Thoughts," thereby keeping the thread of the story without a break.

ST. VITUS' DANCE. Sure Cure. Get Circular Dr. Fenner, Fredonia, N. Y.

MUSIC LESSONS AT YOUR HOME FREE Guitar, Mandolin, etc. Write American School sic, 211 Manhattan Building, Chicago, Ill.

CASH FOR YOUR FUR no matter where you or buy fur write today for our new plan to make extra $$ on fur. Corry Hide & Fur Co., Box 30, Corry. Pa.

Farmers' Sons Wanted with knowledge of farm R di Illici S . Gollas VV unitable edge of farm stock and fair education to work in an office, 860 a month with advancement, steady employment, must be honest and reliable. Branch offices of the association are being established in each state. Apply at once, giving full particulars. The Veterinary Science Association, Dept. 12, London, Canada.

I WILL MAKE YOU PROSPEROUS

If you are honest and ambitious write me today. No matter where you live or what your occupation. I will teach you the Real Estate business by mail; appoint you Special Representative of my Company in your town; start you in a profitable business of your own, and help you make big money at once. Unusual opportunity for men without capital to become independent for life. Valuable book and full particulars free. Write today. Address nearest office.

EDWIN R. MARDEN, Prest National Co-operative Realty Co., benneum Building, CHICAGO.

668 Athenaeum Building, CHICAGO. 668 Maryland Building, Washington, D. C.

and Don't Rust Farm Fer THE WARD FENCE CO., Box 86, Marion, Ind.

SK US HOW WE A Give this Chair and nearly 1000 other nice things for the home with orders for groceries—tea, coffee, soaps

MEN WANTED Reliable Men in every locality throughout United States and Canada to advertise our goods, tacking up show cards on trees, small advertising matter. Commission or salary $90 a month and expenses $3.50 a day. Steady employment to good reliable men. We lay out your work for you. No experience needed. Write for full particulars. SALUS MEDICINAL CO., London, Ontario, Canada.

I wish every person in the U. S. suffering with FITS, EPILEPSY or FALL-ING SICKNESS to send for one of my large-aized 16-ounce bottles FREE DR. F. E. GRANT, Dept. 54, Kansas City, Mo.

Gold Watch FREE AND RING An American Movement Welch with beautifully engraved Solid Gold Plated Case equal in appearance to a 32 year Solid Gold Plated Watch. Fully warranted to keep correct tlue. Also a Solid Rolled Gold Ring set

ly send you both the watch and ring, and a chain, ladies or testyle. ERIE MFG. CO. DEPT. 22, CHICAGO

This Rotary Persecting Preseptions of given by the sold send money ($2.40) and we will ship Press and Outfit to anyone who will give this complete Press and Outfit to anyone who will sell only 24 of our beautiful assorted articles of jewelry at 10 cents each. Just send us your name, we trust you with press and outfit complete from factory same down who will sell only 24 of our beautiful assorted articles of jewelry at 10 cents each. Just send us your name, we trust you with jewelry. When sold send money ($2.40) and we will ship Press and outfit to anyone who maked your name, we trust you with jewelry. When sold send money ($2.40) and we will ship Press and outfit complete from factory same day money is received. Send us your name today. This she premium will please you.

Souvenir Post Cards Free

The most famous Souvenir Post Card published. Millions sold and the demand increasing daily. This Card offends no one, pleases all, yet the most suitable "take off" eard we have offered. One "Everybody Works but Father" Card with three other handsome View Cards (four in all) free for four cents with name and address of some friend or neighbor who has never seen our monthly magazine.

Address COMFORT, Box A, Augusta, Maine.

FREE BOY'S AIR RIFLE return $2.40 when sold and we will send this rifle at once and a free EAGLE WATCH CO., Dept. 217, East Boston, Mass.

a full-voiced musical instrument, beautiful in tone and appearance, and suitable for furnishing music for enterinstrument and brings a high price in all the stores. We give it away absolutely free for selling only two dozen pieces of our exclusively designed, swell Jewelry. Nobody will refuse to buy of you, as our Jewelry is genuine gold plate and the best people wear our goods. Sell the Jewelry at 10 cents a piece and return our $2.40, and we will send the Accordion at once and guarantee satisfaction. This is not a cheap toy. It is a perfect instrument with ten keys, two stops, double bellows, ebonized case and nickel-plated valves and trimmings. You will be delighted with it and with our goods. Write to-day. Address

FRIEND SUPPLY CO.

DEPT. 473.

BOSTON, MASS.

BEAUTIFUL perfumed sachet, worth 25 cents, one dime INCA CO., Box 2681, BOSTON, MASS. EMA Cured by PURIFINA. 25c. Box A. Hickman, 70 Cortlandt St., N.Y

PLAYS Large List. Dialogues. Speakers, Hand Books, Drills. Catalogue free, T. S. DENISON, Pub. Dept. S. Chicago. SEWERS: Gingham Aprons. Make highest wages. Material sent to door free of charge. Stamped addressed envelope for particulars. L. P. Richards, 4504 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago.

A MONTH Expenses advanced. District Managers, men and women, to travel and leave samples at stores. People's Supply Co., F-62. 61 Plymouth Pl., Chicago.

ONG "HIT" will make you rich. Send us your Poems. Cash or Royalty for available manuscript. Wainwicent Music Co., 78-47 Evergreen av., Chicago

ASTHMA SIBBALD'S ASTHMA FUME."
Immediate relief. Physicians recommend. Hospitals use.
FIEE SAMPLE of C. H.
Chemists, 34 W. 22nd St., N. Y. UNIVERSAL MENDING TISSUE.

For mending tears in any kind of clothing. Good for cuts, burns and sores. Package 10 cents. (Dept. A.) V & X MERCHANDISE CO., Woodside, Queens Borough, N. Y. WONDER EGG BEATER & CREAM

$75 A MONT H
Sure—Patent Gem Aluminum Steam
Cooker FREE to Agents. We are the street manufecturer of Aluminum Sooking Usendit we vorid. R. f. Smith, Oakville, Pr. deserd $212 in 6 pr. stean you. Every woman needs one. We shall all but the our agents. No eapital required.
We ship

GOLD WATCH and RING FREE We positively give BOTH a guaranteed, Solid Gold Laid, finely of

STEM WIND WATCH fully

American movement. Cannot be told fro

Darken Your Gray Hair

DUBY'S OZARK HERBS restore gray, atreaked or faded hair to its natural color, beauty and softness. Prevents the hair from failing out, promotes its growth, cures and prevents dandruff, and gives the hair a soft, glossy and healthy appearance. IT WILL NOT STAIN THE SCALP, is not aticky or dirty, contains no sugar of lead, nitrate silver, copperas, or poisons of any kind, but is composed of roots, herbs, barks and flowers. PACKACE MAKES ONE PINT. It will appear to the most luxuriant treases from dry, coarse and wirey.

OZARK HERB CO., Block 3, St. Louis, Mo.

BOOKS FREE

Paint," tells everything about painting, the other, a big complete sample book, with exact shades of every color house paint, barn paint, Chinese Gloss Lacquer, for refinishing furniture (makes old articles like new), varnishes, stains, enamels, etc., shows harmonizing color selections and ur wonderfully low prices. We own our own big paint factory and sell you direct on the basis of material and labor cost, one-half what you must pay all others. Our paint is guaranteed 10 years, smoothest, easiest working, covers double the surface, lasts twice as long as others, and YOU SHARE IN OUR PROFITS.

YOU GAN GET this couch, Morris chair, or choice of hundreds of other valuable articles free, according to our revised, more liberal than ever plan of sharing profits with our custo mers, all fully explained in the FREE Paint Books, WRITE AT ONCE AND GET THE PAINT BOOKS. Address, SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO.

send 50 single pictures of beautiful subjects all new and brilliant and all different. These views will magnify to the enormous diameter of 5 feet. For promptwork we include a supply of posters and tickets so that you can earn money giving shows. Send us your name and address for only 25 packages of BLUINE, the great washing blue, to sell for us at 10 cents a package and return the $2.50 received from the sale. We will send you this lantern and complete outfit the same day you return our money. Write today. Address BLUINE MFG. CO.660 Mill St., CONCORD JUNCTION, MASS. (The old reliable firm.)

Hats, and How to Make Them

By Comfort's Home Milliner

EDITOR'S NOTE:—This is the fourth article on Hat Making. We invite you to read the first and other install-ments commencing in COMFORT'S November number. Any questions you desire answered relating to this department should be addressed to Comfort's Home Milliner, Augusta, Maine.

A DURABLE HAT. FIG. 1.

it will be time for planning the spring hats.
The first one to think about is one that can be utilized all through the sumer,—so should be of durable straw in some good color to harmonize with the spring gown,—not trimmed too elaborately, nor with perishable materials.
A dark straw trimmed with ribbon and buckles on top, trimmed with ribbon and buckles on top, and under the brim a spray of flowers of becoming shade, is about as sensible as anything. When the flowers fade others may be substituted, and after three or four months of wear pressed and put back the ribbon can be taken off, pressed and put back on, the other side out, and an almost new hat is the result.

Three hats are really needed in the summer, a good plain straw hat to be worn with wool gowns, dark skirts and shirt-waists, and when a coat is worn. Next a little more dressy hat, to be worn with linen and muslin gowns, which might be a flat, wide-brimmed, white straw, with a foliage crown and wreath of flowers. And for a church hat, to wear with silk or light wool gowns, a flower turban. With these three hats one is equipped for any emergency.

We will illustrate and describe some hats of these styles, to aid you in choosing, and help you in which primare drews, hair to be well with the while street, whit follings cross was with all for light wood gowns, a flower turban, we was with all for light wood gowns, a flower turban, we with all for light wood gowns, a flower turban, we was with all for light wood gowns, a flower turban, we was with all for light wood gowns, a flower turban, we was with all for light wood gowns, a flower turban, we was with all for light wood gowns, a flower turban, we was an extended to the control of the state, the state of the control of the state, the state of the st Notember number. Any questions you desire answered relating to this department Home Milliner, Augusts, Maine.

Y the time these instructions reach the eyes of Common readers it will be time for planning the pring hats. This style of hat may be varied in numberless ways; the brim may be faced underneath with folds of green tulle, the top of brim covered with folds of green tulle, the top of brim covered with folds of green tulle, the top of brim covered with folds of green tulle, the top of brim covered with folds of green tulle, the top of brim covered with folds of green tulle, the top of brim, put folds of tulle, or a shired lining on underside of turable straw in fresh and clean, any by two over the top of brim, put folds of tulle, or a shired lining on underside of turable straw in fresh and clean, any by that some of the straw is fresh and clean, any by that some of the straw is fresh and clean, any by the some time es one for brim-so met ime es one for brim-so met ime es one for him, put folds of tulle, or a shired lining on underside of brim-so met ime so ne time so ne time so ne time so ne time so ne to the same in the same shade, and a pray of flowers of ecoming shade, is bout as sensible as nything. When the owers fade others the same shade, and a gray be substitueed, for months of wear ressed and put back ilmost new hat is the ower for the cover, not the full flower, the brim covered with a mass of tiny roses in the same shade, and a large single rose, with foliage, placed just at the left of the front, half on the brim and on the crown, and when a coat is say hat, to be worn hich might be a flat, the foliage may be used for the crown, and the work to buy a straw to buy a frame and ribbon and flowers.

Almost every household has a lot of flowers of all thinks, and foliage, the way is not a shired in the same shade, and a large single rose, with foliage, placed just at the left of the front, half on the brim and on the crown in the foliage ro

FREE! My Book

About Curing DEAFNESS AND EYE DISEASES

I have published a new 128 page book which tells of a method by which people who are willing to devote fifteen minutes of their time of their time each day for a month or two, following my instructions, can cure them-selves without can cure themselves without leaving home or visiting a doctor, of Deafness, Head Noises, Catarrh of the Nose, Throat and Head; Cataracts of the eyes. Granulated Hds, Sore eyes, Pterygiums, Films, Wild Hairs, Eye Strains or any weakness or disease of the eye, ear, nose or throat. This book gives the causes and symptoms of each disease. It tells you not only how to cure these diseases, but how to prevent blindness and deafness.

I want to place one of these books in every home in the United States. Write me a letter or a postal card and tell me your disease and you will receive this grand book and my opinion free of charge, and learn how people from every state in the United States are restoring their sight and hearing at home by this new method.

I want no money for this neither does it place you under any obligations to me whatever. I simply desire to show and prove to you how easy it is to get perfect sight and hearing by my method. Write to me today.

DR. W. O. COFFEE 843 Century Bldg., Des Moines, Iowa

Music Lessons Free

IN YOUR OWN HOME.

A wonderful offer to every lover of music, whether a beginner or an advanced player.

Ninety-six lessons (or a less number if you desire) for either Piano, Organ, Violin, Guitar, Banjo, Cornet or Mandolin will be given free to make our home study courses for these instruments known in your locality. You will get one lesson weekly, and your only expense during the time you take the lessons will be the cost of postage and the music you use, which is small. Write at once. It will mean much to you to get our free booklet. It will place you under no obligation whatever to us if you never write again. You and your friends should know of this work. Hundreds of our pupils write: "Wish I had known of your school before." "Have learned more in one term in my home with your weekly lessons than in three terms with private teachers and at a great deal less expense." "Everything is so thorough and complete." "The lessons are marvels of simplicity, and my 11-year-old boy has not had the least trouble to learn." One minister writes: "As each succeeding lesson comes I am more and more fully persuaded I made no mistake in becoming your pupil."

We have been established seven years—have persuaded I made no mistake in company pupil."

We have been established seven years—have hundreds of pupils from eight years of age to seventy. Don't say you cannot learn music till you send for our free booklet and tuition offer. It will be sent by return mailfree. Address U. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Box 12A, 19 Union Square, New York City.

FREE 1907

We will send one sample of this pin FREE to any person who cuts out this advertisement and sends it to us with their name and address in a letter. You must also enclose a two-cent stamp to pay the postage on the pin. Only one pin sent to each family. This is a gold-plated pin. It can also be worn as a scarf pin, or the bangle can be taken off and used as a charm. The leaves are in green enamel and represent a four-leaf clover. This offer is made so that we can mail you FREE our great new illustrated Jewelry and Fancy Goods Catalogue. This pin is gold plated. Address
Lynn & Co., 48 Bond St., New York.

You pay our fee when cured and NOT UNTIL CURED. If this straightforward business proposition appeals to you, write today for proof of cures and our large illustrated book, sent absolutely FREE. Address

GERMAN-AMERICAN INSTITUTE.

902 Walnut Street, KANSAS CITY. MO.

I Pay $25 for the rare half dollars of 1853 $40 for the Stellas of 1879, $200 for 1880, $30 for the gold dollars of 1875 and $50 for the three dollars 1875. $25 for dimes 1894 m.m. S. $1 to $250 each for the Territorial coins 1849 to 1861,

CERTAIN COINS

and from $1 to $300 for thousands of other rare coins, stamps and paper money. Send a stamp for an illustrated circular it may lead to wealth and independence. Address the most reliable coin dealer. 18 years at the present location.

W. VON BERGEN, Scollay Sq., C, Boston, Mass.

TWO FOR 1UC.

We want you to see our -ew 1997 takalogue of Art Embreidery Goods. As a special Introduction Offer we will send it to you with two of these fins 16-inch inted centerpleces. Holly, Cherry, Wild Rose, Violet, Strawberry or Conventional besign, for early 19ets, Send voltay, CORONA MFG. CO., Dept. 81
291-3 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

ST. ELMO

By Mrs. Augusta J. Evans Wilson

Copyright, 1866, by G. W. Carlton.
Copyright, 1894, by Mrs. Augustus J. Evans Wilson.
Copyright, 1896, by G. W. Dillingham Co.
[All Rights Reserved.]

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Copyright, 1886, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

[All Rights Reserved.]

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Edna Earl witnesses a duel, and Harry Dent falls dead. The body is carried to the home of Aaron Hunt, Edna's grandfather. Edna goes to her grandfather. Aaron Hunt dies suddenly, and for weeks Edna retains a vague remembrance of keen anguish. She decides to go to Columbus to Chattanooga. Night comes on and she is awakened by a succession of shrill sounds and all is chaos. Edna, severely injured, is carried to the home of Mrs. Murray, who will educate her, cancity of the comes on and she is awakened by a succession of shrill sounds and all is chaos. Edna, severely injured, is carried to the home of Mrs. Murray, who will educate her, cancity of the comes of the comes

CHAPTER XXVI. (CONTINUED.)

CHAPTER XXVI. (CONTINUED.)

ITH one hand clasping Hattie's and the other resting on the back of her chair, Edna fixed her eyes on Mrs. Andrews' face, and gave the quotation.

"His house she enters, there to be a light Shining within when all without is night; A guardian angel o'er his life presiding, Doubling his pleasures and his cares dividing; Winning him back, when mingling in the throng.

Winning him back, when mingling in the throng,
From a vain world we love, alas! too long,
To fireside happiness and hours of ease,
Blest with that charm, the certainty to please.
How oft her eyes read his! her gentle mind
To all his wishes, all his thoughts inclined;
Gtill subject—ever on the watch to borrow."

CHAPTER XXVII.

CHAPTER XXVII.

MEMORY IS HARTE'S EXTRIBUTION FOR MAN'S SINS.

Flowery as Sicilian meads was the parsonage garden on that quiet afternoon late in May, when Mr. Hammond closed the honeysuckie-crowned gate, crossed the street, and walked slowly into the churchyard, down the sacred streets of the silent city of the dead, and entered the enclosure where slept his whiterobed household band.

Honey-burdened bees hummed their hymns to labor, as they swung to and fro; golden butterflies floated dreamily in and around and over the tombs, as if waiting, listening for the clarion voice of Gabriel, to rouse and reanimate the slumbering bodies beneath the gleaming slabs.

The pastor cut down the rank grass and fringy ferns, the flaunting weeds and coreopsis that threatened to choke his more delicate flowers, and, stooping, tied up the crimson pinks, and wound the tendrils of the blueveined clematis around its slender trellis, and straightened the white petunias and the orange-tinted crocaes, which the last heavy shower had beaten to the ground.

The small, gray vault was overrun with ivy, whose dark, polished leaves threatened to encroach on a plain slab of pure marble that stood very near it; and as the minister pruned away the wreaths, his eyes rested on the black letters in the centre of the slab: "Murray Hammond. Aged 21."

The old man was weary from stooping so long, and now he took off his hat and passed his hand over his forehead, and sighed as he leaned against the door of the vault, where fine, fairy-fingered mosses were weaving their green arabesque immortelles.

In a mournfully measured, yet tranquil tone, he said aloud:

"Ah! truly, throughout all the years of my life I have never heard the promise of perfect love, without seeing aloft amongst the stars, fingers as of a man's hand, writing the secret legend: 'Ashes to ashes! dust to dust!"

A low, wailing symphony throbbed through the church, where the organist was practicing; and the nout of the windows, Mozart began on earth, and finished, perhaps, in heaven. MEMORY IS BARTH'S RETRIBUTION FOR MAN'S SINS.

ering poplar that leaned against the church, and rustled its leaves caselessly, and shive and rustled its leaves caselessly, and shive she does the stack that day, when Christ staggered along the Via Dolorosa bearing his cross, carved out of poplar wood.

Leaning with his hands folded on the handle cross, on the music.

From this brief reverie some slight sound aroused him, and lifting his eyes, he saw a man clad in white lines garments, standing of the control of th

the recording angel shall be, Saved! saved! for ever and ever, through the blood of the Lamber and ever, through the blood of the Day of the place of the lamber and white head on his bosom; and once more silence fell over the darkening cemetery.

One by ne the birds hushed their twitter and went to rest, and only the soft cooing of the placens foated down now and then from the will come and hear you preach for the first time since that sunny Sabbath, for the will come and hear you preach for the will at a tree many days. Sodden, and bitter, and it after many days. Sodden, and bitter, and worthless from long to still find it after many days. Sodden, and bitter, and worthless from long to still find it after many days. Sodden, and bitter, and worthless from long to still find it after many days. Sodden, and bitter, and worthless from long to still find it after many days. Sodden, and the preach for the will always the will be all the will c for after a few more days I shall gather her back to my bosom in that eternal land where the blighting dew of death never falls.

"Atone? Ah, St. Elmo! you can atone. Save your soul, redeem your life, and I shall die blessing your name. Look at me in my lone-liness and infirmity. I am childless; you took my idols from me, long, long ago; you left my heart desolate; and now I have a right to turn to you, to stretch out my feeble, empty arms, and say, Come, be my child, fill my son's place, let me lean upon you in my old age, as I once fondly dreamed I should lean on my own Murray! St. Elmo, will you come? Will you give me your heart, my son!"

He put out his trembling hands, and a yearning tenderness shone in his eyes as he raised them to the tall, stern man before him.

Mr. Murray bent eagerly forward, and looked wonderingly at him.

"Lo you, can you mean it? It appears so impossible, and I have been so long sceptical of all nobility in my race. Will you indeed shelter Murray's murderer in your generous, loving hearit?"

"I call my God to witness, that it has been my dearest hope for dreary years that I might win your heart back before I die."

"It is but a wreck, a hideous ruin, black with sins; but such as I am, my future, my all, I lay at your feet! If there is any efficacy in bitter repentance and remorse; if there is any mercy left in my Maker's hands; if there be saving power in human will, I will atone! The strong man trembled like a wave-lashed reed, as he sank on one knee at the minister's feet, and burled his face in his arms; and spreading his palms over the drooped head, Mr. Hammond gently and solemnly blessed him. Murray stretched out one arm over the reed, as he sank on one knee at the minister's feet, and burled his face in his arms; and spreading his palms over the drooped head, Mr. Hammond gently and solemnly blessed him.

For some time both were stient, and then Mr. Murray stretched out one arm over the slau, and said brokenly:

"Kneeling here at Murray's tomb, a strange; incomprehensible feeling creeps into my heart. The fierce, burning hate I have borne him seems to have passed away; and somethins, and something, mournfully like the old yearning toward him, comes back, as I look at his name. Oh, idol of my youth! hurled down and crushed by my own savage hands! For the first time since I destroyed him, since I saw his handsome face whitening in death, I think of him kindly. For the first time since that night, I feel that—that—I can forgive him. Murray! Murray! you wronged me! you wrecked me! but oh! if I could give you you wrecked me! but oh! if I could give you you wrecked me! but oh! if I could give you you will you'd forgive you all my injuries! His blood dyes my hands, my heart, my sou!"

'The blood of Jesus will wash out those stains. The law was fully satisfied when He hung on Caivary; there, ample atonement was made for just such sins as yours, and you have only to claim and plead his sufferings to secure your salvation. St. Elmo, bury you layour thoughts to the future. Half of your life has ebbed out, and yet your life-work remains undone, untouched. You have no time to spend in looking over your unimproved years."

"Bury my past!" Impossible, even for one hour. I tell you I am chained to it, as the Aloides were chained to the piliars of Tartarus! and the croaking fiend that will not let me sleep in memory! Memory of sins that which is a suffering fiend that will not let me sleep in memory! Memory of sins that goad me sometimes to the very verge of suicide! Do you know, ha! how could you possibly know? Shall I tell you that only one thought has often stood between me and self-destruction? It was not the fear of death, no, no, no! it was not th

"St. Elmo, do not upbraid yourself so bitterly—"
Mr. Murray shook his head mournfully, and the moonlight shining on his face showed it colorless, haggard, hopeless.
The pastor rose, put on his hat, and took
St. Elmo's arm.
"Come home with me. This spot is fraught with painful associations that open afresh all your wounds."
They walked on together until they reached the parsonage gate, and as the minister raised the latch, his companion gently disengaged
the latch, his companion gently disengaged the arm clasped to the old man's side.
"Not tonight. After a few days I will try to come."

the artch, his companion gently disengaged the arm clasped to the old man's side.

"Not tonight. After a few days I will try to come."

"St. Elmo, tomorrow is Sunday, and—"
He paused, and did not speak the request that looked out from his eyes.

It cost Mr. Murray a severe struggle, and he did not answer immediately. When he spoke his voice was unsteady.

"Yes. I know what you wish. Once I swore I would tear the church down, scatter its dust to the winds, leave not a stone to mark the site! But I will come and hear you preach for the first time since that sunny Sabbath, twenty years dead, when your text was. 'Cast thy bread upon the waters; for thou shalt find it after many days.' Sodden, and bitter, and worthless from long tossing in the great deep of sin, it drifts back at last to your feet; and instead of stooping tenderly to gather up the useless fragments, I wonder that you do not spurn the stranded ruin from you. Yes, I will come."

"Thank God! Oh! what a weight you have lifted from my heart! St. Elmo, my son!"

There was a long, lingering clasp of hands, and the pastor went into his home with tears of joy on his furrowed face, while his smiling lips whispered to his greateful soul:

"In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thy hand; for thou knowest not whether shall prosper, either this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good."

Mr. Murray watched the stooping form until the deep stoop of the stooping form until the deep stooping form until the deep stooping form until the stoop liammond had rested, in days long, long past; and Remorse, more powerful than Erictho, evoked from the charnel house the sweet girlish features and fairy figure of the early dead.

His pale face was propped on his hand, and there in the silent watches of the moonlighted midnight, he held communion with God and his own darkened spirit.

"What hast thou wrought for Right and Truth,
For God and man,
From the golden hours of bright-eyed youth,
To life's mid-span?"

His almost Satanic pride was laid low as the dead in their mouldering shrouds, and all the giant strength of his perverted nature was gathered up and hurled in a new direction. The Dead Sea Past moaned and swelled, and hitter waves surged and broke over his heart, but he silently buffeted them; and the moon rode in mid-heaven when he rose, went around the church, and knelt and prayed, with his forehead pressed to the marble that covered Murray Hammond's last resting-place,

"Oh! that the mist which veileth my To Come Would so dissolve and yield unto mine eyes A worthy path! I'd count not wearisome Long toil nor enterprise, But strain to reach it; ay, with wrestlings stout.

Is there such path already made to fit The measure of my foot? It shall atone For much, if I at length may light on it And know it for mine own."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

CAN YOU CONSENT TO BE DOUGLASS MANNENG'S WIFE?

"Oh! how grand and beautiful it whenever I look at it, I feel exactly as I did on Easter-Sunday, when I went to the cathedral to hear the music. It is a soleman feeding, as if I were in a holy place. Miss Earl, what makes me feel so?"
Felix stood in an art-gallery, and leaning on his crutches looked up at Church's "Tear of the Andes."
"Year at the Andes."
"Year at the Andes."
"Year to the Andes."
"The boy was silent for a few seconds, and then his thin, sallow face brightened.
"Yes, indeed! You mean that splendid decription which you read to me from 'Modera Palnters?' How fond you are of that passage, and how very often you think of it! Let me see whether I can remember it."
Slowly yet accurately he repeated the elong the fourthurbour of the fourthurbour to the fourthurbour of his expressions are like certain songs which, the more frequently we sing them, the more valuable and eloquent they become; and as we rarely learn a fine plece of music to be played once or twice and then thrown aside, why should we not be allowed in the fourthurbour to the fourthurbour to the

as far off as I could see her as when she came close to me—"

A hearty laugh cut short Hattie's observation; and, coming forward, Sir Roger Percival put his hand on her head, saying:

"How often children tumble down 'the step from the sublime to the ridiculous.' and drag staid, dignified folks after them? Miss Earl, I have been watching your little party for some time, listening to your incipient artlecture. You Americans are queer people; and when I go home I shall tell Mr. Ruskin that I heard a little boy criticising 'The Heart of the Andes,' and quoting from 'Modern Painters.' Felix, as I wish to be accurate, will you tell me your age?"

The poor, sensitive cripple imagined that he was being ridiculed, and he only reddened and frowned and bit his thin lips.

Edna laid her hand on his shoulder, and answered for him.

"Just thirteen years old; and though Mr. Ruskin is a distinguished exception to the rule that 'prophets are not without honor, save in their own country.' I think he has no reader who loves and admires his writings more than Felix Andrews.

Here the boy raised his eyes and asked: "Why is it that prophets have no honor among their own people? Is it because they too have to be seen from a great distance in order to seem grand? I heard mamma say the other day that if some book written in America had only come from England everybody would be raving about it."

"Some other time. Felix. we will talk of that problem. Hattle, you look sleepy."

"I think it will be lunch time before we get hook, her gently, saying:

"Come, wake up, little sweetheart! How can you get sleepy or hungry with all these (CONTINUED ON PAGE 18.)

My Old New Hampshire Home.

By

Più mosso.

Più mosso.

wil - low,

In the wildwood where to-geth - er

I stooped to kiss her

She clung to

And

part - ed, and I left her brok - en heart - ed, heart lies bur - ied with her 'neath the ritard.

p ritard.

stream

a - gain

where we then

me and trem-bled when I told her,

In the

In the

I

a - wak - ened,

old New Hampshire vil-lage

old New Hampshire vil-lage

I

wan - dered in told her that

And

1

Man - y

And I

It was

Once

MUSIC BY HARRY VON TILZER.

the gloam - ing,

I loved

1. Far a - way on the hills of Old New Hamp-shire,

2. In my dreams by the stream last night I wan - dered, p dolce.

thought my rall.

WORDS BY ANDREW B. STERLING.

part - ed, Ruth

by stand - ing

and my

I:

side;

we

there I kissed my love a sad good-bye.

gain she prom-ised she would be my bride;

My

the sun-shine lin-gers there, And the ros-es bloom so fair one I loved so dear, On the hills of my old New Hampshire home. .

love was

pp

plead - ing - ly she begged of me to called her, but she was not there to a - way. . . .

Copyright, MDCCCXCVIII, by the Orphean Music Publishing Co. Copyright assigned to Shapiro, Bernstein & Von Tilzer.

SPECIAL OFFER This month we publish "MY OLD NEW HAMPSHIRE HOME," one of our usual and famous successes, and you will thoroughly enjoy it. Knowing that many of our readers desire to secure Full Sheet Music Size Copies of this Song, we have arranged with the publishers to offer you one copy free as a club premium for only 3 yearly subscribers to COMFORT at 15 cents per year; also we will furnish, on the same terms, "Hiawatha," "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," "Gondo-Her," "Nilver Heels," "Cheyenne," "Happy Heine," and "Moonlight," all favorites. The music is printed on the regular size, heavy-weight, sheet-music paper with a beautiful Illuminated Colored Cover, exactly the style you would have at any music store. Get up your climb at once and send to COMFORT. A requester. Whilese

The publishers of the above music are Messrs. Whitney, Warner Co., Detroit, Mich. They have just issued a fine 50-page music eatalogue containing extracts, same as we print here above, of some of the most popular late Marches, Waltzes, Songs. and Dances; they will send this catalogue free to all who mention COMFORT and write them at once for it. You can get an idea of all of the most popular music by running over the chorus to songs and spatches of other tunes you will find printed therein. With the property of the company property in COMFORT. therein. Write them today and please say you saw this announcement in COMFORT.

The finest mixture in the world. If not satisfactory, after blooming, your money will be refunded. By mail, postpaid, anywhere in the United States $1.00 per doz. Quantity limited. Order early. CHAS. LARROWE, Cohoctom. N. Y.

Outfit Free to Agents

I Can Sell Your Farm

Energetic Men Wanted

COMIC POST CARDS
To all who send 10c for 3 mo. subscription to the greatest Young People's how to make money. How to do things. All about magic. Great stories just beginning. Send today and be delighted. Campbell Publishing Co. Pept. 3, PeeMoines, Ia.

We want women to help us advertise an article of exceptional merit. No experience necessary and you can easily make $50.00 a week and expenses. The article is needed everywhere and to prove its amples are distributed free. They create are easily made. Big profits are assured. Ad

Music Instructions Free.

Beginners and advanced pupils can obtain full course of home instruction on Piano, Organ, Violin, Guitar, Mandolin, Banjo, or Cornet, without cost. Send for our Free Book which tells you how to play any one of these instruments, and paves the way to amateur and professional success. In writing, mention instrument you propose to study. Our system is the best and simplest for mail instruction and pupils soon become proficient in the art. Address National School of Music, Si P. O. B'id'g, Montolair, N. J.

Traveling Salesmen in all parts of the Country to sell our goods to grootery dealers. No canvasing. We pay from $75 to $100 per month and traveling expenses. Experience not necessary. We have the best system 6ver adopted Dealers buy at sight. Write today before the territory is all taken. Address Purity C. R. Co., Chicago, ill.

SOLO ACCORDION

$₹:25 MORRIS CHAIR

Mother's Remedies Co. Dept. ▲ 1155-35th St. Chicago

FOR $3.75 we furnish a beautiful, stered MORRIS CHAIR, equal to what others sell at $6.00. For only $4.95 we furnish this magnificent, luxurious, high grade Morris Chair shown in the illustration, the greatest value ever theard of. Can you use any kind of furniture, tables, chairs, bedroom or dining room set, parlor suite, Morris chair, couch, side board, kitchen cabinet, dresser, bookcase, desk, an iron or wood bed, if you buy it cheap enough, never could buy it for many dollars less than you expected?

write for Free Furniture Catalogue. ANYTHING IN FURNITURE, please just write us a letter or a postal and say, "Send me your new Furniture Catalogue and all your latest offers" and see what you get. We will send you by return mail, FREE and POSTFAID, our great new Furniture Catalogue, with large pletures and full descriptions of our entire line, the most wonderful variety of new 1907 furniture at the most wonderful variety of new 1907 furniture at the most wonderful variety of new 1907 furniture at the most wonderful variety of new 1907 furniture at the most wonderful variety of North. East, South and West, and can make shipment promptly, and from a point near you, so the freight charges will be very low, almost nothing. We will show you prices you never thought possible: much less than dealers pay. If you buy from us, you get our valuable Profit Sharing Certificates FREE and can exchange these certificates for valuable articles which we give our customers free When you have $25.00 in our Profit Sharing Certificates, you can get a man's or woman's mackintosh free, or a parlor table, a fine lamp, a boy's suit, a violin outfit, mantle clock, all entirely free; more valuable goods free for larger amounts in certificates. Don't fail to write now for our FREE FURNITURE CATALOGUE and all these new great ofters. Address, SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO.

Comfort Recitation Club Consumption

Conducted by Harold C. Hazleton

EDITOR'S NOTE.—This is the eighth article in this department and we invite you all to read the introduction appear ing in January issue where first article appeared.

OOKING over my letters this month I find, among others, a plaintive little wail from one who "can learn the lines but don't know how to act them." It is from a new subscriber else she would have learned that the first step towards "acting" any selection is to forget one's self. For instance, you cannot portray to your audience an act of great heroism, a race, or a great victory, if you are all the while worrying about the position of your hands and feet. Generally speaking, if you will only let your feet alone they will take care of themselves. In regard to gestures, use only those which really help to convey a clear idea of the piece. Never make a gesture simply for the sake of waving your arms in pretty curves and circles. Get your physical culture some other way. If you study your selection thoroughly you will feet what gestures to use. Gesture is the outward expression of some thought or emotion and should seem spontaneous. Better too few than too many of them, at least until they come to you easily and naturally. Those of you who have been saving the lessons from month to month will have found that the gestures given may be applied to other selections. Of course they will need some slight modification, as no two lines call for exactly the same expression, but they will help you. The object in all these little lesson talks is not to teach you to recite in a parrot fashion, but to teach you to help yourselves. First of all then, learn to study the piece until it "takes possession" of you and you are enabled to forget yourself and remember only what you are trying to picture to your audience. Remember that one selection with lesson talk would cost at least twenty-five cents—more than a year's subscription to Comport, where you are getting two each month. Tell your friends about it and induce them to subscribe and share your good fortune. OOKING over my letters this month I

Washington

BY ELIZER COOK.

Land of the West! though passing brief the record of thine age,
Thou hast a name that darkens all on history's wide page.
Let all the blasts of fame ring out—thine shall be loudest far;
Let others boast their satellites—thou hast the planet-star. Thou hast a name whose characters of light shall ne'er depart;

'Tis stamped upon the dullest brain, and warms the coldest heart,
A war-cry fit for any land where freedom's to be won;
Land of the West! it stands alone,—it is thy Washington.

Rome had its Cæsar, great and brave, but stain was on his wreath;
his wreath;
He lived the heartless conqueror, and died the tyrant's death.
France had its Eagle, but his wings, though lofty they death.

France had its Eagle, but his wings, though lofty they might soar,

Were spread in false ambition's flight, and dipped in murder's gore.

Those hero-gods whose mighty sway would fain have chained the waves;

Who flashed their blades with tiger zeal, to make a world of slavage. who of slaves; Who, though their kindred barred the path, still flercely waded on; Oh, where shall be their "glory" by the side of Washington?

He fought, but not with love of strife; he struck, but to defend;
And ere he turned a people's foe he sought to be a friend. He strove to keep his country's right by reason's gentle word!
And sighed when fell injustice threw the challenge,—sword to sword!
He stood, the firm, the calm, the wise, the patriot and sage: sage; He showed no deep, avenging hate,—no burst of despot rage; He stood for Liberty and Truth, and dauntlessly led on, Till shouts of victory gave forth the name of Washington. No car of triumph bore him through a city filled with

No car of triumph bore him through a city filled with grief;
No groaning captives at the wheel proclaimed him victor chief;
He broke the gyves of slavery, with strong and high disdain,
And forged no scepter from the links, when he had crushed the chain.
He saved his land, but did not lay his soldier trappings down.

down.
To change them for a regal vest and don a kingly crown.
Fame was too earnest in her joy,—too proud of such a To let a robe and title mask a noble Washington.

Lesson Talk

Lesson Talk

This recitation should be given in a clear, ringing voice throughout. Do not recite too fast, but take plenty of time to round out and correctly pronounce each word. The English language is beautiful when properly spoken, but like everything else it loses much of its beauty when abused. Both in reciting and in ordinary conversation let us avoid clipping half our words and mispronouncing the other half. After the word "West" make quite a pause, but keep the voice up. It is a salutation. You will notice that very much of the effect in this selection depends upon the stress laid upon separate words. Another way to show emphasis is by making a pause, sometimes before, sometimes after the statement to be emphasized. For instance, pause long enough to count at least three, wherever a dash occurs in this selection, with the pause need not be quite so long. You should be careful not to let the voice fall as if at a period. On the words, "Let others have their satellites," the hand is raised, but not so high as in figure 39. In the second verse good opportunity for contrast is shown, and should be taken advantage of in look, tone and gesture. Some of the gestures already given in previous lessons will help you here, I think. In the third verse draw the line of comparison by making a longer pause after "fought" Fig. 40. "HE STOOD, THE and "struck" than the com- FIRM, THE CALM, THE ma commonly calls for. The wise," ETC. fourth verse also shows a comparison of Washington's motives with the motives of those actuated by personal ambition only. It has plenty of spirit and has the advantage of not being worn thread-bare, as most pieces for such occasions are. You could not have a better piece for Washington's birthday.

She Would Be a Mason

The funniest story I ever heard.

She Would Be a Mason

The funniest story I ever heard, The funniest thing that ever occurred, Is the story of Mrs. Mehitable Byrde, Who wanted to be a Mason.

Her husband, Tom Byrde is a Mason true, As good a Mason as any of you; He is tyler, of lodge Cerulean Blue, And tyles and delivers the summons due,

She followed him around, this inquisitive wife, And nabbed and teased him half out of his life; So to terminate this unhallowed strife He consented, at last, to admit her. And first, to disguise her from bonnet to shoon, This ridiculous lady agreed to put on His breech—ah! forgive me—I meant pantaloons; And miraculously did they fit her.

The lodge was at work on the Master's Degree;
The light was ablaze on the letter G;
High soared the pillars J. and B.;
The officers sat like Solomon wise;
The brimstone burned amid horrid cries;
The goat roamed wildly through the room;
The candidate begged them to let him go home;
And the devil himself stood up in the east,
As proud as an alderman at a feast;
When in came Mrs. Byrde.

Oh, horrible sounds! oh, horrible sight!
Can it be that Masons take delight
In spending thus the hours of night?
Ah! could their wives and daughters know
The unutterable things they say and do,
Their feminine hearts would burst with woe;
But this is not all my story,
For those Masons joined in a hideous ring,
The candidate howled like everything,
And thus in tones of death they sing;
(The candidate's name was Morey);
"Blood to drink and bones to crack,
Skulls to smash and lives to take,
Hearts to crush and souls to burn—
Give old Morey another turn,
And make him all grim and gory."

Trembling with horror stood Mrs. Byrde. Unable to speak a single word; She staggered and fell in the nearest chair, On the left of the Junior Warden there, And scarcely noticed, so loud the groans, That the chair was made of human bones.

Of human bones! on grinning skulls
That ghastly throne of horror rolls,—
Those skulls, the skulls that Morgan bore!
Those bones, the bones that Morgan wore!
His scalp across the top was flung.
His teeth around the arms were strung— Never in all romance was known Such uses made of human bone.

That brimstone gleamed in lurid flame, That brimstone gleamed in lurid flame,
Just like a place we will not nam.;
Good angels, that inquiring came
From blissful courts, looked on with shame
And tearful melancholy,
Again they dance, but twice as bad,
They jump and sing like demons mad!
The tune is Hunkey Dorey—
"Blood to drink," etc., etc.

Then came a pause—a pair of paws
Reached through the floor, up-sliding doors,
And grabbed the unhappy candidate!
How can I without tears relate
The lost and ruined Morey's fate?
She saw him sink in a fiery hole,
And heard him scream, "My soul! My soul!"
While roars of flendish laughter roll,
And drown the yells for mercy!
"Blood to drink," etc., etc.

That ridiculous woman could stand no more— She fainted and fell on the checkered floor, 'Midst all the diabolical roar. What then, you ask me, did betall Mehitable Byrde? Why, nothing at all— She had dreamed she'd been in the Mason's hall.

Lesson Talk

Lesson Talk

This recitation is well worth the most careful study. It should not be given by one lacking in self-confidence as it is necessary to throw one's self into the narrative in order to bring out its good points. Humorous selections are really much harder to do well than most people seem to think. Only once in a great while do we find one who takes to such recitations naturally. The first of this selection is light easy narrative. Figure 41 shows you a good pose for where the audience is let into the secret of Mrs. Byrde's disguise. The lines following show a change. Mrs. Byrde is filled with horror at the sights she sees. Every line here should be carefully studied. You are describing a terrible scene, and no wonder the little woman is overwhelmed. The description of the initiation should be as weird and horrible as you can possibly make it. It is the strongest part of the selection—the part on which your success will hinge. Chant the lines in quotation while you dance, or prance, around in a circle, being careful, however not to turn your back to the audience at any time. Gestures may be used here or you may assume that the Masons joined hands thus forming a ring. With the words, "Give old Morey another turn," reach in the supposed circle and whirl the victim. This chant is repeated later on. Describe Fig. 42. "SHE SAW vividly the horrors which HIM SINK," ETC. follow. Throw yourself into the second chant with even more abandon than into the first. In the next verse Mrs. Byrde leans forward with her hands raised and her face convulsed with horror as she sees him "sink in the fiery hole." The interest must be kept up to the very climax, "She had dreams" etc., which should be spoken slowly, distinctly, and with emphasis.

Address all letters for this department to Cousin Hall. Care of Comport. Augusta. Majne.

poken slowly, distinctly, and with emphasis.

Address all letters for this department to Cousin Hal, care of Comfort, Augusta, Maine.

200

This valuable medical book tells in plain. simple language how Consumption can be successfully treated in your own home. If you know of any one suffering from Consumption Consumption Consumption Consumption Constant Brown fering from Consumption, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma or any throat or lung trouble, or are yourself afflicted this book will help you. Even if you are in the advanced stage of the disease and feel there is no hope, this book will show you how others have successfully treated themselves after all other remedies they had tried falled, and they believed their case hopeless. Write at once to the Yonkerman Consumption Cure Co., 1399 Water St., Kalamazoo, Mich., and they will gladly send you the book by return mail free and also a generous supply of the New Treatment, absolutely free, for they want every sufferer to have this wonderful book and treatment before it is too late. Don't wait—write today. It may meen the saving of your life. is too late. Don't wait—write today. It may mean the saving of your life.

Book

CANCER OF THE BREAST

CURED

How Mrs. Ollie Phillips' Life was Saved

Dr. L. T. LEACH, Nov. 15, '05.

D. L. T. LEACH,
Indianapolis, Ind.
Dear Doctor: I am glad to write you that I am cured of the terrible cancer of the breast. When I first applied to you for treatment I was too weak to walk without assistance. You ought to see me now. I can step around as well as anyone. People look at me with wonder, and I never fail to give you the credit for it. Words cannot express my heartfelt thanks to you.

Yours gratefully.

CANCEDOL LEACH AND TO LLIE M. PHILLIPS.

CANCEROL has proved its merit in the treatment of cancer. It is not in an experimental stage. Records of undisputed cures of cancer in nearly every part of the body are contained in Dr. Leach's new 100 page book. This book also tells the cause of cancer and instructs in the care of the patient; tells what to do in case of bleeding, pain, odor, etc. A valuable guide in the treatment of any case. A copy of this valuable

BOOK FREE TO THOSE INTERESTED Address, DR. L. T. LEACH, DEPT S. INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

CURED TO STAY CURED

ASTHMA GURED TO STAY CURED
No relapse. No return of choking spells or other whetzel system of treatment approved by best U. S. medical authorities as the only system known to permanently FREE TEST TREATMENT disease.

vase.

luding medicines, prepared for any one giving a full oription of the case and sending names of 2 asthmasunferers. Address FRANK WHETZEL, M.D.

L. American Express Building, Chicago.

If you suffer from Epllepsy or Fits you can find almost certain relief in Dr. Peebles' celebrated Brain Restorative. It is curing where all else had failed. Write for a RRF RMA gottle. It will cost you only the postage on your letter. Address Dr. Peebles Institute of Health, Ltd., 70 Main St., Battle Creek, Mich.

99 NEW SONGS for IOC

DRUNK ENNESS CURED Permanently at small cost by home remedy.

AURMINO; guaranteed cure; never fails.

Absolutely harmless. Taken voluntarily free or administered secretly. BOOK mailed AURMINO CO., 110 W. 34th St. New York for this 16-in. Eyelet Centerpiece stamped on Royal Linene and two full skeins Listre Cotton for embroidering the design. This is introduction offer. We send with it our new large 1967.

TEN CENTS PAYS

Art Embroidery Catalogue.
All for 10 cts. coin or stamps.
Rend today. Fully guaranteed.
CORONA MFG. CO. Dept. 36
291-3 Congress St., Boston, Mass,

BY HIS WIFE

ACTIONS WANTED Agents are coining money. Send 50c for Canvassing Outfit and Contract for territory.

Big Book, 7x10, Price 82.50

J. E. NICHOLS & CO., ATLANTA GA.

0000000000000 20 YEAR Guaranteed Watch FOR $375

High grade genuine American full seven ruby jeweled watch, stem wind and stem set, quick train lever escapement, a perfact timepiece, guaranteed to keep accurate time for 20 years. Fitted in richly engraved double hunting gold finished case. Positively the greatest bargain on the face of the earth. SEEING IS BELIEVING, Mention this paper and send us your name, post office and express office adexress and we will send the watch and a beautiful chair complete to your express office reamination. You examine them at your express office and if as represented pay express agent our sale price $3.75 and express charges and they are yours. Mention in your 'ester whether you want a Ladder Watch or a Centleman's Watch, we have it in both sizes. Order Joday as this advertisement will not appear again Address R. E. CHALMERS & CO., 356 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO, ILL-OMFORT when you write.

e mention Comfort when you write.

(continued prom page 16.)

handsome pictures staring at you from the walls?"

The good-natured child laughed; but her brother curled his lips, and exclaimed scornfully:

"Hattle, you ought to be ashamed of yourself! Hungry, indeed! You are almost as bad as that English Lady-, who, when her husband was admiring some beautiful lambs, and called her attention to them, answered, 'Yos, lambs are beautiful-boiled!"

Desirous of conciliating him, Sir Roger replied:

"When you and Hattle come to see me in

She turned to quit the gallery, and Sir Roger said:

"I leave to-morrow for Canada, and may possibly sail for England without returning to New York. Will you allow me the pleasure of driving you to the Park this afternoon? Two months ago you refused a similar request, but since then I flatter myself we have become better friends."

"Thank you, Sir Roger, I presume the children can spare me, and I will go with pleasure."

"I will call at five o'clock."

He handed her and Hattie into the coupe,

"I will call at five o'clock."

He handed her and Hattie into the coupe, tenderly assisted Felix, and saw them driven away.

away.

Presently Felix laughed and exclaimed:
"Oh, I hope Miss Morton will be in the Park this evening. It would be glorious fun to

"Why, Felix?"

"Oh! because she meddles. I heard Uncle Grey tell mamma that she was making desperate efforts to catch the Englishman; and that she turned up her nose tremendously at the idea of his visiting you. When Uncle Grey told her how often he came to our house, she bit her lips almost till the blood spouted. Sir Roger drives very fine horses, uncle says, and Miss Morton hints outrageously for him to ask her to ride, but she can't manage to get the invitation. So she will be furious when she sees you this afternoon."

Later in the day Mrs. Andrews went up to Edna's room, and found her correcting an exercise.

exercise.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 22.)

Beautify Your Home

The Editor Tells You Today How Easily You Can Win a Prize to Decorate Your Home

Did you ever win a prize-a real beautiful, artistic, valuable prize, something of which you felt proud?

If you have, I can point out a way for you to win another. If you have not, I can show you how you can win a magnificent one by the slightest effort.

For this great prize offer does not cost you one

You want a pretty home, don't you?

So if you will follow me through this short article and then read the great prize offer on this page, you will discover how very, very easy it is to secure something that will give your home an artistic tone, something that will beautify it and make your friends envy you. You will say to yourself:

"My. I wish I had had this offer long ago."

Dinner Set For a Prize

Look at the picture of the magnificent monogram dinner set on this page. 100,000 of the prize sets are going to be distributed free, and every one of our readers can have one of these sets free by doing a good turn for a friend of mine Geo. Clark.

"NATURE'S GOODIES"—One of the beautiful fac simile framed pictures which will be sent to you.

Now, Mr. Clark, as you may have heard, is the publisher of the famous high-art pictures, among the most beautiful pictures in the world, and he has asked me to tell you that he will give every one of my subscribers one of these magnificent dinner sets absolutely free as a prize if you merely help Mr. Clark a little by recommending and introducing a few of his pictures in your locality. locality.

As you see, Mr. Clark does not want you to do any canvassing. It is not necessary to do any canvassing.

How To Win a Prize

Read carefully on this page where it says in ig type, "Win a prize—how."

Read carefully on this page where is easy.

big type, "Win a prize—how."

I am pleased to guarantee Mr. Clark's offer is exactly as represented and I am giving you certificate of guarantee. I am proud he has selected the readers of this paper to profit by this marvelous prize offer. This offer shows his confidence in the honesty of my subscribers.

Even it you do not succeed in carrying out the simple conditions of Mr. Clark's offer, you will receive an elegant prize anyway. You do not have to send any money as you do in so many prize offers, and for whatever effort you put out you will get at least one prize; so it is, as Mr. Clark says, a case where "you can't lose."

So Easy, So Very Easy

Mrs. Charlotte Miller of Purdue, Ind., a lady of my acquaintance, took advantage of Mr. Clark's offer. She received the pictures and was amazed at their beauty and Mr. Clark's method of disposing of them. That very afternoon one of her neighbors came in and saw the pictures lying on the table with part of the wrapping paper still around them. paper still around them

"SAVED"- The other beautiful picture which will be sent to you for you to keep.

"What perfectly beautiful pictures!" she exalmed.
"Do you like them?" asked Mrs. Miller.
"Indeed I do."

You can have my offer at 25c."
Will you give me two on this plan for 50c?"

Mrs. Miller's friend purchased two pictures and took them away and told some of her acquaintances of her good fortune; they called on Mrs. Miller that very day, and before Mrs. Miller retired that night she had disposed of all 24 pictures and forwarded the $6.00 to Mr. Clark.

Prize Winner Is Pleased

In three days the prize dishes arrived and Mrs. Miller tells me they are the most beautiful she ever saw any place. "I would not take anything for that set right now," she declared.

Can you picture your dining room with a beautiful gold monogram, Parisien Chir dinner set gracing the sideboard, the dinner table and the plate rail! Haven't you for a long time been wanting a set like this?

I have several of Mr. Clark's pictures in my home and they are certainly very beautiful. I cannot begin to show you here how they look in their many rich and splendid colors. They are perfect works of art, if for any residence, measuring 16x90 inches. What is more, they come ready to hang on the wall, for every picture is finished complete ready for the wall just as received from Mr. Clark.

I hope that every one of my readers will sign the fre coupon and send for Mr. Clark's high-art victures toda for every reader of this paper This elegant 42 piece Monogram Dinner Set is free AM Giving Away as PRIZES

42.PIECES as follows:

6-9-In. PLATES 6-7-In. PLATES 6 CUPS 6 SAUCERS 6 BUTTER CHIPS 2 VEGETABLE DISHES 1 BREAD PLATE 1 CAKE PLATE 1 GRAVY BOWL 1 Large PLATTER

YOUR own initial in GOLD on every piece (cups and saucers excluded).

pieces. A PRIZE that costs you only a bit of your leisure time. Send No Money, Not One Cent - The PRIZES are There are 100,000 of these prize - premium sets. Be sure to get one of the sets. Everybody can get one complete set as a free PRIZE and you can get it so very, very easily 100,000 sets of this elegant Dinner Service.

Do not miss your share—a PRIZE of 42 pieces of beautiful China, artistically decorated, your initial in gold on the Certificate of Guarantee by the Editor of Home Polks.

I hereby certify that every statement made on this page is the truthful, honest avowal of a large and thoroughly reliable firm. This prize offer is exactly as represented.

Editor Home Folks

This Elegant Dinner Set is made of finest Parisien China, the kind endorsed and used by the most stylish people, Although this superior china costs us a great deal of money, we chose the Parisien China to give away as PRIZES; for we figure that by being very generous with you and giving you the best right now, we would at once win your friendship and recommendation, and the beautiful dinner set standing on your table and envied by all neighbors—the best dinner set in town—ought to prove a fine advertisement for our proposition. As you can see from the picture, every piece of the dinner set is decorated with the modern high art, and besides, if you write at once, every piece (except cups and saucers) with your initial in pure gold free of charge. Read the first column of this page.

PRIZE—How: Send no Money.

Just mail the coupon

at the bottom of this page. You will then get 24 famous high-art pictures, richly colored, 16 x 20 inches, complete with facsimile lithographed gold scroll frames for you to distribute, and two extra pictures for you to keep-a total of Twenty-Six (26) pictures. The two extra pictures you hang up in your home. Invite your friends to see your pictures, and whenever a friend calls hand her one of the other 24 pictures at only 25 cents each. By giving away the 24 pictures at only 25 cents each you will take in $6.00. Send us $6.00 and we will send you the beautiful, aristocratic 42-piece Monogram Dinner Set absolutely free.

As soon as people see the pictures decorating the walls of your room they will be eager to get a similar picture. But if for any reason you should not succeed, we will pay you for the number of pictures you distributed, and besides we want you to keep the two extra pictures anyway, just for having made an honest effort. The art pictures are fully described by the editor in the first column of this page.

Dining Room of Mayor Grosse, of Harlem, Ill., whose wife earned the beautiful monogram dinner set as a prize and also the free pictures. (From photograph by Orville Hart, all rights reserved.)

Mayor Grosse's wife writes as as follows: "I received your beautiful monogram dinner set with initial in gold and it is certainly beautiful. The stores here do not carry anything like it. It is so artistic and elegant. I shall always be glad to recommend you for your fairness, promptness and generosity."-MRS. MARTIN V. GROSSE, Harlem, Ill., Oct. 9, 1906.

Cultured and refined people appreciate this superior prize offer. Don't delay. Sign the free coupon at once and send right now to

GEO. CLARK, Mgr., 63-69 Washington St., Suite 1442, Chicago, Ill.

At Least ONE PRIZE for Everybody

You cannot fail to get a PRIZE for whatever time you spare. Your Reward is Sare—even if you do not fulfill all the conditions of this prize offer you get two pictures free anyway just for having made an honest effort; and extra prizes besides for whatever you do. — But I know you can earn the grand prize—the beautiful monogram dinner set — very, very easily.

SIGN Your Name and Address / Coupon

You need not bother with a letter: GEO. CLARK, Mgr. just write your name and ad- 63-89 Washington $t. GEO. CLARK, Mgr. dress plainly on the coupon. Suite 1442 , CHICAGO, ILL inclose in an envelope and mail today thereby getmail today thereby getI would like to earn your ting an early start for a Monogram Dinner Set.
Please send me your art pictures at once, prepaid, as per and get our valuable prize offer your offer above.

able prize offer before any. Name oody etce

S.....

your factores....

EDITOR HOME FOLKS.

EASY WORK-GOOD PAY

Make big money right in your own town. $75.00 to $150.00 per month easily earned. No previous experience or money necessary. We back you with our capital and teach you the business. Elegant line of samples—the finest in the world FREK. Astonishingly low prices. PANTS $2 up SUITS $9 up Prepaid ritory. Write today for agent's complete outfi THE PROGRESS FAILORING CO. 160H Harrison St

LET ME QUOTE YOV PRICES

BE YOUR OWN BOSS WHY DRAG YOUR LIFE OUT WORKING FOR OTHERS?

ant one honest person (male or female) in a y to represent my large Mail Order House. pid selling specialties. From $5 to $10 per ade, costly outfit free. No experience nee will cost you nothing to find out about it; send me your nam and address and let me start you in a profitable business fre George A. Parker, Dept. L, 720 Chestnut St., Phila., P.

BY MAIL chanical Drawing,

EARN Law, Bookkeeping, Shorthand, Me-

Illustrating, English, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Business Forms, etc. MONEY BAOK if not satisfied. 28 Colleges in 16 States; 17 years' success. 70,000 students. Indorsed by business men. For "Catalog H. S." on Home Study, or "Catalog C" on attending College, write Draughon's Bus. College (o., Nashville, Tenn.; St. Louis, Mo.; Raleigh, N. C.; Dallas, Tex.; Atlanta, Ga., or Evansville, Ind.—U. S. A.

BROOKS' NEW CURE

Brooks' Appliance. New discovery. Wonderful. No obnoxious springs or pads. Automatic Air Cushions. Binds and draws the broken parts together as you would a broken limb. No salves. No lymphol. No lies. Durable. cheap Pat. Sept. 10.001.

SENT ON TRIAL.
CATALOGUE FREE.
C. E: BROOKS, 3432 Brooks' Bldg.,

FIRST $1.00 BOX FOR 25c.

nd us 25c in stamps and will send you, charges pre-id, full sized $1.00 box of paid, full sized $1.00 box of OX BLOOD TABLETS for thin people. Cure Rheumatism, Indigestion. Nervousness. A Great Flesh Producer. Thin people gain 10 pounds a month. Pleasant to take. If you are a sufferer or wish to gain flesh, try them. First box only at 25c rate. W. A. Henderson Drug Co., 218 16th St., Clarinda, Iowa

EARN THIS RING

Signet rings are all the rage now, being very fashionable. This ring is an extremely fancy one with beautiful engraving. It is a solid gold shell, heavy signet ring, suitable for either man, woman, boy or girl. Any initial desired will be engraved on it free of charge. It is so beautiful that no one will be able to tell but what you paid $8 or $10 for it We guarantee the ring to wear for three years and will replace it with a new one if it does not. We give this ring free for selling only four of our beautiful fruit pictures at 15 cents each. Everybody will buy one at this price. Send no money, just your name, and we send pictures. When sold send us the 60 cents and the ring is yours. The DOAN, 658 Ridge Bidg., Kansas City, Mo.

HOME SWEET HOME CHARM - which is the latest, daintiest and SOLUTELY FREE to introduce our goods. Just send name and address and we will send it to you at once. Address F. H. ALDEN MFG. CO., PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Direct from our own fencing factory at Knightstown, Indiana, we furnish the highest grade, strongest and greatest variety of poultry and farm fencing. Prices just a little more than factory cost, 15c a rod and up, just about one-half the prices asked by all others. In our free Fencing Catalogue we show a picture of one of fencing and netting with all wards.

Comfort's Home Lawyer

In this department will be carefully considered any legal problem which may be submitted. All opinions given herein will be prepared at our expense by eminent counsel. herein will be prepared at our expense by eminent counsel.

Inamuch as it is one of the principal missions of COM-FORT to aid in upbuilding and upholding the sanctity of the home, no advice will be given on matters pertaining to divorce. Any paid-up subscriber to COMFORT is velcome to submit inquiries, which, so far as possible, will be answered in this department. If any reader, other than a subscriber, wishes to take advantage of this privilege, it may be done by sending fifteen (15) cents, in silver or stamps, for an annual subscription to COMFORT thus obtaining all the benefits which our subscribers enjoy including a copy of the magazine for one year.

Should any subscriber desire an immediate, special opinion on any legal question, privately mailed, it may be had by sending one dollar with a letter asking such advice, addressing the same to "THE EDITOR, COMFORTS HOME LAWIER," Augusta, Maine, and in reply a carefully prepared opinion will be sent in an early mail.

Full names and addresses must be signed by all persons seeking advice in this column but not necessarily for publication. Unless otherwise requested, initials only will be published.

Mrs. P. J. C.—We understand from your statements to us, that you now own one piece of property which you have paid for and that you desire to purchase another of equal value, but do not have the money to do so, as your first purchase has exhausted all your money. We think the best course for you to pursue would be to sell the property you now own before making another purchase. Of course, you could probably raise money enough on a mortgage on the property you own to make a payment on the property you desire to purchase and then give a mortgage for the balance of the purchase price, and, in that way, own two properties with mortgages on both instead of owning the one, as we understand you now do, without any mortgage on it. But in case you do that you always run the risk of having the mortgages, one or both, foreclosed when they come due, unless you are sure you could pay them at that time. We do not think it very advisable for women to mortgage their property in order to buy more, unless they are exceptionably good business women and possess foresight enough to purchase property that will increase in value.

R. A. M.—Under the laws of the State you mention, we erty that will increase in value.

R. A. M.—Under the laws of the State you mention, we are of the opinion, that in such a case as you describe the property of the deceased, in the event of no will, would pass as follows: To the husband or wife, one third absolutely of all the property of the intestate, real and personal, and, if there be no children of the intestate or representatives of children, all the estate absolutely to the extent of two thousand dollars and one half absolutely of the remainder of the estate. We think that, in that State, if the person you mention had been named before April 20, 1877, the property would pass differently.

M. M. B.—We think that, if you can prove upon the

M. M. B.—We think that, if you can prove upon the trial, that the death of your horse was caused by the defective condition of the street of the city you mention without any negligence on your own part, you have a right of action against the city for the value of the horse at the time of its death. (2) We think you should employ a lawyer to bring the action for you, as your letter to us leads us to think that you yourself could not properly conduct your case.

M. E. C.—We think D. should procure the old deed from A. to B. and have the same recorded now. In case he can not do that, he should have A. execute a deed to him and have the same recorded. If he had made an examination of the title at the time he made the purchase, it would have saved him the trouble he is put to now.

to would have saved him the trouble he is put to now.

C. M.—We think you have a very mistaken idea as to the duties and powers of a detective. We think that in many cases detectives are selected from the police forces of their respective cities. We presume the advertised detective agencies or bureaus, to which you refer, are some private agencies. A detective having such a connection has no right to search houses without a search warrant or to perform the various other acts you mention.

V. C.—We do not think the judge you mention is limited by any statutory provision as to the time he can take in rendering his decision.

ited by any statutory provision as to the time he can take in rendering his decision.

Mrs. J. K.—Under the laws of the State where you say the property you mention is situated, we think your brother would be limited to twenty years in which to bring an action to establish whatever right he claims in the property. We think the only way for you to establish a title of record to the property would be by an action to establish the deed or will, both of which you say have been lost before being recorded or probated. We think, however, that this might be a dangerous course for you to pursue as, in the event of your failure to establish by your proof the lost instrument, your brother's title to an interest in the property would be established. We think you might better remain quietly in possession of the property, being careful to have the tax bills receipted in your name and try to establish a title by possession. The execution by yourself and sister of such deeds as you mention would be unwise, as they in themselves would be an admission on your parts that your title is disputed.

S. G.—If the deed of the property you mention has not as yet been made and delivered to the man you mention, he should have it drawn to himself and wife as grantees. Both names should be written in, and after the wife's name should be inserted the words "as tenants by the entirety." In that way we are of the opinion that the property, upon the death of either the husband or wife, would go to the survivor, and neither could sell it without the other joining in the deed. If the property has been already deeded to him, he could make a will and devise it to his wife; the great trouble with this method, however, is that he might change his mind and destroy the will before his death, in which event she would only be entitled to her share under the intestacy laws.

Subscriber.—You have no rights in the estate of the man with whom you live. We do not understand what you mean by loining with his his his dead of treasets.

which event she would only be entitled to her share under the intestacy laws.

Subscriber.—You have no rights in the estate of the man with whom you live. We do not understand what you mean by joining with him in the deed of property purchased by you. The purchaser of property does not execute the deed; possibly you have joined in a mortgage given in part payment of the property. An examination of the deed would be necessary to show whether you have any interest in the property. If you should marry the man without first procuring a divorce from your husband, you would be guilty of bigamy.

Mrs. L. M. J.—If the tax sales of the property you mention have been made absolute and were so conducted that they cannot be set aside, we are of the opinion that your husband has lost his property. We think that, in any event, under the laws of the State where you say this property is situated an action for its recovery is limited to ten years, but that this time is extended one year in the cases of the minor children.

M. M. S.—We are of the opinion that the heirs of the

M. M. S.—We are of the opinion that the heirs of the woman you mention have no interest in the property she sold before her death, whether the purchaser had the deed recorded or not.

sold before her death, whether the purchaser had the deed recorded or not.

H. B.—We do not know of any law school of high standing, which gives instruction in the way you mention. We think it would be better for you to attach yourself as a student to the office of some lawyer in your locality and receive instruction from him; you can make some arrangement under which you can be absent from the office when your other duties call you away.

Mrs. B. E.—We are of the opinion that, under the laws of the State from which you write, a married woman may own, in her own right, real and personal property acquired by descent, gift or purchase, and manage, sell, convey, and devise the same by will to the same extent and in the same manner that the husband can property belonging to him. (2) You should consult some other lawyer in your divorce or separation the question of the custody of the minor children is one for the court, before which the action is tried, to decide. We think, however, that you need not fear, in your case, that the court will take your nursing baby away from you, if you present your case and place that evidence before the court.

B. E. H.—Under the laws of the State from which you

THESE GOODS FREE if you buy from us.

THESE GOODS FREE if you buy from us.

B. E. H.—Under the laws of the State from which you are to the opinion that, if the deeds of the property ouch, Morris chair or other valuable goods absolutely free. Our plained in the feeding book, write than ever, all exposed and place that evidence before the court.

B. E. H.—Under the laws of the State from which you write, we are of the opinion that, if the deeds of the property as the profit Sharing Plan is more liberal than ever, all exposed the property with the property would go to the survivor, which is your mother, and that she can dispose of the whole or any mother, and that she can dispose of the whole or any part of the property either by one deed or separate conveyances as she sees fit, if, however, your father was the owner of the property, she would only have her widow's rights and the signature of all the heirs would be necessary to the deed.

L. H. M—We do not think such a requirement as you describe on the part of the bank would be enforceable at law, unless provided for in their by-laws, or otherwise. We do not, however, think it is an unreasonable requirement for them to make in order to protect themselves.

C. and S.—Under the laws of the State from which you write and upon your statements to us, we are of the opinion that the deed you procured from the two heirs for their interest in your former wife's estate would not convey to you their interest in the land which has since come to them by reason of the death of another heir. We think that, in case the heir who died was unmarried and left no will and in case both his parents were dead at the time of his death, his estate would be divided among his brothers and sisters and their descendants, if any.

Mrs. N. B. H.—We do not think it necessary for you to employ a lawyer in the matter of your brother's estate, unless the administrator neglects to account or you wish to dispute some of the items of his account, or unless he disputes your relationship and makes it necessary for you to prove your heirship. In any such event we think it advisable for you to employ a lawyer, if your interest in the estate is substantial. We do not think it necessary for you to prove your kinship unless it is disputed. We think the administrator should account within eighteen months after his appointment unless he can show good reason for not doing so.

Mrs. J. F. H.—If at the time of the purchase of the land, to which you refer, some person, or persons, having an interest in the land refused to join in the deed and have not since executed a deed to the interest, we are of the opinion that your title to the land is defective, and that you can not cure this defect by adjusting what you think to be the value of the interest outstanding and paying that amount to the person or persons owning the interest. We think you will either have to come to an agreement with them and get a deed from them or bring a partition suit of the property and have the court determine what their interest may be. The agreement of those who executed a deed of their interest can in no way bind the owners of the interest still outstanding. (2) You can not execute a good deed of the interest in the property belonging to your brothers or sisters who are minors without first being appointed their guardian and afterward bringing a court proceeding allowing you to do so. (3) We think the husband of the woman, who died owning an interest in the property.

C. M. P.—Upon the statements made by you to us, we Mrs. J. F. H .- If at the time of the purchase of the land

C. M. P.—Upon the statements made by you to us, we are of the opinion that your mother should have contested the account of her stepmother as administratrix of her father's estate at the time she accounted. We think it is now too late to take any proceedings to have the accounting opened up.

J. H. R.—You should examine the tax records and see that the tax sale is canceled and the redemption properly entered there.

The Great Chicago Mystery or, The Man with Many Aliases

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 11.)

"Aw, I say now, 'Four-time' dat's dirt!" Crit heard Ferris reply with an oath, but evidently Hollis cared but little for his henchman's displeasure for he gave him some directions, and ordered him to go and tell "Fake" Pete and "Snowflake" Mike to bring Mandeville to him

When Crit heard the name Mandeville, he there.

When Crit heard the name Mandeville, he began to do some thinking. He remembered the telegram received on the train. He would have done considerable more thinking if he had known that the girl he had befriended was Sylvia Lyster, the girl supposed to have run away with Mandeville, and whose parents had solicited his aid in recovering.

Not wanting to show himself quite yet in his assumed character, Crit hurried down into the street, and was hiding in an adjacent doorway when Ferris appeared. The boy took a car, Crit following, and Crit was glad to see at the further end the girl he had hoped would make no mistakes in reaching her-destination. She had donned still another veil so her beautiful features were hidden, but Crit recognized her. He would have liked to keep with her, so as to see she came to no harm, but when Ferris swung off before they had gone half the distance toward State street, he followed, and was just outside the saloon when Ferris entered it. At first Crit was tempted to go to the aid of Ralph and Peter, but he thought his boys could get out all right from this tight place as they had from others.

"Wish we could have a speel with Crit," Peter remarked confidentially to Ralph, as the had from others.

"Wish we could have a speel with Crit," Peter remarked confidentially to Ralph, as the latter held a handglass for him in a dark doorway, while by the aid of the light furnished by Ralph's cigar, Peter was transforming himself into a very disreputable young tough, with a black patch over one eye.

"Maybe I don't, too," Ralph returned. He was now an elderly man, whose nose had become a rich crimson evidently by years of soaking in whiskey; the two made a rare soaking in whiskey; the two made a rate pair.

"Bet he's skun through some pretty difficult things since we swung off that car," Peter continued, giving a finishing touch to his eye.

"Rather, but he's skun, and that's enough," Ralph returned pocketing the glass, and the two emerged into the street just in time to see Crit, with his black hair floating over his collar being borne away in triumph by Ferris, "Fake" Pete and "Snowflake" Mike, the last two supporting Mandeville.

porting Mandeville.
"And now what's t "And now what's up I wonder?" Ralph asked as he and Peter gazed after the strange proces-

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

